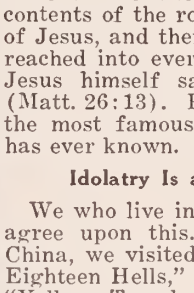
General Havelock, the great Christian soldier in India, as soon as he had captured a certain city, sought a place for a prayer meeting. There was a famous heathen temple in a retired grove, devoted to the service of Buddha. He secured one of the chambers in it, a large room filled with images of idol gods sitting all around with their legs crossed and arms folded on their laps. One day an officer strolling around the temple heard the sound of English singing. He followed the sound, and it led him to the upper chamber, where Havelock, with his Bible and hymn-book before him, surrounded by more than a hundred of his soldiers, was holding a prayer meeting. The room was dark, but every idol had a lamp in its lap, shedding more light than any idols had ever given out before. One wonders if Havelock read the 115th Psalm.

But while China and other lands are rapidly putting aside their idols, there is another sort of idolatry, gaining ground in the United States. The idols here are the Greed brothers: the greed for gold, and the greed of appetite; both of these forms of idolatry are described in the Bible.

Money is not an evil in itself, but the love of money is the root of covetousness, which is idolatry. If a person discovers that he has genius for acquiring money, let him dedicate his ability to the Lord. We have been told of a Christian Chinaman who earnestly prayed the Lord to help him become a good business man in order that he "might become a bountiful providing elder." He was moved to make this prayer because he had been prevented, by a throat disease, from being a minister of the Gospel. Surely that prayer was answered, because he has been for years one of the financial props of the native church in Shantung. He has helped generously for the erection of churches and also given money for a fine stone "Jesus Teaching Hall" in Tsingtau. It is one of his joys to give a hundred dollars to defray the expenses of a conference of native religious workers, or to inaugurate some new home mission work, sending preachers into some specially darkened corner of the province, while he and his family live in two rooms. But far more than this, he is strong in spiritual power. He is an ornament to the eldership; balanced in judgment, always eager to honor his Lord, and keen for the progress of the kingdom; as a Sunday School superintendent he is indefatigable to enlarge the usefulness of his school. He is always in his place for Sabbath worship and attends midweek prayer meeting, rain or shine. He is the kind of man the foreign missionary delights to meet in secret prayer. God has not given him children, so he has adopted several. Nobody knows how many boys and girls he is putting through school, nor the quiet ramifications of his active benevolence. This man was "discovered" by Dr. Hunter Corbett when, as a beggar boy, he crawled into the yard of the missionary compound in an advanced stage of starvation.



Dr. Klopsch's Unprecedented Patriotic Offer

MEMORIAL DAY is now scarcely more than a fortnight off; have you just the kind of an American Flag that you should have to float from your home, or drape in some appropriate place, in honor of our National Holiday? Next to the Bible itself is the Flag of our Country, with its ever glorious Stars and Stripes. Have YOU an American Flag?

If you wish to secure absolutely free, without money and without price, a large, beautiful and expensively-made American Flag, read our Great Patriotic Offer, previously announced in our issues of April 17 and 21. Under the terms of this unprecedented offer we will send you FREE FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER, express charges fully prepaid by us: (1) an American Flag, best quality, size 4x6 feet; (2) a Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 inches; (3) a large double-tone picture, 18x21 inches, of All the Presidents of the United States from Washington to Taft.

FOR TWO SUBSCRIBERS, One NEW and ONE of which May Be a RENEWAL, we will send you the same Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence and the same large Picture of All the Presidents, but a much larger flag, measuring 5x8 feet.

This is unquestionably the greatest offer ever made by this, or any magazine, in return for so little effort on the part of the subscriber. For further particulars, write us at once, or see inside front cover of issue of April 21.

Address: Christian Herald Flag Offer, Bible House, New York.

Lest You Forget!

Again we say:

"This is YOUR Free 'NATIONAL' Style Book Pictured Below."

All season long we have been advertising to YOU that one copy of the Great "NATIONAL" Style Book is YOURS—FREE That one copy belongs to YOU—you only need to write for it.

And now, Lest You Forget, again we say this is YOUR "NATIONAL" Style Book pictured below. Won't you write for it NOW?

The "NATIONAL" Style Book will show you every new style in all kinds of apparel for Summer wear, including hundreds of New York's best styles in Lingerie Dresses and Tub Suits from $3.98 to $19.98; Ready-made Skirts $3.98 to $18.98; Waists from 98c. to $8.98; Petticoats, 59c. to $9.98; Hats, $1.98 to $12.98; and also the famous "NATIONAL" Tailored Suits Made to Your Measure of silks and other materials for Summer Wear, prices $7.50 to $35.

Isn't it WELL worth while to stop now and write for your "NATIONAL" Style Book to-day?

The "NATIONAL" Policy

The "NATIONAL" Guarantee Tag—our signed Guarantee of satisfaction or your money back—is tied on every "NATIONAL" Garment.

We Pay Postage and Expressage to All Parts of the World.

National Cloak & Suit Co.,
218 West 24th St., New York City
Mail Orders Only No Agents or Branch Stores

Every Woman Should Earn $25 Per Week

MY FREE BOOK TELLS HOW

Hundreds of women who wrote for this free book are now earning from $18 to $50 Per Week in a refined profession. You can do the same. This free book tells all about Beauty Culture and how I teach women in their own home—by mail—to become expert operators in

Manicuring
Hair Dressing
Marcel Waving
Scalp Treatment
Facial Massage
Shampooing

I also furnish valuable formulas for making Flesh Food, Massage Cream, Hair Tonics, Depilatories, Cosmetics, Etc.

You can start a visiting practice—working by appointment in your patrons' homes, or you can establish a Beauty Parlor in your own home.

This profession offers unlimited opportunities for ambitious women to earn money. The demand for expert operators is growing every day. My students are able to quickly establish a lucrative practice—many of them start earning money before they have graduated.

SEND TO-DAY FOR MY FREE BOOK.

Don't struggle along in uncongenial employment with long hours and small pay. Educate yourself in this profitable profession and learn to do work that has little competition. Isn't it better to spend a few hours a day for a few weeks and qualify yourself to do work that every one else cannot do? The field for Beauty Culture is large. You will be surprised when you see what a great demand there is for this work in even the very small places. Write to-day for this free book—a penny postal will do.

Elizabeth King System
No. 155 East 23d Street
Dept. 78 New York

Princess Chic
TRADE MARK REGISTERED

SIX STRAP FIGURE SHAPER

Demanded by Present Styles

Perfect Support
Perfect Comfort.

Gives better results in figure shaping than the new corsets, at a trifle of their cost.

The only device that healthfully supports instead of dragging on the muscles of the back.

At the leading stores or direct from the makers if you don't find them.

Price $1.00 for 6-strap as illustrated. 4-strap style, 50c. Colors, black, white and blue.

Give waist measure in ordering.

A. STEIN & CO., 338 W. Congress St., Chicago

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER

THE EVILS OF SPRING

To the complexion are prevented and counteracted by the use of that great beautifier, Lablache. Its users have no fear of redness or roughness caused by wind or sun. Pure and harmless.

Refuse substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail. Send 10c. for sample Box.

BEN. LEVY CO., French Perfumers
Dept. 22
125 Kingston St., Boston, Mass.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

At the Cross*

NOT only does sin roll off as we lay hold of Christ's cross, but the awful feeling of carrying an intolerable load disappears also. Christian felt himself overweighted. How could he run the long race to Mount Zion so encumbered? Morality could not relieve him. Evangelist could only point out the way. Goodwill, similarly, could only comfort him, and bid him keep up a strong heart, until the time should come, as it surely would, when the burden would roll off of itself. Interpreter offered him no help for it; but as soon as he "came up with the cross," in Bunyan's quaint phrase, off it tumbled, and was seen no more.

It is well that in these strenuous days we think much of the cross of Christ. It was remarked by a devoted Christian not long ago that he had heard from the pulpit no mention in months of the saving power of the cross. He had heard sermons on "practical religion," on "settlement work," on the glories of heaven, on the scientific proofs of religion, on the romances of Christianity, the perfections of Job, the mysteries of Ezekiel; on almost every subject that can be mentioned and from many different ministers; but not a word had he heard upon the saving power of the cross. It is well that this topic occurs here and now, and that every one of us should realize that the burden of the soul drops off only when the crucified Saviour is revealed to us.

Those who sail the Indian Ocean say that long before they can see certain islands they are known to be near by the sweet odors of the woods and flowers peculiar to them. Thus from the Cross of Christ exudes a fragrance which betrays its presence. Those who live habitually near to it catch it, and from their presence emanates a rich spiritual influence. It is unique and unmistakable, and from no other source can it be acquired.

"Christ could not have saved the world," says Dr. Louis Banks, "except by way of the cross; and so we cannot do the work which God has for us to do in the world without the cross. We must bear our burdens as he did."

But the burdens are as nothing when he comes into our lives. "The cross is the strength of a minister," says Dr. Pyle. "I would not be without it for the world. I should feel like a soldier without arms, an artist without his pencil, a pilot without his compass, a laborer without his tools. Let others, if they will, preach the law and morality; the terrors of hell and the joys of heaven; the sacraments and the church. Give me only the cross of Christ. This is the only lever which has ever turned the world upside down hitherto and made men forsake their sins. And if this will not, nothing will. A man may begin preaching with a perfect knowledge of Latin, Greek and Hebrew; but he will do little or no good unless he knows something of the cross. Never was there a minister who did much for the conversion of souls who did not dwell much on Christ crucified. Luther, Rutherford, Whitfield, M'Cheyne were all most eminent preachers of the cross. The Holy Ghost loves to honor those who honor the cross."

Rutherford, one of the sainted ministers named by Dr. Pyle, says: "Christ's cross is the sweetest burden that I ever bore; it is such a burden as wings are to a bird, or sails to a ship, to carry me forward to my harbor."

* Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society for Sunday, May 16. TEXTS: John 19: 16-27; Luke 23: 39-49.

Mountaintop Experiences*

IN reading the prayers of the saintly men of the past, one often meets with the petition, in one form or another, "Keep me from undue exaltation of spirit, and equally from undue depression."

Even the greatest and best have found themselves unable to control their moods. To them, as to you and me, come the vicissitudes of life. We go up and we go down, and our emotions shift accordingly.

You win a hotly contested election; receive a long-coveted gift; achieve a victory in your profession; are paid high compliments. How can you help, in any such case, a feeling of exultation, of overweening joy?

On the other hand, friends prove untrue; you make a bad investment and lose hard-earned savings; sickness or death invades your family, or, worse than either, crime or insanity; you fail in your life work; or some other of the common calamities of life befall you. How then can you escape heartaches, bitter tears, the slough of despond?

In Mrs. Annie Meynell's ingenious essay upon "The Rhythm of Life" she insists that it is a part of the philosophy of the universe that each soul should experience constant action and reaction; after elevation must come depression; after the mountain, the valley.

This may be a spiritual law, as she affirms. Certainly no one of us is long permitted to occupy a point of vantage. As soon as we begin to feel our superiority, lo! some humiliation overtakes us. When we have long enough agonized in sackcloth and ashes, light dawns, gifts are placed in our hands, and again we walk upright, with joy in our souls.

There is no more conclusive natural proof than this of the existence of a wise Ruler of the universe, a Ruler who holds not only the heavens and the vast armies of the angels in the hollow of his hand, but the microscopic, individual concerns of each of us, to the very hairs of our heads, doling out to each of us the same varied portion.

But it is an unworthy thing, and a sign of radical weakness, if we allow these changes in our condition to affect our conduct. The people who "blow hot and cold"; cordial and cheery to-day, morose and self-centred to-morrow, are rightly unpopular.

You ask, "How can I help it? I cannot be always upon the Mount of Transfiguration. Gethsemane comes to every man, as it came to our Saviour, and out of the abundance of the heart the mouth must speak."

Not at all. Why were will and self-control given you, if not to check too exuberant emotion, or to stimulate the prostrated heart? And this can always be done if back of the will lies the pervading love of the Best and the confidence and hope which are based on the Rock, Christ Jesus. That alone can keep us steady throughout the storms of life.

It can prevent us from being unduly puffed up by prosperity or cast down by adversity; it only can insure for each and every one of us that beautiful character which we call "consistent." We say of such people that they are "always the same." You may know that they are passing through deep waters, and sometimes you see the strong heart break and the tears flow; but the true soul, by prayer and struggle, conquers the pain, puts its hand in that of Christ, and plods bravely on. Then comes joy, excess of happiness, as the bright rain,

Fallen after drouth, bends down the shining flowers.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 16. Anniversary Day. TEXT: Luke 9: 28-36.

Start a Printing Shop!

USEFUL FOR CHURCH WORK

We can furnish you with press, type and all material so you can start a small printing office in your own home and print circulars, cards, envelopes, billheads, programs, etc. We have all kinds of outfits at all prices. We have been in business for many years and thousands of successful business men to-day got their start by buying one of our outfits.

Clergymen or other Christian workers find a printing press the greatest of helps. All manner of printing can be turned out, notices of services, invitations, tickets, contribution blanks, hand bills, etc. A monthly, weekly or quarterly paper of parish news and of religious reading brings good results. Either our Press, 6x10 or 9x13 will execute a paper of this class if the 11x16 is deemed too large or costly. All presses print equally well to their capacity. Missionaries have been among our best customers, as they readily see the advantage of our outfits for their work. Compact, light, durable, our presses are well adapted for long distance shipments. Please write for catalogue and we will send pictures of our different presses, type faces and all the things we sell. You can start in business for yourself for a few dollars. Here is a splendid chance for boys and young men who can spare a few hours each week to make a lot of money. Address:
THE PRESS CO., Dept. 51, Meriden, Conn.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book, "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.
Patent Obtained or Fee Returned
CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Attorneys
Established 16 Years
1003 F. Street, Washington, D.C.

PALETTE AND BENCH
MONTHLY MAGAZINE for the ART STUDENT AND CRAFTS WORKER

Send 25 Cents for Sample Copy of Palette and Bench
A new magazine for Teachers and Students of Oil and Water Colors and the Crafts. Endorsed by the leading art educators of the country. Prospectus free!
KERAMIC STUDIO PUB. CO.
115 Pearl Street, Syracuse, N. Y.

COMBINATION OFFER

10 Fine Birthday Post Cards mailed for 10 cents.
10 Beautiful Rose Post Cards mailed for 10 cents.
10 Nice Post Cards, assorted subjects, for 10 cents.
The three packages mailed for 25c.
MADISON ART COMPANY. Madison, Conn.

SUNMOUNT SANATORIUM SANTA FE New Mexico
An ethical institution for the climatic and modern treatment of
TUBERCULOSIS
In the foothills of the Rockies. Ideal Cool Summer. Moderate Rates Send for Booklet

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.
CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

WEDDING INVITATIONS
100 for $3.50
Announcements, etc., engraved and printed. Latest styles, best quality, sent prepaid anywhere. Visiting Cards, 100 50c. with case 75c. Write for samples.
The Estabrook Press, 2 Mead Bldg., Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

EXTRA FINE POST CARDS FREE

Send stamp for free samples of our best Gold and Silk Finish Friendship, Flower and Motto Post Cards; heaut. all colors and loveliest designs.
ART POST CARD CLUB 885 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

FOR SALE Abstract and Loan Business, one other set books in County. $8,000. Business Opportunity, 923 Washington St., Iowa City, Iowa

A Visit to Heaven price 10 cents.
Rev. Francis S. Wilton, Phillipsburg, N. J.

"ASTRONOMY AND BIBLE COURSE"; Cloth Book, $1. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, B., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Music Lessons Free

IN YOUR OWN HOME.

A wonderful offer to every lover of music whether a beginner or an advaneed player.

Ninety-six lessons (or a less number, if you desire) for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet, Sight Singing, or Mandolin will be given free to make our home study eourses for these instruments known in your locality. You will get one lesson weekly, and your only expense during the time you take the lessons will be the cost of postage and the music you use, which is small. Write at onee. It will mean much to you to get our free booklet. It will place you under no obligation whatever to us if you never write again. You and your friends should know of this work. Hundreds of our pupils write: "Wish I had known of your school before." "Have learned more in one term in my home with your weekly lessons than in three terms with private teachers, and at a great deal less expense." "Everything is so thorough and complete." "The lessons are marvels of simplicity, and my 11 year old boy has not had the least trouble to learn." One minister writes: "As each succeeding lesson eames I am more and more fully persuaded I made no mistake in becoming your pupil."

Established 1898—have thousands of pupils from seven years of age to seventy.

Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our free booklet and tuition offer. It will be sent by return mail free. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7, 225 Fifth Ave., New York City.

CORNISH FROM FACTORY TO HOME

ON A YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

2 Years' Credit If Needed—Easy Terms

Why Shouldn't You Buy As Low As Any Dealer?

BUY ON THE CORNISH PLAN

We save you $100 and more on the purchase of a piano.

which, in brief, places a strictly high grade piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish, at rock-bottom factory price, upon terms of your own choice, giving you 1 year to test the instrument before you need decide to keep it, and we give you an Ironclad Bond of Indemnity which holds us to this offer and also insures instrument against defect for 25 years. Send for the New Cornish Book the most beautiful piano and organ catalogue issued; it shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now.

CORNISH CO. Washington, N.J. Established Over 56 Years

ASK FOR OUR FREE

Invalid Chair Book

INVALIDS, SHUT INS, CONVALESCENTS, OLD PEOPLE, CRIPPLES!

We have a Book of Invalid Chairs that will surprise you, offering 100 styles of the newest, best and most improved rolling, propelling, adjustable reclining chairs at very much lower prices than ever before quoted—about one-half retail prices. Every chair we sell is on ten days' trial and you are the judge. If you are not more than satisfied we refund the price and pay all charges. Our wheel chairs afford an invalid more comfort at smaller expense than you ever before thought possible. Write today for our free Invalid Chair Book No. 526D

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO

DEAF 25 YEARS

CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY Inventor

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story. How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

Medicated Ear Drum Pat. July 1st, 1908

COOKING WITHOUT FIRE

THIS

Fireless Cooker

COOKING BAKING

and $10 worth of guaranteed T. & S. products Direct from the makers

ON APPROVAL FOR TEN DOLLARS

Retail value of Cooker alone $12. Value guaranteed. Be your own judge. "Baking in the Fireless" and a Book of Recipes FREE.

T. & S. Co., 221 Franklin Bldg., Buffalo, N.Y.

SOMEBODY'S MOTHER

SHE looked toward the sunset,
Touched by a glittering beam,
Her face a lovely poem
That made me pause and dream.
There was no trace of beauty,
Nor aught surprising fair;
But something sweet and tender
That angel faces wear.

Perchance the years were sweetened,
And left their impress there;
Perhaps they too were freighted
With life's unceasing care.
It may be storm clouds gathered
And bent their threatening shade;
It may be naught but brightness
For her a pathway made.

It seemed a bit of heaven
O'er her its radiance shed;
And glistened in the snowdrifts
That mantled brow and head.
'Twas something of the glory
Which lights the streets of gold,
That wrapped her in its beauty,
And softened every fold.

Her loveliness was sweeter
Than when the roses gleamed
On cheeks turned to the sunset,
And deep with furrows seamed.
Peace touched the faded outlines
And left with each sweet kiss
A dream of something fairer
Than found in worlds like this.

Newville, Pa. BELLE MCKINNEY SWOPE.

Uncle Jim's Dream

"UNCLE JIM" JONES, a negro of unmixed blood, more than eighty years old, a shoemaker by trade—which he still plies in Raleigh, N. C.—firm in his faith in God, but unable to read the Bible, became much perplexed in his younger manhood upon the question of the existence and character of hell. He prayed about it—prayed God to tell him "what hell was like"—and had a dream which he regards as an answer to his prayer. He thought he was in a new ground, full of black stumps, and said to himself, "Well, is this here hell? If it is, it is not such a bad place after all. But," he continued, "I hadn't mor'n got the words outen my mouth before I seed them stumps begin er risin' an' er' shufflin' an' I soon seed they weren't no stumps at all, but livin', human bein's; the black was the cloak they every one was a wearin' and under it was full of fire!" Every man appeared to be carrying his own hell about with him and covering it with a cloak—"huggin' it about him," the old negro said he dreamed. Was this cloak the hypocrisy one wears in life, shutting him out of sympathy with his fellows? There is a germ of literature in the dream of this old negro which might well furnish the theme for a sermon. W. J. PEELE.

Answered Prayers

C. S. R., New Jersey. "I wish to publicly acknowledge the answer of God to a prayer of mine."

N. T. P. C., New York. "I am one of the number that can testify that God does answer prayer."

M. J. E., Iowa. "With a thankful heart I can say that God has heard and answered my prayers. He is the best friend in time of need."

A. J. P., Nebraska. "I wish to add my testimony that God answers prayer. During the past week I have fully realized it in my temporal affairs."

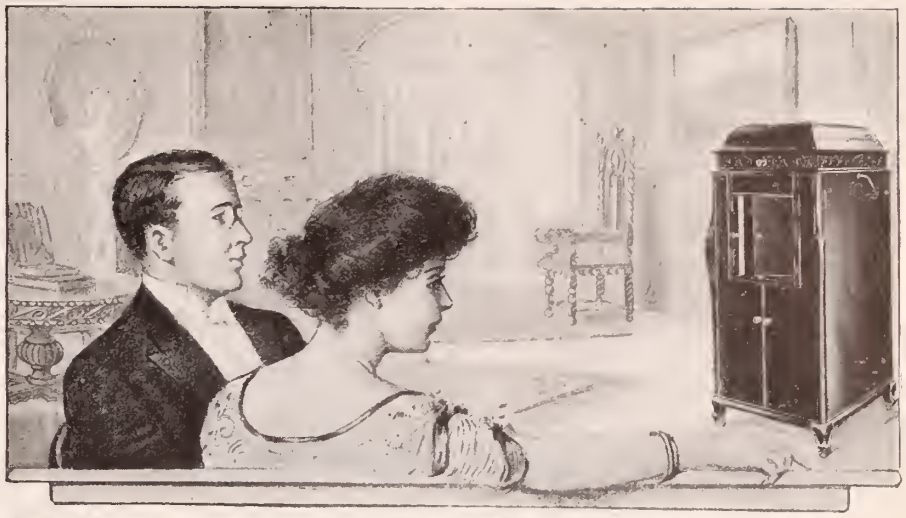
Reader, Michigan. "I wish to acknowledge to the world that God answers prayer. He has answered one recently, in restoring my brother to health again."

Reader, R. A. F., New York. "I promised God that if he would answer a prayer of mine I would announce it to the world. He has, and many others."

Constant Reader, Pennsylvania. "I had promised God if he would answer my prayer I would acknowledge it to the world. He has answered that prayer."

J. V. W., California. "I have received much inspiration and help from the 'Answered Prayers.' Some time ago I was in deep trouble, from which there seemed no way of escape. I took all to God. He has answered."

Mrs. A. R. A., New Jersey. "For a number of years I have had an incurable disease. Many physicians told me there was no help for it, so I went to God in prayer and trusted that he would not let me become helpless. And now, for more than a year, I have been free from pain and the helplessness that seemed inevitable."



Victor-Victrola

The most complete of all musical instruments.

A new style Victor that is even more wonderful than the regular type of Victor.

Perfect as that is; clear and true to life as it plays all the beautiful Victor music, the Victrola plays it even better—with an added sweetness and mellowness of tone that is absolute perfection.

There is nothing else like the Victrola. It has no horn, but is complete in itself. All the parts are specially designed and built right in the instrument.

The Victrola also contains albums for 150 records and drawer for accessories.

The music is made loud or soft by opening or closing the small doors.

Victor-Victrola XVI, mahogany, $200

Quartered oak $200. Circassian walnut $250.
Other styles of the Victor from $10 up.

See and hear the Victrola at the nearest Victor dealer's.
Write to us for complete catalogues of the Victor-Victrola and Victor Records, and for name of the nearest Victor dealer.

Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N.J., U.S.A.

Berliner Gramophone Co., Montreal, Canadian Distributors.

To get best results, use only Victor Needles on Victor Records.

A complete list of new Victor Records for May will be found in the May number of Munsey's, Scribner's, McClure's, Century, Everybody's and June Cosmopolitan.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN

and district to ride and exhibit a 1909 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make for 1909. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

DO NOT WAIT, but write today and we will send you free by return mail our large catalogue, beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information; also a wonderful proposition on the first sample bicycle going to your town. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY Dept. T-71 CHICAGO, ILL.

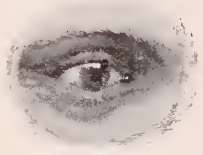
Are Your Eyes Affected in ANY Way?

If So Let Us Send You

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

for 10 days at our expense.



THE NORMAL EYE

It helps Nature in a purely natural way to strengthen the eyes and restore the natural vision. Its action is in the nature of a gentle massage, which stimulates the eyes by restoring the normal circulation of blood—that is all that weak eyes require. But it does more—it moulds the eye painlessly but surely to its perfect shape. This is necessary to remove near-sight, far-sight, astigmatism, and kindred defects. It is absolutely safe—it does not come in direct contact with the eyes; and five minutes' manipulation, in your own home, twice a day, is all that is necessary to counteract eyestrain and headache, and relegate eyeglasses to the rubbish box. Throw away your eyeglasses. See nature, and read with your naked eyes. Write for instructive booklet and 10 days test to THE IDEAL CO., 321 H 5th Ave., N. Y.

Be a Specialty Salesman

I Guarantee Your Salary

Any earnest young man or woman over 15 years of age who will follow my instructions to the letter, report to me promptly and take my advice will make at least $2.50 a day. You can make just as much more than this as you are worth. Two young men made $9,000 clear in 30 months. One made $25.95 the very first day. Still another $14.00 a day. The fourth $34.20 in 5 hours. Another $184.45 in 49 working hours. Another $86.76 clear the first week. Just follow my instructions. I want no one to write me who cannot secure the encouragement and support of their parents, but if you can do this and want to make big money for any purpose, I want to hear from you. FULL PARTICULARS FREE.

H. C. WHITE CO., J. William Eldredge, Mgr. 770 Monon Bldg. 101, Chicago, Ill.

YOU CAN AFFORD

to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

For Better Starching

A teaspoonful of melted paraffine in hot starch gives a much better finish to linens than starch alone.

Paraffine is wonderfully handy to have about the house—useful somewhere, somehow, from Monday to Saturday.

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

is an admirable finish for uncarpeted floors. A little added to hot wash water loosens dirt from soiled clothes.

Nothing seals a fruit jar or jelly glass so sure as dipping the cap or cover, after closing, into hot Paraffine.

Ask for our anti-stick Paraffine Paper Pad for ironing day. It keeps the sad-irons smooth.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

THIS BARRE GRANITE MONUMENT $81.00

Barre Granite Monuments at $81.00 to $385.00.

Five hundred styles and sizes of Marble and Granite Tombstones and Monuments at $3.60 to $385.00

If you want the best in stonecraft at direct-from-the-quarry prices, write for No 526E Tombstone Catalogue.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago

Holsman Automobiles

High Wheels Travel all Roads, Because all Roads are made to be traveled by High Wheels.

Oldest and largest makers of high-wheeled automobiles in the world. World's record for Hill-climbing and Reliability contests in this class. Only all ball-and-roller-bearing motor made. New friction-chain direct drive—no gears. Roadibility and Rollability are the reasons for high wheels and solid rubber tires. Send for our catalog and learn more about these popular, intensely practicable vehicles and their low cost.

HOLSMAN AUTOMOBILE CO.
Suite 149 Monadnock Blk Chicago

Go Anywhere

Deafness
"The Morley 'Phone"

A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.

Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO.,
Dept. E, Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

Stewart Hartshorn

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.

Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

GET IT GALLOWAY

My Great Buggy Proposition—IT'S NEW.
Positively best ever made by any factory.

I Save You $28.75 on this Job Free Trial

Saves You 33⅓ to 50% lowest prices, best proposition ever made in buggy history. Get it before buying a buggy of any kind. It helps you pay for buggy. Also harness, wagons, implements, etc.

WM. GALLOWAY CO.
946 Galloway Sta. Waterloo, Ia.

BIRTHDAY POST CARDS

10 Superior quality B'day Post Cards mailed for 10c.
6 High grade B'day Post Cards mailed for 10c.
12 Birthday-and-Flower B'day Post Cards for 15c.
Order 3 packages as above and we will give you a plush-design B'day Post Card with beautiful color tints.

MADISON ART CO., MADISON, CONN.

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from page 399

to Gaylordville a very different being from Marco, the mysterious little stranger, earning money for his sick mother in the gipsy camp; and before many days had passed Marco himself found this out, though he could not have put it into words. He knew only that the faces into which he looked—before, interested, even sometimes cordial—were indifferent now, if not actually hostile; and he realized that his little cap seldom showed anything richer than a copper cent or two when it had gone the rounds of the crowd.

Perhaps, though the boy did not know it, the music was different. It no longer carried quite the joy and triumph that it had before; it no longer sang of woods and flowers and tumbling brooks, and of joyous days to come. Instead, there had crept into it something of the gloom of the blackened hills and the culm-covered waste all about him; and something of the sob of a lonely child in a tent all alone in the clearing. Whatever it was, his playing met with a response that was anything but encouraging; and, night after night, Marco went home with a heart that ached as sorely as did his little brown feet.

How, pray, he asked himself, was he to pay for his "board and keep," to say nothing of saving money to help him find his sister? As if five cents a day could do that! He looked with envy upon Benny and Johnny with their jingling coins, and once he went without his supper, only to stumble down-stairs in the night to look for a crust of bread, because he was so hungry he could not sleep. He found out, too, one day, about the tin coffee-pot and the hopes it carried; and after that he was more miserable than ever. His music that day was only a minor wail like the cry of a lost dog in the desert; and two women sent him away from their door with a shiver and an angry word.

Then Marco determined that something must be done. After some deliberation he summoned ten-year-old Johnny to his aid.

"I'm goin' ter work," he announced decisively. "I'm goin' ter begin with you to-morrow mornin'."

"Ye can't! What's eatin' ye? Ye got ter be fourteen."

"Fourteen!" Marco fairly screamed the words. "Why, I ain't but nine and a half!"

Again Johnny grinned.

"Ain't you de guy ter own it up?" he chuckled.

Marco frowned and thrust forward his ready little fist, whereat Johnny shrugged his shoulders and hastened to make amends.

"Ho! what's eatin' ye? You can be fourteen same's I am. I got a paper off de squire fur a quarter, an' so can you."

Marco sighed his relief; but his eyes were dazed, and Johnny proceeded to explain.

"Ye hain't got ter be fourteen. Ye jest got ter say yer fourteen. See? Say it now, an' ter-morrer, an' fur-ever. Now!" And he struck a pompous attitude. "How old be you, Marco Ferdinando Bonelli—Bonesy?" he demanded.

For once Marco forgave the hated "Bonesy." He was too absorbed to take offense. He hestitated, then blurted it out in one shout of triumph:

"I'm four—teen!"

"Right ye are!" crowed Johnny, highly pleased with his pupil. "Now—got a quarter?"

Marco frowned. Very slowly he reached into his pocket and produced a half of a red bandana handkerchief tied into a series of hard knots, evidently the safeguard of some treasure. A minute later the treasure lay in his lap: a five-cent piece, and fourteen copper cents.

"I hain't got but nineteen cents," he choked, after a feverish counting of his wealth.

"Ho!" shrugged Johnny, diving into his trousers pockets, and pulling both of them wrong side out. There tumbled into view a string, two nails, an odd-shaped bit of coal, a cigarette stump, a curious piece of slate, three copper cents, and one nickel. "Here, I can tend ter that," he cried, picking out the nickel and one of the cents, and airily tossing them into Marco's lap. "Now, how old be ye?"

"Fourteen!" shrieked Marco, leaping to his feet and executing a dance of triumph, keeping time with the jingling coins in the bandana handkerchief, which he had turned into a tambourine.

It was a very simple matter after that. The Widow Martin was more than willing that Marco should go to work in the coal-breaker; she had, indeed, been seriously thinking of proposing it herself. The certificate, too, was easily secured, and in due time Marco also had "a paper off de squire" which swore that he was past fourteen.

There remained then only the task of obtaining the employment itself; and there was not much doubt that there would be found to be plenty of room in the huge black coal-breaker for one more small boy.

CHAPTER V

Dodging the Inspector

A NEW boy was always a source of more or less interest to his fellow-workers in the coal-breaker. Experience likes to gloat over inexperience, and chuckle at its mistakes; and ten-year-old boys are not the only ones that enjoy making a display of easy proficiency before the eyes of dazed ignorance.

In the case of Marco, the Gaylordville boys found a rich treat. It was not every day that there was introduced into their midst a boy whose home had been the green hills, bounded only by the far-reaching blue sky, and whose will had known almost no restraint in all the nine years of his life. Marco shrank from the roar of the machinery and the grinding sweep of the coal down the chutes; and he blinked at the lamps gleaming smokily from the caps of the boys. He choked and sneezed at the clouds of dust, and felt his way gingerly to the little board laid across the trough where he was to begin his work. The boys jeered and grinned, and thrust their blackened little faces forward with shouts of:

"Hi, thar!—if here ain't Bonesy, de fiddlin' kid! Say, give us a chune!"

Marco scowled, and doubled up his small fists threateningly; but he changed his tactics as he suddenly remembered his new dignity.

"Ho! I'm goin' ter work. What's eatin ye?" he scoffed airily, borrowing Johnny's pet phrase with shameless ease.

And Marco did go to work. It was not long before he learned just how to sit on the little board across the chute, and just how to pick the rock and slate and "bony" from the coal that slid down the trough between his feet. But it was not long, also, before his back began to ache and ache as if a dozen gimlets were boring through it; and it was not long before his little brown fingers showed scarlet tips, where the sharp stone and slate had cut through the skin. He learned then what "red tops" meant. There were three other new boys working near him, and they, too, had bleeding finger tips,—and they, too, were the object of jeers and gibes because of their "blooming red tops."

To be continued

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 401, and write them for full information.

Any lamp, kitchen or parlor, looks better and gives better light, if fitted with a MACBETH lamp-chimney.

My chimneys fit; that means no smoke or smudge, no flickering flames.

My chimneys are made of glass that won't break from heat; that is clear as crystal. My name is on every one.

My guide, sent free, shows which is the right chimney for each lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh

SAVE 25% ON YOUR RUGS

Why should you pay a dealer's profit when you can buy direct from us at manufacturer's prices, and get equal quality and greater variety? We've been making rugs for a quarter-century, and every one we sell is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or we will return your money.

Hancock Rugs

are honestly made—strong and durable. They wear like oak. The designs are distinguished and the colorings exquisite. They will beautify any room in your home.

We are particularly proud of our Duchess Tapestry, 9x12 feet, at $13.50, and our Gold Medal Axminster rug, 9x12 feet, at $20.50. We pay the freight east of the Mississippi.

These and other Hancock Rugs from $2.00 to $30.00 are illustrated in colors, and fully described in our handsome free catalogue. Let us send it to you. Write a postal for it to-day—right now, before you forget. It will save you money. Also ask for our money-saving catalogue of imported mattings.

Hancock Rug Mills, Dept. E, Philadelphia

USE
BORDEN'S
PEERLESS BRAND
EVAPORATED MILK
(UNSWEETENED)
In All Recipes Calling for MILK OR CREAM

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief For PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all affections of the skin.

Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free

GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

FREE Relyea SAMPLES

Send your address and we will mail you packet of Relyea Samples, containing the very latest Relyea White Lawns, Long Cloth, Nainsook, Lingerie Chiffon, Dimities, Linen, Waisting and Colored Rep Cloth Suitings. We save you money and prepay express on all orders in the United States. Money returned if goods are not satisfactory. Write for Relyea samples to-day.

RELYEA & CO., Dept. C, 287 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

AGENTS.

New invention; never before sold in your territory; horse owners wild about them; automatic hame fastener sells at sight; coin money; a fortune in your territory; free sample to workers; write at once. Automatic Fastener Co., H 313, Cincinnati, Ohio

ARE YOU DEAF?

We have 25 INSTRUMENTS TO ASSIST HEARING. On approval. Send for Catalogue.

WM. C. WILLIS & CO., 1334 So. 11th St., Phila.

Strainer Spoon. Rapid Seller Large catalog free. $3 to $5 a day.
RICHARDSON MFG. CO.
Dept. 6 BATH, N. Y.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.

EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated With Caffeine

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on my stomach.

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and then milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A WOMAN FLORIST

6 Hardy Everblooming Roses On their own roots. ALL WILL BLOOM THIS SUMMER 25c

Sent to any address post-paid; guaranteed to reach you in good growing condition.

GEM ROSE COLLECTION
Enchantress, white and buff.
Bouquet of Gold, golden yellow.
Queens Scarlet, dazzling crimson.
Duchess de Brabant, grandest pink.
Snowflake, pure white.
La Detroit, bright flesh.

SPECIAL BARGAINS
6 Carnations the "Divine Flower," all colors, 25c.
6 Prize-Winning Chrysanthemums, - - 25c.
6 Beautiful Coleus, - - - - - 25c.
4 Hardy Phlox, - - - - - - 25c.
3 Grand Orchid Cannas, - - - 25c.
8 Sweet Scented Tuberoses, - - 25c.
6 Fuchsias, all different, - - - 25c.
10 Lovely Gladiolus, - - - - - 25c.
10 Superb Pansy Plants, - - - - 25c.
15 Pkts. Flower Seeds, all different, 25c.

Any Five Collections for One Dollar, Post-Paid. Guarantee satisfaction. Once a customer, always one. Catalog Free.
MISS ELLA V. BAINES, Box 244, Springfield, Ohio

"The Fence That Lasts Forever!"

CHEAPER THAN WOOD

Ornament your front yard by installing a beautiful Iron Fence. Our Iron Fence has Style, Finish and Durability, and in cost we compete with the World. 100 Choice Designs. Address Dep't S, for prices.
CINCINNATI IRON FENCE CO., (Incorporated)
FREE Catalogue. CINCINNATI, OHIO.
AGENTS WANTED in every town. EASY TO SELL

IRON AND WIRE FENCES

CATALOG FREE HIGH GRADE FOR ALL PURPOSES

ENTERPRISE FOUNDRY AND FENCE COMPANY
411 South Senate Avenue Indianapolis, Ind.

SPRAY POTATOES WITH THE Watson—High Pressure

—Automatic—including Agitator and Strainer Cleaner—Sprays 40 acres daily—State experiments show gain of more than $75 per acre by using the WATSON. Booklet FREE.
FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 11th St., Elmira, N.Y.

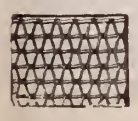
CORNS

A-CORN SALVE works like magic in removing corns quickly and painlessly. Its application brings instant relief. No danger from razor cuts. 15c. at druggist's or by mail.

Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

LAWN FENCE

Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind



FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

A MOUNT IN OREGON

THERE stands in Oregon the fair Mount Hood,
Upon whose bosom snow and sunlight brood.
At noon it stands all peaceful, clothed in white,
At eve reflects the ruddy sunset light.

From year to year, at morning, noon and night,
Unchanged, undimmed, it shines in spotless white;
Before our generation had been born,
From year to year it shone, night, noon and morn.

And still it shines and calmly dwells apart
From noises of the city, street and mart,
And startles to surprise, to worship, prayer,
Some traveler who greets it unaware.

So may my spirit dwell in peaceful state,
Above all worldly care and strife and hate;
Reposing high, may it in calm remain
Living above its care, beyond its stain.

Astoria, Ore. DONALD CAMERON.

Astronomical Queries

By PROF. S. P. LELAND, Seabreeze, Fla.

A. M. R., Greensboro, N. C. 1. Apart from the Creator's purpose, if the moon was covered with vegetation and water, like the earth, would it cast a reflected light? 2. Does the earth shine like the other planets? 3. What caused the tidal wave that destroyed so much life and property on the coast of South Carolina about twenty years ago?

1. Yes. The color might be slightly modified, and perhaps the reflecting power; otherwise it would be the same. 2. Yes. To eyes constituted like ours, on other planets, our own earth would appear as the other planets do to us. 3. The tidal wave was doubtless caused by a slight upheaval of the bed of the ocean, not many miles away. Scientists then thought this the cause. Such occurrences are quite frequent, especially in the earthquake zones, and in Southern waters.

E. D., Oakesdale, Wash. 1. Please state if any moon belongs to Mars or to Venus. 2. Also, if Vulcan is a reality. 3. If a planet has been discerned beyond the orbit of Neptune.

1. Yes; Mars has two moons. They revolve about the planet on the plane of his equator, and their orbits are very nearly circular. The inner moon is 3,770 miles from the surface of the planet, and makes a revolution in 7 hours, 39 minutes and 15 seconds. The outer is 12,600 miles from the planet, and the revolution is 30 hours, 17 minutes and 54 seconds. Venus has no moon. 2. The existence of a planet inside of the orbit of Mercury has not yet been established. 3. Recently some mathematicians have located a planet beyond Neptune. Of its existence there is little doubt, and its influence on Neptune has been clearly defined and its orbit well calculated. It has not yet been seen.

C. W. Y., Lancaster, Tex. What is the method of getting observatory time?

In every well-ordered observatory are instruments of rare delicacy, among which is one called the mural circle, or meridian circle, because it is fixed in the plane of the meridian. Attached to this instrument are indicators for determining the exact solar time. In the observatory at Greenwich, England, machinery is so arranged that at precisely 1 P.M., daily, a lever is dropped which connects telegraphic wires to all parts of Europe, and portions of other continents, communicating exact solar time. Having this time, it is easy to calculate the time at any place on any meridian east or west of Greenwich. Similar instruments are used in Washington, and in many other observatories.

J. M. R., Greenwood, S. C. If the earth should pause for one hour in its daily rotation, what would be the effect on all earthly life? On the earth itself? On the solar system? Would such effect be appreciable if the pause were but one minute?

You are supposing an impossible thing, hence the answer must be speculative. The earth moves on the line of perfect balance between the centrifugal and centripetal forces. Were it to stop, centrifugal force would be suspended and the earth would start at once toward the sun. In the supposed hour it might attain such a speed that the readjustment would be impossible and it would ultimately plunge into the sun. The perfect balance of the solar system would be disturbed temporarily, and life on our globe would become extinct.

She Values The Christian Herald

Dear Dr. Klopsch: Since it encourages and strengthens any one of us to know that our efforts are being appreciated, I write to tell you that I highly value THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. I look forward with pleasure to its coming, and each week it is read in our home with profit to all. I thank you for the premiums you gave this year. When I read the title of the book, After Death—What? I found myself replying, "Nobody knows"; but I found in the book many very beautiful and helpful thoughts.

MRS. JAMES T. LUTTON.

Pittsburg, Pa.

YOUR Folks Used to Make Good Gravy—maybe they do yet, but in many a household it is a lost art.

¶ Grandmother's gravy—how smooth it was—how good it tasted! That was because she thickened it with Kingsford's Corn Starch and not with flour. Flour makes lumpy gravy and that raw taste.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

is the right thickening for gravies, for sauces and cream soups.

¶ Remember one thing—you can't make perfect pie-crust without it—one part Kingsford's to two parts flour is the recipe. Also it makes a puff-paste that melts in the mouth.

¶ A Word to Kingsford Friends—Send us the name of any young housewife who thinks that Corn Starch is used only for puddings or desserts; we will send her our new little Book O, "What a Cook Ought to Know About Corn Starch." We will gladly mail you without cost a copy too if you like.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, OSWEGO, N. Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

Wash-Day to Baking Day

All days are alike to the New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove. No matter for what purpose you need a quick, clean, hot flame, or a slow, steady flame—without an added degree of heat in the room—there is no stove like the "New Perfection"—the wonderful oil stove that has revolutionized housekeeping. The besides being the perfect stove for summer, is just as efficient for year-round use. It is built with a CABINET TOP that makes it possible to warm dishes and keep food hot after it is cooked, and adds many other conveniences.

NEW PERFECTION Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove

The "New Perfection" is the most complete and most efficient oil stove ever made. Made in three sizes. Can be had either with or without Cabinet Top. If not at your dealer's, write our nearest agency.

THE Rayo LAMP is unsurpassed for home illumination. Floods the room with light if you wish it—gives a restful, mellow glow if you prefer it. Just the lamp for daily use everywhere. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

The Best 6% Bonds That We Know

We have written a book of information on the most attractive bonds that we know.

It is based on fifteen years of active experience with these bonds. We may rightly claim, therefore, very wide information.

The book is unbiased.

We sell many kinds of bonds, and our purpose in calling attention to one kind only is that you also may know about them to our mutual advantage.

These bonds pay 6% interest. They are first liens on valuable farms. Some are tax liens—Municipal obligations.

They are issued in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000, so they appeal to both small and large investors.

They are to-day the most popular bonds that we sell. They will be ten times more popular when the facts about them are ten times better known—for no other large class of bonds offers equal security combined with so large an interest rate.

This book contains information which every investor should have, whether he has little or much to invest.

Cut out this coupon as a reminder to send for the book to-day.

Trowbridge & Niver Co.

(Established 1893)

Municipal and Corporation Bonds

First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO — 50 Congress Street BOSTON

Request for Bond Book

TROWBRIDGE & NIVER CO.
First National Bank Building, CHICAGO:
Please send a copy of your book, "The World's Greatest Industry."

.....

.....

Y .....

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off

Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

Particularly Desirable after Dinner

YOUR MUSICAL FRIEND

KNOWS that Chiclets keep the throat clear and moist

Sold in 5¢ 10¢ and 25¢ packets
Frank H. Fleer & Company Inc.
Philadelphia, U.S.A. and Toronto, Can.

"They Are Answered Now"

LAST spring, when my son Burke and I were holding a tent meeting in Lakeland, Fla., great interest was manifested by the "railroad boys." One of the conductors, coming in off his run, sat in his home, with his little girl on his lap. She suddenly looked steadily into his face a half minute, then said, "Papa, have you taken a drink on this run?" The man was much surprised, but said, "Yes, daughter; why do you ask me that?" "Nothing, papa," she said, "only my prayers have not been answered yet. I'd better go pray again." She got down and started into an adjacent room. The man's chest heaved a moment. Then he called her and said, "There, Dolly, you need not pray about it. They are answered now. Papa will never touch it again." JOHN B. CULPEPPER.

Valdosta, Ga.

Blind Missionary to the Blind

A BAND of cheerful optimists recently assembled in Philadelphia. They laughed and joked and chatted and seemed to regard the world as the sunniest place imaginable, and yet they could not have seen even an arc light if placed near their eyes. They were blind, and their object in meeting was to inaugurate a campaign of education on behalf of other sightless ones who are unable to read and write.

Mr. Moore and His Blind Pupil

It was decided to organize a body of blind missionaries, whose duty it should be to seek out the blind at their homes and teach them to read and write by the embossed type system, invented by Dr. Moon, of England, and first introduced into this country by the Philadelphia Bible Society.

One of the missionaries now engaged in this work is J. W. Moore, of Philadelphia. He teaches the blind to read chiefly that they may be able to study the Scriptures. He goes from house to house, drilling his students in the method of reading from the embossed type and teaching them to write by means of the writing machine for use with the same alphabet.

"Perhaps"

HOW often in the cares of life
We ask most every day,
Some little kindness of some friend,
In simple, loving way;
And they in careless, thoughtless mood
And trifling accents say,
"Perhaps."

And when in time of trouble,
When sorrows oft beset,
We long for just a little word,
Our hopes are always met
With unconcern, and then instead
Of help we always get,
"Perhaps."

But time may come when we shall have
To ask for help no more,
Earth's prizes won, or it may be
Life's fitful journey o'er;
And then some one may long to give
A willing kindness for "Perhaps."

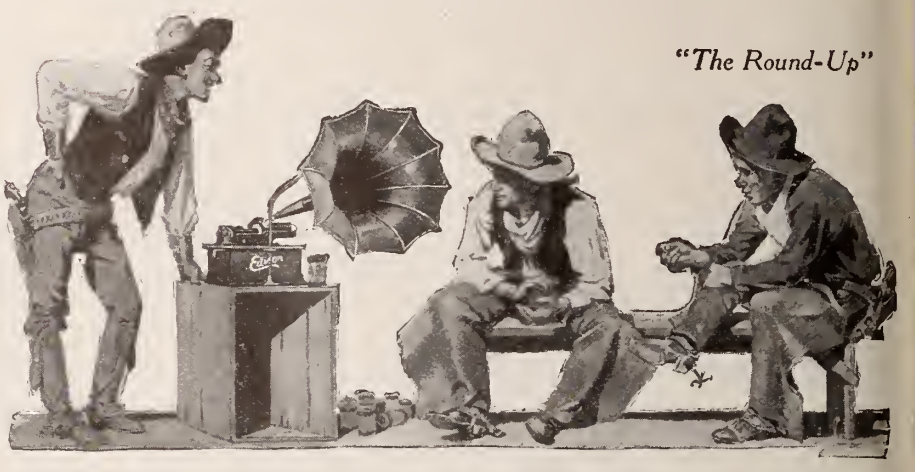
C. H. SANFORD.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

SOMETHING to enjoy in the evening, at home, in comfort, without effort. Something that is cleaner, brighter and more fascinating than most entertainment that is planned for and paid for.



"The Round-Up"

Some Exclusive Features of the Edison Phonograph

GO to an Edison dealer's and compare the Phonograph with other instruments. Note particularly its sturdy construction, good for years of perfect work; its indestructible reproducing point, which never needs to be changed; its long-running, silent motor, most essential to brilliant work; its sensitive wax cylinder Records, famous for their clearness and sweetness of tone; its large, specially designed horn and its new Amberol Records, playing twice as long as the standard Edison Records and longer than any other Record.

Have you ever tried making your own Phonograph Records? It's no end of fun. This can be done only with the Edison.

Edison Phonographs are sold at the same prices everywhere in the United States—$12.50 to $125.00. Standard Edison Records, 35c. Edison Amberol Records, 50c. Edison Grand Opera Records, 75.

Ask your dealer or write us for catalogues of Edison Phonographs and Records.

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH CO., 8 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N.J.

The Edison Business Phonograph saves the time of high-salaried men and increases their letter-writing capacity.

NEW STEEL ROOFING $1.60 PER 100 SQ. FEET

Most Durable and Economical Known Easy to put on, requires no tools but a hatchet or a hammer. With ordinary care will outlast any other kind. Thousands of satisfied customers everywhere have proven its virtues. Suitable for covering any building. Also best for ceiling and siding. FIRE-PROOF AND LIGHTNING PROOF. Cheaper and more lasting than shingles. Will not taint rain water. Makes your building cooler in summer and warmer in winter. Absolutely perfect. Brand new. $1.60 is our price for our No. 10 grade of Flat Semi-Hardened Steel Roofing and Siding, each sheet 24 in. wide and 6 or 8 ft. long. Our price on the Corrugated, like illustration, sheets 22 in. wide and 6 or 8 ft. long, $1.85. Steel Pressed Brick Siding. PER SQUARE, $1.85. Fine Steel Beaded Ceiling, PER SQUARE, $1.85. Also furnish Standing Seam and "V" Crimped Roofing. At these prices WE PAY THE FREIGHT to all points east of Colorado except Okla., Tex., and Ind. Ter. Quotations to other points on application. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED. We ship this roofing to anyone answering this Ad., C. O. D., with privilege of examination if you send us 25 per cent of the amount of your order in cash; balance to be paid after material reaches your station. If not found as represented, we will cheerfully refund your deposit. ASK FOR CATALOG NO. C. M. 373 Lowest prices on Roofing, Eave Troughs, Wire, Pipe, Fencing, Plumbing, Doors, Household Goods and everything needed on the farm or in the home.

WE BUY OUR GOODS AT SHERIFFS' AND RECEIVERS' SALES

Chicago House Wrecking Co., 35th & Iron Sts., Chicago

Here Is Something New From Kalamazoo

Prove for yourself in your own home, that the Kalamazoo is the most perfect—most economical—most satisfactory range for you to use—Your money back if it's not.

Send for Catalog No. 103 with special terms and compare Kalamazoo prices with others

Cash Or Time Payments

We want every housewife to know the comfort and convenience of a Kalamazoo in her home. You can buy on easy time payments or pay cash if you like. Either way—you save $10 to $20 on any Stove in the catalog. We make it easy for responsible people to own the best stove or range in the world.

We Pay the Freight

Kalamazoo Stove Co.
Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

AUNTIES

They Belong to the Whole Neighborhood

That dear old neighbor we knew as "Aunty" and who lived down the street was no relation of course, except that her tender old heart made her "Aunty" to all the young people. And how she did love the young mothers!

One who remembers her says:

"We could always depend on 'Aunty' for good sound advice. She was particularly well informed on food and what to use for certain troubles

"After having taught in the public schools for years my health became bad and I suffered frequently from indigestion. After my marriage I had indigestion so badly it became chronic.

"Owing to my condition my little baby did not get proper nourishment and was a very delicate child. I had about decided to put her on artificial food altogether when the advice of dear old 'Aunty' put baby and I on the right road.

"She insisted upon my trying Grape-Nuts food, declaring that it would help me and give baby more nourishment, so to please her I did, trying it for breakfast. The result was so marked and so quick that I ate it for luncheon too and I must say the change has been wonderful. I have good health now and baby is a strong active child.

"My mother says that Grape-Nuts helps her more and keeps her more cheerful and happy than anything else she has ever done. Truly pure, scientific food has great power." "There's a Reason."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Do You Hear Well?

The Stolz Electrophone—A New, Scientific and Practical Invention for Those Who Are Deaf or Partially Deaf—May Now be Tested in Your Own Home.

Deaf or partially deaf people may now make a month's trial of the Stolz Electrophone at home. This is unusually important news for the deaf, for by this plan the final selection of the one completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for everyone.

Mrs. C. Lidecka, 238 12th Ave., Maywood, Ill., wears an Electrophone less conspicuous than eyeglasses.

This new invention (U. S. Patent No. 763,575) renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear, and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an astonishing increase in the clearness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring ear noises, and also so constantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear that,usually,the natural, unaided hearing itself is gradually restored.

Prominent Business Man's Opinion

STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO., Chicago.—I am pleased to say that the Electrophone is very satisfactory. Being small in size and great in hearing qualities makes it PREFERABLE TO ANY I HAVE TRIED, and I believe I have tried all of them. I can recommend it to all persons who have defective hearing.—M. W. HOYT, Wholesale Grocer, Michigan Ave. and River St., Chicago.

Write or call at our Chicago office for particulars of our personal home test offer and list of prominent endorsers who will answer inquiries. Physicians cordially invited to investigate. Address or call (call if you can).

Stolz Electrophone Co., 1839 Stewart Bldg., Chicago

Branch Offices: Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Los Angeles, Seattle, Des Moines, Toronto.

Foreign Office: 82-85 Fleet St., London, Eng

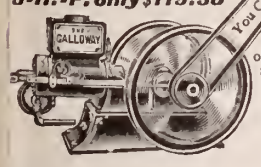
$50 TO $300 SAVED

We are manufacturers, not merchants. Save dealers, jobbers and catalog house profit. I'll save you from $50 to $300 on my High Grade Standard Gasoline Engines from 2 to 22-H.-P.—Price direct to you lower than dealers or jobbers have to pay for similar engines in carload lots for spot cash.

GALLOWAY

Price and quality speak for themselves and you are to be the sole judge. Sell your poorest horse and buy a

5-H.-P. only $119.50



You Can Make it from $5 to $10 a Day

Direct From My Factory on 30 Days' Free Trial. Satisfaction or money back. Write for special proposition. All you pay me is for raw material, labor and one small profit. Send for my big BOOK FREE.

Wm. Galloway, Pres.
Wm. Galloway Co
945 Galloway Station
Waterloo, Iowa

"Get There"
at a price to suit you direct for a

BLACK MOTOR BUGGY

Built for country roads, hills and mud. Engine—14 H. P., 2 cylinders, air cooled, chain drive rear wheels, double brake. Speed 2 to 25 m. per hr.—30 miles on 1 gal. of gasoline. Highest quality finish, workmanship and materials. Absolutely safe and reliable. Write for Book No. A-74

BLACK MFG. CO., 124 E. Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

The Miracle at Lystra

By Mrs. M. Baxter

PAUL and Barnabas, in leaving Antioch, obeyed the directions of their Master and "shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium." But their persecutors had miscalculated; the truth of God would not die out with the departure of Paul and Barnabas.

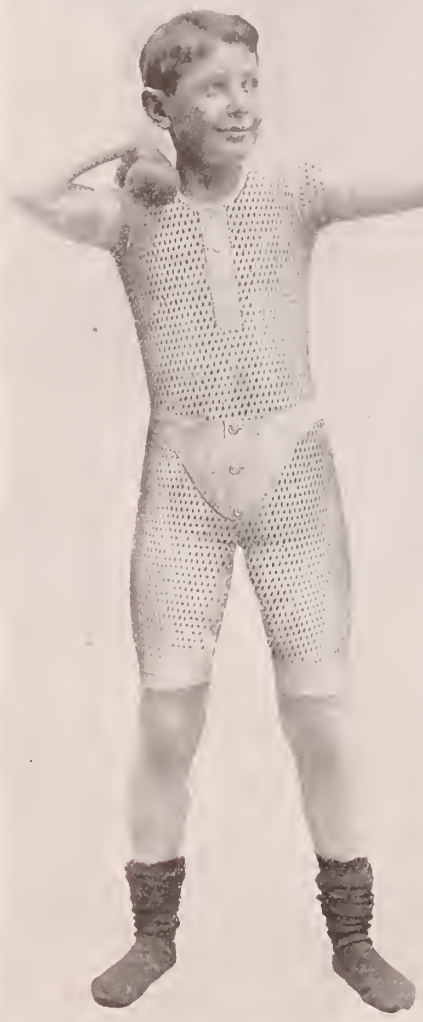
The two missionaries, when they came to Iconium, went into the synagogue, as they usually did on their arrival in a new city, if there happened to be one; and in each city they gave their testimony to the Lord Jesus. Here at Iconium they "so spake that a great multitude, both of the Jews and also of the Greeks, believed." But there never was an awakening yet where no element of persecution existed. "The unbelieving Jews [the professors of that day] stirred up the Gentiles." Thus it is always: those who make an outward profession without having the real thing are more bitter than any others in persecuting those who have an experimental knowledge of God. What should Paul and Barnabas do? A spirit of suspicion had been stirred up against them by the Jews, and it prevailed among the Gentiles also; should they leave so unpromising a field? Not until God says "Go." We want men like Paul and Barnabas among us.

Demands may be made upon us far beyond our strength, but if it is a settled matter with us that the Lord is our strength, and we know by experience that "they that wait upon the Lord renew their strength," it becomes a simple matter to refer all to him, and then, when we are clear about his will, to go forward, mounting up "with wings as eagles," running without weariness and walking without fainting. When we learn to see God in everything, we learn, too, that nothing is impossible to us.

Things came to a crisis in Iconium. "When there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews with their rulers, to use them despitefully, and to stone them, they were aware of it, and fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about." "When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another," was the Lord's own command, and we see how implicitly those two men of God obeyed him. They did not run away when things were disagreeable and uncomfortable or inconvenient; they waited, and only fled at the command of Jesus. But would they persist in preaching the Gospel when, instead of being appreciated, honored and sent away with presentations of money and flattering speeches, the ungrateful people sought their blood? Yes, a thousand times yes; for whether for life or death, for joy or sorrow, for ease or pain, for success or persecution, these men were the Lord's.

There is no doubt that Paul preached full salvation, full enough to take in spirit, soul and body. We are not told whether there was a synagogue at Lystra, nor how and where they gathered a congregation; but we are told something of one of the auditors: "There sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked; the same heard Paul speak; who, steadfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, said, with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet." Those who inquire concerning Divine healing practically shrink from all personal responsibility, and are almost offended, and ready to rank us with impostors, if told the truth—that it is as they yield to God, and themselves exercise faith in him, that they are helped. The majority seem, perhaps from ignorance of the Scriptures, desirous to deal with man rather than with God, and they seem to think some talent, or power, or property dwells in those who can only lead sick souls and bodies to him who is the Saviour and the Healer of his people.

"Porosknit"



Summer Underwear FOR BOYS FOR MEN

In filling the prescription for a boy's summer outfit, remember Porosknit is the most important ingredient.

This Label

on every Garment

makes you sure you're getting what you ask for. Ask your dealer for it.

Specially designed for wear and tear of real boys—no holes in Porosknit but the ones that are meant to be there.

Every boy wants Porosknit and every mother knows he ought to have it—not because he wants it, but because it keeps him cool and clean and healthy.

BOYS' Shirts and Drawers Per Garment 25c

Men's Shirts and Drawers Per Garment 50c

Union Suits, Boys' 50c; Men's $1.00.

All standard styles and sizes from little boys to life-size men, in the new "Porosknit" booklet. Send for it.

CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY
30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, N. Y.

Foster's IDEAL

SPRING BEDS and Accident-Proof CRIBS

A Dream of Luxury and Ease

The chief element of a good bed is the spring. FOSTERS' IDEAL SPRING is the perfected result of a quarter of a century's inventive genius and constructive effort, and is built by special machinery and processes of which we own the exclusive patents.

It gently yields to the pressure of the body in exact proportion to weight, conforms perfectly to every curve, thus giving perfect support at all points, the essential feature of the perfect spring bed. It is a "double decker"—two springs in one, does not roll to the center, and never sags like woven-wire and other springs. A priceless boon to invalids; a delightful luxury for all. Made either upholstered or plain. Extensively used by leading hotels—its merits secure and retain patronage.

This Trade Mark is on all our goods.

Do not be deceived by imitations. Look for the brass name plate on every Ideal Spring. Every furniture dealer and leading department store has or can get our goods. Insist upon them. Write for Spring or Crib booklet, mailed free with name of nearest dealer.

Mother retires knowing baby's safe in Foster's Ideal Crib. High sliding sides, closely spaced spindles, woven-wire springs, patented rail fastener (on our cribs only—guaranteed not to break. Different styles and prices. Enamelled white or colors. Write for free Crib booklet.

FOSTER BROS. MFG. CO. 62 Broad Street, Utica, N. Y. 1462 16th Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Auto Masseur REDUCES

40 DAY FREE TRIAL FOR BOTH SEXES

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh that I mail it free, without deposit.

When you see your shapeliness speedily returning I know you will buy it.

Try it at my expense. Write to-day.

PROF. BURNS, 1298 Q, BROADWAY, N. Y.

Hair Like This FREE Let me send you a remarkable treatment for Baldness, Dandruff, Gray Hair, etc., at my own expense. It will surprise and delight you. Write to-day to

WM. CHAS. KEENE, President
LORRIMER INSTITUTE,
Dept. 2540, Baltimore, Md.

CLEANS SCOURS
POLISHES
MORGANS SONS
N.Y.
APOLIO
"Yes, I've used it for years —
all my daughters use it, too.
SAPOLIO
is a part of their bringing up"

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

New York, May 12, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 19. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Photo by John Kabel

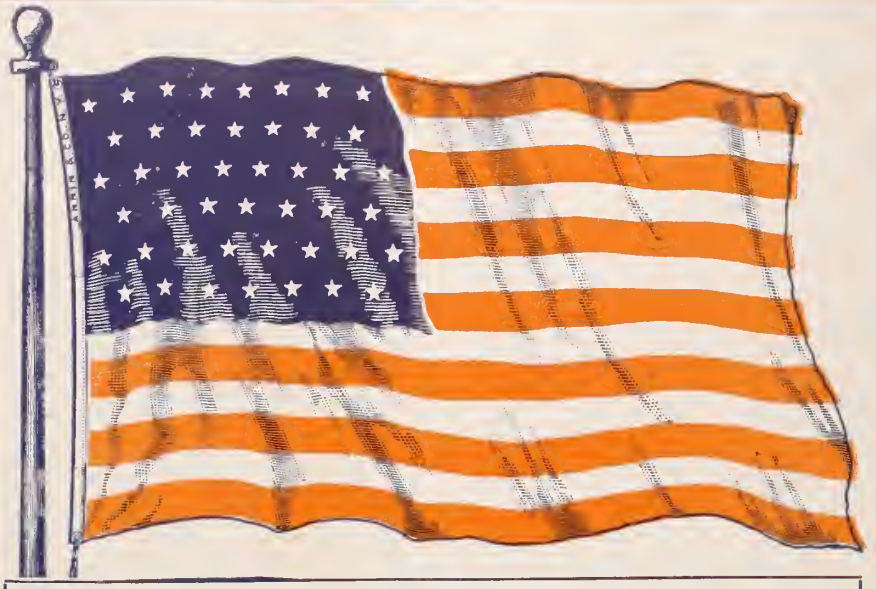
HER MORNING CHAPTER IN THE OLD BOOK

"A glory gilds the sacred page,
Majestic, like the sun;
It gives a light to every age,
It gives, but borrows none."

"Old Glory" Appeals to Patriotic Subscribers

"Flag of the free heart's hope and home!
By angel hands to valor given,

Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven."



ORDERS for our great Patriotic Premiums are now raining in on us thick and fast. Is yours among them? Memorial Day, Fourth of July and other holidays falling in the near future make this remarkable offer doubly attractive, and we call special attention to it at this time for two reasons:

First, we want to make this—the greatest premium we have ever offered—a successful factor in bringing new subscribers to our door, so that with a larger circulation we may be enabled to uplift and upbuild The Christian Herald to an even higher standard, and extend its immeasurable influence for good. Second, we are equally sincere in our desire to place within easy reach of every patriotic subscriber before the first of our great patriotic holidays, a splendid American Flag, worthy to float from any home in the land.

☆ ☆ ☆

Every loyal American in the great Christian Herald family would take a just pride in the possession of any one of our Three Patriotic Premiums, and if YOU to-day could see and examine either of the Flags described under the terms of Offer No. 1 and Offer No. 2, we know you would not rest content until you had secured one or the other for yourself—yes, even though you already possess a flag in your home.

Unprecedented Patriotic Offer

Offer No. 1.—An Outfit Worth Two Dollars for 1 New Subscriber

(1) An American Flag, "Old Glory" in brilliant fast colors. Guaranteed not to fade, run nor shrink. Size of Flag, Four by Six Feet.

(2) The Declaration of Independence, a Life-Size Facsimile, 26 x 31 Inches, and—

(3) All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft (a beautiful double-tone picture 18x21 Inches)—All Three for only One New Annual Subscription to The Christian Herald at $1.50.

Offer No. 2.—An Outfit Worth Four Dollars for 2 Subscribers.

(1) An American Flag, "Old Glory" in brilliant fast colors. Guaranteed not to fade, run nor shrink. Size of Flag, Five by Eight Feet.

(2) The Declaration of Independence, a Life-Size Facsimile, 26 x 31 Inches, and—

(3) All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft (a beautiful double-tone picture 18x21 Inches)—All Three for only Two Subscriptions to The Christian Herald at $1.50, of which One must be New.

THINK of winning, Absolutely Free, a large, beautiful and expensively made American Flag, in addition to the other most attractive Premiums included in this offer, for securing only One New Subscriber!

☆ ☆ ☆

And remember, too, that if you send us a New Subscriber under the terms of this offer, we will gratefully appreciate the fact that through YOU we are enabled to send The Christian Herald into some new household, where it may prove an uplifting influence, a wise counsellor and a faithful friend.

☆ ☆ ☆

Of course, our Patriotic Outfits are given only to those who secure the subscriptions and not to the new subscribers. Money refunded if not pleased. All Patriotic Outfits sent by Express, Charges Fully Prepaid by Us.

Under OFFER No. 1, the subscription must be a NEW one. Under OFFER No. 2, One Subscription may be your own (new or extended), but the other ONE must be NEW.

We do not supply poles, nor do we furnish rope—but we do furnish the flag, beautifully finished, otherwise all ready for use. EVERY CHRISTIAN HERALD SUBSCRIPTION, with or without premium, or with or without magazine combinations, COUNTS AS ONE SUBSCRIPTION. Premium and Magazine Combinations sent on receipt of a postal request.

☆ ☆ ☆

Every New Subscriber and Every Renewing Subscriber receives, FREE, the Six Beautiful Pictures comprising our Wonderful Art Gallery de Luxe.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—It is of utmost importance that you act AT ONCE if you wish to make sure that these Patriotic Premiums will reach you before MEMORIAL DAY.

Address To-day: CHRISTIAN HERALD FLAG OFFER, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

DO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS EDUCATE?

READERS of The Christian Herald have evinced a very lively interest in the recent article which appeared in this paper, calling for an expression of opinion regarding the criticisms by a writer in the Educational Review. That critic charged that our Sunday Schools, as now conducted, do not educate; that the methods employed are antiquated and unserviceable, and that our Sunday School standards are "medieval." Too little time, he charged, is given to the lesson, the studies go "hop, skip and jump" through the Bible, without continuity, and a majority of the teachers make no preparation. He favored a two or even three hours' study period, and the retention of skilled teachers only.

We print below a number of letters from readers who have had practical experience in Sunday School work. They are full of interesting and helpful suggestions:

Not Enough Spirituality

Our Sunday Schools do educate in a way, but my experience is that they could be improved by more earnest study by teachers in charge, also earnest prayer to God for spiritual help.

Elkpoint, S. Dak. C. T. CHAMBERLAIN.

• • •

Are Our Schools Lacking in Reverence?

I think we can truthfully say that any one who has attended the Sabbath School for any length of time without becoming a Christian has sat at a feast without partaking, and the fault is all his own. And yet the Sabbath School is open to criticism. Perhaps the greatest weakness in the human heart is the lack of reverence; and one of the weaknesses in our Sunday School work is a lack of instilling the youthful mind with due reverence for holy things. I think the first duty of a Sunday School teacher is to impress on the minds of the young that the Sabbath day, the Bible and its truth, and the churches that are dedicated to the worship of God and his service are holy, and that God will not hold him guiltless who desecrates these holy things. This reverence is a foundation principle, and influences the whole character. Boys and girls who lack this principle show it by forgetting to respect the things that belong to others and will not revere either the aged or the helpless, or their superiors.

Pasadena, Calif. THEO. T. CRANE.

• • •

It Should Make Better Christians

I think too much of the short hour is devoted to singing and getting ready for the real work. As a rule, all of the precious time is spent on history, which may or may not make us better Christians, and no application is made to our everyday duties and lives. Any Sunday School scholar may be familiar and answer most questions as to time, places and doings of the Bible history, or even as late as Paul's missionary journeys, and not be a believer or even helped to be made better by the study.

Emmet, Idaho. J. W. CARMICHAEL.

• • •

Build Up the Spiritual Life

If our Sunday Schools do not educate, there is much in the work that needs reconstruction. It is a great mistake to suppose that any one who unites with the church is capable of teaching in the Sunday School. It is frequently the case that such a one needs to be taught himself. I admit that earnest, persistent effort and sincere faith in God, with continual practice, may develop teaching power where very little originally existed. A fair knowledge of Scripture alone will not make a teacher. One must understand human nature and be able to fathom the point of contact in each pupil before he can bring the truth within his grasp. No one should undertake to teach a class who has not first thoroughly studied the subject matter himself, or who has not ability to impart it. I once talked with a minister in regard to my own teaching of an adult class, and told him that I could see nothing accomplished except that they were interested and determined to hold me to the place. He replied, "Do not be too anxious to see returns. If you help to build up a life, you have done a great thing, even if you never see the result."

Maysville, Ky. MARY L. TARLETON.

• • •

The Trouble Lies in the Home

No, our Sunday Schools neither educate nor Christianize the children. I have lived almost seventy-three years and have been in this work, more or less, for fifty years, and the trouble is in the home. Time was when the Word of God was read in the family by Christians, and the family altar was there and prayers offered morning and night. But that is a thing of the past. To-day the lessons are all made to order, like a pair of shoes, and nothing is known of the lesson till school time. Parents used to take the children to church; but it isn't the fashion to-day. They attend the Sunday ball game. And crime among the young is growing. When parents seek for the old paths wherein is the good way and walk therein and take the children with them, then the Lord will bless them, and the children will be saved and the Sunday School will be like the garden of the Lord. A. KNIGHT.

Eau Claire, Wis.

• • •

We Should Teach Vital Truths

Advocate planting the seeds of vital principles, including temperance. God's love to us, salvation, redemption and regeneration; show the sin of lying, swearing, stealing, murder, jealousy, reading bad books, lustful practices, the too great love of money, etc. I had one teacher years ago, not a pretty one, but with a beautiful soul. I pray God give us more such teachers. C. P. DOWDING.

• • •

Too Much "Hurry" in Our Schools

As many of the Sabbath Schools are conducted now, there is a great lack of true education. There is not enough time given for the study of the Bible and the things of God. Everything must be done in a hurry—hardly time for devotional exercises. The study of the lesson is limited in many cases to a few minutes, and the main thought with many is, how quickly can I get through with the lesson? I believe in many places the Sabbath School is held at the wrong time. Sometimes an hour before the morning service, and in some places immediately after the morning sermon, when everything must be hurried. It would be a good thing to get back to the old-time method of teaching the lesson and give plenty of time for that work. If that was the case, the young people would be better educated in the Bible than they are to-day.

G. J. JEFFERIES,
Pastor Primitive Methodist Church, Newcastle, Pa.

• • •

Teach Them the Love of God

I beg leave to say from experience, that, in order to be a successful teacher, one should be so filled with the Spirit of God, which would enable him to make a practical application of the lesson to the pupils and show to them at all times the love of God for them.

West Winfield, MRS. H. L. BRACE.

It Should be the Spirit's Work

Sunday School, from the first to the last, should be the work of the Holy Spirit. This kind of work can only come through prayerful superintendents and teachers. With Christian hearts at the lead, taking the lesson and explaining its meaning, we can draw the children's attention and give them the true purpose of the divine message. F. M. BUSH.

Perry, Mich.

• • •

Suggestions for Improvement

Personal experience has led me to believe that the Word of God is not being taught in our Sunday Schools as it should be. The deep, underlying principles of salvation are not thoroughly established in the child's heart. It would be unjust, however, to say that pastors and superintendents are not interested in the spiritual welfare of the children. In considering the salvation of humanity, we divide the issue into two parts, viz., the salvation of the adult and the salvation of the child. Great emphasis is placed on the thorough preparation of the individual who is to preach Christ to the adult, but does the same hold true when applied to the salvation of the child? The selection of efficient teachers in our Sunday Schools is indeed a problem. Few schools have sufficient available material. Now, in case of a lack of efficient teachers, I would suggest combining two or more classes or grades together under one teacher rather than maintain a grade or class at a sacrifice of spiritual development. As a matter of fact, any gifted teacher will hold the attention of fifty or more children for any reasonable length of time and will implant some deep truth in many of their hearts. If the school has but one gifted teacher, better combine all the children under that one person's instruction and watch results.

E. L. SHEPARD,
Superintendent Children's Hour.
Van Etten, N. Y.

• • •

Our Sunday Schools Defended

A distinguished president of a Western university, in my hearing recently, was frank and fair enough to say that the Sunday School was doing its work quite as effectively as the secular school. The doctors disagree. So far, however, only the writer of the Educational Review has found the Church's school to be "medieval," which shows how a short and cheap "cut" to ephemeral reputation may be coveted and achieved by men of small judgment and fairness. The trouble with his class of fault-finders is in trying to make over into a public school an institution that holds only an hour a week and with untrained teachers. The

Continued on page 424

NEW YORK, MAY 12, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Turkish Horsemen Before the Tash Khushla

General Chefket Pasha

Taxim Barracks, Where the Fight Took Place

A NEW SULTAN HEADS ISLAM

BY a decree of the Sheik-ul-Islam, Abdul Hamid II. has been deposed from the throne of Turkey and his younger brother, under the august title of Mohammed V., rules in his stead. Neither a decree of Parliament nor of the Young Turk Committee would have been considered legal in the eyes of the Mohammedans, but the Sheik, as practical head of their church, has been able to do this before, as in the case of Abdul's elder brother, who was declared insane. The decree was then approved by Parliament. The fetwa, which the Sheik gave out on the morning of April 27, declared that Abdul Hamid was unfit to remain Kalifa on account of his religious unworthiness, his tampering with the Holy Writing and his blood guiltiness. It is the theory of the Turks that the throne is never empty. Consequently, the moment it was decreed that the power of Abdul was at an end, the reign of Rechad Mohammed began.

U. S. Minister Leishman

Excited crowds thronged the streets of Constantinople on the day the fate of Abdul was to be decided. By many it was openly asserted that the Sheik and the Parliament would not dare to take such a radical step as deposing the Sultan. Hour after hour went by, and nothing but rumors were circulated among the crowds. At half-past two the first gun of a saluting battery spouted flame and sent the echoes reverberating across the Bosphorus. Soldiers and civilians sprang to their feet and began to count. Soon it was seen that the salute could be no other than the one hundred and one guns, which give noisy welcome to a new ruler and announce the passing of the old.

The new Sultan was brought from the palace in which he had been placed several years ago by his brother. He drove in an ordinary brougham to the Sera Skierat, where he was to be installed, accompanied by a motley bodyguard in faded uniforms of blue. When the carriage stopped without the building in which the high officials were waiting to receive the new ruler, the door opened and a short, stocky man, in plain black clothes and wearing a red fez, stepped out. He wore no insignia of official dignity. He carried himself with dignity, but his face had neither the strength nor the craft of the ruler who, in his turn, was a prisoner in the hands of the Young Turks in the deserted Palace of Yildiz.

Chefket Pasha and Mahmud Pasha, with their veteran staffs, received him in the central court. A little farther back, and on the stairs, stood the Grand Vizier, Said Pasha, president of the Senate, and others. A little in advance of the group was the Sheik-ul-Islam himself, with a turban as snowy as his beard, and a long purple robe enveloping his straight and dignified form. All came up to the Sultan and, after kissing his hand, accompanied him into the chamber. There the Senators and Deputies came, one by one, to kiss his hand in token of loyalty, while journalists and officers packed the galleries to watch the historic scene. Mohammed made a short speech, in which he said it gave him great pleasure to be the first ruler in the régime of liberty. A Mohammedan prayer was recited, and Mohammed V. rode back to the Dolma Baghche Palace. He, according to Mohammedan custom, kissed the holy relics of the Prophet at the old palace.

The New Sultan, Mohammed V.

The people cheered heartily, flags with the star and crescent were flying everywhere, while fakirs mingled in the crowds, selling photographs of the new Sultan. Martial law was suspended for several hours, to permit the people to celebrate.

The brief ceremony of the day was not the formal installation of the new ruler of the Ottomans. He will have to be formally girded with the sword of Islam. The sword is that of Osman I., the founder of the present Turkish ruling family. According to law, it will have to be done within forty days. This is Turkish equivalent for a coronation. He will then be entitled to use all of his many titles and will be recognized as head of the Mohammedan world, providing those in the distant provinces acquiesce in the deposition of Abdul, and as to this there is some doubt. In addition to those killed, the Young Turks are holding ten thousand prisoners, who preferred to follow Abdul back to absolutism rather than see innovations which they considered as infringing the superior rights of the Moslems.

A far different scene took place meanwhile at the palace of Abdul. There are many conflicting reports as to the manner in which he received the news. He probably feared that an attempt was to be made to end his life, but those who know the Sultan best hardly believe the highly-colored reports that he showed himself a coward in the presence of his triumphant foes. Most of his attendants had fled like rats leaving a sinking ship before the final scene took place. A few stood by him. To the grim soldiers who came to disarm his guards and make him prisoner, he is reported to have said:

"I expected this; it is the will of Allah. It is my fate. My only wish is that the lives of myself and my family may be safeguarded and that I may reside at the Tcherazan Palace, as I wish to die where I was born."

Parliament long debated what should be done with Abdul. Some were in favor of letting him go abroad, but this was opposed on the ground that foreign complications might result if he sought outside assistance to regain his lost power. It was finally decided to send the deposed ruler to Salonica, where the Young Turks are strongest, and place him on trial, in order to find out if he had any connection with the mutiny of the troops who tried to overthrow the constitution. His life will undoubtedly be safe, as his death might mean a rising of the Mohammedans in a holy war, European intervention and the end of Turkey as an independent State. The Young Turks have before them as an example the numerous troubles of Servia, because the present ruler sits on a throne stained with the blood of his hapless predecessor. At last reports, Abdul Hamid will probably be given a palace on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, with a liberal government allowance for his declining days.

While the revolution has been going on in Constantinople, the massacres in Asia Minor have been spreading, and it is now estimated that in the first three weeks, from the beginning of the fanatical uprising, over 50,000 Christians, largely Armenians, have been slain. Hadjin and Adana have suffered most. It is reported that in the vilayet of Adana alone over 20,000 have perished. There is hardly a village or hamlet which has not felt the ruthless ferocity of Moslem, Kurd and Arab.

Continued on page 413

THE
American Pulpit

A Sermon by

Rev. Silas C. Swallow, D.D.*

CHRIST THE CURE OF PUBLIC ILLS

TEXT: Mal. 4 : 2—"But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings."

THE artists have painted Jesus as most beautiful—a babe with a halo around his head; but if such he had been in real life, Herod would have found him without having to kill all the children of his age. When grown to manhood, his murderers would not have needed the kiss of Judas in order to pick him out from among a dozen other plebeians, fishermen and comman folk. Have the artists done the cause of the Master a real service by painting him in colors which he never assumed? Have historians helped or hindered his progress among men, by riding all booted and spurred into the holy of holies of Christ's motives and methods, in their attempt to render him acceptable to the natural man, to polite society? To ask these questions is to answer them.

The Beauty of Jesus

When Albert Durer painted Jesus as the Man of Sorrows, with face downcast and head turned aside, the worshiping world said "Not so; he was beautiful!" which is an argument that if he was homely in appearance the worshiping world of to-day would no more have received him than did the Jews, or than they now receive Durer's picture of him; yet Isaiah, seven hundred and fifty years before he came, declared "That when men shall see him, there is no beauty in him that will render him desirable to them." That is, no beauty to the sight. Beauty of soul, of life, of service, of self-sacrifice, of courage, of devotion to the Father's business, of death for enemies? Oh, yes, beauty there was; but not of the skin-deep sort. "Despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and we hid our faces from him." "His visage, his face was so marred more than that of any man, and his form more than the sons of men." It is no wonder that kings shut their mouths at him, or made faces at him, "for that which had not been told them, they saw." And if we could to-day see the Jesus of history, instead of the Jesus of art, of music, of poetry, of imagination, it is a problem as to how we would answer that most important question of the ages, viz., "What think ye of Jesus?"

Yet this is the man whose Gospel is able to cure all our public ills. This stable-born, carpenter-shop-bred, despised, hated, murdered man, who was so poor that he had to have a borrowed grave, so despised he was mobbed when in the ministry but three short years, and died a felon's death between two thieves, with sour vinegar and bitter herbs pressed to his lips, instead of the cooling draught, when in his dying thirst he asked for a drink. Can this man of riven side and thorn-pierced brow and nail-pierced hands and feet, who has been dead nearly two thousand years, and was buried nearly ten thousand miles away, can he cure public ills in this land of ours, or anywhere else on the face of this sin-cursed earth?

The Influence of Jesus

One of the best evidences of his deity, as well as of his wisdom, is found in the examples of his government, as seen in Christian nations, and when contrasted with the governments dominated by heathenism. The highest and best types of civilization have always been found among the peoples that looked for the coming Shiloh, or those that believe in and worship the Saviour who has come. Here, education, the sciences, the arts are cultivated and flourish. There, ignorance, or at best a refined superstition, prevails. Here, invention abounds and the beautiful and useful "children of the brain" of genius bless men. There, barrenness, antiquated methods, and the absence of labor-saving machinery abound. Here, eleemosynary institutions, such as hospitals, infirmaries, orphanages and reformatories find congenial soil and diligent cultivation. There, they kill the aged, neglect the sick, abandon the helpless, and think they do God's service. It all depends on the kind of god they worship. The motive power among Christian souls is the love of God which "constraineth" men, lifting them out of and above self and selfishness; while among the heathen, the fear of their gods dominates all their actions. Now and ever, Christianity is the mother of civilization; never is Christianity the product of civilization.

As the centuries proceed, Jesus is demonstrating by object lessons among the nations that among the kings who have lived and reigned he is not simply the peer, but the peerless One—the King not only of the people, but "the King of kings." His sceptre dominates all other sceptres. Those nations where, because of man's depravity and stubborn resistance, Jesus Christ is permitted to reign, though only partially, and where the resplendent ethics of his philosophy are only imperfectly applied, to-day dominate all other nations. The Christian nations grow stronger and more enduring, while the opposing nations grow weaker and are numbered among the effete civilizations.

The Church as the bride, the companion, the representative of Christ among men, is yet to be a living, transforming force in the jurisprudence, the statesmanship, the diplomacy of the nations. As Dr. Campbell Morgan has well said, "Strength of spiritual life always issues in the manifestation through the Church to the world, of the facts of the Kingship of God in Christ, and the power of Jesus Christ to deal with all the things in human life that are contrary to the mind and will of God. The Church is to be aggressive, capturing men"—as well as women and children—"fighting against wrong, urging everywhere and always the claims of Jesus Christ; and this she can only be as within her own borders there is realized the purpose of God." That purpose is the answer of the Christ-inspired prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," a fulfilment of the prophecy and promise that "the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ."

His Interest in Humanity

Jesus Christ was no mere superficial observer of men and things. He was no mere optimist, satisfied with things in the world as they are. He was a pessi-optimist, recognizing the good there is in the world and encouraging, cultivating and conserving it; but also recognizing the evil, the predominating evil in a world not as God made it when he pronounced it good, but as the devil has spoiled it. Hence Jesus became the reformer of the ages. He had neither time nor disposition to deal with personal squabbles over the trivialities of his day, such as the proper width of phylacteries, nor yet over the division of property among children, the fruit of covetousness or avarice, nor with the time to wash hands, whether before or after meals, nor the time of rising or retiring, nor with the observance of holidays, or with the multitude of quibbles about non-essentials with which the Pharisees, the churchmen, and especially the scribes—the lawyers of his day—sought to divert him from the great work of his life. He was capable of becoming deeply aroused, indignant, "angry without sin," over the great wrongs that afflicted and harrassed society, and his chief contention was against the leading churchmen of his day. Though himself "the Prince of peace" and the "giver of peace not as the world gives," yet he declared, "I came not to send peace on earth; I came to send a sword." "I am come to send fire on earth, and it is already kindled." "Woe unto you, tithers of mint and herbs, that neglect justice and love." "Woe unto you, washers of the outside while ye neglect the inner washing." "Woe unto you, fools neglecting to feed the hungry, and therefore having foul hearts, however clean your hands may be." "Woe unto you, garnishers of the graves and memories of the prophets, whom your fathers killed, thus wasting time and strength on issues dead and buried, instead of addressing yourselves to the live issues that mar or make the present and the future." Jesus did not pitch his tent in the graveyard of dead issues.

Jesus the Reformer

His denunciations reached their climax when he made a whip of short ropes, with knots tied in the ends, and went through the temple, striking right and left at the fleeing brokers of his period, who were using the sacred place for secular purposes. It would be a very undignified procedure for a preacher of our day, and it would be the precursor of a declaration by presbytery of a vacant pulpit, or by the bishop of a change of pastors. It must have been a withering look that he gave them, when he said, "Ye have made the house of prayer a den of thieves."

It goes without saying that if the Holy Ghost, received on the day of Pentecost, and destined to abide here, should actually find a permanent and universal residence in its only abiding-place on earth, viz., in men's hearts, there would be no public ills, for they would all be either prevented or cured. There would then be little if any necessity for standing armies, or a constabulary force. The panacea for all human ills is found in that one word "obedience." Had man obeyed, he had not fallen; and obedience is the ladder on which he must climb back to his forfeited heritage. "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine." Unfortunately, we have not yet reached that perfection of Christian character or conduct that renders it safe to abrogate forms of law and the equipments of government. And public ills have been and are, and probably will continue to be, a menace to individual and the collective happiness until "all shall know the Lord," from the poorest laborer to the millionaire.

The Panacea for All Ills

Jesus took cognizance of the public ills of his day. "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's" did not imply a blind, unreasoning compliance with the demands of either God or government, but a thoughtful discrimination of the claims of both, and in the action of the individual, a harmonious and just division of both tithes and taxes. It implied a study of what justly belongs to Cæsar, and not a blind compliance with all of Cæsar's claims. Obedience to human laws that are clearly in contravention of divine law, is no mark of either a devout Christian, a high-bred citizen, or a wise statesman. Jesus dealt largely with abstract principles as applied to human behavior, but he gave enough of concrete application to enable the wayfaring man, though a fool, to regulate his personal conduct.

One simple rule given by Jesus, if applied to human conduct everywhere, would cure practically all public ills, viz.: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." The laborer would then give good measure of service, both quantity and quality; the employer would share generously the profit on labor with the laborer; the farmer would not put the large potatoes on top of the basket; the merchant would use a measure thirty-six inches long and not sell cotton for all-wool, yard-wide fabric. No man would be found mean enough to sell his neighbor a liquid poison that would undermine his health, rob him of reason, beggar his family and send his soul to perdition.

What True Christianity Would Mean

Taxpayers would not be mulcted, as now, into paying thirteen millions for a seven million dollar State House. Doctors would not overdose, nor overcharge, their patients; nor would patients wait till Sunday to get sick, and call the doctor from his bed in order to save daylight time for business or pleasure. There would be fewer lawyers, and more money in ex-client's pockets. The preacher would not hunt the largest salary, but rather the largest opportunity; nor would any ecclesiastical shepherd steal his neighbor's sheep, or plagiarize another's sermons. There would be no sand in the sugar, no peanut shells in pepper, no excess of water in milk, nor in stocks; no thieving policemen, no drunken mayors, no subsidized editors, no plum-tree olives, no beeless honey, no long-fingered conductors, nor long-tongued or long-eared Christians; no hasty marriages, nor gatling-gun divorce courts, nor wives in the third person plural number. Children would obey and love their parents, and parents would tenderly guard their children. There would be no tight-laced bodies, nor corn-raising toes, nor tobacco-scented breaths; no occasion for societies to prevent cruelty to animals, or to protest against vivisection.

Continued on next page

* Dr. Swallow, the Prohibitionist leader, is a resident of Harrisburg, Pa., where this discourse was recently delivered.

EYE-WITNESSES TELL OF THE MASSACRES

Continued from page 411

E. St. J. Ward, Diarbekir — Miss Virginia C. Billings, Hadjin — Miss Emily Richter, Hadjin — Mrs. Ward, Diarbekir — Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Tracy

Rev. Herbert A. Gibbons, a missionary of the American Board connected with the Adana and Tarsus stations, was an eye-witness of the scenes of slaughter and destruction in the very heart of the disturbed districts. Mr. Gibbons telegraphs a graphic story of those terrible days of massacre and incendiarism. He says: "The entire vilayet of Adana has been visited by a terrible massacre of Armenians, the worst ever known here. The government is powerless to check the disorders. Adana has been the storm centre. The military commander of Adana was by my side in the market when the firing began. He had not the courage to endeavor to disperse the mob. Wednesday evening the bazaars were looted and set on fire. There was continuous and unceasing shooting and killing in every part of the town, and fires raged in many quarters. Moslems from the neighborhood began pouring into the city, and, notwithstanding our protests, the Vali distributed arms to these men. Missionaries of the Central Turkey Mission had assembled for a conference in Adana on the day of the outbreak. They received and protected hundreds of refugees in the American Seminary for Girls, and courageously endeavored to pacify the warring elements. On Thursday the Revs. Daniel Miner Rogers and Henry Maurer, American missionaries, were killed under treacherous circumstances. The town has been pillaged and destroyed, and there are thousands of homeless people here without means of livelihood. It is impossible to estimate the number of killed. The corpses lie scattered through the streets. In the Turkish cemeteries graves are being dug wholesale.

"The condition of the refugees is most pitiable and heartrending. Not only are there orphans and widows beyond number, but a great many, even the babies, are suffering from severe wounds. Turkish reserves, without officers, seized a train at Adana and compelled the engineer to convey them to Tarsus, where they took part in the complete destruction of the Armenian quarter of that town, which is the best part of Tarsus. Fortunately few were killed here, owing to the proximity of the American College, where four thousand destitute and homeless persons had sought and found shelter."

A later dispatch stated that the incendiary fires at Adana had been extinguished, but there were fears of a renewal of the disturbances. The American Mission buildings, the Catholic School and the Gregorian Church had been saved from the general destruction, but the Jesuit, Armenian and Protestant churches and schools had all been destroyed. Twenty thousand persons are destitute in Adana.

Hadjin, in the same section, was besieged by the fanatical hordes and wild tribesmen, who had made several attacks upon the city from the mountains. Troops arrived on April 28, and relieved the city. All the American missionaries are safe. Deurtyul, a small town a little distance from Alexandretta, underwent a terrible experience. There were some 10,000 persons in Deurtyul, and it was estimated that three times that number of armed Moslems surrounded the place, threatening to exterminate the half-starved inhabitants.

In the country round about Adana there are many bodies of victims lying in the fields. Hundreds of Armenian farmhouses were burned. At Mersina the river is carrying down large numbers of bodies of men, women and children.

At Bukdjeh, near Mersina, the entire Armenian population is reputed as having perished.

United States Ambassador Leishman cables from Constantinople that the suffering is very great, and that food, medical assistance and shelter are needed by multitudes in the disturbed districts.

. . .

Rev. Mr. Peet, of the American Board, cables to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from Constantinople:

"April 30.

"The excesses in Cilicia are quieting down under the influence of the new government. The condition of the people, however, is deplorable. Forty thousand refugees must be fed and cared for, and foodstuffs are extremely scarce, consequently our supplies must come from the outside. We are greatly in need of funds for relief work. PEET."

. . .

Beirut and the neighboring districts have suffered greatly. Great numbers of refugees have reached Latakia, and the missionaries are doing what they can to aid them, as thousands are starving. It is impossible to exaggerate the misery and suffering of these people, victims of Mohammedan fanaticism and oppression.

The American Presbyterian Board missionaries in Beirut have sent this cable message to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

"BEIRUT, April 29.

"Relief Committee, consisting of American Consul Ravondal, chairman; Dr. Freyer, treasurer, and Dr. Post, regularly organized, appeal for $5,000 for immediate relief of starving thousands and refugees. Beirut is best centre of distribution.

"(Signed) FREYER."

. . .

All contributions sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for Armenian relief will be promptly forwarded to the missionaries in the field. Contributions should be addressed: Armenian Relief Fund, CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York City.

Missionary Maurer,× Who Was Killed at Adana

Buildings of the American Board Mission, Hadjin

CHRIST THE CURE OF PUBLIC ILLS

Sermon by Rev. Silas C. Swallow, D.D.

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

No conventional hugging matches called dances, nor patronizing of Sabbath-desecrating public conveyances by ministers or laymen, by which a million people are compelled to shorten life by working seven days in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year. In short, if that one plank in the Shiloh platform were in every man's platform, there would be few private ills and fewer public ills.

Jesus taught the impossibility of neutrality on moral questions when he said "He that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad." "He that is not for me is against me." Nor did he leave moral questions to a decision of the majority. All of that moral code which Jesus says he "came not to destroy, but to fulfil," is prohibitive in its character, and never even conditionally permissive. "Thou shalt not! thou shalt not! thou shalt not!" rings out in trumpet tones from the heights of Sinai, and finds an echo in the legislation of the world. An optional morality, locally applied, must be an abomination to the King of kings. Majorities do not make wrong right, or black white, or that which is essentially evil essentially good. "Woe unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips and maketh him drunken also." Woe to the individual who does it. Woe to the municipality, to the State, to the nation, to the legislature, to the voter who elects such candidates to office.

It is claimed that forty millions of our people are now under prohibition laws, and yet the revenue reports show more liquor sold in this country last year than ever before in its history. Why? Because the prohibitory laws were secured by the secret ballot, by men willing that, in morals, the majority shall rule, and the prohibition laws have been left as foundlings on the steps of the State Houses, with no one to father or mother, or even wet-nurse them, and their opponents ring the changes on "prohibition doesn't prohibit." And it doesn't prohibit, for the same reason that a scythe hung in the apple tree doesn't cut. It requires that it should be taken down and swung through the grass by calloused hands hung on brawny arms, with a stalwart frame behind them. Law does not execute itself. Men must be elected to the legislative, judicial and executive departments of government openly pledged in platform and speech to the enactment and execution of laws, not simply permitting the majority to rule on moral questions, but committed to the prohibition of the evil, with suitable penalties attached. There is no royal road, no "reform made easy" in this conflict. It means stern, heroic, self-sacrificing effort.

As Garfield said, from the Custom House steps in New York, as the mob surged around him on that darkest day of the dark days of the Civil War, "God is not dead." "God still lives," and while there is little cause for congratulation by the extreme optimist, there is less cause than aforetime for the unreasoning despondency of the extreme pessimist, and there is ground for hope and an encouraged effort on the part of the reasoning pessi-optimist, who sees the good and conserves it, and seeing the evil heroically grapples with it.

WEST POINT'S MODEL KITCHEN

The Cadets at West Point in the Mess Hall

ONE of the most interesting show places of the post at West Point is the Cadet Mess, where the appetites of five hundred young men are daily looked after. In hygienic observance, quality, cooking and serving of the foodstuffs Uncle Sam has the model kitchen and dining room of the country. Wholesome and absolutely pure are all viands, fluids and solids served. The great hotel keepers are constantly sending their stewards and chefs to inspect it and to study its labor-saving devices.

The writer made a visit to the Cadet Mess at dinner hour and witnessed the perfect and quick method of serving food in a limited time. Should about five hundred American youths, every one of them with the appetite of a farmer's son, march into a dining room of any one of the great hotels, with only about forty minutes in which to eat their dinner, and only one waiter to each twenty boys, the manager would be likely to have a riot on his hands in a few minutes which would undoubtedly stagger the chef and cause a stampede back in the kitchen. Suppose, in addition, that back in the kitchen there are only two cooks for these lads. Suppose that five hundred portions of roast beef have to be carved between times, the vegetables and the dessert likewise to be served, the dishes of each course to be removed, and finally, that these same boys have to be turned out in orderly fashion, with no confusion and with appetites satisfied. Yet this is what is done three times a day at the United States Military Academy at West Point, and there is not any riot in the mess hall nor any confusion in the kitchen. The Cadet Mess is in Grant Hall, situated a little to the rear of the Academic Building. The cadets march to the mess by companies, after first lining up in front of the barracks. The entire corps is accompanied by the Commandant of Cadets, who, after seeing them seated, dines on the same fare in an adjoining room. The time allowed for eating is, for breakfast and supper, twenty-five minutes; dinner, forty minutes. The spacious mess hall, when filled with its rows of straight, athletic figures in gray coats with glittering buttons, enlivened by the hum of half a thousand voices, presents a most animated scene. Ten cadets are seated at a table, and no time is lost in waiting for preliminaries. A signal bell from the chef sets the head waiter and his trained assistants in motion, and, in a few moments after soup is served, every table has its allotted platters of meat ready sliced, several vegetable dishes, dessert, fruit, etc., in readiness on the cloth.

The sittings are not permanent, as each man is shifted several times a year, being matched in height. Captain Thomas Franklin, treasurer of the Military Academy, and considered one of the most efficient commissary experts in the Army, has charge of the Cadet Mess. He has introduced many labor-saving appliances, and has brought the mess up to the highest state of hygienic and economic perfection. The Army commissary experts have by experiments determined the most wholesome kinds of food, the relative amounts of waste material in different sorts, the amount and composition of the waste products and their relation to food and work performed, the amount of work possible on a given ration, and, in short, the best and most economical food for maintaining the body machine in perfect condition and enabling it to perform the necessary amount of physical and mental work.

Notwithstanding the amount of detailed labor spent in examining, preparing and cooking the food of the highest class, it costs the government only 63 cents a day to furnish meals to each cadet. His board bill for a year foots up to about $220, which is paid out of his government allowance. For the whole corps, averaging about five hundred yearly, $115,000 is expended.

The kitchen is equipped with all the latest culinary devices. The flooring is of white tile. The ceiling is high and the room well lighted and ventilated. Lining the sides are large broilers, huge copper soup caldrons, coffee, tea and milk urns, the latter automatically connected, meat slicing machines, cutting hundreds of slices in a few moments, and an egg-boiling apparatus, where five hundred eggs are cooked in a few seconds.

One of the most interesting of the kitchen machines is the potato parer. It consists of a big hopper into which bushels of potatoes are dumped. In the bottom and along the sides are what a housewife would call nutmeg graters. The skin is peeled off the potatoes, and a saving of eighty per cent. is made over ordinary potato peeling. The roast beef is carved by a machine making 500 cuts in less than five minutes. The doors of the dining hall open and shut automatically as the waiters pass through with their loaded traps.

One of the ingenious labor-saving contrivances in use, which would be a joy to the average American housewife, is the dish-washing machine. This is arranged in a horseshoe-like fashion. The plates and dishes to be cleaned are stacked in round wire baskets. A basket is lifted up by a traveling device, with hoops attached, and then submerged for a short time in three circular tanks. The first tank contains soap and lukewarm water, the next clear hot water. These two remove all the meat particles. The last is a dip into a boiling hot bath. This final plunge serves for drying, so that no after-wiping with cloths is necessary.

Two articles of the Cadet Mess are especially noteworthy, namely, the milk and bread. More than one hundred and fifty gallons of milk are consumed daily. Over across the Hudson, some eight miles back, among the hills of Putnam County, which are covered with a wealth of green pasturage, the dairy is located. Here roam a herd of about one hundred choice cows, whose milk is used exclusively for the Cadet Mess. Every morning at 7 A.M. a mule team leaves the farm and places one hundred and fifty gallons or more of milk on board the 9 A.M. ferryboat at Garrisons. The estate of two thousand acres is owned by a private party, yet the government has charge of the hygienic features and recommends the appliances used.

The mess bakery is likewise one of the most up-to-date and scientific to be found anywhere, and no city establishment can excel it as to quality, cleanliness and production of bread. A feature of the bread is the light brown crust obtained by uniform heat in baking, the fire being at the back of the oven instead of the front, as is the case in most bakeries. Rolls and buns are baked in a large sliding rack, with shelves holding 1,000. The whole, when filled, is run into the oven and withdrawn again at the proper time.

The cadets ordinarily consume four hundred and fifty pounds of bread a day. The remarkable and astonishing health rate of 99 per cent. tells forcibly what the food of West Point does for the young soldier boys.

LILLIAN E. ZEH.

Superintendent of the West Point Mess Hall and His Assistants

AMONG THE WORKERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

—EVANGELISTS HART AND MAGANN, of Fairbury, Ill., recently closed a successful revival in the Broadway Methodist Church, Dayton, O.

—EVANGELIST NICOLAS ZAMORA, founder of the new evangelical church in the Philippines, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that although he has separated from the American Mission he still holds to the doctrines of the M. E. Church. His new church has three ordained ministers, thirty-two local preachers and about 1,000 members.

—H. C. BASKERVILLE, an American school teacher in Tabreez, Persia, was killed recently during the revolutionary riots at that place. He was aiding the defenders at Tabreez, which is besieged by the Shah's troops. Mr. Baskerville was leading a sortie from the city, for the purpose of obtaining food for the beleaguered and famishing people, when he was shot down.

—THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE, of Chicago, is planning a special summer course of study in the Bible and methods of Christian work. Special attention is also to be given to instruction in Gospel music and evangelistic singing. Among those who are to lecture on the Bible are Dr. R. A. Torrey, Dr. James M. Gray, Dr. C. I. Scofield, Dr. William Evans, Rev. George Soltau and Rev. George O. Bachman.

—EVANGELIST GIPSY SMITH held a series of meetings in Denver, Colo., commencing Sunday, March 7, and ending March 22. They were largely attended. The auditorium in which they were held seated about 13,000 people, and was filled to the doors. Overflow meetings were held at various churches in the city. On the last Sunday afternoon there was a monster parade, with about 4,000 or 5,000 in line. There were from 300 to 600 professed conversions daily.

—DR. TORREY, the well-known evangelist, writes: "At our first conference for Bible study, prayer, fellowship and counsel, at Montrose, God blessed us beyond all our anticipations. Two thousand five hundred persons were present. The conference of 1909 will meet at Montrose, Pa., from Friday, August 20, to Sunday, August 29. I wish to extend a vary cordial invitation to all ministers, missionaries, Sunday School teachers, Christian Endeavorers and Christian workers of all kinds to meet with us. The humblest and youngest Christian will be welcome, and I am sure will find help."

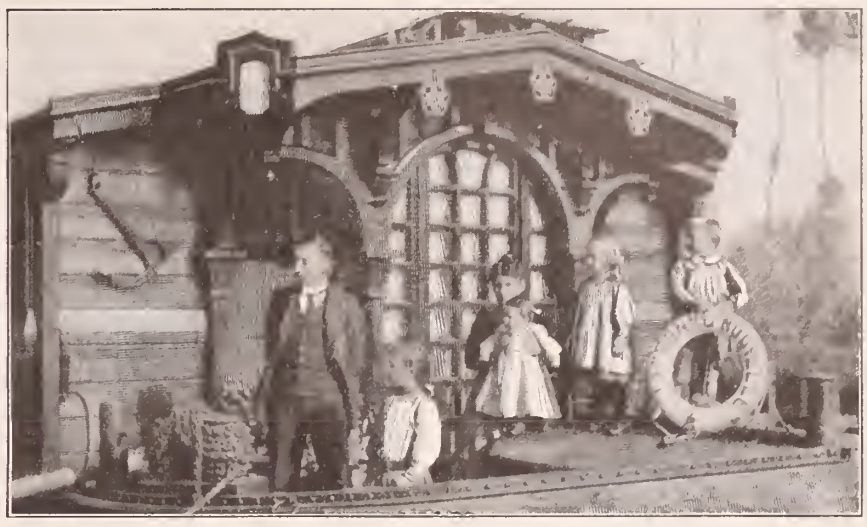
—ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., has experienced a season of revival. A three weeks' meeting in Grace M. E. Church (Rev. J. H. Martin, pastor) was led by Evangelist J. B. Harris, of Wilmore, Ky., resulting in between fifty and sixty professed conversions. For three weeks the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist Episcopal churches united, and Evangelists J. B. Phillips, of Macon, Ga., and R. V. Miller, of Hendersonville, N. C., conducted the meetings, the result being an ingathering of fifty-two.

—REV. CHARLES W. IGLEHART, of New York, started for his new field of labor in Tokyo, Japan, on April 26. For the past two years he has held a pastorate in the New York M. E. Conference. He is a graduate of Columbia University, Drew Seminary, and has taken a post-graduate course at Glasgow University. He will be assigned to educational work in Japan, where his brother, Rev. E. T. Iglehart, has been for the last four years. The young missionary is a son of Rev. Dr. Ferdinand C. Iglehart, Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League.

—SUNDAY WORK at the New York postoffice involves the labor of 13,000 men, of whom 800 are carriers and 500 clerks. Great numbers of people call at the postoffice in the morning for their mail, a large part of it being, doubtless, business matters which under ordinary circumstances and except in very rare cases could be deferred until Monday. Their insistence, however, has compelled the government to put on this small army of clerks and carriers, the major part of whom might otherwise have been released from Sunday duty. If the delivery of mail to callers on Sunday were to be stopped, except where they could show that the matter was urgent and important, the employment of these carriers and clerks would be unnecessary on that day. One of the results of this condition of things is that these workers are practically deprived of all church privileges every third Sunday, when they are required to report for duty. These conditions exist not only in New York, hut in every large postoffice centre throughout the country.

ACROSS FRANCE BY CANAL AND RIVER

In Front of the Mission Hall in Marseilles



The Mission Boat "La Bonne Nouvelle" (Good News)

By LOUISE SEYMOUR HOUGHTON

"IT is said of us French workingmen that we are opposed to religion. That is not true. We are done with an imposed religion, a religion of forms and ceremonies; but we are ready to hear if any one will teach us the true religion, the religion of freedom and earnestness."

The Late Dr. McAll

The speaker, a French workingman in his blouse, was standing at the corner of a Paris boulevard, talking with a stranger, whom yet he had recognized as "a Christian minister." It was ten o'clock on a hot August night, a few weeks after the suppression of the Commune, nearly thirty-eight years ago. The smoke of its fires was still ascending, the bodies were hardly cold which filled those ghastly trenches in Père la Chaise, into which thousands of Communards had been mown by the avenging cannon of the army of the republic; the blood was hardly dry on that wall, not many rods away, against which forty priests had been stood and shot to death by those Communards in their day of mad power, for the sole crime of being priests. Yet that workingman said truly. That infuriated French mob had not been animated by a hatred of religion in itself, but simply by hatred of that "religion of forms and ceremonies" with which they "were done," because in their inmost hearts they felt that it had deceived and betrayed them.

The workingman disappeared in the crowd of the Parisian boulevard, and has never since been seen or heard of, but his words have come sounding down through all these years, and because of them hundreds of thousands, yes, a great multitude whom no man can number, have been taught "the true religion of freedom and earnestness." For the words were spoken to the Rev. Robert W. McAll, then the pastor of a large church in England, and their immediate result was the beginning of the work now known all over the Christian world as the McAll Mission, but to the people of France as "the Popular Mission," the mission to the common people.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD know how Dr. McAll left his comfortable church and, without ever again receiving a cent of salary, began a work which, with its halls, its boats, its itinerant tract distributors, its colporteurs, its automobile and tent work, has covered France from Calais to Marseilles, penetrated into Tunis and Algiers, and brought the light of the Gospel to almost pagan Corsica.

Pages might be written of remarkable incidents of the boat and other work of this great mission. A McAll missionary at Boulogne-sur-Mer went out on his bicycle to Marquise, an old fishing village fourteen miles away, where a Protestant service had never been held. A poor woman, whose husband had "drunk up" all the stock in trade, offered him her empty store for a meeting. Within two years there was a Protestant church in Marquise, built by the people themselves and dedicated by the Paris Consistory. From Marquise a man wandered, seeking work, as far as Desvres, some twenty miles away—a town notorious for intemperance. That man began to talk to his work-mates about religion; they sent for the missionary, and within four years a Protestant church was dedicated at Desvres. From Desvres a few workingmen went to Lumbres, fifteen miles farther, and there is now at that place a station of the McAll Mission.

Like the "disciples who were scattered abroad" after the death of Stephen, "wherever they went," these converts of the mission, "they went preaching," and they do so still. The old women who live in Parisian garrets, and pick up a scanty livelihood by selling the vegetables that are left after the hour for the closing of the great markets, are true missionaries. Some, converted after their sixtieth year, who have learned to read that they may read the Bible, gather their neighbors from other garrets and read to them the precious Word.

"Floating chapels," or "missionary boats," are so well known to readers of this paper that it will perhaps be news to them that this form of evangelistic work began with the McAll Mission. All the rivers of France are connected by canals, so that there are twenty thousand miles of connected inland waterways in France. About seventeen years ago a floating chapel, Le Bon Messager (The Good Messenger), was built for the McAll Mission and launched upon these inland waterways to carry the Gospel to as many as possible of the villages and hamlets not reached by railway, many of them without even a Roman Catholic church. A few years later, by the generosity of an American lady, a second mission boat, La Bonne Nouvelle (The Good News), was launched. The story of these two boats might fill volumes. The people of many farming hamlets and waterside villages have heard the Gospel for the first time, and heard it "gladly." Night after night the chapel, seating about one hundred and fifty people, would be packed with two hundred or even two hundred and fifty people, wedged beyond the possibility of the place, perhaps as many more covering the roof of the boat and the river bank and the bridge connecting "twin" villages on opposite banks of river or canal. When the boat moves on to the next village the people follow it, three miles, six, nine and even twelve miles. But it is impossible, with only two boats, to visit all the riverside villages and hamlets of France, even once, much less to return for the ingathering of the spiritual harvest. It is impossible to know in any detail what are the results of all this work. In a lovely inland city visited by Le Bon Messager—a city which had known bitter persecution in the old days—a small group of Protestants survived, too few and feeble to form a church. How they welcomed that boat! In another city where not a single Protestant was known a religious family of social position became so thoroughly won over that they hired an abandoned convent, and have ever since carried on a flourishing work, under the auspices of the Popular Mission. When Le Bon Messager, last year, went up the river Marne for the second time, after an interval of fourteen years, the joy with which it was greeted was touching. Many tracts and Bibles then received were still treasured, and in a number of places Bible reading circles founded at that time were still kept up.

In a French Village Along One of the Canals

If, instead of two boats, there were ten boats of the McAll Mission plying these inland waterways, they could not fill the crying need of France to-day for the Gospel. There are many thousands of French villages to which the Gospel message has never been carried, yet there is not a single commune which is not being carefully instructed in the principles of atheism. In fact, the present animosity against religion is due almost wholly to a mistaken idea of patriotism. The majority of the French people seem to believe that religion is the enemy of republicanism and that a republican form of government cannot exist where religion is tolerated. And, in the minds of the majority of Frenchmen, the word "religion" is synonymous with "Catholic."

But all this time the McAll Mission has suffered under no such disability. It is not a church, but a People's Mission, and being by definition a friend of the people it is therefore a friend of the republic. "I like to come here because there is no religion here"—meaning no ritual or ceremonial—is frequently said in a mission hall. No penalty, social or legal, is visited upon the man who enters a hall of the McAll Mission, or walks with one of its missionaries, or calls one of them to officiate at a funeral. To those who know it, the mission is a friend, an agency for their instruction and for the moralization and the safe and innocent recreation of their children.

This is why the McAll Mission just now feels constrained to make a new and very urgent appeal for the co-operation and support of all good people who are interested in the spread of the Gospel in France. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers have already four mission boats in foreign fields working for souls. Why should they not have another to carry the Gospel to the people on those southern rivers of France, which as yet the McAll Mission, with its limited resources, has not been able to reach?

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

"Practical" Sermons

THERE are certain great texts of Scripture which are not so frequently announced from the pulpit as they were in earlier days. This is partly, perhaps, because they are so great, and the sons have not the courage of the fathers; but partly, no doubt, because the sound of them is so strongly theological, and that is not a pleasant sound to the men of this generation. The demand now is for practical sermons, not doctrinal; sermons that have to do with our every-day life, our daily duties, trials, temptations; that enter into our common experiences with sympathy, and show us how to turn them to best account for happiness and honorable advantage.

And that is a good and reasonable demand, except that it sees a distinction where none really exists—a distinction between doctrinal and practical. The great doctrines of Christianity are the most practical truths in the world—as practical as business principles or any facts of science. They may be preached in an unpractical way—served out to us as dry, bony abstractions or speculations. Then we object, and do well to object. But if we are Christians, it is not the truth itself that wearies us. And if the most modern audience fails to be interested in one of the grand old Bible doctrines, like Atonement, or Faith, or Repentance, or Justification, it is not because the subject has lost its holding power, but because the preacher, in his human poverty of mind and heart, is so often unable worthily to present the noble theme.

Humble Heroism

ALL the heroes are not to be found on battlefields. Even the humblest, in some transcendent moment, may rise to the stature of a doer of deeds that make the world thrill with admiration. Such hero-worship is not mere adulation, but a wholesome, stimulating sentiment, which acts upon others as a powerful incentive and ennobles many by its example.

"Kid" Woolley was a brakeman on No. 100, a big engine on a road in New Jersey, which draws the St. Louis Express, the fastest train on the line. Part of the trip is usually made at the tremendous pace of seventy-five miles an hour. The great engine was flying along, northward bound, when there was a sharp explosion. A crank-pin had been sheared off, throwing out the parallel rod and disconnecting the driving wheels on one side of the engine. An instant later, one of the loose rods struck down the engineer and he lay in his cab, helpless. At any moment the huge machine might be transformed into an agent of destruction.

Realizing this, the "kid" brakeman, back in his caboose behind the engine, decided to stop the train. He could not reach the cab to apply the air-brakes, so, without a moment's hesitation, he began to climb under the tender. With tremendous effort he reached a point where, swinging back and forth, as the train shot forward at lightning-like speed, he could grasp the air-brake connection. His hands were cruelly torn and the finger nails ripped off, but he tugged and wrenched till he succeeded. Soon the train's speed was reduced and at last it came to a halt. Then, when conductor and passengers came through to investigate, and saw the unconscious engineer in the cab, the wreckage of the engine and the white-faced brakeman, with his poor, torn, bleeding hands, they knew that a humble hero had saved them that day at the risk of his own life.

By way of recognition, the "kid" has been promoted to engineer. But he had already won the highest of all honors in being lifted up, by his own splendid act, to the rank of those who are ready to give their lives for others.

The Stricken Armenians

THE eyes of the world are fixed with horror upon the massacres in Asiatic Turkey. Pillage, fire and slaughter are doing their deadly work in many towns and villages. Two, at least, of our American missionaries have perished and many more are in imminent danger. It is estimated that not less than 30,000 Christians, principally Armenians, have been slain in these fanatical outbreaks.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received strong appeals for funds to help these unfortunates, and has already cabled a first remittance in response. This is a new opportunity for all who wish to render service for the sake of humanity. The name of the Turk has become a synonym for cruelty and unspeakable crimes. Never have the fanatical Mohammedans more fully justified their reputation than in this uprising. The innocent have been shot down with the guilty, and the "sword of the Prophet" has run red with the blood of martyred Christians. Dead bodies lie thick in the streets of Adana, and in many other towns and villages. The well-known tenet of Mohammedanism, that the killing of a "Giaour" is a virtue, seems to have taken wild possession of the mobs, who blindly slaughtered Armenian and other Christians wherever they could be found.

Our brave missionaries are sheltering hundreds in their compounds and colleges, but food is scarce. They cannot hold out long. Fortunately, Hadjin and several other places have already been relieved by the arrival of troops.

Before the tumult ceases there may be much more of bloodshed and violence. And even after order is restored food, clothing, nurses and hospital supplies will be needed to save life and mitigate suffering. Therefore we urge those who desire to aid in this relief work to do so without delay.

Mohammed V.

LITTLE can be prophesied as to what kind of a ruler the new Sultan, Mohammed V., will make. Few people outside of Turkey, or who were not interested in international politics, knew more about him than that he existed, living in a palace at Yildiz, well enough provided for by his brother, but closely guarded, practically a prisoner of state. He has heretofore borne the title or name of Mehemmed, which is translated as "glorious." On assuming the throne he became Mohammed, or the one who is glorified, a somewhat subtle distinction, but apparnetly of much importance to the Mohammedan mind. He was born in 1844, and received the usual education accorded to every prospective heir to the throne. He has not had any opportunity to take an active interest in anything connected with government, although holding the military commission of a major-general.

Mehemmed evidently thought that a change would some sooner or later, and he read the most up-to-date books and the European newspapers, and became imbued with twentieth century ideals. One anecdote shows that he was not devoid of spirit. He wrote to Abdul, warning him against certain policies. Abdul replied that if he ever became Sultan he could govern as he pleased, but in the meantime he must keep silent. Mehemmed replied that if Abdul kept on as he was going, there would be nothing left to rule.

If the anecdote can be relied on, it certainly shows spirit in a man who was a state prisoner and at Abdul's mercy. He has announced that he is in hearty accord with the party which stands for the constitution and will do all in his power to promote a constitutional form of government and work in harmony with his ministers. At the same time, he has signified his intention to have the dignity of the royal office respected and to take an active part in the management of affairs, a proper demand for a constitutional sovereign to make. Of course, he is at a distinct disadvantage from lack of experience, but as far as that goes the Parliament is in the same difficulty.

Why Sunday Schools Fail

THE writer in The Educational Review, who recently criticised prevalent Sunday School methods and pronounced the present standards distinctly "medieval," and the lessons a species of "hop, skip and jump through the Bible," seems to have stirred up a very lively discussion, which, however, may not prove altogether unprofitable. Elsewhere in this issue THE CHRISTIAN HERALD prints communications from a number of its readers on the subject. Several of the writers are people who have spent the greater part of a long lifetime in Sunday School work, and who speak from personal experience as well as observation.

While the majority of the contributors to this interesting budget are clearly in sympathy with the critic of The Educational Review, it should not be inferred that there is no good argument to be advanced on the other side. In general, the indictment against Sunday School methods as now conducted is that they do not educate. One very prominent authority makes the point that the Sunday School is not primarily educational and points out that its chief end is to "move the heart and save the soul, not to compete with secular education." Another, on the same side of the question, argues that what we need in the Sunday School is not new machinery, but more power and skill in using it, and that the main object is making character, rather than imparting education; in other words, that the Sunday School is evangelistic and soul-winning.

We do not consider that this presentation of the subject settles the question by any means, although the letters furnish many suggestions that will doubtless be helpful in practical Sunday School work. While there is unquestionably room for criticism of our Sunday Schools, the extreme suggestions of The Educational Review may be set down as unsuited to general application. Some Sunday Schools have a splendid influence, are full of spiritual life and turn out fine Bible scholars and true Christians; others, through various causes, fail in this, and fall far short of possibilities. It would seem to be a fair conclusion that, given a really good uniform Lesson Course, the result of the work must depend upon: (1) efficient teaching, (2) reasonable time for study, and (3) the co-operative spiritual influence of the home.

If the presentation of views in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD should stimulate teachers and superintendents to a new consecration, a greater zeal and a higher efficiency, it will have accomplished its purpose.

Italy's King Grateful to America

(From a Press Dispatch.)

ROME, April 28.—King Victor Emmanuel to-day gave an audience, lasting an hour, to Dr. Louis Klopsch, of New York, during which the relief work in Sicily and Calabria was discussed. Dr. Klopsch was summoned from Berlin for the audience.

The Italian King said he had been deeply impressed by the hearty, generous and prompt response the good people of America had made to the appeal of Italy's suffering. "It was marvelous! marvelous!" he added, and expressed the gratitude of his people for such practical sympathy.

His Majesty also referred, in terms of the highest appreciation, to the work of those who had contributed through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to the "Mothers' and Babies' Fund," which had done excellent service, under the Queen's direction.

The King then spoke of his meeting with Mr. Roosevelt. He was glad he had had that pleasure, for he considered the ex-President "a fine man."

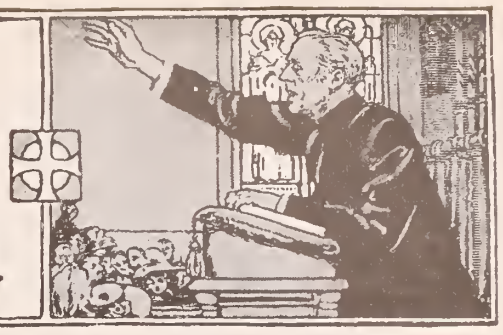
Queen Helena was not present during the interview.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 12, 1909

	PAGE
The Morning Chapter	Cover
Do Our Sunday Schools Educate?	410, 424
A New Sultan Heads Islam (Illustrated)	411, 413
Christ the Cure of Public Ills. Sermon	412, 413
By Rev. Silas C. Swallow, D.D.
West Point's Model Kitchen (Illustrated)	414
Across France by Canal and River (Illustrated)	415
By Louise Seymour Houghton
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	416
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	417
In the Smiling Spring Days (Illustrated)	418
By Margaret E. Sangster
The Story of Marco (Illustrated)	419, 421
Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter
The Call of the Springtime (Illustrated)	420
Earthquake in Yokohama (Illustrated)	420
The Way Out of a Quarrel	422, 423
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
The Island Hospital for Babies (Illustrated)	425
Young People's Societies	426
The Council at Jerusalem. By Mrs. M. Baxter	427

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER



Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Afghanistan and Modern Inventions

AFGHANISTAN is a country from six to eight hundred miles from west to east by five hundred miles from north to south; surrounded by India, Russia, China and Persia, and containing 5,000,000 people. There are a few cities and manufactories, but the soil is exceedingly rich and the inhabitants give themselves up to agriculture. The climate and soil produce two harvests, one in the summer and one in the autumn. The light of civilization, which has illuminated most of the nations of the East, has dawned on this country. The Ameer of Afghanistan is a man of enterprise, and his tour of India in 1907 impressed on him the advantages of good roads for the benefit of his large farming constituency and for the convenience of the citizens generally. Besides, the distant provinces in his kingdom require frequent visitation, and with the new roads and his automobile he will be enabled to cover the long distances in a very short time. In the promotion of this enterprise he sent ten elephants to Chaman to convey a steam-roller, a motor car, a stone-crushing machine and a motor boat to Cabul. The motor boat will doubtless be used for pleasure trips on the Cabul River. These machines were brought to the capital, and excited the wonder and pride of the natives.

This is the story of the march of civilization; the footpaths and mountain passes give place to macadamized roads, the ox-cart to the comfortable carriage; the ponies, the oxen, the camels, the elephants give place to the steam and electric motor. The Ameer, in a week's time, will go over as much territory in his domain as he would in three months' time under the old methods of transportation. It will not be very long before the railroad trains will follow the stone-crusher, the steam-roller and the automobile of the ruler.

Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this. (Eccles. 7 : 10.)

The Ameer's Road Rollers and Automobiles on the Way to Cabul

Wireless Telephones

The world has not gotten over its surprise at wireless telegraphy, which has been proven a success, and now it is treated to as great a surprise in the discovery of the wireless telephone. A commercial wireless telephone system was thrown open to the public at Portland, Me., on April 17. Four out of the thirty stations which will connect Portland with the islands of Casco Bay are in working order. The first message was one of congratulation from Mayor Clifford of Portland to A. Frederick Collins, the inventor of the system, who was at Cape Elizabeth across the bay. Heretofore, telephonic connection between Portland and the islands of Casco Bay has been impossible owing to the rocky bottom and swift tides. A new tuning apparatus invented by Mr. Collins was used and the inventor says he has solved the problem of secrecy in his wireless communications. Over 400 messages were sent the first day. The great inventions of modern times are not the creation of any new element or agency, but are only the discovery of subtle forces which God has put in nature and which have existed undiscovered through the centuries that have passed. What other great secrets God is keeping to reveal to the genius and industry of his inquiring children no one can know nor the most vivid imagination conceive. The inner secrets of the Divine heart are revealed to all those who will search for them, and prayer is the wireless telephone with which God's children communicate with the heart of Infinite Love.

He shall call upon me, and I will answer him. (Ps. 91 : 15.)

Homesick Runaway Girl Returns

Adele Boas, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Arthur E. Boas, a wealthy thread manufacturer of the upper West Side in New York, went shopping with her mother the other day. The mother had business farther down in the city and, giving her daughter specific directions, sent her home. On returning to her residence about an hour later, the mother discovered that her daughter had not put in an appearance, and her uneasiness grew to distress when at the dinner hour the daughter did not return. There was first the quiet search in the neighborhood and then in the park near by, and afterward, by the help of the police, throughout the city. Two nights and two days of fruitless search went by, and the father, feeling certain that his child had been kidnapped, offered a reward of $5,000 for her return and no questions to be asked. The detective forces of all the cities were receiving photographs and descriptions and laying plans for the recovery of the lost one. Adele was a handsome child, quite large for her age, and being a child of wealth it was thought she would make a good subject for the kidnapper. It seems, however, that the girl went home, got $14 out of her savings bank, bought a ticket for Boston, put up at one of the hotels for the night and tramped the streets of the city the next day, looking for work. She secured a position in a restaurant in Charles Street, Charlestown, and was set to the task of cutting bread. Cutting her finger with the knife intensified a homesickness which was growing upon her, and noticing in a Boston paper the concern of her parents and the reward offered by her father, she took a train for home, and was received with tears and rejoicing by the father and mother, who had been overcome with their sorrow.

The freak of this child might indicate that there might have been some weakness of the intellect, but her face does not indicate this, nor do her friends claim that this is the case. Wealth and luxury are liable to produce mental and moral effeminacy. Adele's mother insisted on sending a maid with her to school each day, at which the scholars laughed, which greatly mortified her. It would have been so much better for the girl to have let her go to school alone, as the other children of the neighborhood did. There is an ungrateful age through which almost all children pass when they are restless of parental restraint and think they know better what ought to be done than mother or father, and those who are better off by wealth and luxury are liable to be more restless of parental restraint. On her return, the lost girl said: "I ran away from home because I wanted to show my parents that I was self-reliant and could take care of myself." She did show them that she was not able to take care of herself, and that is the old story of the failure of a child which has not in it a reverence for and obedience to parents. The failure of this girl to succeed in her foolish plans illustrates pretty fully the failure of the human soul to carry out its individual plans without the help of the divine Father and in opposition to his will. No moral or religious overthrow can be more complete than that of the one who, conscious of self-dependence, runs away from the sympathy, support and guidance of the heavenly Father. This failure is portrayed by Christ in the parable of the prodigal son, whose wreck was produced by his spiritual conceit, and who was saved by his return to the home and heart of his father.

And he arose, and came to his father. (Luke 15 : 20.)

Communication with Mars

Professor William Henry Pickering, of Harvard, thinks he may be able to communicate with the inhabitants of Mars, should there be any, in next July, when the planet will approach the earth to within 35,000,000 miles, or 5,000,000 miles nearer than ever before. He says that for $10,000,000 he can furnish an apparatus by which messages can be flashed to the planet and be recognized and answered should there be any inhabitants there to respond. Some authorities hold that the great wall of China is the only artificial construction on the earth that could be discernible by inhabitants that might live on Mars. This wall is 1,800 miles in length. Professor Pickering's plan would be to take a number of reflecting mirrors, consisting of a quarter of an acre of glass, which would reflect the rays of the sun so brilliantly that they would be discernible by creatures forty million miles away.

It would seem that the vast worlds in space, so much larger and apparently more important than this little globe, would be peopled with intelligences, and this has been the opinion of many scientists and religionists. Science has made such rapid progress in finding out the secrets of the earth, the ocean, the air and the sidereal heavens that it may discover and communicate with some of these intelligences of other worlds. We are lost in adoration at the thought of the countless worlds which our Creator has fashioned and of the myriad intelligences that are the creatures of his mind and his heart. Whatever discoveries science may make with regard to our communication with these fellow intelligences, we have a sweet kinship of love with all of the good of the universe and with its Creator.

When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? (Ps. 8 : 3, 4.)

Table Manners

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THIS little talk will concern itself with foundations. People who have had the good fortune to acquire perfect table manners in early life may pass it by. A glance at a number of letters recently received by the editor of this page proves that the subject needs attention. "Is it polite," inquires one correspondent, "for any one to eat with the knife?" Another comments on the audible way in which some ill-bred persons swallow their soup. Still another inquires whether it is permissible for a man to impale a slice of bread on a fork, and, reaching across the table, dip it in the gravy. A fourth letter-writer comments on the haste with which boys and men often eat, and on their persistent silence that effectually kills conversation at the table. It is enough, is it not, to state these questions and comments without using very much space in replying to them? A hundred years ago ladies and gentlemen often ate with their knives. Custom did not then oppose this form of eating, and the forks in general use were not so convenient for carrying food to the mouth as those that have been introduced since then. To eat with a knife at the present time stamps any one who does it as boorish and rude. The fashion is completely out of date. Use a knife for cutting and a fork for conveying food from the plate to the mouth. Soup should be taken from the side of the spoon and should be partaken of silently. Noisy eating and drinking are not indulged in by polite people. As for the other practices spoken of, they are equally impossible. One of them, however, goes deeper than mere convention. The table should be the place where the family meet and enjoy one another's society three times a day. The act of taking food is one that we share with the animals. We are higher in the scale than they, and it is our privilege to chat freely, to tell stories, have fun and freedom when we are at our meals. We eat to live, but we do not live to eat.

Table manners stamp each individual as nothing else can do, giving at once an unerring indication of social standing and training. Dress does not matter, crockery is of no consequence, plated silver is as useful as solid, and linen may be coarse or fine, but those who sit at meat together should be uniformly courteous and kind. Shakespeare says, "Nice customs courtesy to great kings." The single exception to this poetical statement has reference to table manners. From the loftiest to the lowliest politeness is exacted at the family board.

The Lost Found

There cannot have been in the length and breadth of this land a heart so cold that it did not quicken its throb into warmth and joy when the little stolen child of James P. Whitla was again safe in the care of his father. Kidnapping is the blackest crime in the calendar. To invade the sanctity of a home and, either for purposes of revenge or robbery, snatch a child from the shelter of the roof is an act so cruel and is dictated by motives so base that it receives universal condemnation. Pity and compassion are often mingled in our condemnation of law-breakers, for whom excuse and apology may be found in their ignorance, in the hardships they have endured, or in some special aggravation of circumstances. No sympathy can be felt for man or woman who steals a child and then holds the child for ransom, depending on the heart-broken parents to pay any sum demanded by the thieves. The footpads of the Middle Ages, who started up on a dark night with a pistol at the horse's head and a menacing, "Your money or your life!" were far whiter and more generous than these modern brigands whose cupidity is so daring. When little Willie Whitla was brought back to Sharon by his father, the town turned out to show its gladness, and the nation united in sharing the ovation. That the kidnappers have been arrested is another cause for general thanksgiving.

Of Dreams and Visions

Writing a letter to the editor, a friend who reads this page inquires whether, in these days, dreams and visions come to us from the Lord. A beautiful dream about her dear ones in heaven had brought her a great deal of comfort. She longed to feel that it was a real message and that the dear ones whom she saw so plainly had been permitted to whisper to her something of their bliss, something of the melody forever surging on the golden shore. In ancient times the dear Lord spoke to his people in visions of the night. Jacob saw the angels ascending and descending between earth and heaven. Angelic visions were often vouchsafed to God's people in the early dawn that preceded the modern day. If he does not so speak to them now, and if we seldom see the angels or hear the rustle of their wings, it may be because material things have dulled our senses. Heaven is much nearer us than we deem, and at times we may hear faint echoes of the eternal symphony. Why should we not believe that every good and every perfect thing comes to us from our Father in heaven? We ought not to attach too great importance to our nightly dreams, because if we do we may be overmuch distressed when they are dark instead of bright. We are ourselves supernatural, and it is not impossible that we may receive intimations from another world than ours. The safer plan is not to dwell too much on dreams, but to perform each day's duty as thoroughly as we may, looking forward to the day of endless rest.

BLOWING BUBBLES

See them soar in rainbow beauty, see the bubbles break,
Much indeed like airy castles older children make.
Harmless pastime, if with laughter as the moment flies,
We pursue the breaking bubbles, bidding others rise.

Mothers' Day

THE second Sunday in May has been set apart to be kept sacredly as Mothers' Day. We have other days that we celebrate—Children's Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day and Labor Day, to say nothing of others familiar to all. Around Mothers' Day there cluster associations even more sacred and of more universal appeal than those that belong to any of the others. Mother's love comes first. No love in the world is so entirely unselfish, so independent of circumstances, so enduring to the end. We may have many friends, we can have only one mother. In the most primitive nations motherhood is honored. When Ellen Stone was taken captive by brigands in Bulgaria, some years ago, she was accompanied by a young Syrian woman who was about to become a mother. The rough men who were Miss Stone's captors had an almost superstitious reverence for a woman in her companion's situation, and they therefore treated both women with gentleness and courtesy. When the babe was born their reverence for the mother continued and was the one quality that made the hard condition bearable until the arrival of relief. Moslem and Christian, king and peasant, learned and illiterate, rich and poor, alike unite in loving and honoring the mother. Mother's word is law in every well ordered home; mother's smile is sunshine; mother's tender nursing is comfort in sorrow and soothing in pain. Mother's arms enfold the babe, and the old painters delighted to put on canvas in their beautiful pictures of the Madonna the highest ideal of motherhood. People used to talk of Thomas Carlyle as though he were always austere and ill-tempered, but his letters to the old mother in Scotland reveal his exquisite devotion and constant thought as the perfection of filial regard.

In a suburban church, a few years ago, a man in the prime of life sat each Lord's Day morning beside a mother who was almost ninety, and whose mind had drifted back to her childish years. The dear old lady wanted to come to church, but invariably grew weary about the time the sermon began. Then her son would rise and, giving her his arm, would gently lead her up the aisle and out of the door, conducting her home and returning himself to the seat in the pew. Nothing is more beautiful than a sight like this, a son or daughter rendering service to the mother who has grown old. It is paying back the debt incurred in the long

The white carnation is Mother's flower. Every one is asked to wear a white carnation on Mother's Day, and to give a white carnation to somebody else. No flower is more beautiful in shape, more fragrant in perfume and purer in color. It stands for purity, sweetness and faith, and it well may be Mother's flower. If ministers would take the second Sabbath in May to preach on the home, on the mother's opportunity, and on what we all owe to the mother, a wave of blessing would sweep in a flood tide around the Christian world.

Can we not all combine this year in paying our tribute of affectionate praise to motherhood? We need leave no mother out. The youthful mother, brooding over the nursery that is so like a nest, the mother in the midst of her young people and the mother who has borne the heat and burden of the day and has reached the land of Beulah, each of these is entitled to a share in the homage rendered to maternity.

If only the vast number of readers who turn to this household page every week in friendly appreciation of its homely counsel would adopt this suggestion thousands of mothers would be made very happy on the second Sabbath of May, when we celebrate Mothers' Day.

THE STORY OF MARCO

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy.

CHAPTER V—Continued

MARCO winced and quivered under both pain and ridicule, and in secret he sometimes cried; but he did not falter nor turn back. Day after day he trudged to the coal-breaker and took up his work in the deafening roar and the blinding dust. Day after day his back grew more lame, and his arms more weary; and night after night he went home so tired that he could only throw himself down on his cot and just reach out and touch his violin. He could not have played, even if he had possessed the strength. His smarting, swollen fingers would not have allowed it.

In the coal-breaker his face became grimier, and his nose and throat more and more choked with dust. Most keenly he missed the fresh air and the sunshine; and he longed—with an overwhelming hatred of dust and din—for one day in the green, quiet woods, or under the wide blue sky. He rebelled, too, very bitterly against the discipline of the breaker-boss, and he remembered with scalding tears the gentle touch of his mother's hand on his hair.

Yet even in the face of all this, Marco was, in a way, happy. He was earning sixty cents a day, and sixty cents is a good deal, when one has tramped the streets a whole week and gained only fourteen copper cents and one nickel!

Half of this sixty cents a day Marco paid to Mrs. Martin for his board; the other half he tied up in the bandana handkerchief, against the day when he should go in search of Flossie. There were times, to be sure, when he abstracted from this hoard a penny or a nickel, and slipped it into Mrs. Martin's hand for the coffeepot on the closet shelf. He saw no reason why he, as well as the others, should not contribute toward that fund, particularly as he himself knew so well what it meant to long for green fields and blue skies.

Marco had been a breaker-boy some weeks, when one day the miners and their families were thrown into unusual excitement. A new mine inspector had made his appearance, and there were wild rumors that he meant to make a thorough overhauling of matters and things, particularly in regard to reported open violations of the Child Labor Law, concerning which there had been much recent agitation.

Marco was frightened. His sixty cents a day was very dear to him, and, moreover, a "raise" was confidently expected. His fingers were getting hardened, and he could work more rapidly. Marco was more anxious than ever for money now. He was growing homesick for Flossie and freedom, and he knew he could not obtain either without money. So anxious was he, indeed, that he had even seriously thought lately of suggesting to the Widow Martin that he pay only twenty cents a day for his board and go without his noon meal so that the resulting ten cents might help to swell the fund in the bandana handkerchief. And yet, here now, perhaps, was to be the end of all his scheming: a most cruel man who would take from him his entire income—his whole sixty cents a day!

"'Look a-here—say—Mister, where you goin'?' he called"

"Shucks! Don't ye worry," comforted Benny, airily, to whom Marco confessed his fears. "It's dead easy. De boss'll fix it. 'Sides, if the 'spector does spot ye, what of it? Just hold up yer chin, an' keep yer head. You've got yer paper, an' you're fourteen. Don't de paper prove it, an' ain't you a-tellin' him so? How's he goin' ter git 'round dat, I sh'd like ter know!"

"Yes; but I thought—"

"Then don't thought nothin'," interrupted Johnny. "Jest talk. Why, look a-here," he went on, waxing confidential; "dey was 'most on ter us nippers down below de last time; an' did de boss git scared? Not much he didn't. He jest chucked us little fellers out o' sight behind de gob, an' puts some o' de drivers on ter our job. An' when de Great Mogul gits along, thar wa'n't nottin' doin' down our way, 't all; an' wid his head in de air he shoves right along past where we was laughin' fit ter split. An' dat's de last we seen o' him. Ho! Who's 'fraid? What's eatin' ye? It's jest dead easy, I say!"

It did, indeed, prove to be "dead easy," as Benny had said. The Gaylordville mine was only one of a score that the inspector had on his list, and he naturally could not spend all of his time in the eighty-odd miles of headings and gangways of this one mine. Neither could he be supposed to dispute successfully the ages of some two hundred boys, who were like the proverbial eel for slipping out of his grasp; and who, if finally cornered, were vociferously, triumphantly—and legally—of the proper age. Then, too, looking for violations of the Child Labor Law was not the only duty of the inspector. He must be on the watch for dangerous overhanging slate, and for gas; and he must be ready to report any defects in the timbering or in the ventilation. The inspector, certainly, had little spare time on his hands to devote to the boys.

Some changes were made, it is true. A few boys were discharged and many more disappeared from their accustomed places for a short time. There were sharp words, accusations, warnings, and threats of trouble in the near future. Then the mine inspector went away.

Marco drew a long breath of relief. He still had his sixty cents a day, and the "raise" in prospect. He had been "spotted," to be sure, and had been made to show his certificate; but he had closely followed Benny's instructions, and had come out unharmed, though the mine inspector had frowned, and had said a bad word under his breath, and had shown indications of pursuing the subject further, when the breaker-boss had contrived to attract his attention to something much more serious. Marco had gladly taken the opportunity then to slip away.

CHAPTER VI

Out into the World

MARCO had been at work just six weeks, when one morning he awoke so ill that he could not stand upon his feet. For some days the Widow Martin dosed him conscientiously and impartially with one after another of the various medicines in her cupboard; then, as he grew worse rather than better, she sent for the doctor.

The doctor looked grave. He had seen something of the sick woman left in the gipsy tent long weeks before, and he knew what Marco had to fight in the way of inherited frailness of constitution, to say nothing of possible disease. In a week, however, he had the boy on his feet; but he distinctly forbade any more work in the coal-breaker for some months to come. He prescribed fresh air and sunshine, and plenty of them—in short, an outdoor life. The coal-breaker was not to be thought of.

It was a grievous blow to Marco. Not only was his sixty cents a day a thing of the past, but the treasured little hoard in the bandana handkerchief must go now to pay the doctor, as well as to pay the Widow Martin for the past two weeks' board.

On the hill far above the coal-breaker, Marco tried to figure it out one Sunday afternoon, with Johnny to help him.

After all, Johnny was not much help. Johnny's schooling was a thing of shreds and patches—a thing of evening classes in a stuffy room after a long day's work, when boys—little boys eight and nine and ten years old—cannot keep awake, much less learn the meaning of strange hieroglyphics on a tattered, much-thumbed page.

Johnny's employer, the great mine

Continued on page 421

THE CALL OF THE SPRINGTIME

NONE hear the call of spring quicker than the children of the tenements. None watch more eagerly for the signs which tell them that they may at last have a little play on the city sidewalks, without danger of frost-nipped nose or toes.

Home-coming from school, they loiter along, watching every opportunity to join in some simple game, their little faces all aglow as they run about, often to the obvious discomfiture of the passer-by, who, intent on getting from one point to another in the shortest possible time, shows little patience with the children who by chance may run across his path. Little cares he that in their glee at getting out of doors once more, after a long, dreary winter, they shout, sing and play, making so much out of trifles. He has no time for such nonsense, having forgotten his own days of childhood when the return of spring meant to him something besides laying aside his fur-lined overcoat, donning one more suitable to the balmy days, and starting out with bustle and hurry to catch the "spring trade." So, out of the way, little ones!

Skip around the corner, where you will not be in the path. Go home, Dolly, and get the baby in her little shabby carriage, bring her out for a breath of this lovely day, mother is so tired! It is wash-day, and scrub-day, and cook-day, ironing-day—and every other kind of hard work day. So hurry, Jimmie, and get little sister. I know she has no coat—she has not had one all winter—and so has been obliged to stay in; but to-day, Jimmie boy, spring has come, and Julie can run out without a coat.

The sun is shining so brightly, a warm ray is stealing down the area-way, through the basement window, where Jakey, the janitor's boy, sits looking out at the other boys at play on the sidewalk in front of the tall tenement, that his mother works so hard in trying to keep clean, sweeping and scrubbing the dark halls and stairways leading up—up—so many flights to the crowded homes above. Jakey has not been well all winter, could not go to school, but now that the warm days have come he is feeling better. The shouts of the children, the bright sunbeams and warm breath of May, coming through the basement window, seem to put new life into the boy. So seizing his well-worn cap and slapping it on the back of his curly pate, his eyes dancing with anticipation, he joins the sidewalk group. He is greeted with various voices and varied exclamations. All good natured, however, for has not spring come and is not the sun shining over all? "Hey, Jake, glad to see all yer back agin!" yells one tousled, ragged urchin. "Back nuttin'," sings out another; "glad ter see yer mug agin, cully," and they crowd around the boy, who has been shut up all winter and whose pale cheeks begin to glow, as, sitting in the sun, he listens to the shrill voices of welcome. Tony Martine, who goes to school, and sells paper between times, mornings and evenings, sidles up to Jakey, saying, "Say, Jake, I got a good line on, jist de ting fur you. Ye see, I'm gittin' too old to go any more, dey don't take kids over thirteen; but say, kid, I wus jist agoin' ter purtend it an' say I wus ony twelve an' so git the chanst once more, but, Jake—I ain't agoin' ter do it. I'll stay on de job o' sellin' de papes, an' youse kin go in my place."

Wee Tenement Candidates for Our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn

"Wot yer kiddin' about?" asked Jakey, his big black eyes growing bigger at every word which fell from Tony's lips. "I ain't a kiddin', not on yer life—didn't yer ever hear about Mont-Lawn, de place where yer go es quick ez dey'll take yer, and where if yer wus let you'd stay till all de boids flewed away, 'n de brooks wus froze, 'n de grub all et up? Say, kid, dat's de bang-up-est, bulliest place a guy ever struck, 'n talk erbout games! W'y, dese kids never saw any games like dose up at de 'Children's Home.' After youse have been up dere one Saturday afternoon, and mixed in wid de 'bean game,' 'n der races, when dem games is pulled off, to say nuthin' 'bout de scups, de roller skatin', 'n more tings dan I could tell about in a week, you'll sure own up, Jake, dat fun ain't no dream up dere. An' w'en Dr. Klopsch comes up on Saturdays—he's de boss, de man wot runs tings—'n gets de money ter pay fur 'em, well, kid—der ain't no use in tryin' ter tell yer any more dan der is ter tell yer 'bout 'Fort Plenty'—dat's de place where yer eat, 'n den yer eat some more, 'n den some more."

Here language seemed to fail, as Tony paused for breath, his boyish heart all aglow with the thought of how Jakey's thin cheeks would fill out when he got a chance at "Fort Plenty." "Say, kid," said he at last, when he noted his listener's incredulous look, "I'll take yer up ter de Bible House, where dey gits de kids in bunches to take 'em up de river to de home, an' den p'raps you know I ain't a kiddin'." Slowly Jakey went down the basement steps, for the May sun had hidden himself behind the tall tenements, while softly under his breath Jakey murmured, "If dat ain't no fairy tale——"

MARY SARGENT HOPKINS.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN YOKOHAMA

ON the evening of Saturday, March 13, Yokohama, Japan, was visited by one of the severest earthquakes experienced in many years. This shock did not come wholly as a surprise; the earthquake epidemic had already caused many speculations as to the probabilities. However, it was severely satisfactory to those visitors from other lands who were stopping at the hotels as guests. Many packed their trunks and sailed away at the earliest hour possible on the following morning.

Happily, few injuries were sustained, as most people rushed into the street to get clear of the tiles and bricks, plaster and stones which rained through the air. Many natives, however, were badly cut and wounded. In several parts of the town water-mains were broken and houses flooded. The intensity of the situation was magnified by the breaking of the electric light wires, thus plunging a large part of the city into darkness, while the rain of tiles and chimneys caused much apprehension to the helpless onlookers. To add to the general discomfort of those who fled into the streets, a heavy gale of wind accompanied the earthquake and flakes of snow and hail were blown with great force into the faces of the terror-stricken.

The European settlement suffered badly. There are probably 4,000 houses erected after the mode of Occidental architecture, and in the residential portion of the American community hardly a single two-story house among the 2,500 American dwellings escaped damage, either to walls or roof, while quite a number were absolutely ruined.

There were guests in one house, and as the last one was taking his leave the chimney dropped all the way from the third story, through ceiling and floor, into the drawing-room.

Mr. and Mrs. W—— were returning from an evening out just as the earth began to shake. Mr. W—— stooped over the cradle, ready to carry out the baby. His point of departure was through a closed door, which yielded to the pressure of his boot. He vacated just in time to escape seeing the dining-room and drawing-room mutually telescoped. That was not the only house where such strange excursions took place at this particular time.

A Street in Yokohama, Showing the Effects of the Earthquake

The number of American residents has increased at a tremendous rate during the past fifteen years. Within the native Japanese city there is an American city. The majority of its residents are young men, and a few adventurous young women, the rest being composed of English and American families. Appeal after appeal has been sent from these communities to the Christian people at home to establish some kind of Christian work among this great company of American and English emigrants. In answer to one appeal, the secretary of one of our leading benevolent societies replied: "I confess I am perfectly amazed at your reference to the large number of English-speaking young women who are there. Some way or other, we think of Japan as a country for the Japanese and missionaries, with an occasional tourist thrown in."

In Manila, where there is a similar community of Americans, Bishop Brent is working. When he was honored by a call to the diocese of Washington, D. C., he declined the call because of the great need of his presence in the Philippine community. He said: "Great work and great places are where great causes and men are." Yokohama differs from Manila only in point of Christian activity. We are spiritually starving! Is there no help?

Without doubt, these American communities in Oriental ports are the strategic points of the missionary problem of to-day. The Church sends preachers; the devil sends his emissaries, too.

HELEN K. STRAIN.

Yokohama, Japan.

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from page 419

king (though Johnny did not know it), thought a great deal of education. In a distant city, an imposing college building bore his name, and the world rang with acclamations of this great man who so generously donated large sums yearly to the maintenance of this admirable institution. Perhaps Johnny himself might be said to have a hand in this good work. Certainly his long days of labor, at four dollars and a half a week, added its mite to the great whole that made possible the fortune, which in turn made possible the college. As for his own education — Johnny attended night-school on occasional winter evenings, when his work left him strength to get there. . . . No; certainly Johnny could not be of much help to Marco.

Marco had been taught by his mother. He could read and write, and he said he could "figger some." At all events, he produced paper and pencil, and began to jot down the items.

"There's three weeks now that I hain't paid your ma," he began dolefully; "and I pay her a dollar an' eighty cents a week. How much is three times a dollar an' eighty cents?"

"Give it up," retorted Johnny promptly.

"Well, how do you spell 'owe'?"

"Don't spell it."

"Yes, but if you do?"

"Ye got me! Why ain't 'O' good 'nough?—jest 'O'?"

"Guess 'tis," murmured Marco, abstractedly.

There was a long pause. Marco was covering the wrong side of his paper with laboriously made figures, and was making visible use of his lips and his fingers for counting.

"Johnny, it's five whole dollars an' forty cents!" he groaned at last. "Whew! don't it count up when 'tain't paid right along? Five dollars an' forty cents!"

"Mebbe ma'll chuck out de forty cents," suggested Johnny, hopefully. "You hain't et much lately, ye know."

"But there's the doctor—and doctors cost awful!" wailed Marco.

"I know it," admitted Johnny. "I forgot de pill-peddler."

"He came three times, and he said 'twas a dollar a time for me; I asked him. And that would make three dollars more." There was another long pause while Marco worked again with his pencil; then there was a shriek of dismay. "Johnny, it's eight dollars an' forty cents! Why, Johnny, there won't be nothin' left ter find Flossie with!"

Johnny was properly sympathetic. He was even hopeful. There might be more in the bandana handkerchief than Marco thought. He suggested that they immediately go down to the house and find out. And to the house they went as fast as their eager little legs could carry them.

Ten minutes later the boys were staring into each other's faces in blank dismay — the bandana handkerchief with its treasure was nowhere to be found.

There was at once the wildest confusion. All the Martins, except Grandpa Joe, were at home, and all gathered around Marco with expressions of deepest concern. No one had seen it, no one knew anything about it. Marco himself had not seen it since the night before, when he had put it back under the loose board in the corner of the room which he shared with Johnny and Benny. It was gone, certainly; probably stolen. But as for suspecting any one of the Martin family of the theft, Marco never so much as thought of it.

Mrs. Martin, however, did think of it. A sickening fear clutched at her heart as she remembered that she had seen her father-in-law near the boys' room only that morning. She said nothing to Marco, but the fear became a conviction when that night word was brought to the Martin cottage that the old man was in a bad condition himself, and was "treatin' right an' left." Marco did not hear this. He had gone to bed, and had sobbed himself to sleep.

He was astir early the next morning. The four walls of his room seemed to stifle him. There was nothing but the hills and the wide dome of the sky that could comfort him to-day—that could make life even endurable. Swallowing scarcely a morsel of the breakfast that the Widow Martin pressed upon him, he tucked his violin under his arm and fled from the house.

Marco had played a good deal during the last few days. He had even tried to go back to his street-playing for money. But to-day he hurried through the town without pausing, until he came to the road that led by the clearing where had been the gipsy camp. Then he threw himself down on the grass beside the road to rest and think.

Something must be done. He owed for three weeks' board and for three doctor's visits, and he had no money to pay. More than that, he could not earn the money now, and he had lost every cent that he had saved to use in his search for Flossie.

With mournful eyes he followed the sweep of the road as it led to the top of the hill and dropped out of sight on the other side. Somewhere, over there, was Flossie; he knew that. And Flossie was waiting for mother, the mother who could never come now. And he—perhaps he, too, would never come. It looked, certainly, as if he would not until he was old and gray—and rich. . . . And Marco pictured himself as he would be then, staff in hand and searching the wide world over for Flossie. It was not an unpleasant picture, after all, for money jingled in his pocket, and Flossie was in sight, waiting and smiling to receive him. He was quite delighting in it, indeed, when a strain of music from the dooryard of a house some distance behind him, caused him to turn quickly.

He recollected then that it had been coming nearer and nearer—that music. He saw now what had produced it—a hand-organ. He watched until the organ-grinder stopped turning the crank and went to receive something from the woman in the doorway. It seemed to be a sandwich or a piece of pie which the man took in his fingers and ate, picking up his organ afterward, and coming up the road toward where Marco was sitting. He did not stop nor glance up, but plodded on and on toward the top of the hill.

For one, two, three minutes Marco watched the man, with eyes that grew moment by moment more wistful; then, giving a sudden exclamation, he sprang to his feet and hurried after him.

"Look a-here—say—Mister, where you goin'?" he called.

To be continued

Answered Prayers

S. C., Maryland. "God has recently answered a prayer for me, which I wish to acknowledge."

C. L., Missouri. "I wish to acknowledge that the Lord delivered me out of a great trouble, when there seemed no way possible."

Reader, Ohio. "I promised our Saviour if he would answer my prayer, giving work to my husband, that I would acknowledge it publicly. He has done so."

F. G. Massachusetts. "I wish to acknowledge the prayers He has answered for me lately, restoring a friend to the faith, and helping one who has been sick."

A Widowed Mother, Ohio. "I wish to add my testimony to answered prayers. My only son was going down under the curse of drink, and through prayer has been redeemed."

J. L., Pennsylvania. "I must tell others of God's goodness to me. For a few months conditions were so unpleasant and the road seemed so hard to travel, but in answer to earnest prayer he is brightening the way much."

Better be Safe than Sorry.

Does the soap you use rinse easily?

If it does, it has at least one of the qualities of a good soap.

If it does not, look out. It is poorly made and will not do the work soap is supposed to do — cleanse.

Better be safe than sorry. Use Ivory Soap. No free alkali in it; no chemicals; nothing but soap.

Ivory Soap
It Floats

We will send you a Parisian Model Corset on approval, express prepaid

—and guarantee to fit your figure perfectly. Try it on at your own home, and if not satisfactory return at our expense.

Write for our Free 20-page Corset Book. It shows the very latest creations in corsetry—models of exclusive design and surpassing beauty—and explains how our can be made to fit you perfectly from your measurements sent us by mail.

Parisian Model Corsets

A perfect-fitting gown requires a perfect-fitting corset. Without a corset adapted to your own figure, you cannot dress correctly or in becoming style. Our Parisian Model Corset brings out the beauty of your figure; it accentuates good lines and corrects improper ones.

Price $2.50 to $25 according to material.

We have in all parts of the country delighted customers who voluntarily testify to the merits of our Parisian Model Corsets.

Write TO-DAY for our FREE Corset Book.

THE PARISIAN CORSET STORE

Devoted to Corsetry Exclusively

519 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid. DR. LYONS, 180 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

FREE Relyea SAMPLES

Send your address and we will mail you packet of Relyea Samples, containing the very latest Relyea White Lawns, Long Cloth, Nainsook, Lingerie Chiffon, Dimities, Linen, Waisting and Colored Rep Cloth Suitings. We save you money and prepay express on all orders in the United States. Money returned if goods are not satisfactory. Write for Relyea samples to-day.

RELYEA & CO., Dept. C, 287 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

$2.45
Postpaid.
No. 40-C-6

LATEST PARIS STYLES in Mid-summer Wearing Apparel, at The Big Store, Chicago's Economy Centre

Our Red, White and Blue Fashion Booklet, Just Out, FREE for the Asking.

Write for it To-day.

This pretty Gibson Dress

FOR $2.45, POSTPAID, is only one instance of the remarkable low prices at

The Big Store, Chicago

No. 40-C-6. Gibson one-piece Dress of Fine Quality Linene, side pleats on waist and ornamented with Dutch collar of nainsook and Valenciennes Lace finished with silk sailor tie. The skirt is gored circular and attached by neat belt and finished with wide hem. This graceful model closes at side with large black covered buttons that also ornament the long, close-fitting sleeve. Sizes 34 to 44 in. Colors: White, blue, pink, lavender, green or tan. Price $2.45

Postpaid—Genuine $5 Value

Our Fashion Booklet is FREE

It contains handsome illustrations and complete descriptions of everything in wearing apparel for Women, Children and Infants.

Tailored Suits	$5.90 upwards
Lingerie Dresses	1.95 upwards
Silk Dresses	8.75 upwards
Separate Skirts	2.90 upwards
Summer Hats	1.75 upwards
Summer Waists	.50 upwards

Silk Petticoats, Underclothing, Corsets, Hosiery, Handkerchiefs, Gloves—also everything for children and babies' wardrobe at the most economical prices ever quoted for goods with such merit.

In justice to yourself for Style and Value and for the sake of your children's comfort and neatness—you ought to have our Fashion Booklet—Write for a FREE Copy. Do so to-day and you will have it by return mail.

As proof in our Confidence to please you and save you money pleasantly and promptly, together with express charges both ways—if you are not perfectly satisfied with your purchase—you yourself to be the judge.

We Guarantee to Refund Your Money

Remember we prepay the express charges on your purchase, which means a big saving to you.

We Will Send FREE, postpaid, our latest Summer Fashion Booklet, JUST OUT, showing the New Paris Styles—Styles that are a full season ahead of anything shown in your home town.

Our moderate prices will surprise and delight you.

Address Department M.

SIEGEL COOPER & CO. CHICAGO
The Big Store — Chicago's Economy Center

WHEEL CHAIRS A Wheel Chair is often an invalid's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalid's Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on 30 Days' Trial.

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free catalogue NOW.

GORDON MFG. CO.
432 Madison Ave., Toledo, O.

FREE BOOK ON DEVELOPERS
with every order of ENSIGN FILMS
Hauff Developers,
Imperial Plates Sussex Paper
Free catalogue on request
G. GENNERT, Dept. 20
NEW YORK, 24-26 E. 13th St.
CHICAGO, 20-24 State St.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business.

Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO., 290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago. Ill.

The Way Out of a Quarrel*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

ONCE a colporteur was visiting a fair in Siberia, with the hope of selling Bibles. He went from booth to booth offering the Scriptures for sale. On the first day he sold only four copies, on the next day up to noon none at all. He passed from the main street into a side street, and there saw a large number of loiterers around a gin shop drinking vodka. I will let him tell the remainder of the story. He says: "Two men were calling each other the worst possible names, and in a moment they came to blows. My heart stood still. What was I to do? To meddle, even to separate them, would involve me in a street fight, and I would probably get some blows for my pains. The Russian proverb, 'Don't interfere with fighting dogs,' seemed to fit the situation, and I was about to move on when some impulse drove me to catch hold of each man and separate them. I interposed my knapsack between them, and said, 'Brothers, what makes you try to tear each other's eyes out? If you are Christians, you must try to love each other. Remember what Christ has done for us.' The opponents looked at me suspiciously, and saw that I was of a right good height. Still their looks somewhat frightened me and I longed to do something, but knew not what to do. A bright idea shot through me, and opening the knapsack I pulled out a New Testament and opened it. The first line that caught my eye was: 'Owe no man anything, but to love one another.' I read on to the end of the chapter (Romans 13), and was going to read the next when one of the combatants interrupted: 'Little Uncle, from whence comest thou? What art thou?' 'I am from Krasnoyarsk, my friend,' I replied, 'and am selling the Scriptures, part of which I have read to you. Who will buy this Book that shows us the right way to live, to love one another, yea, is our guide to eternal life? I am not a priest, nor a learned man, but simply an ordinary man whom God has led this way to end your fight.' 'How much does the Book thou holdest cost?' asked one. 'Only a rouble.' 'Paolik,' said one of the combatants to the other, 'I've no money.' After a short pause, he said, 'Paolik, let us buy the Gospels. We shall be the better for reading them.' Paolik took a look at the New Testament, then drew from his pocket two roubles, receiving two copies in return. He gave one at once to his comrade, and then those two men, who had been cursing and swearing, fighting like brutes, went off peaceably with the Word of God in their hands. I was able to dispose of nineteen copies of the Scriptures there and then. And the next day Paolik brought several customers to my lodging, and would allow none of them to haggle. 'The books are worth the money my friend asks,' he said. 'Not only that, but we must try and help the good man who is selling them!' "

How a Church Quarrel Was Settled

A church is the last place where we might expect a quarrel. But let us not forget that churches are composed of human beings, not angels. Even among angels there was once a fall. There have been many church quarrels, but there is one in particular that is most historic. And when we have heard how it all came about, and how it was settled, we will say that it ought to serve as an example for stopping church quarrels for all time. The quarrel was in the church at Antioch in Syria. But the people who made the trouble were "certain Jews" who belonged to the Christian Church in Jerusalem. They had been told about how the Gospel had been preached to the Gentiles in Antioch by Paul and Barnabas, and that many had become Christians and joined the Church. These Jews therefore went up to Antioch to make trouble. They talked angrily to Paul and Barnabas, saying that only Jews should have the Gospel preached to them, and that the Gentiles must first become as Jews—Jewish proselytes—before they could become Christians. It was the rite of circumcision which was in question (Gen. 17:10-14). The Jews from Jerusalem even persuaded some of the Christian Jews in Antioch that the Gentiles had no right to be counted as Christians. The quarrel grew so great that Peter, who had himself preached to the Gentiles, took sides with the Jews, and Paul says: "I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed" (Gal. 2:11). Even Barnabas became disaffected. Paul says of him: "Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation" (Gal. 2:13). Paul was anxious to have the quarrel settled, but he was also anxious to have it settled right. He asked the Christians in Antioch to send him and Barnabas, and some others, down to Jerusalem to talk it all over with the Christians there, particularly with James, the brother of the Lord Jesus. One whom Paul took with him was a young man by the name of Titus, a noble young Gentile, who had become a Christian. On the way down from Antioch to Jerusalem they stopped in many towns to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles—in Phenice and Samaria. And many were glad to become Christians. They were not told that they must become Jews before they could be Christians.

The First Church Council

And when they were come to Jerusalem the matter about which they had been quarreling in Antioch was all talked over by Christian Jews and Christian Gentiles. James, who was probably the brother of Jesus, read to them from the Bible what God had said about the Gentiles (Amos 9:11, 12), and then he said: "My sentence is that we shall not trouble the Gentiles that are turned to God about becoming as Jews, but let us send a letter to them, telling them about those things which they have done as Gentiles, which they must not do as Christians."

These things were written in a letter, and two of the Christians of Jerusalem were sent with it to Antioch when Paul and Barnabas and Titus and the others returned. And that ended the quarrel, because both the Jewish Christians and the Gentile Christians were glad to hear the letter read and to do as they were told in the letter to do. That was really a great matter which caused the quarrel in the Church at Antioch, and the way it was decided determined whether Christianity should be a Jewish sect or a world-wide religion. The chapter in the Bible which contains that decision has been appropriately called "The Magna Charta of the Christian Church." This expression is adapted from the Great Charter, "The Magna Charta," of June 15, 1215, which was extracted from King John on the demands of the barons of England, in which it was declared that "Justice should be neither sold, denied nor delayed, and that there should be protection of life and liberty from unlawful deprivation." So in the writing given at Jerusalem in the year 50 A.D., by the Christian Church, the relations and duties of different members of the Church are clearly guarded. The Jew shall not oppress the Gentile, and the Gentile must avoid those things which

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for May 23, 1909. The Council at Jerusalem—Acts 15 : 1-5, 22-29. GOLDEN TEXT: "We believe that we shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus in like manner as they." Acts 15 : 11.

Where Savings are Safe and Yield 5%

THE LOCATION and the prestige of the Industrial are the factors that insure liberal earnings on real estate mortgage loans, and the regular payment of 5% dividends to every investor, small or large.

The full records of our operations are open to inspection by the New York Banking Department. This is compulsory. Without compulsion, they are open to examination by any client at any time, both at our place of business and in the public files of the Banking Department. The more our methods are studied and understood by investors the stronger we stand with them.

In sixteen years we have accumulated Assets of over $1,900,000 and Surplus and Profits of $138,000; have never omitted or deferred payment of full dividends; have never failed to return the principal promptly and courteously, on request.

There are probably men in your own locality who have dealt with us and whose names we can give you (with their permission) if you write us for information.

We invite correspondence.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

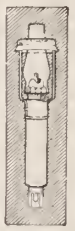
This Embroidered Night Gown 90cts postpaid

PICTURE SHOWS ¾ LENGTH

Made of soft finished long cloth, very full and long. Yoke handsomely embroidered, scalloped edge, ribbon draw-string. Lawn ruffle on sleeves, edged with fine Val. lace, back finished with beading and ribbon, and edged with lace to match sleeves. Send bust-measure when you order.

Ask for our 1909 Catalog, showing many great bargains in dainty, refined underwear, and special patterns of laces. We have had sixteen years' experience as manufacturers and importers and guarantee satisfaction or money refunded. Why not buy direct of us at factory prices?

A. L. Lewis Co., 33 Chestnut St., Amesbury, Mass.



This little lamp fits any candlestick, and with a shade looks exactly like a wax candle, making an excellent table decoration.

The Twilight Candle Lamp

burns five hours with one filling of kerosene without smoke or odor, gives a steady light, and can't set fire to the shade.

Can be purchased of dealers, or we will send a pair postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

Money back if not satisfactory.

H. G. McFADDIN & CO., 38-A-Warren Street, New York

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

PILLOW OXFORDS

$3.00
Postpaid in U.S.A.

Ideal Summer Shoes for Women—Absolute Comfort for TIRED, TENDER FEET; no breaking-in required; relief from pet Corns and Bunions; soft, flexible, durable, dressy and stylish. Genuine Vici Kid, soft, pliable. RUBBER HEELS. No lining to wrinkle or chafe.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Write to-day for our Free Illustrated Catalogue and special self-measure blank and join our Grand Army of delighted customers. Address:

Suffolk Shoe Co., 184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

BUY "KALAMAZOO KOMFORT" NOW

Enjoy that luxurious rest and relaxation which gives renewed energy to tired nerves and muscles and makes the hot, sultry days cool and delightful. Why not be really comfortable when reading, resting or dosing, if the expense is but nominal? Our Reclining Chair, automatically adapting itself to every position without effort, will do even more than this for you. Indispensable for invalids. Write to-day for free trial offer and catalog No. 135, showing ten models adapted to parlor, lawn, porch steamer and sick-room. Ask your dealer for our Superior Quality lawn and porch furniture and make your home comfortable, attractive and distinctive. Seventy designs of summer furniture at popular prices. Every piece trademarked and guaranteed.

THE KALAMAZOO SLED CO., 582-3rd St., Kalamazoo, Mich

I know where many new stores are needed.

Write me to-day for particulars regarding new store locations—also I'll be glad to tell you about a retail line that will pay maximum profits on a minimum investment. EDWARD B. MOON, 10 W. Water St., Chicago. Ill.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

hurt the religious feelings of the Jews. Where love abounds there can be no serious offense.

"See how these Christians love each other!" exclaimed the heathen world as they looked upon the kindness of Christians toward each other, the bond of fraternity that existed between them in the Church. In those days there was no need of so-called "fraternities"—the Church was sufficient. This is the case with many men and women to-day. Those who truly love the Church, love not only their own denomination, but all other denominations. It is all their Father's house, in which there is a Presbyterian room, a Baptist room, a Methodist room, as we sometimes see rooms fitted up in historical mansions, according to different periods.

Dr. William Levering Devries, of Washington, said to us: "We do not want Christian union, but Christian unity. Christian union would mean the surrender of individuality. Christian unity means functional, organic, vital, essential, fundamental oneness—oneness like that of the Son with the Father, of the branch with the trunk of the vine, with individual liberty and power of development, according to the special talents and traits on the part of each factor in the whole. Christian unity means oneness at the centre and freedom at the circumference. It means identity in the essential New Testament elements of faith, ethics, worship and polity, but liberty in the non-essential developments of faith, ethics, worship and polity, and charity in all things."

We rejoice when we consider such a great movement as the American "Federal Church Council," which met in Philadelphia in December, 1908. Denominations represented were 31; members represented, 18,000,000; adherents of churches represented, 50,000,000.

We rejoice also in the great World Sunday School Movement. At the convention held in Rome—the fifth world convention—in 1907, the record was: Delegates, 1,118; denominations represented, 53; countries represented, 37.

The sixth World's Sunday School Convention is to be held in Washington, D. C., in June, 1910.

It is well that those who expect to spend an eternity together in heaven should learn here on earth to dwell together in unity. The failure to do this has made many infidels, who frankly state their sad condition to be the result of seeing Christians of different denominations quarrel with one another.

There is said to be a starfish in the Caledonian lakes which is sometimes dredged up from the deep water. If you pull off one of its branching limbs, it immediately begins by contortions to break off the others, until the whole body is a shapeless wreck of wriggling fragments. This is a sad picture of a body of Christians rent asunder by differences in doctrines and creeds.

An intense emphasis on the Divine person, Jesus Christ, and on the other great facts that are clearly stated in the Bible, and on which most Christians agree, is more likely to build up the kingdom of God than a constant parading of minor disagreements in regard to works and mysteries. A Hindoo and a Maori of New Zealand met upon the deck of a missionary ship. They had been converted from their heathenism. They pointed to their Bibles, shook hands, and smiled at each other. At last a happy thought occurred to the Hindoo. He exclaimed: "Hallelujah!" The New Zealander in delight cried out,"Amen!" In those two words, not found in their languages, they were able to express their thoughts. Among our differences of church expression let us search out the heart words in which we agree. To every hallelujah of gladness in God's truth among other Christians let us give our strong Amen. Among all their differences on other things the churches of every name agree on two great facts that stand unshaken and immovable before the temple of our faith like the Jachin and Boaz pillars of old: First, that the Bible is the best book in the world, and contains the highest and purest moral and spiritual law for mankind, and should therefore be studied and obeyed; and second, that Jesus Christ is the purest being that ever wore earth about him, and that his example should therefore be followed as the highest pattern of life. Christians of every creed write upon their hearts the motto of his beloved disciple: "Even as He."

How a Great Firm Grew

IN 1867, Nathan W. Ayer, a young, ambitious and energetic native of Connecticut and a graduate of Brown University, removed from Western New York to Philadelphia to continue in a private school the work of teaching, to which his life has been devoted. In 1868 his son, F. Wayland Ayer, then a student in the University of Rochester, N. Y., followed him to Philadelphia, to seek his fortune in business. Without friends, acquaintances or business experience, he did not readily find remunerative employment, and as a temporary expedient accepted an engagement as solicitor of advertising for a religious weekly newspaper. April 1, 1869, the firm of N. W. Ayer & Son was established, which has since become one of the leading advertising concerns in the world. The original partners were N. W. Ayer, F. W. Ayer and G. O. Wallace. In 1873 N. W. Ayer died, and Mr. Wallace also died in 1887. Mr. F. W. Ayer later associated with himself as partners Messrs. H. N. McKinney, A. G. Bradford and J. A. Wood. The vast business of the firm may be estimated from the fact that it now employs 263 persons in various departments, with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Mr. F. W. Ayer and his partners have long been interested in religious work. The firm commemorated its fortieth anniversary on April 24, 1909, with a dinner tendered to the employees and patrons at the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia.

To Help Taylor University

REV. F. M. WESTHAFER, Hartsville, Ind., offers to be the hundredth man to give $10 to meet the urgent demands on Taylor University. A number of others have already responded to this offer, and stand ready to give their $10 as soon as the full number has been secured. It is important that this number should be secured at once that the money may be on hand before June 7. This is a rare opportunity for a small outlay to help in a most meritorious cause. Will you not be one of the one hundred, and thus help to secure the subscriptions? Any reader of this journal who is interested should address M. Vayhinger, president Taylor University, Upland, Ind.

An Absorbing Book

Dear Christian Herald: The Inside Story of the White House is a grand premium, and I am very well pleased with it. I have never read a book that I have taken more interest in. It gives all the happenings from the first President up to the present time, and is a delight, and no one should miss it. Many thanks, and may your good work go on in future as it has in the past. MISS S. M. KIST.

Easton, Pa.

A New Pair Free If Kayser Silk Gloves Are Not Right

Every pair of Kayser gloves—long or short—contains our guarantee. And every dealer fulfils it.

That is because we make our own fabric—from the very cocoon. Our silk is not chemically weighted.

It is because every glove goes through fifty operations to attain utter perfection before it goes out.

And because of our patent tips.

We know that a Kayser glove must prove satisfactory. So we willingly take the risk.

Your Favorite Gloves

The Kayser have always been your favorite gloves. For more than 25 years, nearly all women have worn them.

All women want this fit and finish—this patent tip—this fabric which wears like iron.

But this year there are other silk gloves in some stores—brought in by the long glove craze.

They have not behind them the Kayser skill and experience. They are not like the Kayser creations.

So these are times to be careful. To get your favorite gloves this year, look for "Kayser" in the hem.

"The Kayser"

Patent Finger-Tipped Silk Gloves

A Guarantee in Every Pair

Please insist on the gloves you want.

It was Kayser, as you know, who made silk gloves desirable. The old-time silk gloves were abominable.

The Kayser fit and finish made them stylish. The Kayser tips and fabric made them economical.

All your delight in these light, comfortable gloves has been due to our skill and invention.

Now we don't want you to get gloves half as good, then think that silk gloves have deteriorated.

Cost Not a Penny More

You don't save a penny by getting a poor glove, for none undersell the Kaysers.

We make millions of pairs, and our profit on each is a trifle. The poorest gloves can't compete.

You can get the Kaysers—the perfect gloves—for just as little as gloves that last half as long.

All that is necessary is to be watchful. Accept nothing inferior. Every genuine Kayser has "Kayser" in the hem.

Short Silk Gloves, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25

Long Silk Gloves, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50

JULIUS KAYSER & CO., MAKERS, NEW YORK

Also makers of Italian Silk Underwear—the most luxurious lingerie in the world, yet the most economical. It outwears cotton ten to one, as thousands of women know. Made in every undergarment that a woman wears. Send for booklet, "What Every Woman Knows."

Address: Julius Kasyer & Co., New York

Look for the Name in the Hem

A Living From Poultry on a City Lot

$1,500 in Ten Months from Sixty Hens on a Corner of a City Lot

TO the average poultryman that would seem impossible and when we tell you we have actually done a $1,500 poultry business with sixty hens on a corner in the city garden, 40 feet wide by 40 feet long, we are simply stating facts. IT WOULD NOT SEEM POSSIBLE TO GET SUCH RETURNS by any one of the systems of poultry keeping recommended and practiced by the American people, still it is an easy matter when the new PHILO SYSTEM is adopted.

The Philo System is Unlike All Other Ways of Keeping Poultry said in many respects just the reverse, accomplishing things in poultry work that have always been considered impossible, and getting unheard-of-results that are hard to believe without seeing.

The New System Covers All Branches of the Work Necessary for Success from selecting the breeders to marketing the product. It tells how to get eggs that will hatch, how to hatch nearly every egg and how to raise nearly all the chicks hatched. It gives complete plans in detail how to make everything necessary to run the business and at less than half the cost required to handle the poultry business in any other manner.

Two-Pound Broilers in Eight Weeks are raised in a space of less than a square foot to the broiler without any loss, and the broilers are of the very best quality, bringing here three cents per pound above the highest market price.

Our Six-Months-Old Pullets Are Laying at the Rate of 24 Eggs Each Per Month

In a space of two square feet for each bird. No green cut bone of any description is fed, and the food used is inexpensive as compared with food others are using.

Our new book, the PHILO SYSTEM OF POULTRY KEEPING, gives full particulars regarding these wonderful discoveries, with simple, easy-to-understand directions that are right to the point, and 15 pages of illustrations showing all branches of the work from start to finish.

Don't Let the Chicks Die in the Shell

One of our secrets of success is to save all the chickens that are fully developed at hatching time, whether they can crack the shell or not. It is a simple trick and believed to be the secret of the ancient Egyptians and Chinese which enabled them to sell the chicks at 10 cents a dozen.

Chicken Feed at 15 Cents a Bushel

Our book tells how to make the best green food with but little trouble and have a good supply, any day in the year, winter or summer. It is just as impossible to get a large egg yield without green food as it is to keep a cow without hay or fodder.

Our New Brooder Saves 2 Cents on Each Chicken

No lamp required. No danger of chilling, over-heating or burning up the chickens as with brooders using lamps or any kind of fire. They also keep all the lice off the chickens automatically or kill any that may be on them when placed in the brooder. Our book gives full plans and the right to make and use them. One can easily be made in an hour at a cost of 25 TO 50 CENTS.

Send $1.00 and a copy of the latest revised edition of the Philo System will be sent by return mail. The latest edition has many pages of additional reading matter, and by ordering direct you are sure to get the latest and most approved book.

A TESTIMONIAL

VALLEY FALLS, N.Y., October 22, 1908.

DEAR SIR: A year's observation and some experience of my own, confirm me in what I wrote September 5, 1907. The system has been tried so long and by so many, that there can be no doubt as to its worth and adaptability. It is especially valuable to parties having but a small place for chickens. Seven feet square is plenty for a flock of seven. (REV.) W. W. COX.

E. R. PHILO, Publisher
587 Third Street, Elmira, N. Y.

The great durability and handsome appearance of concrete products is now recognized world wide. Big Money Making plants being established every where. It will pay you to investigate our proposition for a factory in your locality. We furnish machines, molds and everything needed. Write for particulars.
THE PETTYJOHN CO., 673 N. Sixth St., TERRE HAUTE, IND.

MAKES AND BURNS ITS OWN GAS — OVER 200 STYLES 2 CENTS A WEEK

Infinitely better than electricity, gas, acetylene or kerosene and the most economical of all.
Each lamp is a self contained miniature light works.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

100 CANDLE POWER

Fully guaranteed.
Over 200 styles. Agents wanted.
Catalog Free. Write to-day.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

Don't Throw it Away — Does Your Granite Dish or Hot Water Bag Leak? USE MENDETS A PATENT PATCH

They mend all leaks in all utensils—tin brass, copper, graniteware, hot water bags etc. No solder, cement or rivet. Any one can use them; fit any surface; two million in use. Send for sample pkg. 10c. Complete pkg. assorted sizes, 25c postpaid. Agents wanted.
Collette Mfg. Co., Box 522 Amsterdam, N. Y.

50 ENGRAVED CARDS OF YOUR NAME IN CORRECT SCRIPT, INCLUDING PLATE $1.00
THE QUALITY MUST PLEASE YOU OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED
SOCIAL STATIONERS HOSKINS PHILA.
905 CHESTNUT ST.

Do Our Sunday Schools Educate?

Continued from page 410

further blunder is in trying to force the Sunday School into uses primarily educational, when a sober second thought ought to convince an open-minded critic that the chief end of such a school is to move the heart and to save the soul, not to compete with secular education in bookishness and mental culture. The public schools give systematized knowledge and intellectual discipline; the Sunday School is giving to boys and girls a conscience, a fear of God and a reverence for the Holy Bible. If its lessons "hop, skip and jump through the Bible," so do sermons of great and small preachers, and so also do the lessons of the public school. How many of the pretentious secular teachers can do more than touch the hem of the garment of the subjects included in their public school curricula? In mathematics, for instance, as compared with that vast domain of knowledge how small is the little portion of most of those who teach it! If our Sunday School teachers lack pedagogic training, they are at least in the main conscientious students of God's Word and lovers of children; and their good character as men and women, and their earnestness as Christians who have experienced the great personal truths of the Bible, fit them under that greatest of all teachers, the Holy Spirit, to save and train childhood and youth.

H. M. HAMILL, D.D.,
Chairman on Education, International Sunday School Association.
Nashville, Tenn.

• • •

Is the Teacher at Fault?

Having been actively engaged in the Sunday School work for over sixty years, most of the time as superintendent or teacher, my observation has been that the system now in use in many of our Sunday Schools does not educate, in a theological sense. The fault does not appear to me to be so much in our literature as in the manner of presenting the lesson to the class. Very many pupils and many teachers do not prepare the lesson at home at all, but depend entirely upon reading on Sunday from the notes as given in the quarterly. The lesson helps are especially designed to aid the pupil and teacher at home, and we think that one of the very best plans for the teacher to pursue would be not to permit the use of the quarterly in the class during the recitation, but have them read the text from the Bible and answer the questions as given in the quarterly or by topic from previous study of the lesson. Also, the pupils should have the right to propound questions on the lesson to the teacher. This would necessitate a previous study of the lesson, create more interest in the class and lead to a better education of the pupil.

Smithfield, Pa. L. B. LEECH.

• • •

To Make Real Bible Scholars

Notwithstanding their many imperfections our Sunday Schools maintain a very fine influence over the youth of the great West, softening and polishing their morals and manners in many ways. To make genuine, ripe Bible scholars, much remains to be done. There should be, in our opinion, a more strict and systematic analysis of the written Word, and then the more advanced classes in each appropriate department should be kept in that particular study until they are familiar with it and can stand a creditable written examination before being advanced to another line of study. When the young gentleman or lady is graduated, they could then sew, as it were, all these parts together, as a seamstress does a beautiful garment. My ideal Sunday School scholar is then ready to read and enjoy the Bible; to talk about it intelligently and lovingly, and prize it more than all books or libraries. As to the best way to start the little folks on the King's Great Highway, we know little or nothing.

Lebanon, Mo. J. L. HOLMAN.

• • •

Where Our Sunday Schools Fall Short

As a friend, student and constant advocate of the Sunday School, I should like to say, if I could, a word to reassure the agitation of mind which seems to have prompted this call for a symposium. Some of the devices which Professor Collins criticises are not much heard of outside of the advertising columns from which he took them, and many of the most earnest Sunday School workers I know would condemn them as heartily as he does. Personally, I feel grateful to him for having given us the benefit of this vigorous and searching challenge. I agree with him that the religious education of American children is a very great task. If this great task is not adequately performed, both spiritual and civil disaster may be looked for. I agree with him that the Sunday School is practically the only institution we have to look to for the popular, continent-wide performance of this task. And, sorry as I am to have to confess it, I agree with him that, compared with the public school, the Sunday School is falling far short of accomplishing this task. He will not get his three-hour Sunday School in any but the most exceptional localities; so let us take up his proposition quietly, and discuss it as a matter of method. Perhaps there is something in it, after all.

E. MORRIS FERGUSSON,
Gen. Sec'y N. J. S. S. Ass'n.
Newark, N. J.

• • •

Sunday School Critics Answered

I have read the article from which you quote in criticism of the Sunday School, and find it abounds in untenable assumptions. The Sunday School at its best to-day is a laymen's service for the conversion and Christian culture of young people, and for an introduction to Bible study rather than the study itself in any large degree. It is impracticable to have the proposed three hours' Bible study service on Sunday, displacing the preaching service for teachers and pupils that they may study in public school fashion the geography of Palestine and the history of Moses and the poetry of Isaiah. There are Sunday Schools which the writer knows that use the same uniform lesson in all grades, with suitable adaptations, and with the teachers trained in a weekly teachers' meeting, where satisfactory results are obtained in the development of intelligent Christian character. This shows that the fault is not in the present methods, but in the working of the methods. What is needed is not to find some new plan for Sunday Schools, but to develop greater fidelity in teachers and greater co-operation in parents and pastors and a rational plan of teaching Christian morality in public schools. What we need in the Sunday School is not new machinery, but more power and skill in using it, with the distinct recognition that it is not mere knowledge that we are working for, but character. The aim of the institution is not merely educational, but evangelistic.

Washington, D. C. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

• • •

Considers the Present System a Failure

For fifty-seven years I had a Sunday School class of my own, wherever I happened to be. I have found, without a single exception, utter ignorance of the lesson prevailed in every class. The lessons of to-day do not seem to be adapted to the young minds. Generally, they do not study. I belong to a "Teacher Training Class," which meets from house to house on Thursday evenings. These books cover a systematic course of Bible lessons, orderly and systematic. In my judgment, after a lifetime of teaching and preaching, this fractional, hop, step and jump method of to-day is a failure. A failure to educate the pupils in the plan of salvation. This is the acknowledgment of all who have grown up under the present system. They say: "I know nothing about the plan of salvation;" "I know nothing about the doctrines of the Word of God." When I was a boy, before the present system, we were taught out of Topical Question Books. The lessons from that little book stick to me yet.

Knoxville, Ill. M. M. COOPER.

• • •

More Time Needed for the Lesson

I was a teacher in our little Sunday School for seven years. Now I am serving the same school (Methodist) the eighth year as its superintendent, therefore have some real practical experience in the work. Let me say, it seems to me the most sublime and far-reaching, as well as proportionately the most neglected, work in this world. Neglected, because in the midst of our activities we but skim the infinite possibilities God has so wondrously planted within the human heart. Seven days in the week to be lived, used, and in the average Sunday School only thirty—thirty poor little moments—can be spared for the teacher (the greatest of all workers, as a class) to teach the children the Way of Life. Yes, there are helps galore, but how many can the average teacher use in thirty minutes? The article in your splendid paper touched a thought in my mind that has been smoldering many years. I believe the time is at hand when some radical reforms should be made in our methods of Sunday School work. It is ridiculous that no more than thirty minutes in a whole week can be spared for the Sunday School training of the child life to be a "temple of the Holy Ghost." There are many children who get absolutely no religious instruction except in the Sunday School. The Sunday School furnishes the greater percentage of the religious instruction for the children in the average community, and comparatively few of the children of the Sunday School attend the church services. I want to suggest as one need of every school that, as it is to teach the pupils the real principles of the Christian religion and life, it must have more time for the sessions of the schools on the Sabbath day. Further, the time thus needed could well and profitably be taken from the regular church services. R. W. WELLER.

Packwood, Ia.

• • •

Restore the Catechism

The lessons, as now taught, are a great improvement, which cannot be denied. The Sunday School, as taught forty or fifty years ago, had the Bible without helps. Children need to be catechized; generally, the catechism is now laid aside. There should be a way to teach the young children by catechizing them directly upon the doctrines of the Christian Church. The Sunday School lessons, as we now have them, are better understood by advanced scholars. It would be better if we could have a system for Sunday School education whereby the scholars could learn weekly a certain number of questions from the catechism, and, in the course of time, know the whole catechism thoroughly. This would undouhtedly lay the foundation for great work in the future. Secondly, I feel that more could he accomplished by studying the Bible straight through, with general explanations, as we now have in the lessons. S. J. CHANNELL.

New Orleans, La.

• • •

Answers have also been received from Mrs. S. G. Baer, Delphos, O.; Jacob Flomerfelt, Peapack, N. J.; Reader, Smithfield, Pa.; Reader, Oswego, N. Y., and others.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

Just fills a real and long-felt want of the tidy housekeeper—a paste stove polish in boxes filled full and always ready-mixed for quick application. A rub on with a wet cloth and a little rub up with a dry one give instantly just what you are looking for—

A Jet-Black, Mirror-Smooth Luster, with No Dust, and practically no labor to speak of.

IT IS THE QUICKEST STOVE POLISH KNOWN.

MORSE BROTHERS, Proprietors, Canton, Mass., U. S. A.

6%

The most attractive investment for Savings or Surplus funds that we know of is our

Certificate of Deposit running for two years or longer, and bearing 6 per cent interest, payable semi-annually.

These certificates are amply secured by first Mortgages deposited in Trust and are issued in amounts of $100.00 or more.

5 per cent is paid on Savings subject to withdrawal at any time without notice.

Write For Booklet

Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

MISSOURI MORTGAGES

Pay better interest because the earnings are higher on the land values. I can recommend the mortgages I sell, because I loan on high-grade farms only and know the borrowers personally. You can increase your income if you invest in these securities. NOTHING SAFER. Quickly convertible or available everywhere as collateral if needed. Write for my list before investing.
M. F. ROBINSON, Prest. Bank, Princeton, Mo.

I-N-S-E-C-T-O-N-O-S

Non-poisonous. Kills Flies, Ants, Roaches, Bed-bugs, Fleas, Cabbage and Currant Worms, Red Spiders, Rose Slugs, Poultry Lice, etc. A complete success; highly endorsed; awarded diploma. Two Sizes—25c. and $1.00, postpaid.
Agents Wanted. Address: Wm. Branson Mfr., Wooster, O.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

$5 SECURES A FLORIDA FARM.

Five-acre farms in suburbs of Jacksonville $75 each; $5 cash, $5 per month. No interest or taxes until paid for. Act quickly. Best of references. The Jacksonville Development Company, Jacksonville, Florida.

EXTRA FINE POST CARDS FREE

Send stamp for three samples of our best Gold and Silk Finish Friendship, Flower and Motto Post Cards; beautiful colors and loveliest designs.
ART POST CARD CLUB, 885 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

PATENT SENSE and PATENTS THAT PROTECT yield our clients enormous profits. Write us for PROOF. Inventors lose millions through worthless patents. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Dept. 36, Washington, D. C. Estab. 1869.

GRADUATE COURSES AT HOME. Terms easy. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa

Our Truly Wonderful Encyclopedia Bargain

"How can I get unbiased, impartial information on subjects such as the tariff, free trade, trade unionism and other up-to-date matters, on which there is so much difference of opinion?"

This is the question asked over and over again by young men and persons whose opportunities for research, or for gleaning knowledge on such subjects from conversations with highly educated men, are limited. To all such inquirers we unhesitating reply:

If you want facts, not inferences and opinions, but unbiased, impartial facts that will enable you to form an opinion for yourself, CONSULT THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA.

Any one who wishes to equip himself intellectually on all subjects of human interest—History, Science, Theology, Botany, Mythology, Travel, Art, Literature, Physiology, Philosophy, Classics, Biography, and a host of other subjects, dating back from the beginning of time down to the present day—cannot do better than to consult this remarkable and exhaustive work. The sum total of Wisdom and Knowledge, each of the Fifteen Large Volumes, comprising the WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, contains more compact wisdom than was ever stored in the brain of the greatest sage on earth.

. . .

We are still filling dozens upon dozens of orders for this Remarkable Work, and those who become the fortunate possessors of it seem fully satisfied that they have made a splendid investment.

The WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, Twelve Massive Volumes, 9,807 Pages, 96 Colored Maps; Silk-finished Cloth Binding, Gold Stamp; Shelf Space required, 9 x 26 inches; Weight 40 lbs.; Price $15 on easy instalments, or $13.50 if paid by cash accompanying order. We do not prepay freight or express charges. Address:

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT., 92 Bible House, New York

A Hospital For Babies

FOR the past three years there has been conducted on Baker Island, Salem Harbor, Mass., a summer hospital for babies, and through its work much good has been accomplished. More than 2,100 sick babies have been treated at the hospital since its establishment, of whom a great proportion have been restored to health and saved from an untimely death through the assistance rendered by skilful physicians, careful feeding and nursing, and God's pure air direct from the ocean.

The Babies' Hospital

The Babies' Summer Hospital Society was an outgrowth of the Peabody (Mass.) Fresh Air Fund, and the Society was incorporated February 28, 1905. Two cottages on Baker Island, five miles down Salem Harbor, were leased for one year. On July 1, 1905, these cottages were opened as a free hospital for day and permanent baby patients; no distinction to be made in color, race or religion. The cool, even temperature of the island made the location particularly suitable for the purpose. The instruction given to mothers of the outpatient department was of much value to them and was appreciated in every way.

The first season's work was hampered by lack of room for sick babies, but the second year, through the generous gift of a lady friend, a portable house, forty feet by twelve, with piazza on three sides, was erected, and the possibilities of the work greatly increased. By the use of this portable house very sick children were separated from those less ill, and the latter were not disturbed by the cries at night of the little sufferers whose sickness prevented them from sleeping. Graduate nurses are in attendance, and there is a resident physician.

With larger and better facilities double the number of patients could be cared for. Of the 738 babies treated last season only three died, and many were very ill when they came, the hospital being recommended as a last resort.

A small ward, isolated from the rest of the hospital, should be erected where suspicious cases could be watched and the nature of the disease decided upon. A portable building complete, like the one used last year, would cost $700. Each crib costs, with plate bearing name of donor, $24. A baby remains till perfectly well; some stay all the season—July and August—some a shorter time, according to the nature of the disease. Three dollars covers the cost of a baby for a week's stay.

George C. Farrington, Peabody, Mass., is secretary and treasurer of the Baker Island Summer Hospital Society.

LITTLE ACTS OF LOVE

A GOOD-BY kiss is a little thing,
With your hand on the door to go,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare
After the toil of the day,
And it slows the furrows plowed by care,
The lines on the forehead you once called fair
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind;
I love you, my dear," each night;
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find—
For Love is tender and Love is blind
As we climb life's rugged height.

We starve each other for love's caress;
We take, but we do not give;
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole the love grudgingly, less and less,
'Till 'tis bitter and hard to leave.

ANDREW LANG.

GAS FACTORIES

In People Who Do not Know How to Select Food and Drink Properly.

On the coffee question a lady says:

"I used to be so miserable after breakfast that I did not know how to get through the day. Life was a burden to me. When I tried to sleep I was miserable by having horrible dreams followed by hours of wakefulness. Gas would rise on my stomach and I would belch almost continually. Then every few weeks I would have a long siege of sick headaches. I tried a list of medicines and physicians without benefit.

"Finally, I concluded to give up my coffee and tea altogether and use Postum. The first cup was a failure. It was wishy-washy and I offered to give the remainder of the package to anyone who would take it.

"I noticed later on in one of the advertisements that Postum should be boiled at least 15 minutes to make it good. I asked the cook how she made it and she said, 'Just the same as I did tea, being careful not to let it steep too long.'

"I read the directions and concluded Postum had not had a fair trial, so we made a new lot and boiled it 15 to 20 minutes. That time it came to the table a different beverage and was so delicious that we have been using it ever since.

"My sick headaches left entirely as did sleepless nights, and I am now a different woman."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

JAP-A-LAC

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

"Big Improvements made in a little way"

"Mamma, Show ME How"

HOW MANY THINGS

in your house which could and ought to be refinished with a beautiful glossy surface that "Wears Like Iron," if you only knew how.

JAP-A-LAC requires neither work nor technical knowledge. A child can apply it, although maturer judgment and good taste in the selection of colors are needed to insure harmony of tones.

JAP-A-LAC is the hardest, most durable and lustrous colored varnish made. Applied according to directions it "sets" hard as adamant with a mirrorlike surface and "Wears Like Iron."

JAP-A-LAC is made in sixteen beautiful colors for refinishing every kind of Woodwork, Bric-a-brac, Chandeliers, Floors, Furniture andevery painted or varnished surface from cellar to garret.

JAP-A-LAC has no substitute.

FOR SALE BY PAINT, HARDWARE AND DRUG DEALERS

If your dealer does not keep JAP-A-LAC, send us his name, with ten cents to cover cost of mailing, and we will send a free sample, quarter pint can of any color (except gold which is twenty-five cents) to any point in the United States.

Write for illustrated booklet containing interesting information and beautiful color card. Free on request.

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO 2506 ROCKEFELLER BUILDING, CLEVELAND, OHIO, U. S. A.

Our Green Label Line of clear varnishes is the highest quality manufactured. Its use insures perfect results. Ask your paint dealer.

GALLOWAY SAVES YOU $50 to $300

SAVE from $50 to $300 by buying your gasoline engine of 2 to 22-horse-power from a real engine factory. Save dealer, jobber and catalogue house profit. No such offer as I make on the class of engine I sell has ever been made before in all Gasoline Engine history. Here is the secret and reason: I turn them out all alike by the thousands in my enormous modern factory, equipped with automatic machinery. I sell them direct to you for less money than some factories can make them at actual shop cost.

All you pay me for is actual raw material, labor and one small profit (and I buy my material in enormous quantities).

Anybody can afford and might just as well have a high grade engine when he can get in on a wholesale deal of this kind. I'm doing something that never was done before. Think of it! A price to you that is lower than dealers and jobbers can buy similar engines for, in carload lots, for spot cash.

An engine that is made so good in the factory that I will send it out anywhere in the U. S. without an expert to any inexperienced users, on 30 days' free trial, to test against any engine made of similar horse-power that sells for twice as much, and let him be the judge. Sell your poorest horse and buy a

5-H.-P. Only $119.50

Get Galloway's Biggest and Best FREE GASOLINE ENGINE BOOK

Write today for my beautiful new 50-page Engine Book in four colors, nothing like it ever printed before, full of valuable information, showing how I make them and how you can make more money with a gasoline engine on the farm. Write me—

Wm. Galloway, Pres., Wm. Galloway Co.
945 Galloway Station, Waterloo, Iowa

We Say A Crooked Spine Can Be Straightened—and We Prove It

The most successful, as well as remarkable method of correcting all spinal troubles is by the use of the great Sheldon Spinal Appliance, endorsed by physicians all over the country. By its use, right in your own home, you may straighten your crooked spine, correct hunch-back and other spinal defects. It relieves pressure at the affected parts of the spine, the cartilege between the vertebræ is made to expand, all soreness is relieved, and the spine is straightened—all without pain or inconvenience.

We Let You Use the Sheldon Appliance 30 Days and guarantee satisfaction or no pay. Every Sheldon Appliance is made to fit each particular case. It does not chafe or irritate and it is not noticeable under the clothing. Plaster and sole leather jackets weigh many pounds, but the Sheldon Appliance weighs only a few ounces. Read our Free Book and of the wonderful results this appliance has brought in every part of the country. Send for the book with full information and proofs of same FREE.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO., 207-5th St., JAMESTOWN, N.Y.

One Page is Worth 25 Cents

After 50 years in dentistry, I have written a book on the teeth. The book itself is invaluable. And the back page, when torn off, will buy you a Sanitary Tooth Brush, which druggists sell for 25c and 35c.

For one thing, this book tells of

Dr. E. L. Graves' Tooth Powder

It tells of the 13 ingredients—the seven antiseptics—and why they are all employed. It tells how I perfected, in the course of a lifetime, the most perfect tooth powder ever created.

But it tells other things, too—scores of things which every soul should know.

Then the back page will secure for you free the tooth brush you all should use. That is to pay you for writing me.

Simply write me a postal, or else send me this coupon. Please do it now.

DR. E. L. GRAVES, Chicago: 10
Send me the book.
Name _____
Address _____

Perfect Fitting Glasses At ½ Price

No matter where you live, you can buy a pair of glasses of us by mail just as satisfactorily as if you visited our fitting parlors and you save the dealer's and oculist's profits, amounting to 50 per cent. We sell at wholesale prices and guarantee satisfaction or money refunded. We take all the risk of pleasing you.

Over 25 years optical experience enables us to fit you accurately at home. Our eye tester, the Ocularscope, patented and used by us exclusively, is the only reliable instrument for testing eyes by mail. Write for illustrated catalog of eye glasses and spectacles. We send it with our Ocularscope—both FREE

Special Offer! If you can use a book of chemically prepared tissue paper for cleaning glasses, we will mail you same FREE for 2-cent stamp. Send To-day.

GRAND RAPIDS WHOLESALE OPTICIANS,
15 Ledyard Bldg., Grand Rapids, Michigan
"Oldest and Largest Mail Order Optical House."

PIANO FRAUDS!

We don't sell pianos. We publish
The Piano and Organ Purchasers' Guide
By John C. Freund, Editor of "The Music Trades." Gives important (unpaid for) facts about all makes of pianos, and player pianos. This saves you from fraud. 266 pages, 12th year. 25 cents by mail, prepaid.
MUSIC TRADES CO., Dept. D, 135 Fifth Ave., N.Y.City

NOT DRUGS
Food did it.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use pre-digested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested immediately from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently relieved of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." "There's a Reason."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Birds and Flowers*

"THE groves were God's first temples," wrote one of the greatest poets; and, truly, it is in the midst of nature and surrounded by its creatures that the reverent soul often comes nearest to divinity. It is easy, then, to understand the strange old faith called Pantheism, in which gods were thought to reside in every bush and flower; or those Oriental religions, in which the smallest form of animal life is revered, because it may contain some transmigrated human soul.

It is said of Bessus, a native of Grecian Pelonia, that he was one day seen by his neighbors to be pulling down some birds' nests, and passionately destroying their young. Being severely reproved by them for his ill-nature and cruelty, he replied that their notes were to him insufferable, as they never ceased twitting him with the murder of his father.

One may wonder why a confessed murderer was at liberty; but the great power of Bessus accounts for it, just as the great power of certain suspected criminals to-day accounts for the fact of their freedom from punishment.

This was that Bessus, satrap of Bactria, who murdered Darius, the last of the great Achæmenian kings. He then assumed the name of Artaxerxes, but is probably not the monarch mentioned in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. It is interesting to know that this man, apparently vain and brutal, had yet a conscience and that it was stirred into activity by the twittering of birds.

Beecher's love of birds was well known. There were many upon his farm, and some one, with that eye to economy which the great preacher did not possess, once suggested that a gun there could in a few minutes provide enough birds for a delicious dinner. To which the indignant owner replied, "Shoot and eat my birds! It is but a step this side of cannibalism. The next step beyond, and one would hanker after Jenny Lind or Miss Kellogg."

The use of dead birds as ornaments has been so widely condemned, and its folly and cruelty so fully shown, that one wonders to see an intelligent woman with a bird upon her hat. Still, such a sight is not infrequent. The use of aigrettes and plumes of birds of paradise is equally reprehensible.

As the mother bird's aigrette is said to be finest when the birds are very young, she is usually killed during nesting-time. The little ones soon die.

This course must lead eventually to the extinction of the species, to say nothing of the suffering of the birdlings; but what do the votaries of fashion care for that? One of them is said to have remarked, "I can't get excited over the suffering of wild animals. They were born to suffer. And as for the extinction of that kind of bird, why, when aigrettes are no longer to be had, we shall simply wear something else." Thus fashion often hardens and coarsens the nature.

Let us escape whenever we can from the crowd, and from the pressure of worldly cares, into the great out-of-doors, where the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Through his works we may enter more fully into his being and purposes; and under the open sky, as one great poet-philosopher has sung, care and mortification drop away from us and we seem to realize somewhat our great destiny, as the sons of God, made in his image.

Oh, when I am safe in my sylvan home,
I tread on the pride of Greece and Rome;
And when I am stretched beneath the pines,
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the lore and pride of man,
At the sophist schools and the learned clan;
For what are they all in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?

* Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society for Sunday, May 23. TEXT: Luke 12: 24-28.

Forsaking Our Lord*

THE causes of backsliding are almost as many as the backsliders, and each cause is usually made up of many parts. The motives which control our actions are deep and complicated. We may think that we understand them, but Matthew Arnold truly wrote:

Beneath the stream, shallow and light, of what we say we feel;
Beneath the stream, as light, of what we think we feel;
There flows, with noiseless current, strong, obscure and deep,
The central stream of what we feel indeed.

One of the most, perhaps the most, powerful influence among the many which are constantly working to divorce the Christian from his Lord is association.

A homely old proverb says, "Birds of a feather flock together." In the case of men, it is also true that flocking together tends to make men of one feather. If one is thrown constantly into the society of certain persons, it is almost impossible to avoid becoming like them. The young are, perhaps, especially prone to doubt this great truth. They often declare that they "have their own opinions, and they defy others to change them."

Poor fools! None of us are exempt from this subtle and puissant influence, and our Lord recognized this helplessness when he introduced into his model prayer the clause, "Lead us not into temptation."

Dr. Melville, a great English preacher, reminds us that the forsaking of the Lord is usually done slowly, not all at once. He says, We warn you against little concessions, little acquiescences, little indulgences, little conformities. If vital religion be driven out of the soul, it will be as the Canaanites were driven out before the Israelites, 'by little and little.'"

"Judas," says F. W. Robertson, "was a predestined man—crushed by his fate. From a ministry and apostleship he fell, that he might go to his own place. But he went to his own place. He had shaped his own destiny. Failure—the wreck of a life—is not to be impiously traced to the will of God. God willeth not the death of a sinner."

It is by our own volition that we, having once tasted God's forgiveness, turn about and go down to eternal night.

Dr. Nicholson tells of a certain poor Sabat, an Arabian, who had professed faith in Christ under the preaching of the saintly Henry Martyn. Later, he had gone over to Mohammedanism, and the Rev. Dr. Milne, the distinguished missionary to the East Indies, met him and asked him many questions, reproaching him with his backsliding. The poor fellow broke down utterly, and cried out, "I am unhappy! I have a mountain of burning sand on my head. When I go about, I know not what I am doing." It is, indeed, "an evil thing and a bitter to forsake the Lord our God."

Marriage with an unbeliever is a fruitful source of backsliding. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," said the apostle, thus indicating that from the earliest days of Christianity this danger was perceived. No doubt some painful experience in the Corinthian Church had occasioned the command. Probably more than one had occurred, or else Paul would not have been so vehement. Scarcely any stronger expressions can be found in his writings than those upon this subject. "What communion hath light with darkness?" he thunders. "Come out from among them and be ye separate." One who contemplates transgressing this law should fortify himself with much prayer and should put on the whole armor of God.

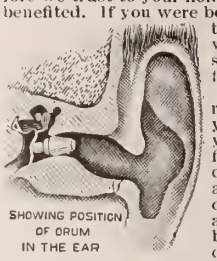
*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, May 23. TEXT: John 6: 66-71.

ARE YOU DEAF?

So Great Has Been the Success of the Way Ear Drums and We Have Such Unbounded Confidence in Them That in Order to Absolutely Convince You That Your Deafness Can be Relieved We Will Send You a Pair

FREE ON APPROVAL

This offer means just what it says. Way Ear Drums help 90 out of every 100 deaf people. Therefore we trust to your honesty to pay us if you are benefited. If you were born deaf or have become totally deaf, our drums won't help you any. You see we are perfectly frank with you.



Remember, you take no risk—you sign nothing—you pay nothing until you yourself are satisfied. All we ask you to do is this. Just write us a letter telling us the cause of your deafness and how long you have been deaf. Wear the drums for ten days, and if your hearing is benefited send us the money for them; if not, return them. That's fair, isn't it? We take your word for it and you don't pay a cent until you have tried them for ten days and are satisfied they will help you.

We know they will; that's why we can make this offer. Write to-day—don't send any money—we even pay postage. Be sure and address your letter

The Way Ear Drum Co., 406 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Sole proprietors of the original Way Ear Drum which relieved the inventor of deafness after 25 years of almost complete silence.

You Save From $5 to $20

DIRECT from FACTORY at Wholesale Prices Freight Paid

We guarantee safe delivery, all polished and ready for your home. Furthermore, after A Whole Year's Trial if not satisfactory you may send it back and we will refund all your money. This is our standing offer, warranted by nearly 60 years in making

GOLD COIN STOVES AND RANGES

This is an unusual opportunity to get a High Grade stove at a low price. Send to-day for Our Illustrated Catalogue of ranges and stoves. A postal will do.

GOLD COIN STOVE CO., 11 Oak St., Troy, N.Y.
(Successor to Bussey & McLeod—Established 1860)

YOU CAN AFFORD AN IRON FENCE

Costs less than wood; lasts life-time. In price, style, beauty, quality, our Iron Fence leads the world. Before buying elsewhere get our "Free Illustrated Catalogue," over 200 designs. Agents wanted everywhere. Big demand. Big seller.

The American FENCE IRON Wks. Co., Dept. B, Cinti, O.

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

IT ONLY COSTS one cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1909 model bicycles.

FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Art Catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.

RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We Sell cheaper than any other factory. Tires, Coaster-Brakes, single wheels, parts, repairs and sundries at half usual prices. Do Not Wait; write today for our special offer.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. T-71, CHICAGO

ORNAMENTAL WIRE AND STEEL FENCE

Cheaper than wood, combining strength and art. For lawns, churches, cemeteries. Send for FREE CATALOG. Address. The Ward Fence Co. Box 698 Decatur, Ind.

NEWTON'S Heave, Cough, Distemper and Indigestion Remedy. A veterinary Remedy for wind, throat and stomach troubles. $1.00 per can, of dealers, or express prepaid. Send for booklet.

The Newton Remedy Co.
Toledo, Ohio

FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

JUST OUT Low-priced, 3-lb. Mop; turn crank to wring; hands keep clean. Women all buy; 150 per cent. to Agents; exclusive territory given; catalog free.

U. S. MOP CO., 559 Main St., Leipsic, O.

THE COUNCIL AT JERUSALEM

By Mrs. M. Baxter

IN the early Church, as at the present day, there were disciples whose presence created only trouble. God permitted them, and worked out through this trial his own purposes of good. Such were certain men who came down to Antioch from Judea, teaching, "Except ye be circumcised after the custom of Moses, ye cannot be saved." How many a blessed work of God has been checked and hindered by teachers who, without waiting for the leading of the Spirit, wanted to set everybody right on questions of infant or of adult baptism, predestination or man's free will, questions as to the time of the taking away of the Church—anything and everything of an external nature! All such questions have a tendency to divide, while the deeper truths of God, which appeal to his Spirit within us, unite in closest oneness all the true children of God.

There were in the Church some who were really much more Jews than followers of Jesus, and they could not conceive how anybody could be saved who was not saved as a good Jew. But Christ himself had said to the Samaritan woman (John 4:22), "Salvation is of the Jews." And God had intended the Jews to be the people through whom all nations should be blest, so that these Jews had Scriptural ground for their assertion.

The Council at Jerusalem began by "much disputing," but they made no headway; the arguments of man with man cannot, in the nature of things, bring about a solution of what really can only be learned from on high. "A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven" (John 3:27). While those who were young in their apprehension of Divine things went on talking, some who knew the way of God more perfectly went on praying. Peter was one of these, and, when God's time was come, he rose up and said: "Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the Gospel, and believe. And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." This was a word of authority straight from heaven; it was no longer a question between man and man.

The disputation ceased; silence fell on the assembly. Then Barnabas and Paul, led of the Spirit, told out, to the honor of God, what his work had been among the Gentiles, thus confirming the words of Peter. James, who presided, spoke words which gave the clue to the situation, making a declaration which is the key to the purpose of God in this age in which we live. "Men and brethren," he said, "hearken unto me. Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name." He then alluded to the prophecy of Amos 9:11, 12, and asserted God's foreknowledge, and, in conclusion, said: "Wherefore, my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God; but that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood." Thus the Gentile Christians were not to become Jews, nor the Jews Gentiles. The Jews had been called as a nation, to be unto God, "for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory"; but they would not hear (Jer. 13:11). Now God would not deal with nations as such, but would take out of the nations a people for his name.

Little Chats With Our Junior Agents

ACCORDING to reports that reach us, a great part of the country has succumbed to the craze for ROLLER SKATING. Has the fad reached your particular town? If so, we strongly advise you to read over the description of Reward No. 8, in our Special Premium Booklet—the famous WINSLOW ROLLER SKATES. You can never make a star skater without good skates, you know, and you can easily win these, the best on the market, for selling 80 copies. (Express extra.)

* * *

Another thing! Vacation days are almost here, when a camera becomes indispensable to all boys and girls who have ever known the joy of taking snapshots. A good camera with you practically doubles the pleasure of going fishing, or off on a picnic or outing of any kind; indeed, a good camera and a good dog are two things that the longer you have the better you love. Doubtless you have the dog, but we can give you a first-class PREMO JUNIOR CAMERA, and if you make up your mind to secure one it will mean a lot more fun for you this summer. (See Premium No. 3.)

Norman Buckingham
Wilkesbarre, Pa.

With the picture of Norman Buckingham came a letter saying, in part: "I began with 10 customers, but now have 26, with the prospect of more in the near future, and so far have had little trouble in selling your paper. As a rule, when a person buys one copy of The Christian Herald he or she is ready for another by the time I get around again; all seem delighted with it. I am much pleased with the Printing Press, and think it an excellent premium for selling so few copies."

Christian Herald Junior Department
92 Bible House, New York City

CALLED HIGHER

Ira W. Kingsland, of Bridport, Vt., was called home January 21, at the age of seventy-two. He was a sincere Christian.

Mrs. T. M. Schurk, of Omaha, Neb., was called home the 6th of February. She was born March 3, 1847, and lived a life of service, which endeared her to many.

Mrs. Elizabeth Williamson, of Lincoln, Neb., has been called higher. She had long been a reader of The Christian Herald and interested in all Christian work.

Mrs. Sarah H. Hazen, of Haverhill, Mass., entered into rest April 1, 1908. Hers was a beautiful Christian life. She loved The Christian Herald next to her Bible.

Mrs. Agnes Way died at Oyster Bay, L. I., January 4, in the sixty-ninth year of her age. She was a true Christian and a worker in the church for many years. She had taken The Christian Herald for seventeen years.

Mrs. Annette M. Swigert, of Lexington, Ky., passed away a few weeks ago. She was an earnest Christian woman, and had been a reader of this paper for thirty years.

Deacon James Temple, of the Baptist Church of Woodville, Mass., died March 15, aged seventy-nine. For forty-two years he had been an active church worker and superintendent of a Sunday School.

Mrs. Morton, of Carluke, Ontario, Canada, has passed to her reward, having departed this life on September 5, 1908, aged forty-nine years. She had been a reader of The Christian Herald for twenty-five years, and a frequent contributor to its charities.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 422, and write them for full information.

ACME QUALITY

Paints and Finishes
for Spring Housecleaning

Spring is here. Now is the time to banish winter's dust and dirt, to repaint the floors, to refinish the woodwork, to brighten up the furniture, to redecorate your walls, to enamel the bathroom.

Acme Quality Paints and Finishes, in convenient forms for ready use and easy application, make painting and finishing a logical part of the housecleaning scheme, and impart the finishing touches that make attractive and inviting homes.

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

Acme Quality Enamel (Neal's)
Gives that smooth, beautiful, sanitary enamel surface so easy to keep bright and clean. In white or dainty tints.

Acme Quality Kalsomine
For walls and ceilings. Mixes with either hot or cold water. Flows freely, covers with one coat and does not show laps.

Acme Quality Porch Furniture Enamel
For finishing porch and lawn chairs, settees, swings, flower stands, railings, etc. Imparts a tough, durable finish and prevents rust and decay.

For example, a treasured old chair or other piece of furniture that is badly marred and scratched can be made as good as new. Simply refinish it with Acme Quality Varno-Lac—a stain and varnish combined that imparts the elegant effect and durable, lustrous surface of beautifully finished oak, mahogany or other expensive woods.

Acme Quality Text Book

The Acme Quality Text Book tells just how to get best results. It is an encyclopedia of paints and finishes, covering every phase of home painting. Tells what to use and how to use it. Free to any address on request.

ACME WHITE LEAD AND COLOR WORKS
Dept. O, Detroit, Mich.

IN DETROIT—Life is Worth Living

Elkhart Buggies

are the best made, best grade and easiest riding buggies on earth for the money.

FOR THIRTY-SIX YEARS
we have been selling direct and are
The Largest Manufacturers in the World selling to the consumer exclusively.

We ship for examination and approval, guaranteeing safe delivery, and also to save you money. If you are not satisfied as to style, quality and price you are nothing out.

May We Send You Our Large Catalogue?

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co.
Elkhart, - - - - Indiana

Price
$56.00
With Twin Auto Seat

OLD-MADE NEW

Old sewing machines run like new—new ones STAY new if oiled with 3-IN-ONE. It's the best sewing machine oil on earth—goes right into the mechanism—spreads evenly over all bearings—reduces friction—prevents wear—stops rattle—will not dry out, cake, gum or collect dust, contains no grease or acid—polishes wooden case and prevents rust on every metal part. 3-IN-ONE will save your machine, your nerves and your strength. Try it.

FREE Write us at once. Give name of your dealer. Get sample bottle and 3-IN-ONE dictionary FREE. A Library Slip in every package.

3-IN-ONE OIL COMPANY
54 Broadway New York City

FREE!

Two Sacred Resurrection Plants
(THE ROSE OF JERICHO.)

These rare and curious plants grow and stay green by placing them in water. When taken out of water they dry and curl up and go to sleep. They will keep in this state for years. Simply place the whole plant into water; it will open up and start to grow in about twenty minutes. We will send Farm News, the biggest little paper in the world for the farm home, on trial 3 months for 6 cents. Send 4 cents to prepay postage and expense on the plants, and 6 cents for trial subscription to Farm News, only 10 cents in all. Either offer separately if desired.

FARM NEWS. 19 Washington St., Springfield, Ohio

LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries.
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind

LAWN FENCE
Many Styles. Sold on trial at wholesale prices. Save 20 to 30 per cent. Illustrated Catalogue free. Write today.
KITSELMAN BROS.
Box 302 Muncie, Indiana,

FAIRBANK'S
SOAP WINNERS

Gold Dust

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene with Gold Dust.

Gold Dust has all desirable cleansing qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form.

The Gold Dust Twins need no outside help.

Gold Dust lathers instantly in hot or cold, hard or soft water--converts itself instantly into thick, vigorous suds that remove grease, grime and settled stains and clear out germs and impurities. It leaves only cleanliness and wholesomeness in their wake.

For washing dishes, scrubbing floors cleaning woodwork, oil cloth, silverware and tinware, polishing brasswork, cleaning bathroom pipes, refrigerators, etc., softening hard water, washing clothes, and making the finest soft soap.

"Let the Gold Dust Twins do your work"

Fairy Soap

Avoid dyed soaps. Fairy Soap does not masquerade under false colors. It's an honest soap of snowy whiteness; it looks just what it is—the best piece of white soap possible to make.

The handy oval cake is another distinct advantage which Fairy has over all other white soaps. Moreover, Fairy Soap is white to stay white; it does not turn yellow with age.

The price of Fairy Soap is but 5c—you can pay more but you cannot get more.

Fairy Soap was granted the highest possible awards at both St. Louis and Portland Expositions.

"Have you a Little 'Fairy' in your home?"

Sunny Monday
Laundry Soap

This product is an innovation among Laundry soaps. It is pure, white, and made from choice tallow and vegetable oils; it contains not an ounce of rosin, the chief ingredient used in all yellow Laundry soaps. It will double the life of your clothes, because it saves all the hard rubbing, and contains no adulterant, rosin or other, to eat the threads and shorten the life of your fabrics.

No matter whether the water is boiling hot or "stone cold," hard or soft, Sunny Monday *(N. R.) lathers instantly, cleanses quickly and does its work most thoroughly.

Sunny Monday Soap *(N. R.) will wash flannels, woolens and the finest fabrics without shrinking or fading the colors.

*(N. R.) Means "no rosin." SUNNY MONDAY Laundry Soap contains no rosin. Rosin cheapens soap, but injures clothes.

"Sunny Monday Bubbles will wash away your troubles"

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, Makers, Chicago.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, May 19, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 20. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

See Page 435

1609 — HUDSON AND HIS SHIP THE "HALF MOON" — 1909

COLUMBIA

Columbia Double-Disc Records, 65c

Fit Any Disc Machine and Double Its Value

To owners of disc machines, of every make—Columbia and others: We guarantee you a better record on each side of the Columbia Double-Disc Record than you ever bought before under any name at any price—better in surface, tone and durability. Be sure you see a Columbia dealer, hear the records played and get a catalog.

If your dealer does not carry Columbia Double-Disc Records, we will send you a sample, postage paid, for 65 cents, and a catalog with it.

Columbia Records

Columbia Indestructible Records, 35c

Fit Any Cylinder Machine and Last Forever

To owners of Cylinder machines of every make—Columbia and others: Columbia Indestructible Cylinder Records won't break, no matter how roughly they are used; they won't wear out, no matter how long they are played. Moreover their tone is far purer, clearer and more brilliant than that of any other cylinder record made.

If your dealer does not carry Columbia Indestructible Cylinder Records, send us 35 cents and we will send you a sample by return mail, postage prepaid—with a catalog.

Columbia Records

Columbia Disc and Cylinder Graphophones

No one thing will give so much pleasure, to so many people, for so long a time, at so little cost, as a Columbia Graphophone—$20 to $200. Catalog free.

COLUMBIA PHONOGRAPH COMPANY, GENERAL
Dept. X5, Tribune Building, New York

BRANCHES:
New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Washington, London.
HEADQUARTERS FOR CANADA: 40 Melinda St., Toronto, Ont.
Dealers in all principal cities

Dealers Wanted—Exclusive selling rights given where we are not properly represented.

RECORDS

NEW YORK, MAY 19, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

The Growing City of San Juan

Mr. G. F. Tibbitts, Secretary for West Indies

The American Saloon, at the Cross Roads

THE GOSPEL INVASION OF PORTO RICO

MANY people in the United States are watching with keen interest the progress of the Young Men's Christian Association work now being extended to the West India Islands. It gives promise of becoming a mighty force for good among the young men and boys of the islands.

Last June the committee extended a call to Mr. George F. Tibbitts, who for eight years has been the interstate secretary for Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, to become secretary for the West Indies. Mr. Tibbitts began his Association work in 1889, associated with Mr. Robert R. McBurney and James McConaughy, of the Twenty-third Street Association in New York. For four years he had charge of the work at Richmond, Va., and six years at Cincinnati, O. Mr. Tibbitts made a visit to Porto Rico, after which he accepted the position and began active work March 1. Mr. Cameron Beck, who has been associated with Mr. Tibbitts for fourteen years, has been appointed associate secretary for Porto Rico and Mr. Charles H. Nuttle associate secretary for Cuba. Mr. Edwin S. Mowbray, office secretary for the interstate work for three years, has charge of the general offices for the West Indies, which will be located at San Juan, Porto Rico.

As soon as the people of Porto Rico are instructed as to the work of the Association, branches will be established in cities and communities wherever a group of men can be found who will be responsible for the organization. These local committees will be encouraged to organize first without buildings and equipment, starting educational classes, practical and medical talks, stereopticon addresses, Bible classes and Gospel meetings for men and boys. Modern association buildings will be organized in all the principal cities.

Mr. Tibbitts and Mr. Beck visited Havana, Cuba, last October, at which time a mass-meeting was held for men only at the Payret Theatre. Three thousand men assembled, hundreds of whom had never attended such a service before, and many hastened to the platform at the close to express their willingness to co-operate in extending the organization. Hon. Charles E. Magoon, then Governor of Cuba, was present, and Dr. Julio de Cardenas, Mayor of Havana, presided and made a short address. The treasurer of the republic, Hon. Fernando Figueredo, was also present and took an active part in the conferences and Association gatherings.

President Taft has expressed his cordial interest in the movement. "I am glad to read of the progress of the work which you have done in Cuba in behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association," he writes, "and am thankful to know that you are going to extend this work throughout the West Indies, and hope you will meet with much success." Hon. Beekman Winthrop, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and ex-Governor of Porto Rico, writes: "I am delighted to hear that the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association is planning an aggressive campaign for the West Indies. A practical work among the young men and boys, such as you describe to me, will be of very great value. Owing to the fact that I served as Governor of Porto Rico for three years, I am naturally especially interested in that island and I feel that the young men and boys of Porto Rico will be prompt to take advantage of the privileges and opportunities offered by the Association."

The First Trolley in San Juan

Major-General George W. Davis, who was the first military Governor of Porto Rico, has emphasized the importance of this work in these words: "It was my privilege to serve as military Governor of Porto Rico for a year and to continue in command of the troops for nearly a year thereafter. I can appreciate the great good that will be accomplished by the Young Men's Christian Association, as it works among the 300,000 young men and boys of that island. The different departments will appeal to all classes of young men, as this is the only organization that offers all the advantages they need and desire. The people of the United States should be deeply interested in this timely and practical work, which will result, if properly maintained and extended, in developing the young men and boys of that beautiful island into all-around manhood."

Missionaries from all parts of the West Indies have expressed themselves as delighted with the outlook for such a movement among the young men and boys. Rev. A. B. Rudd, D.D., of Ponce, Porto Rico, says in his letter: "The kind of work done by the Y. M. C. A. will, I believe, appeal to the youth of Porto Rico and ought to be a valuable factor in the future evangelization of the island. The young men of the island need all the help they can get along moral and religious lines. The temptations which beset young men in this country are greater even than in the home land, and I am persuaded that the Y. M. C. A. work would appeal to them and save many of them from an evil life."

A young business man, Luis Berenguer, of Santiago de Cuba, writes as follows: "A number of weeks ago, soon after receiving your letter, while I was walking in the park one evening two young men of the best families in the city, who had received their education in the States, came to me saying, 'What can be done to establish a Y. M. C. A here? We need it badly, and we are willing to do anything in our power to push it if somebody starts it. We knew you would be interested, so we come to you for information in the matter.' These words, coming at such a time and from those who knew nothing of your plans, thrilled me, for I realized God's Spirit was behind it all."

The need of this work, and the great opportunity which lies within easy reach, compels us to ask the question, Why have we not seen the vision before? God is waiting to bless thousands of young men and

Continued on page 433

THE

American Pulpit

A Sermon by

Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D.*

"DONE FOR A KING"

TEXT: Ps. 45: 1—"My heart overfloweth with a goodly matter; I speak the things which I have made touching the king."

CONSECRATION to a great art, or to an enthralling science, or to an inspiring piece of work is a strange and beautiful thing. Our hearts leap up as we read the records of the world's great workers. We think of the great violinist practising fourteen hours a day for thirty years of human life, and of the champion billiard player repeating one single stroke hundreds of times every morning for six long months; of Darwin experimenting with his miserable earthworms, watching, comparing, noting, for forty years, and planning his life throughout that period with faith in himself, in the future and in his work. We think of Buffon, racked by physical pain, thinking hard for fifty years and writing the whole of his Epochs of Nature eleven separate times; of George Stephenson toiling over his models of a locomotive for fifteen years, and Watt working at his engine for thirty. From the fascinating life-stories of Pallisy the potter, or Benvenuto Cellini, we turn to the not less fascinating work of Mr. Edison or Signor Marconi, and the record of heroic toil is overwhelming. We take up one of those admirable books of Samuel Smiles, Self Help, or Character, or The Lives of the Engineers, books that are well worth reading still, with their old-fashioned gospel of industry, self-denial and honest thrift, and we who are of the ordinary and indifferent type positively stagger before the accumulated instances of persistent labor with which its pages are charged.

A Royal Marriage Song

Only a mighty enthusiasm is capable of such things as these. We marvel that the frail body has borne so much; but the frail body cannot hide, cannot even disguise, the indomitable, fiery spirit whose passions supply the driving power for a machine apparently so unequal to its Titanic tasks. Our Psalmist here finds himself possessed by such an ardent passion. He is to compose the marriage song of his prince. True poet, even though a court poet, his soul burns within him at the thought of the greatness of his theme. His heart is seething—that is the meaning of the word translated "overfloweth," bubbling up and bubbling over—with his purpose, so he says. And he braces himself for heroic flights of the spirit and deathless strains of poetry in the rather lumbering version of the text as I have read it to you, "I speak the things which I have made touching the king;" but far better in the reading of the margin, "I speak: my work is for a king!" and better still, if you will allow me to substitute a reading of my own, which I assure you the text will bear: "The work that I do, I do for a king!"

The older methods of interpretation would compel us to look from the historic circumstance, away from the actual occasion and the human prince. We should be driven to relate this to the Messianic King and find that the Psalmist sang prophetically, predictively, a song of the Christ-King of men. We have nothing to do with this except to acknowledge that when all is said and done our real business in life is to relate the songs we sing, the work we do, the sacrifices we make, the burdens we bear, and the life which we pour out in service to the coming of our King and to Messiah's reign. This is not poetry.

Motive and Inspiration

This is plain prose. This is not a romantic and fantastic interpretation which could make anything mean anything. It is the practical and immediate appropriation of a mighty impulse making drudgery divine. Think of it, men and women, when you are weary and the burden is too heavy for you to bear. Think of it when the heart is sick and all the wheels of being slow. Think of it when evil seems to be possessed of a myriad forms, each one repeating in itself all the ancestral virulence, and each dowered with a Satanic power of reincarnating itself in new and subtler forces. Think of it, then. Think that your work, your life, your unselfishness, and every kind word, happy smile and generous deed of yours is helping to bring the consummation of the ages in Christ's eternal reign.

We need such a motive. There are many who shrink from the monotony of church work, its drudgery and its thanklessness. There is little of the grand and new in it, nothing to excite, and they feel a painful lack of bigness in it. They miss the quick stimulus of many other forms of social service, the joy of conflict and a wide outlook upon life. They have never felt the thrill of our poet's passion. They have not properly understood how that "the work we do, we do for a king!"

The task to which the Church is supremely called is to win the world for Christ. But the world is not to be won by crowds. The individual must be approached, the individual heart touched, the individual soul saved. The problem of the Church is the problem of the big cities. If cities cannot be won for Christ the world cannot be evangelized, and God's plans of human redemption are for the time, and as far as our vision goes, thwarted. If this city of New York can be won, then there is not a city on God's earth which is lost. We are set here in the breach, in the forefront of the battle, and on our fidelity, wisdom, insight, courage, self-sacrifice depend more things in earth and heaven than are dreamt of in the philosophy of the narrow-minded and faint-hearted. Yet, I repeat, men and women and children are not to be saved in crowds. One by one, in church and school, in mission chapel, and in the streets where the teeming millions are, the work has to be done. So that when you are asked, "Will you take a class in our mission Sunday school? Will you help on this committee? Will you take a little trouble, give a little time, carry some trifling burden of obligation for the poor, the weak and the sinful?" you are really asked, "Will you do your share or even a part of it in winning New York for Christ, in winning the nation and the nations of the earth for him?" "The work that you do, you do for a king!" You do it for the world-wide, age-long triumph of the crucified and risen Lord of Glory.

No Good Deed Ever Lost

Good work well done will be its own reward, will bring sweetness and satisfaction which can be won in no other way in this world. But we need not deceive ourselves. There will be much besides sweetness and satisfaction. There will be bitterness and pain. There will be much to bear. "A man's foes are those of his own household," and we are never wounded as we are wounded in the house of our friends. None suffer as keenly as they who suffer as Christ did and for his sake. If you will lay your hand upon some ark of privilege, the keepers of the ark in the good old way will begin to gather stones. If you fight with wild beasts at Ephesus, or in New York; if you make war, that is to say, on vice and shame and crime, then the beastly-minded people who find their profit in the perpetuation of vice and crime and shame will act after their kind. They will make you feel their teeth and nails and claws. "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for so persecuted they the prophets who were before you." "Ye also shall have tribulation, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy."

It is here that I would have you believe that not a sigh, not a tear, not a heart-throb is lost. There is not a word spoken in love, not an hour's work done in weakness and weariness, not an effort made in loneliness and obscurity, when the head has ached, and the heart ached, too, which has not added its tiny, trickling rill of holy influence to those mighty flowing streams of eternal righteousness which shall yet cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. A man cannot throw his vote away who votes for a righteous cause.

Christly Encouragement

This is why Jesus said: "Fear not, little flock; it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom;" and why in his spirit Paul was persuaded that "the creation itself would be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty and the glory of the children of God"; and John saw "a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

The truth is that we are often appalled by the vastness of the work which has to be done, and for that very reason we shrink from making an attempt. "Nothing so difficult as a beginning," Byron wrote when he sat down to commence the work with which his name is always associated. And it is true of many things beside writing poetry. There is nobody here who does not know all about it. You understand it perfectly because you have felt it. In the home or in the business you have been confronted by a piece of work so stupendous that the only way of getting it done was—to sit down before it with your arms folded and do nothing! Then you were propelled by outer necessity or goaded into activity by your own self-respect, and you made the attempt—with results. Something of this fear settles down upon us as we come back to a serious contemplation of the work which the Lord has given us to do in New York City. Great hopes rise before us, great plans—unformed, half formed, mere possibilities; some, definite purposes; some—jostle one another in our minds. In our hearts, as in that of Hamlet, is a kind of fighting which will not let us rest. We have to develop a church life which shall represent to the world the mind of Christ for our generation.

A Gospel for To-day

We have to reinterpret the Gospel of the ages in the language of to-day. We have to call a halt in the mad race of fashion, materialism and self-indulgence. We have to bring back the mind of our generation to a knowledge of the Bible and its heart to a love of the Bible. We have to fill the Church of the living God with a sense of the reality and power of prayer. We have to foster institutions which shall safeguard the future of the Church by safeguarding its dawning manhood and womanhood. We have to preach a Gospel limited by no consideration of our day and sect, never crude, partial, nor confined, a Gospel as wide as the love of God. And looked at in bulk, it all seems too great for us. Our efforts are pitiful in their smallness. They are so small as to seem utterly irrelevant. Who is sufficient for these things? Not we! Not we!

So Moses felt when God spoke to him out of the burning bush. He felt himself to be a man slow of speech and futile in expedient; so Aaron was appointed to help him and to be spokesman for him. But Aaron was not Moses. The "artistic temperament" made shipwreck of the leader. The crowd did as it liked with Aaron. There was disaffection, mutiny, apostasy, sin. Nothing but disaster resulted from the shrinking of spirit to which Moses succumbed. Isaiah felt the same thing. He believed himself to be a man of corrupt imagining. He knew himself a man of unclean lips. But he made the effort. And age by age, not Israel only, but all the world, has known the impulse of a mightier faith as it has felt the impact of his glowing spirit and sung its soul out to God in his deathless singing.

The Mighty Power of Prayer and Work

If the only objection to a course of action is that it is impossible, nothing remains but to start and do it. It is in this spirit that General Booth has given his life to the service of the poor, and compelled the admiration of cynical rulers and of hostile mobs. Possessed by this spirit, Dr. Bernardo, and George Muller and Dwight L. Moody prayed mountains of difficulty out of their path and cast them into the depths of the sea. In this spirit Jerry McAuley changed oaths and curses into songs of rejoicing. By the energy of this same spirit Josephine Butler, like her own St. Marguerite, set her foot upon the dragon's neck, and Florence Nightingale loosed the pent-up seas of woman's pity for the blessing of the world. In this spirit John Wesley brought the heathen of England to sit at the feet of Jesus; Raikes, and Pounds, and Joseph Lankaster opened the eyes of the blind; while Garrison and Whittier, Wendell Phillips, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and a host of whom the world was not worthy, declared liberty to the captives and proclaimed the acceptable year of the Lord. In this spirit men of our own time have set themselves to impose a higher standard of commercial morality upon this country, to sweep away the corruptions of municipal government which have made our cities a byword in the earth, to break down the convict lease system in the South, to deliver the children of the nation from hideous conditions of labor in the tenement districts of New York, in the coal fields and the great manufacturing cities of the land. Controlled, dominated, enflamed by this sacred passion man or woman may assert, in Paul's tremendous rhetoric: "I can do all things through Christ, that strengtheneth me."

* Pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York City.

FEVER AND FAMINE FOLLOW MASSACRE

DETAILS of the massacres in Asiatic Turkey, received by cable from the missionaries, show that the earlier dispatches did not disclose half of the terrible story. These atrocities will rank as among the very worst in the world's history. Cities, towns and villages were put to fire and sword by the fanatical Moslem mobs, and men, women and children ruthlessly butchered. The towns and villages in the province of Adana are veritable shambles, filled with dead and dying, and the fiendish work, at last accounts, was still going on. In the province 23,000 Christians are reported to have perished, chiefly Armenians; in Tarsus and vicinity, 10,000 to 15,000, and in the villages near Beirut many more thousands are said to have been killed. Kessab is partially destroyed and 6,000 refugees from that place are being cared for at Latakia. Alexandretta is crowded with refugees, and many have fled to Mersina, where they have found shelter in the consulates and on the foreign warships. In Tarsus a complete sweep was made of the Armenian quarter; 4,000 refugees are housed in St. Paul's Institute, the American mission. As far as known, only two missionaries have fallen victims of the rioters, Messrs. Daniel Miner Rogers and Henry Maurer, whose deaths have already been reported in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Some of the reports brought by the cable reveal a diabolical cruelty that recalls the terrible scenes during the great massacres of 1896. Not even women and babes were spared by the bloodthirsty fanatics. One report of the carnage at Tarsus says:

"Armenian men and women were stood up in rows, or one by one, and shot down to the applause of the Moslem multitude. Vast numbers are homeless and threatened with famine, if they escape the sword. Only young Christian girls are spared, and they are being bartered as if they were a new sort of currency. Children, snatched from the breasts of murdered parents, are being traded by their captors for arms and ammunition; and girls are sold into harems and rendered victims to even grosser horrors. The dead in the city of Adana lie in heaps, and in the Sihun River, flowing down to the Mediterranean, the bodies of women and children float thickly on the waves.

"In many cases sons and husbands are slain before the eyes of wives and mothers, and babies torn from the breasts of mothers and put to the sword. Wherever the mobs come upon families sleeping in their homes, the torch is applied, and those who would escape the flames are shot down."

Although martial law has been proclaimed in the affected districts, it exists in name only. The authorities are making no real effort to check the massacres. There would seem to be little doubt that the fanatical rising and subsequent bloodshed were deliberately planned in Constantinople, and the deposed Sultan is openly charged with the responsibility for the terrible slaughter.

Outside of Adana and Tarsus, the towns and villages that suffered most were Hadjin, Osmanieh, Bazsche, Hamadieh, Kara, Kristian, Keoy, Kuzolook and Deurtyul. In one place, near Tarsus, 100 Armenians, who had surrendered, were shot in an open field, their wives frantically clinging to them in the vain hope of saving them. Many of the women were wounded. Turks around Tarsus are reported to have been trading young Armenian women for horses and rifles. Hundreds of girls were carried off to harems or sent to the Turkish slave markets.

Missionaries and Native Pastors of Adana Province

Some of the latter have undoubtedly been victims of the recent massacres.

Twenty-two Armenian priests, who were traveling from Marash to Adana, were butchered to the last man, in a church where they had taken refuge. The church was then burned. In many places entire families were burned to death in their homes. Greeks, Syrians and Armenians were treated alike; to be a Christian was to be doomed. In Harni, every male above ten years was killed, and the churches and houses were plundered and burned. Many women were carried away into worse than slavery. At Hadjin, famine now prevails, and many will die for lack of food.

It is feared that massacres in Adana province will continue. Four thousand Turkish and Kurdish soldiers are terrorizing the district, looting, shooting and burning. No respect is paid to foreign property, and American missionary buildings, schools and other property will be totally ruined unless a change takes place quickly. It is expected that when the American cruisers, the North Carolina and Montana, arrive, a demand will be made for substantial reparation for the killing of the two missionaries, Rogers and Maurer, and for the property destroyed.

A detachment of Turkish troops, under Loutfi Bey, with orders from Constantinople, arrived at Adana just in time to prevent a fresh attack by the fanatical hordes. As it was, the rioters fled, carrying with them all the cattle outside the city. Had it not been for this opportune aid, every Christian in the city, missionaries included, would probably have been massacred, as the openly avowed purpose of the fanatics was to "exterminate the Christians."

Many in Adana, Hadjin and Tarsus are dying from hunger, wounds and exposure. The women and little ones continually cry for bread, but the missionaries are able only to give the most meagre portions from their scanty store. It is pitiful to see these sad scenes and yet to be unable to help. The missionaries are praying for the arrival of food, which would mean the saving of thousands of lives.

In Adana the hospitals are unable to care for the wounded, while thousands of destitute and helpless Armenians are looking to the missionaries as their only hope. Smallpox has appeared in several places, to add to the horrors of famine. Appeals from the missionaries are extremely urgent. The yard of the American Mission House looks like a prison pen. The men wander around all night trying to keep warm. The women and children sleep at night on the floors of the school rooms. Very few of them have beds. Relief work has already been started, with Adana and Beirut as centres. Rev. W. W. Peet, secretary of the American Board in Constantinople, cables to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

"Contagious diseases broken out at Adana among refugees; 12,000 have been moved to camps outside city. There is great shortage of flour, as bakeries and mills are burned. Fourteen hundred sick and wounded now in hospitals; 20,000 refugees are crowded in Adana and 15,000 more in Tarsus, Latakia and Aintab. We are shipping to-day a cargo of flour and rice for the sufferers. (Signed) PEET."

Our State Department in Washington has received cable dispatches stating that thousands are without food or shelter, and that there is immediate and urgent need for food and medicines.

Ambassador Leishman, at Constantinople, cables: "Greatest suffering exists in ravaged districts, where smallpox has now broken out, and epidemic is now feared owing to unsanitary conditions caused by unburied dead, while many thousands are shelterless and without food, thus adding to the horror of the district."

Every contribution to the Armenian Relief Fund will be acknowledged in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and the money forwarded to the missionaries. Our readers are earnestly invited to send in their gifts as speedily as possible, in order that lives may be saved and suffering averted. Address all contributions to Armenian Relief Fund, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York City.

The following contributions to the Armenian Relief Fund have been received:

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD	$250.00
S. P., Saratoga	10.00
R. W. G., Philadelphia	5.00
E. H., Jamaica Plain, Mass.	1.00
J. B., Baltimore Mills, Ont.	20.00
A. A., San Antonio, Texas	10.00
A. M., Utica, Ill.	10.00
Friend, St. Paul, Minn.	.50
J. Y. McN., Pittsburg, Pa.	50.00
J. W. C., Montpelier, Vt.	2.00
C. F. G., Lewiston, Va.	.50

THE GOSPEL INVASION OF PORTO RICO

Continued from page 431

boys through the establishment of the Young Men's Christian Association. The men at the head of this movement are loyal to the Gospel, which they are there to proclaim.

The International Committee has the co-operation of a group of men known as the American Advisory Committee for the West Indies, and is as follows: Charles H. Allen, ex-Governor of Porto Rico; Daniel Bacon, Robert Bacon, ex-Secretary of State; Hugh A. Bayne, John E. Berwind, of the Berwind-White Coal Company; Richard C. Colt, Representative Harry A. Cooper, George B. Cortelyou, ex-Secretary of the Treasury; F. Kingsbury Curtis, Major-General George D. Davis, Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver, General John W. Foster, James R. Garfield, ex-Secretary of the Interior; J. J. Henner, M. D.; General John A. Johnston, A. Lazo-Arriaga, William Loeb, Jr., Collector of Customs; Henry R. Mallory; George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy; Representative William B. McKinley, George X. McLanahan, Thomas Nelson Page, Major Duncan C. Phillips, ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, Beekman Winthrop, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Franklin D. Mooney, vice-president of the New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company, and Gifford Pinchot. Some of these men are most deeply interested in the development of Porto Rico and Cuba, while others among them desire to see something done for the young men and boys of the other West India Islands. There will also be an American Advisory Committee for Cuba, consisting of the most prominent and influential men residing on the island. An equally strong Advisory Committee is being organized in Porto Rico, and at this time every principal point on both islands has its corresponding member doing good work for the cause.

A Country Home in Porto Rico

THE ROYAL HOLLAND BABY

THE romantic career of young Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands, is probably more familiar to Americans than that of any other royal woman of Europe. The beautiful poster bearing her profile, crowned with the becoming Frisian headdress, decorates many of our homes. Her careful and prayerful nurture at the hands of her pious mother met with warm approval among us. Her choice of Henry, Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, as a husband, determined solely, as the newspapers informed us, by personal affection; then the loss of two little ones, who never came to the birth; and now that a little princess has come to succeed to the throne of the rich and famous little kingdom—all this has excited the profound interest of Americans during the last six years.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland

With especial pleasure have our women followed the fortunes of this fair young girl, and every mother in the land will share keenly in the joy of the Dutch people that an heir was born on April 30 to the throne of the Netherlands. Doubtless they would have preferred a prince to a princess; and if she should have a brother, little Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, as the new baby is generously christened, may not be Queen of Holland; but she is still heartily welcomed.

For her own sake, she would be lovingly cherished; but for important political reasons, Holland rejoices in her coming. Without a direct heir to Queen Wilhelmina, the reins of power in Holland would probably pass to some German princeling, the honored house of Nassau would be extinct, and the proud and independent kingdom would become almost automatically a mere province in the great German federation. The mouth of the German Rhine lies in Holland, and the town of Flushing, which guards it, is said to be as important in its way as is the great city of Antwerp, which Napoleon called "a pistol pointed at the heart of England."

Thus, geographically, politically, historically, the little kingdom of the Netherlands may well hold up its head and love its own honorable way. It may well send around its quaint heralds to proclaim on every corner, with military fanfares from the trumpeters, the great news that an hereditary princess is born to the house of Orange. It is an event not merely for sentimental rejoicing, but for deep patriotic thankfulness in every loyal Dutch breast.

Magnificent gifts have been showered upon the royal infant. Perhaps the choicest and most beautiful are the cradle presented by the people of the Netherlands; the cradle presented by the people of Amsterdam; the silver tray designed to hold the congratulatory address of Drenthe; a doll in native dress; a clock, presented by the women of Limburg; a gem-studded rattle from the women of Groningen and a silver toilet-set from the women of Utrecht.

A suite of six spacious apartments has been prepared for the use of the little princess; her happy mother intends to nurse the baby herself; President Fallières, President Taft and many kings and princes have telegraphed congratulations; and the tiny

Gifts from Loyal Subjects for the Baby Princess

Princess of Orange is fairly launched upon the sea of life. May favoring winds and richest blessings attend her way!

KATE UPSON CLARK.

Various Good Causes Aided by Christian Herald Readers

Armenia Orphanage

—, N Y City..... 3 01
S R Kohl..... 3 00

Robert H. Bender,

San Salvador
M J Skellenberger.. 3 00

Blind Babies' Home

—, Lincoln, Neb.. 1 00
Eliza A Blair 1 00
A Friend, Talley, Tenn 2 00
Mrs A W Jenks.... 1 00

Mrs. Booth's Prison Fund

Mrs S E McElree.. 2 00

Daisy Field's Home for Crippled Children

Mrs S E McElree.. 2 00

Cremorne Mission

A Mottaz 2 00

F. Crittenden Mission

Mrs C Stafford.... 5 00

Watts De Peyster Home

E P Wiard 25

Door of Hope

Betsey, —, Mich. 2 00
H S Lansing 50

Five Points Mission

Clayton Snyder.....15 00
Dr F W Schneerer. 1 00

Foreign Missions

Minnie L Cash.... 2 00
G W, Mifflinstown, Pa 10 00
Mary Duncan 2 00
H G Copley 1 00
—, Coffstown, N H 1 00
Mrs S M McKee.. 3 50
Mrs A J Williams.33 00
Aug H Merchant... 6 50
Henry M Wilson.. 2 00
Mrs J H Lane..... 1 00
Union Valley S S, Payette, Idaho .. 9 90
Mary A H Morden.10 00
Mrs E Alexander...50 00
B H Ralph..... 1 50
Mrs J H Pattison. 1 00
(For China Presby Mission)
H Farnsworth 1 00
H Farnsworth 1 00
(For Japan)
F P Wilkins.....10 00
(For India)
Mrs C C Stedman. 1 00
F P Wilkin.....10 00
(For Rev. Geo. K. Gilden)
I Girod 5 00
(For Dr. J. O. Dyrnes)
Mrs M A Pearson.. 2 00
(For China)
F P Wilkin.....10 00
(For Africa)
F P Wilkin.....10 00
(For Dr. Paton)
Mary J Shellenberger5 00

Any Good Cause

David N Crane... 1 00
Mrs O D Powell... 50
A J Lusher 1 85
Mrs F Munroe 50
Mrs A Bailey 50
Eliza Pirkey 50
Miss Emily F Criydt 50
A Friend, Glenn Mills, Pa 7 00
J E Haycraft..... 40
A New Hampshire Friend, Suncook, N H 2 50

The Gospel Settlement

Mrs A P Hadgdon. 2 00
Mrs A E Freeman. 50
Mrs L Wright 1 00
Henry E Fitts 2 00
M J Mahan 1 00
C T Langan 8 00
Mrs D Rogers 25
Clayton Snyder ...15 00
W H Byles 1 00
E F Allen 2 50
Betsey, —, Mich. 2 00
Mrs R Rumbold....3 00
—, Lincoln, Neb.. 1 00
Mrs J D Gallup ... 1 00
Mrs Mary A Read. 1 00
Mrs M Bennett 1 00
Chemainus Bapt S S, Chemainus, B C, Can 18 50
John Fellow 1 00
B Bradford 5 00
C M Coutant..... 2 00
Mrs Bertie Brown. 2 00
A Friend, Dunlap, Iowa 10 00
Mrs E Varley..... 1 50

Invalid Children's Home

Mrs A W Jenks.... 1 00

For Dr. George

—, No Woburn, Mass 20 00

Dr. Grenfell, Labrador

Interested, Carthage, Ill 5 00
Miss S N Sturges.. 5 00

Home Missions

Mrs S M McKee... 3 50
Mrs J H Lane..... 2 00

Rev. G. C. F. Hass

Clayton Snyder 15 00

India Famine

M Borge 3 00
Mrs M H Fawcett.. 1 00
Fannie Haines 2 05
Mrs R F Hodnett.. 50
A Subr, Middlebury, Vt 1 00

India Flood Sufferers

Jane McIntosh 2 00

Rev. F. Jansen

Mrs McVicar & dau 2 00
L M, Rockville, Md 1 00
Mrs C E Purdy.... 1 20
J M L, Watsontown, Pa 5 00
C V Kinter..... 3 00
Mrs Virgil Moore.. 1 00
A Friend, Winterset, Iowa 1 00
Mrs Matt Rae 1 50
Mrs M M Crawford.10 00
Miss J M Newland. 2 00
Mrs Virginia Mitchel 50
Mrs Nannie Whitmore 00
Mary J Shellenberger 5 00
Mrs O S Harrison.. Mrs F Banister.. 1 00

Lepers in India

Mary Reed

Mrs J S Gerhart... 2 00
—, Milwaukee, Wis 2 00
In His Name....105 00

Lepers' Children's Home

China

Mrs S E McElree.. 2 00

Rose H. Lathrop

Mrs McVicar & Daughter 5 00

Life Line Church

Mrs C S Putney.. 1 00
Mrs C M Lockhart. 2 00

Seamen's Mission

Ann E Mygatt..... 1 00

Lepers, Dutch Guiana

In His Name.....105 00

Mardin Relief Work

Mrs H B C Cope.. 1 00
—, Highland, N Y 3 00
—, Inez, Pa 1 00
N Chalmers 3 00
Otto & Maggie Hoffmann 5 00
John S Nedurian... 1 00
G M Michaelian... 5 00
F D Johnson..... 1 00
Mrs S Snyder..... 1 00
Rev Jas Murray....10 00

Mayesville Institute

F L, Brooklyn, N Y 5 00
I H N, St Louis, Mo 1 00
Mr & Mrs R F Walker 5 00
Elizabeth B Clark. 6 00
Mrs Rachel E Peigh 5 00

Christian Mission to Jews

Wm Coleman 35

Pundita Ramabai

R F Whiteside....10 00
Mrs M M Huffman. 1 00
Mrs A B Tadlock.. 1 25
Miss M A Langdon. 1 00

R. H. Romig

T D Brooks..... 1 00

Soc. of Soul-Winners

B C, Boston, Mass.15 00
M E Rutledge..... 1 00

Steele Orphanage

L B Dozier..... 1 00
A Friend, Dunlap, Iowa 10 00

Sunday Morning Breakfast Assn., Phila.

A Friend, Dunlap, Iowa 10 00

City Mission

Ella M Case..... 2 00

Salvation Army

I H S, Tamaqua, Pa 1 00

Relief Work Among Poor

Mrs A W Jenks.... 1 00

Prison Gate Mission

Mrs Mary E Tuttle 50

People's Settlement,

Wilmington, Del.
H M, Park, Kan.. 1 00

Lincoln University

A Friend, Silver Creek, N Y..... 1 00

Hinghua Orphanage, China

Sympathizer, Milford, Mich 2 50
D L, Plainfield, NJ 2 00

Missionary Substitute

Mrs E A Robinson.10 00
Mr & Mrs C H Manning, Sr. 30 00
Mrs M M Tufford..22 50
James Hunt 100 00
Edward Becker 25 00
H B Zimmerman....15 00
A Friend, Md.....50 00
G L Cook.....15 00
E T Pugh.....12 50
—, Scranton, Pa.15 00
Julia Downs 25 00
Mr & Mrs E C Dodson 10 00
—, Brooklyn, N Y 100 00
Mrs Mary P Lake..30 00
Miss E Pollock....30 00
W W Young 50 00
W A Prugh 10 00
—, Shelton, Conn 5 00
J B Maurer..... 4 00
Miss Lillian Collins.15 00

E. Olsson, South America

Geo H Bennett.... 5 00
Mary J Shellenberger 5 00

Okayama Orphanage

Woman's Miss Soc of Park Pl Pres Ch, Norfolk, Va.10 00
Union Ch S S, Concord Jct, Mass.... 3 75
Miss Carie A Wiers 5 00
Mrs H A Inghram. 5 00
Mrs C E McConkey.26 00
Mrs J M Deihl....10 00

Lepers in China

Miss H R Tonne... 5 00
Mr Robt Lester.... 1 00
Mrs O S Harrison. Mrs F Banister.. 1 00

Salvation Army, London Poor

W P Elkins..... 2 50

Mrs. Pregensen

Mrs W H Bird..... 9 00

Jerry McAuley Mission

R H Morrison 1 00
Chas McAllister ... 5 00
R H Morrison..... 3 00

Rev. N. Zamora, P. I.

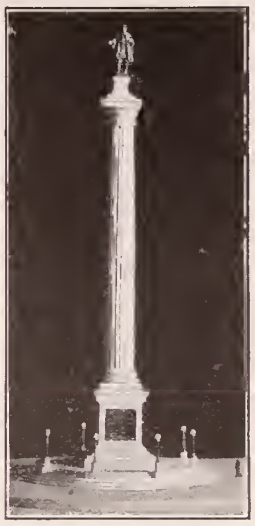
Mary J Shellenberger 5 00

Bishop J. B. Scott, for Jasper Grant's Children

Mrs Mary Dykens.. 25
W K Desh 30 00
Celia Anderson..... 2 00
Mrs F Henthorn... 2 00
A Reader of C H, Littlestown, Pa.. 50
A Reader, Dunn,... 1 00
Miss A A Nauscom 2 50
Mrs J S Gerhart... 2 00
Mrs B S Watson... 2 00
M L Hanna 2 00
G V McPhail 10 00
Mrs S J Spangler.. 7 00
A Nelson 30 00
Mrs Robt Webster. 1 00
B P, Waupac, Wis 1 00
Alden Longwell ...20 25
G, Eugene, Oreg... 5 00
Mrs L Ely 2 00
Jos S Warye 1 00
Miss M Keebler.... 9 00
Mrs D T Keebler.. 1 00
Mrs J H Hagens..30 00
R Madison 1 00
Miss H Madison... 50
Miss M Madison.. 50
Miss V Madison ... 50
Mrs F Stuessy 1 00
Mrs R Madison.... 50
Mrs Jane Miles.... 1 00
I H N, Camden, .. 1 00
P T Willis 25
Mrs A E Willis.... 25
Rebecca Willis..... 25
Tilly S Willis..... 25
Mrs Jane Wilcox... 3 00
E P Gallup.....30 00
E & A Olsson 2 00
Ezra M Funk..... 25
May E Garlick..... 50
Mrs H N Carpenter 1 00
E K, Syracuse.... 2 00
Geo W Geusemer..30 00
Mrs N A H, City Island, N Y 1 00
M P Taylor 5 00
Miss N C Stoner... 1 00
Miss T Dingee.....15 00
L D Watkins 1 00
Mr & Mrs Frank Dinius 30 00
Mrs M J Raney.... 2 00
Mrs R E Peigh... 5 00
Mrs Wm C Fourtellott 1 00
A. Hazleton, Pa.. 1 00
Miss M L Elliott.. 50
Mrs Richard Davis. 1 00
T L B, Pittsfield, 3 00
Matilda Hedgcock. 1 00
Matilda Ewing ... 5 00
Alden Leighton ... 1 00
A C H Reader, —— 1 00
Mary Thomas 1 00
Mrs R E Kester... 1 00
Mrs E F Whittlesey 5 00
J P Christenson.... 5 00
B Bradford 10 00
John A Parker.... 5 00
Harriet M Parker.. 2 00
Mr & Mrs Allen Yoder & Father..60 00
J E Alexander ...30 00
—, Washington,... 7 00
Jacob Eckart 5 00
Mrs M E Logan... 1 00
Frances H Shields30 00
Reader of C H, Ballston Spa, N Y 1 00
Frances Besson ... 1 00
Aug C Wertz & Bro.30 00
Zebedee Brown ... 5 00
Montgomery Sisters.30 00
S S Class Christ Mission, Dayton, 1 00
Mrs H Hollandsworth & Friend. 2 00
Mrs Alice Dollow.. 50
—, Walkerville, Mich 1 00
W M Dougherty... 1 00
Mrs L C Nicholas. 10
S S of Woodburn,30 00
Mrs W E Tunion.. 1 00
Mrs J E Winter.... 1 00
T D Taapken 3 00
Jas G Rutter.....30 00
S E Clark 3 00
A Friend in Appelle Sask, Can 8 00
A Reader of C H, Brownfield, Me.... 1 00
Mrs R A Allen....30 00
Mrs Chas Fisher... 1 00
Mrs L M & Lizzie Seegar 1 00
Grace, New Haven 1 00
Mrs F Ginn 1 00
William Kreamer.. 1 00
Alexander Forbes.. 2 00
Frank L Jones.... 1 00
Lelia, Ensenore, N Y 10 00
A Life Subr, Pendleton, Oreg 10 00
Mrs F C Ibsen.... 2 00
Miss J Chapman & Sisters 8 00
Mrs O A Kingsley. 1
Helen F Clark 2
Mrs Mary E Jones. 1
Mrs N A Horton... 1
Mrs M S Ames... 1
Miss Cornelia Brush 2
Mrs J Searle 1
—, Dekalb Jct, N Y 1
Mrs C G Bennett.. 1
W H Wightman... 1
A Lutheran, I B K, Taneytown, Md..30
B Tanner 1
A Friend, Brooklyn, 5
Marla M Vallette.. 2
Allen Sligh 1
Mrs A L Doger.... 2
—, Selkirk, N Y. 5
R B Chapman 10
A C Stewart.....30
Mrs H C Northwood .....
Elizabeth A Neame
Mrs E Wright 30
S E Hoffman 1
J E Brown 10
Mary T Clemons...10
A M Weaver 1
Mrs M E Hall 1
Mrs B T Raynor... 1
F G Bogle 30
A Subr, S Auburn.. 2
H Kindermann ...30
Readers of C H, Grayslake, Ill....10
Mrs J D Ames....
Miss V L Harley... 1
Mr Henry Small... 1
Mrs R Reid..... 1
Elizabeth B Clark.. 6
C M Spoor & wf.... 1
B C Frmns..... 3
A Friend, Kalamazoo, Mich 5
L M Hancock..... 5
East Evans S Sch, Greeley, Colo 6
Mrs B B W, Gloversville, N Y.... 1
H Ter Molen..... 3
Mr & Mrs H Conner 10
Mrs R L Lee..... 1
Mrs J B Warren.. 1
A Reader, Crawfordsville, Ia 2
Mrs O F Ketcham.. 2
Emma Dale 2
John H Crable..... 5
Marion H Bennet..
F H C, Croton Falls, N Y 5
Mary E Donnell....30
A Lelandite, Leland 1
Mrs A E Garrett.. 1

THE COMING HUDSON CELEBRATION

Governor Stuyvesant Surrendering New Amsterdam to the English



The Monument to Henry Hudson

Playing Bowls on the Bowling Green in New Amsterdam

UNDER a great shed in a shipyard, in a quaint old town in Holland, shipwrights for several months have been working busily on a craft which appears odd indeed to our twentieth century eyes. The ship is about eighty feet long, low in the waist and rising high at the bows and stern, in the fashion known to the explorers of America as the two castles, the main idea being defense against man more than the waves. It is about eighteen feet wide and draws about seven and a half feet of water. The last week in April the stops were knocked away and the boat slid into the water, and as the gilded stern passed out of the dark shadows of the sheds the words "Halve Maan" could be read, for it was none other than the replica of the Half Moon, the ship of Henry Hudson, who explored America's most picturesque river, and which has been reconstructed by subscription in Holland to be sent as a gift to America to take part in the pageantry of the Hudson-Fulton celebration this coming September.

The new Half Moon is built accurately on the same lines as the original, the records and measurements of the first vessel having been found.

She will be armed with cannon of the early seventeenth century, which have been preserved in Holland. She will have a crew of twenty hardy mariners from the Zuyder Zee, dressed in trunk hose and sailor jerkins and armed to the teeth. The boat will be brought to America on the deck of an ocean liner, but will be placed in the water and make a formal entry up the beautiful Narrows, by the green shores of Staten Island and into the harbor of New York under the escort of Dutch men-of-war, while the guns of the forts will thunder salutes to Henry Hudson, the Half Moon and her motley crew.

This is only one of the features which will make the week of the Hudson-Fulton celebration one of the greatest series of pageants America has ever seen. Two great occasions are to be commemorated together—the entry of Hudson into New York harbor and his sail up to the present site of Albany, and the passage of the first practical steamboat, the Clermont of Robert Fulton, up the same river. The centenary of the steamboat came some time ago, but it was considered best to combine it with the three hundredth anniversary of the voyage of the Half Moon.

The national government, the States of New York and New Jersey, and several foreign nations will participate in the celebration. The appropriation of New York State and city will be about one million dollars. The Half Moon will lie at anchor for three days following September 21. Near her will be the copy of the Clermont. Then, escorted by the warships of many nations, river steamers and hundreds of yachts, the two historic boats will sail up the Hudson to old Newburgh, where they will be turned over the escort of another fleet, which will come down from Albany. The two boats will stop for a day at each of the county seats along the river to Albany and Troy.

New York, meanwhile, will devote the entire week to celebrating. The general plan of the city celebration is as follows: First, there will be two religious observance days, Saturday, September 25, and Sunday, September 26, and in the general plan it is stated that "the commission is of the opinion that, in arranging for the celebration, the people should not overlook the Divine guidance in the two great events to be commemorated, one of which opened up our State to modern civilization and led to the founding of the city of New York, and the other of which laid the foundation for the vast commerce upon which the prosperity of the city and State so largely depends."

The Dutch Buying Manhattan from the Indians for a Sum Equal to Twenty-three Dollars

Monday, September 27, the entire city will be decorated, and there will be music festivals in the five boroughs. The special exhibition, of an historical nature, in the museums and libraries will be opened. These exhibitions will remain open several months. Historical Day will be noteworthy for the great parade. The noteworthy feature of the procession will be the historical floats, representing great events in the history of the nation, State and city. The designer of the floats for the Mardi Gras at New Orleans came on to New York to superintend their construction. The floats will be thirty feet high and as accurate as long research can make them. The costumes of those who will be grouped upon the floats are copied from historical paintings and are made of silk and velvets, as in the Colonial and Revolutionary days. The patriotic societies are taking an active interest in this parade. The Society of Colonial Wars will man some of the Colonial floats, while the Sons of the American Revolution will impersonate the characters on those illustrating "the days which tried men's souls," in which their own ancestors took part. Around the floats will be guards, mounted and on foot, dressed in the uniform of the period of the event depicted. During the week a great float will be anchored in the Hudson, on which will be an Indian village. Around it will be reenacted the earliest scenes in the life of "Old New York." A "General Commemoration Day" will follow, when parks and tablets on historic sites will be dedicated.

The military parade day, planned for Thursday, September 30, will bring into line over twenty-five thousand troops. The government and many States will send their best regiments. On Friday, the great naval parade will move up the Hudson to Newburgh, while every town and city along the banks will hold historic fêtes and salute the fleet.

Saturday, October 2, the celebration will close in a blaze of glory—a gale of merriment—for it will be known as Carnival Day. Again there will be a parade, but this time in the evening, illuminated by thousands of colored lights and fireworks.

Up the river the festival will continue for a week longer, and it will be known as "Upper Hudson Week."

Such is the general plan of the celebration. It may be changed here and there, but only to make it greater and more magnificent, and the result of the commission's work will make a celebration it will be well worth a long journey to see.

New York City in 1699, the Battery and Fort at the Extreme Left

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

The Appeal from Armenia

AS the smoke partially lifts from the scenes of carnage and massacre in Asiatic Turkey, the civilized world begins to realize something of the extent of the appalling tragedy that has been enacted. From 30,000 to 50,000 Christians—Greeks, Syrians and Armenians, but chiefly the latter—lie dead, while thrice that number are starving and homeless. Slaughter and incendiarism, the favorite Turkish methods of dealing with the Sultan's Christian subjects, have done their worst, and the result is one of the most wanton butcheries known in modern history.

Whether this bloody business was hatched in the Yildiz Kiosk by Abdul Hamid and his wicked counselors, or was simply a sudden eruption of fanatical Mohammedan hatred of the Christians, encouraged by the consenting inaction of the provincial governors, may never be known. Some share, if not indeed a very large share, of the responsibility must lie at the door of the European powers, which have too long allowed the "unspeakable Turk" a free hand, and temporized with his atrocities. The cowardly indifference of the governments of Europe toward the brutalized and oppressed Armenians, under what Gladstone denounced as "the loathsome tyranny of Turkey," has put civilization to the blush for well-nigh half a century. It has at last culminated in an orgy of slaughter and rapine so dreadful that one may well trust that the limit has been reached and that the world has seen the last of the long list of Moslem massacres. God grant it may be so!

This week, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received renewed and still more urgent appeals by cable from our American missionaries, who, at the risk of their lives, have been doing splendid service in sheltering and succoring the multitudes of refugees at Adana, Tarsus, Beirut, Hadjin and other cities. Details of their terrible experiences will be found on another page of this issue. We earnestly hope that these appeals will not pass unheeded. With crowds of wounded, starving and dying all around them, those brave workers look to us to aid them in supplying food and medicines. Let every reader of this journal send quickly a contribution to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Armenian Relief Fund, and thus be the means, under God, of saving one precious life.

Undisciplined Youth

A TRAGEDY that has wrapped a pall of gloom around two happy homes and shadowed many others took place one morning lately on the campus of Smith College, at Northampton. A bright, sweet young girl, looking forward eagerly to commencement week, was suddenly struck down by a pistol in the hands of a young man of twenty-four. This man, the newspapers said, was her fiancé. A year ago he had been graduated from Dartmouth College, and there he had borne himself so well that he stood in the front rank and took honors among the first men in his class. Scholar, athlete, gentleman—this would have been his description. What quarrel led to the passionate outburst that resulted in the death of the girl and the suicide of her murderer no one can tell. So swiftly was the light blotted out from both these young lives, and so unexpectedly did the death angel shroud them both. that words fail us for sympathy and sorrow. Youth is so full of promise, so over-brimming with hope, it has such grand opportunities and so many days are before it that one grieves when loss and failure overtake it in its early hours.

And here, the thought forces itself upon us that education should bring a larger result in discipline and self-restraint than it seems to do. We are not astonished when an incident of this kind occurs among the illiterate and ignorant, whose lives are full of hardship and to whom a disappointment seems a sweeping away of all that makes life worth living. We have a right to expect, however, that those who have had every advantage of culture and training shall be able to bear disappointment with fortitude and face grief with courage. Few things are so indefensible as the passion of a man that vents itself first in murder and then in suicide. The only excuse for such a tragedy must be the sudden loss of mental poise. Friends of those whose mental condition awakens suspicion should be on the alert to keep them under surveillance and control. It is far better to do this than to ignore the greater peril that may happen in an instant, to the life-long regret of all concerned.

Palestine and the Jews

IT is the fondest dream of the true Jew that some day the race will return to its native land of Palestine and that the old glories of the temple will be restored, and the sons and daughters of Abraham will take their proud place among the leaders of the world. That day may be yet afar off. Meanwhile, the Zionist idea continues to "take courage and go forward." Its latest development is an outgrowth, or subsidiary organization, called the Judæans, whose members advocate the purchase of land for Jewish colonies in Palestine with a portion of the Baron Hirsch fund. No Jewish exodus from this country is contemplated, but it is believed there are many thousands of European Hebrews who would go gladly.

This new movement has taken substantial shape since the establishment of the constitutional régime in Turkey, which holds out the hope of a brighter future for Jewish colonization than has been possible heretofore. Who can say whether the next generation may not see the hills and valleys of the ancient land again populous with the descendants of the world-old race which once had its home there, and whose strange history of glory and sorrow, power and oppression is without a parallel among the nations of the earth!

The Little Dutch Princess

ALL Holland is rejoicing at the advent of the little Dutch Princess. The people of Holland have patiently waited for and passionately desired an heir to the throne. Queen Wilhemina is greatly beloved by her people, and there was not a home in the length and breadth of her stanch dominion which had not congratulations for her when she became a mother. Royal nurseries, in a sense, belong to loyal kingdoms. The succession is jealously guarded, and when, as in the case of Holland, it would come to an end should no child be born of the royal line, the condition is felt to be a calamity. Doubtless the little princess will be adored by the Hollanders, and it is to be hoped that she will not remain always the only child in her family.

Through "Poverty Gap"

NOT a few of our American millionaires, who built up vast fortunes by personal achievement and pioneer industries, have been dynamic forces in the work-a-day world. Many of those now living are still active in enterprises that have an important bearing on the upbuilding of the country and of national character. In a broad business sense, these energetic and successful men helped to make the country's greatness. Their careers have become part of its history.

There are many among the sons of millionaires who have chosen to do something worth while, not only with their wealth but with their brains. They have resisted the allurements to a life of pleasure and indolence. Some are helping to upbuild the country by means of the railroads, as their fathers did before them. Others are extending our commerce on the ocean. A few of these young men of great possessions are in Congress, working diligently, not for self-gain, but for ideals in government. Some have gone into the ministry; others have followed their fathers into journalism.

But these instances only serve to emphasize the fact that poverty is the great educator and developer, and that the majority of our public men, in practically every sphere of human endeavor, are men who have risen from the ranks. A glance at American biography will confirm this. It is astonishing to find how many of our foremost inventors, merchants, railroad builders, bankers, soldiers, preachers, authors, manufacturers and scientists have come up through the stress and struggle of Poverty Gap, and finished their education in the "College of Hard Knocks," where they had the kind of training that develops strong, rugged character. In innumerable instances, poverty has proven to be "the foster-mother of genius." It taught them courage, determination, thrift; it has spurred them to enterprise and urged them to opportunities which others have neglected. Thus, with all its admitted disadvantages, poverty has much to recommend it as a developer of individual character. It is the tree that is exposed to the stormy blasts, which sticks its roots deepest into the soil and attains the grandest proportions.

Curing Drunkenness by Restraint

THERE are but few physicians who have made a study of the subject who do not acknowledge that a man who has acquired a taste for liquor is in a diseased condition, both mentally and physically and is not a truly responsible member of society While there are numerous private sanitariums in which inebriates may secure treatment, there are as yet no public institutions of the kind to which they may be sent. It has been found that if a man can be put under proper restraint, and his constitution built up, cures may be effected. In most cases the drunkard is sent to these private sanitariums by his relatives, in the hope that he will be out of harm's way.

It would seem that some action should be taken in our various States for the temporary confinement in properly equipped State sanitariums of men who have shown that they have been completely mastered by the desire for liquor, just as an insane person is placed in a hospital for the insane both for his own good and the protection of the community. In fact there is a close connection between drunkenness and insanity. Excessive alcoholic indulgence almost always affects the brain cells.

A man who has been arrested more than once for intoxication could be sent to such a hospital rather than to jail, and everything possible done to cure him of his unnatural craving that medical science can suggest. Any one who follows the happenings of a day in our papers will see that most of the crimes ofviolence are committed under the influence of liquor, and many petty crimes also, in which violence does not figure.

Virginia has legal provision for the proper restraint of "drug fiends" and people suffering from alcoholism, but they are sent there to private institutions, which are under State inspection. No general method of caring for these unfortunate people is yet in operation in this country.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 19, 1909

	PAGE
Henry Hudson and His Ship the "Half Moon"	Cover
The Gospel Invasion of Porto Rico (Illustrated)	431, 433
"Done for a King." Sermon. By Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D.	432
Fever and Famine Follow Earthquake (Illustrated)	433
The Royal Holland Baby (Illustrated)	434
Good Causes Helped	434
The Coming Hudson Celebration (Illustrated)	435
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	436
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	437
Prominent People Talked About (Portraits)	438
Our Second National Peace Congress. By Rev. Loyal W. Madden	438
In Flowery Spring Days (Illustrated). By Margaret E. Sangster	439
The Story of Marco (Illustrated). Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter	440, 441
OUR MAIL-BAG	442, 443
May-Day Parade in New York (Illustrated)	442
The Grace of Letter Writing	444, 445
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	446
Young People's Societies	447
The Holy Spirit's Ministry. By Mrs. M. Baxter

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Roosevelt's First Lions

BY a telegram from Nairobi, British East Africa, it was learned that ex-President Roosevelt had had phenomenal luck on his first trip hunting lions. On preceding days he had secured several specimens of deer and other animals, but on Thursday, April 29, he and his caravan started from the ranch of Sir Alfred Pease, on the Athi River, and proceeded slowly to the Mau Hills. This range is open for wide areas, but in places it is covered with dense growths, where large game is plentiful. The first night in camp was uneventful except for the howls of lions that were heard now and then. At dawn the camp was astir and the native beaters set out in all directions, under the instruction of the "headman," armed with all sorts of noise-making devices, which could not help arousing the game. As a rule, beaters go into the jungles with considerable fear, as there is peril in their undertaking, but these two hundred native beaters, knowing that Roosevelt was such a good shot and anxious to give him a good day's sport and to gratify his ambition to bring down a king of wild beasts, went to their task with great enthusiasm. The ex-President killed three lions at three shots. Kermit, his son, got a lion, but three shots from his gun were necessary to secure it. At the close of the day the lions, which were of normal size, and the other game were dragged together in the grass and the native helpers had their usual dance around the trophies. It can well be imagined how enthusiastic the ex-President must have been over his first day's lion hunt.

A day or two afterward Mr. Roosevelt shot his fourth lion at short range, which was attacking and about to kill some of his mounted guards. F. C. Selous, the famous English hunter, had spent several days of preparation, and contributed largely to the success of the hunt. Besides the sport of the expedition, splendid specimens will be secured for the Smithsonian Institute.

Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear. (I. Sam. 17 : 36.)

Wheat Gambling and Dear Bread

Every now and then the country is treated to a sensation by a wheat "corner." This year the wheat gambling of the nation reached its climax in power and venality in the attempt of James A. Patten, of Chicago, to "corner" the wheat market of the country, and even dictate the price of the grain in the world. By buying millions of bushels of imaginary wheat, largely with millions of dollars of imaginary money, he pushed the price of wheat to $1.50 a bushel and compelled an advance in the price of bread by the reduction of the size of loaves or the increase of the price of the same and by a large addition to the market price of flour. Who has been benefited by this increase of 50 cents a bushel for wheat, produced by this bold gambler's adventure? The farmers are not benefited, for so many of them have sold their harvest. The millers are not helped, for it is so hard for them to get wheat that some have been compelled to shut down. The speculators that were on the wrong side of the market certainly have not received any benefit. The financial profit has come chiefly to Patten and his confederates who stood with him in the "corner." Patten claims that he has watched the signs of the times for four years and has discovered an increased demand for wheat as a food product for the world, and, anticipating a shortage this year, he concluded to profit by it. The country feels very sore toward Mr. Patten, and justly so. His ill-gotten gain has been secured at too great hurt to others. He has literally taken bread from the mouths of the poor. The State ought to count him a public enemy, and its laws should make his colossal speculations an impossibility in the future. He is culpable only in a little larger degree than the small fellows who imitate him. The whole question of "futures" is one which society will have to consider more carefully, as there is so manifestly a moral ingredient in it. It is legitimate to buy wares of all kinds on credit and sell them on promissory notes, but the purchase and sale of imaginary things with an imaginary circulating medium, which is carried on in so stupendous a scale in some centres, cannot be longer continued without damage to morals and injury to legitimate business.

Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth. (Eph. 4 : 28.)

Crucified Himself and Died of Lockjaw

Tiburcio Zambrana, a Tuxpan Indian, who was crucified at his own urgent request by worshipers at the annual Easter celebration of the crucifixion of Christ by members of his tribe near Guadalajara, has died from lockjaw. Zambrana took the role of Christ in the Indian Passion Play, and, as the climax of his performance, he insisted that he be nailed to the cross instead of being strapped, as has been the custom. His death followed as a result of the terrible injuries caused by the nails being driven through his hands and feet. For several years national and State authorities have been threatening to suppress these celebrations, because of the dangerous religious frenzy they create. It is likely that this tragedy will prompt President Diaz and the Mexican government to prevent such celebrations in the future.

Route of Mr. Roosevelt's African Hunting Trip

The boundary line between faith and fanaticism is very narrow. To believe too much is sometimes as disastrous as to believe too little. The tragedy of this Indian was a pitiful one, as he no doubt loved his Saviour intensely and desired to honor and follow him. There is a crucifixion of the old Adam with Christ, a nailing of the sins to the tree, which brings death to moral evil and life to the soul.

I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. (Gal. 2 : 20.)

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

A Hunting Party in the East African Forests, Near Mount Kilimanjaro

College for Fatherless Girls

Charles E. Ellis, the traction millionaire of Philadelphia, who accidentally shot himself early in April, left an estate of about $4,000,000. He provided for a magnificent charity in a college for fatherless girls and left $2,500,000 for its foundation and support. The college is to be built in Philadelphia or one of the counties adjacent to it, and only girls from those counties will be eligible to its instruction. According to the State law, Mrs. Ellis, the widow, is entitled to one-third of her husband's estate, but she has waived her claim and taken the small amount allowed in the will, to promote his educational plans. Mrs. Ella S. Staley, the daughter, has agreed to take a small bequest and make no contest of the will. Besides this college, Mr. Ellis left $10,000 to endow a private room at the Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia; $20,000 to buy scholarships for boys in the University of Pennsylvania and for girls in Bryn Mawr College. He left $500 a year to be divided between the Monthly Meeting of Friends, held at Green Street, and the Monthly Meeting at Fifteenth and Race Streets.

The foundation of this college for orphan girls is a blessed charity, which will have the smile of heaven and the favor of earth.

Thou art the helper of the fatherless. (Ps. 10 : 14.)

Mysterious Disappearance of Ducklings

George W. Tobey, a farmer near South Norwalk, Conn., had a singular experience with his young ducks. While swimming around his pond they would flap their wings, quack and disappear. When about twenty-four of them had gone, the farmer began to investigate the cause. Patient watching revealed the fact that a monster bullfrog caught hold of the legs of the ducklings and pulled them to the bottom of the pond and there devoured them. They put poisoned ducks on the water to finish him; they used bullets and fishhooks in vain to secure him. The wily creature foiling all their plans, Mr. Tobey drained the pond and caught him. The monster weighed five pounds, and was exhibited at a local fishmarket as a curiosity. It might have been thought that the foxes and hawks and gaps would have been enemies enough to these poor little, innocent, yellow, velvety creatures, but the bullfrog that had plenty else to eat in the pond concluded to fatten himself on their flesh. The young of all animals, up to man and including him, have singular perils. The physical dangers of childhood and youth are symbols of the multitudes of spiritual enemies and moral dangers that beset the young. Jesus Christ is the one who can defend his children, young and old, from all their enemies.

The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. (John 10 : 10.)

The Marvels of Compound Interest

Recently, a middle-aged man who had been taught the habits of strictest economy in his fatherland, Germany, in passing through New York visited an office of one of the leading magazines in the country and told the story of his personal experience, which illustrated the marvels of compound interest in the accumulation of money. He had been an ordinary clerk in a savings bank, with a moderate salary, but each year he saved out of that salary $393, which he put out at 3½ per cent. interest. He made those annual deposits for thirty years. He was on his way south to live and brought his money to New York to invest in good interest-bearing bonds. The amount he invested was $21,000. For the average man there is nothing safer or more remunerative in the long run, than to save what he can out of his income and set it to earn for him interest and compound interest. Mr. Rockefeller once said he learned that a few dollars saved during the year and put out at interest earned as much as he could earn in digging potatoes for a week. We knew a gentleman once who laid away the money he would have paid to the barber and shaved himself for forty years, and had at the end of that time the neat sum of between three and four thousand dollars, which represented the principal and interest. It is a religious duty for a man to make reasonable provision for the support of himself and family, and provision for the future can be made so much more easily than most people suspect by the careful and constant saving of small accounts and their judicious investment.

But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel. (I. Tim. 5 :8.)

PROMINENT PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

PIONEER educator, explorer, author, scientist, ethnologist and missionary, Sheldon Jackson, who died in Asheville, N. C., on May 2, was in many respects one of the foremost Americans of his time. He was born in Minaville, N. Y., in 1834, and was educated in Union College and Princeton Theological Seminary. In 1858, he went as a missionary to the Choctaw Indians, and during a great part of his whole life thereafter he labored among the various tribes, the Pimas, Papagos, Apaches, Pueblos, etc., both as missionary and educator. He was the first ordained missionary to begin religious work in Alaska, and did much to improve conditions among the natives and to bring them into the Christian fold. He introduced Lapland reindeer in Alaska and organized the first reindeer mail service. He founded schools and did a splendid work among the natives. He was for a number of years United States Commissioner of Education for the territory. Dr. Jackson was a member of about forty scientific and philanthropic societies, and he received official recognition on many occasions for his valuable educational and ethnological books, of which he wrote a large number. He was a contributor to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, whose readers have frequently found pleasure in his delightful illustrated articles on pioneer missionary work in the great Northwest.

At the time when Turkey is being torn by civil strife and American missionaries are in danger in the eastern provinces, Hon. Oscar Straus, of New York, who has twice been American Ambassador, is to go again to Constantinople with the high rank of Ambassador. Mr. Leishman, who has been Minister to Turkey, has just been transferred to the post of Ambassador to Italy, to take the place of Hon. Lloyd C. Griscom, who wishes to return home after a long period in the diplomatic service, during which he has been stationed in Persia, Japan and Italy.

Mr. Straus, it will be remembered, had but recently retired from public life, having been the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet. His previous experience in Turkey and his knowledge of the ways of Turkish officials will be invaluable to him at this critical period in Constantinople, when armed Europe is watching eagerly every move made by the new Sultan, Mohammed V., and the Young Turks, who have elevated him to the head of Islam.

From the post of Minister to China Mr. W. W. Rockhill is to be promoted to the Ambassadorship to Russia, taking the place of Mr. John W. Riddle, who retires. Mr. Riddle, it is expected, will take the chair of international law in one of the largest American universities. Mr. Rockhill has had a varied experience in the public service, which dates from 1884.

Hon. Oscar S. Straus

The Late Dr. Sheldon Jackson

Hon. W. W. Rockhill

OUR SECOND NATIONAL PEACE CONGRESS

By REV. LOYAL W. MADDEN

THE Second National Peace Congress assembled in Chicago May 3. The finishing touches were put on the programme following the return from Washington of a delegation that had gone to the capital city to confer with President Taft, and get the promise of foreign Ambassadors to address the Congress. The delegation that visited Washington consisted of Charles E. Beals, field secretary of the American Peace Society; E. H. Skinner, president of the Association of Commerce; Richard C. Hall, former president of the Association of Commerce; Frederick Bode and Rudolph Ortman, representing the Industrial Club. President Taft expressed cordial approval of the purpose of the Congress and gave permission for the use of his name as honorary president. He also promised to write a letter to be read at the Congress. He delegated Hon. Richard A. Ballinger, Secretary of the Interior, to represent the national government at the gathering.

The president of the Congress is Hon. J. M. Dickinson, Secretary of War. Mr. Dickinson was chosen as president last December, before he was selected for his present position as head of the War Department. It had been the expectation that Mr. Dickinson would be able to be present at the Congress to preside and deliver an address. His governmental duties, however, will require him to be in Panama at the time of the meeting of the Congress. The address which he was to have delivered, entitled "The Progress of Peace," was, in consequence of his inability to be present at the Congress, delivered before the Hamilton Club, of Chicago, on April 10.

The principal sessions of the Congress are held in Orchestra Hall, supplementary sessions being held in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Building. Governors and mayors were asked to name delegates to attend the Congress and special invitations were issued to organizations and individuals interested in the peace movement. The delegates from outside of Chicago numbered nearly fifteen hundred.

Among the foreign Ambassadors invited to speak are Count Johann Heinrich Bernstorff, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Germany; Señor F. L. de la Barra, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Mexico; Dr. Wu Ting Fang, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of China, and Herman de Lagercrantz, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Sweden. The Congress is the second of its kind, the first National Peace Congress having been held in New York in 1907. Twelve hundred delegates registered at the first Congress, and the expense—about $25,000—was nearly all borne by Mr. Andrew Carnegie. The estimated expense of the Chicago Congress is $15,000, the money for which is being raised by subscription. Among the contributors is the Association of Commerce, which has given $1,000.

. . .

At the preliminary mass meeting in Orchestra Hall, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman made an eloquent plea for world peace. At the opening session Robert Treat Paine, of Boston, presided. Rev. A. E. Bartlett, chairman of the reception committee, welcomed the delegates. Miss Anna B. Reckstein, of Boston, announced a "World Petition to the Third Hague Conference." Dr. B. F. Trueblood and Dean W. P. Rogers delivered strong peace addresses. On Tuesday the speakers were George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National Bank; H. M. Marks, of New York, and Joseph Allen Baker, a member of the British Parliament. A woman's meeting, in the afternoon, was largely attended. The speeches dealt with the colossal expenditures for war and the comparatively small cost of the works of peace.

What Others Say of Our Great Patriotic Offer

Letters are now reaching us from those who have received our great Patriotic Premiums, and it seems that every one is more than satisfied. From the many enthusiastic testimonials we print the following because it was the first to reach us:

Dear Dr. Klopsch: Washington, D. C., April 28, 1909.

Your wonderful and bountiful reward for only two new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has arrived: 1. The American Flag, "Old Glory," the grandest and most beautiful flag on the earth; the older it gets, the more beautiful it is. 2. A "Life-Size" facsimile of the Declaration of Independence; what a grand document it is! A masterpiece of human composition! Every American citizen should read it at least once every year. 3. All the Presidents of the United States from Washington to Taft, a splendid galaxy of noble heroes and statesmen and worthy to adorn the walls of any home in the land. The mounted Art Gallery De Luxe also received;—all gifts in good condition. It is certainly wonderful that you can afford to be so liberal with your premiums and rewards. With most profound thanks for them, Very sincerely yours, JACOB PERSINGER.

We want every member of The Christian Herald Family to secure this superb Patriotic Outfit, particularly on account of the magnificent American Flag. On Patriotic Holidays you will be proud and glad to let it float from your home. In the words of a famous statesman, "Let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and the parting day linger and play on its summit."

If You Act AT ONCE You May Still Secure this Patriotic Outfit Before Memorial Day:

We will send you FREE FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER: (1) An American Flag, Best Quality, size Four by Six Feet; (2) A Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 Inches; (3) A Large Double-Tone Picture, 18x21 Inches, of All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft.

We will send you FREE FOR TWO SUBSCRIBERS, ONE NEW and ONE of which may be a RENEWAL, the same Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence and the same Large Picture of All the Presidents, but a much larger Flag, measuring Five by Eight Feet. For further particulars see issues of May 12 and April 21.

ALL PATRIOTIC OUTFITS SENT FREE, CHARGES FULLY PREPAID BY US

NOTE:—Of course, our Patriotic Outfits are given only to those who secure the subscriptions and not to the new subscribers. . . . Money refunded if not pleased. . . . We do not supply poles, nor do we furnish rope; but we do furnish the flag, beautifully finished, otherwise all ready for use. . . . Our Art Gallery De Luxe, Six Exquisite Pictures, goes FREE with every Subscription, whether new or renewed.

CHRISTIAN HERALD FLAG OFFER, Bible House, New York City

A Subscriber's Point of View

Dear Dr. Klopsch: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is our department store, where the whole world of political, scientific, social and religious news comes to us, stripped of all that is horrible, false, unclean. The political news comes with the sharp points blunted. The religious news furnishes, every week, a sermon equal to the best, which having read, one does not inquire to what particular church the preacher belongs, for we feel in each a world-wide brotherhood. We are kept in touch with the world's best. We feel quite sure that if the whole Christan world would read THE CHRISTIAN HERALD the home life would be happier, the social life purer and the church relations stronger. SUBSCRIBER.

Buchanan, Mich.

IN FLOWERY SPRING DAYS

The Children's Prayers

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

"WHEN shall I first teach my little girl to pray?" is a question anxiously asked by a young mother. "Shall I wait until she is old enough to understand what prayer means, and so be told about her heavenly Father, or shall I begin educating her in religion while she is a baby?"

The question is one that vitally interests every Christian home and every conscientious mother. In the first place, let us define babyhood. Until a little one begins to walk and talk it is possible to think of it as simply an infant, a little being to be fed, bathed and cared for, a little being, too, whose unfolding intelligence even at this time surprises the thoughtful mother. When a child begins to walk and talk, to show its independent wishes, to resist control in baby fashion, to smile and hold out dimpled arms to father and mother, it is fully time to commence teaching it to pray. The rudimentary stage is past. There should never be a conscious hour in the child's life in which there is not a thought of the love and care of God. Long before the child can understand the meaning of the action, the tiny hands should be folded together and the mother should repeat a little prayer. Just as soon as the child can speak a prayer should be taught it. That sweet story of old, the story of Jesus our Saviour, should be told to little children in the earliest years of the nursery. We are too ready to forget that the stamp for life is set upon each of us during the first seven years. People who defer the religious training of their children until the children arrive at an age when they comprehend the meaning of prayer will discover that they are too late. The world will have crept in and dropped its seeds into the soil that should have been planted with the good seed of the kingdom.

As for understanding what prayer is in profound reality, as for fully entering into the great secret of our relation to God, which of us is able to do it in maturity? Eternity will not be too long for us to learn about God, and time is all too short for the task. The children know more about prayer than we do, since every infant's cry for its mother is a prayer. Jesus said, "Except ye become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." Into the mind of the child no doubt intrudes. The child looks up to the heavenly Father in perfect confidence. When the little child sings:

> Jesus loves me, this I know,
> For the Bible tells me so.
> Little ones to Him belong,
> They are weak, but He is strong,

the child believes every word of the hymn. Begin while belief is easy and natural, and fill the child's heart with thoughts of the loving Friend above.

There are no sweeter prayers for little children than the familiar ones, "Now I wake and see the light" and "Now I lay me down to sleep." Morning and evening let these little prayers be said, and thus consecrate for the children of the household the opening and the closing day.

At the Milliner's

A milliner's shop in a country town is a sort of informal woman's club, where friends happening to meet enjoy an agreeable half-hour with the exchange of neighborly gossip that makes village life so much more intimate than the life of a city can ever be. The woman who goes to buy a hat in a big city is a customer to be treated with civility, and the milliner's assistant offers articles of headgear with an ingratiating smile and a word of commendation. "This," she will say, as a withered elderly spinster dons a befeathered and beflowered creation that might possibly be worn by a miss of sixteen, "is just your style, madam. You cannot think how becoming it is to the shape of your face, and it is the very latest model from Paris." The customer buys or does not buy. The business transaction closes, and the shop-women remember her no more. In the village the milliner is everybody's friend, and she has known for years the fashion that suits the doctor's wife, the judge's daughter and the mistress of the manse. She tries to dress her patrons with a view to their good looks, as well as to her own remuneration. Meanwhile, as the seasons change, women look forward with a little spice of piquant interest to the purchase of a new bonnet or the furbishing of an old hat, so that it shall be as good as new. One of Rose Terry Cooke's most amusing sketches bore the title "Miss Beulah's Bonnet." It was a bonnet with a history, showing as it did the sterling virtues of its owner and wearer, who bore herself with dignity even when she had suffered the supremest loss of costume that can ever come to woman. The only bonnet she could afford at a crisis of her affairs, when her dividends failed, was hidden under a cushion by a mischievous boy, and the minister's wife, a lady who weighed over two hundred pounds, innocently seated herself on that very cushion. Nothing was seen of the bonnet for days, but Miss Beulah came triumphantly out of the ordeal.

If you would see human nature at its best and its worst, you need go little farther than the shop of a village milliner.

ARMENIAN WOMEN WEAVING

THIS is a peaceful little scene where the village women are quietly practicing the homely art of weaving, the art which has been theirs for generations, and is in strange contrast with the horrible strife now going on in Turkey. Thousands of little homes like the one in which these women toil have been laid low, mothers and children massacred, old and infirm people hewed down by the sword, while once again the world stands aghast at the perfidy and cruelty of Mohammedanism. Still may we cry "How long, O Lord, how long?" Surely the day will come when the cup of Islam will be full, and when there may be a new era of peace for the Sultan's subjects.

Modern Martyrs

WE cannot suppose that the ladies of rank in England, who are choosing to go to prison rather than to keep the peace, are persons bereft of reason, although their behavior is distinctly lacking in that quality. The truth is, that there are women who enjoy martyrdom, provided it goes on in the limelight of publicity. Life to these English gentlewomen of birth and station has become a trifle flat and insipid, and they seek to spice it by excitement that will break its monotony. The women of Great Britain take much more interest in politics than we do on this side the Atlantic. Now that the wish for suffrage has become with many of them a fixed idea, they will go to any length to carry their point. They apparently have concluded that incessant clamor and undismayed perseverance will bring about their triumph, and they go to jail with a quite touching dignity and fortitude. These modern martyrs would receive more general sympathy if their sufferings were called forth by a nobler occasion. All that they hope to gain, they could probably gain in good time, if they were willing to wait, get the right men on their side and bring about an overwhelming change of public opinion in the most conservative of empires. In Great Britain, "freedom slowly broadens on from precedent to precedent." The suffragettes are not accelerating, but are rather retarding, the progress they desire by the unseemly disturbances and futile vociferation they so frequently make.

"Five and Twenty, Tattycoram"

"Count five and twenty, Tattycoram." Readers of Little Dorrit perfectly remember the passionate girl whose gusts of temper were so violent that few people except her benefactors, Mr. and Mrs. Meagles, would have borne with them patiently. Whenever this young girl gave way to a burst of anger, Mr. Meagles would calmly look at her and advise her to count five and twenty before she spoke. If most of us would do the same thing before speaking in haste, or expressing exasperation, we would be saved from many regrets. In other words, to think before we speak, especially if what we are about to say will hurt the feelings of another, is wise and sensible.

Sometimes we are inclined to boast of a quick temper, as if it were some kind of decoration, something in which to take pride. The opposite is the case. An uncontrolled temper indicates weakness and is a disgrace. The Japanese look with compassion on people who bluster and storm and give way to outward irritation. They consider such people both foolish and childish. Many a time, if we resolutely repress a transient feeling of annoyance, shielding it with silence, instead of displaying it with speech, it will give place to a calmer mood. Discipline is the daily necessity of every one who would live in peace with others.

"Count five and twenty, Tattycoram," before indulging in comments or criticisms of an unkind type, before saying anything unfriendly and before speaking in wrath or bitterness. If you count five and twenty very slowly, you will get yourself in hand and hold your temper fast with bit and bridle.

Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

—R. T. Your perplexity seems to be that you cannot decide which of two suitors you prefer. I think your heart has not been touched by the attentions of either, and that as yet only your girlish vanity is concerned. You are very young, and can wait a while before making the great decision.

THE STORY OF MARCO

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ grinder on the road.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

THE man turned. His eyes looked out from under a heavy fringe of black, and his face showed lines that were not carved by the "mirth and laughter," by which, as Shakespeare tells us, wrinkles should come. He gave a guttural grunt, which Marco cheerfully accepted as being interrogatory.

"I say, where are you goin'?" he repeated in a louder tone. "Mebbe I could go, too. Would you take me?"

"Hngh!" The anger was unmistakable this time, even to Marco. The man turned, and began to plod up the hill.

"But say, Mister—please," begged Marco, his eager little feet keeping him abreast of the organ.

The man shook his head.

"No want-a da kid," he growled over his shoulder.

"But I won't bother a mite," urged the boy. "It's my sister—I want to find her, and you're goin' just where she did, right up over that hill."

Again the man shook his head. This time Marco could not understand what he said, but that it was not encouraging was most painfully evident. The boy, however, was not of the sort that is easily repressed. He still ran beside the organ, still smiled cheerfully, and still pleaded his cause.

"And I can play, too, Mister," he cried. "I can earn money. Listen!" And with fingers trembling with eagerness he lifted the violin to position and drew the bow across the strings.

The man stopped abruptly. Very slowly he turned, brought his organ to the ground, and rested his elbows upon it. Across his countenance swept interest, wonder, and amazement, while all about him rippled the runs and trills and rollicking melodies by which Marco was endeavoring to prove that he could "play." Then gradually into the man's face crept a slow cunning. His eyes narrowed until they were mere slits, but they never swerved from their now exulting scrutiny of the boy's rapt face and long, slender fingers.

"There!" breathed Marco at last, lowering his violin, and quiveringly awaiting the verdict.

"Humph!" grunted the man. "Who teach-a you like-a dat?"

"Mumsey. But she said I did better'n her. Grandad played, too, and she says I play more like him," declared the boy, proudly. "He was a big one. He played in concerts, and 'fore kings an' queens, and I'm goin' to, too."

"Humph!" The man lowered his eyes. His next words were spoken indifferently, but with peculiar distinctness. "What you call her — your 'mumsey'? You live-a to-gedder?"

Marco shook his head. His eyes filled, and his chin quivered.

"She's dead. That's just it, you see. They've all gone—my folks—and I want to find them. I want Flossie, my sister."

"Marco turned to confront a small boy who had crawled through the grass"

The man stirred suddenly. He lifted his head, and showed a gleaming row of white teeth in a beguiling smile.

"I take-a you. Come—we go!" he said, holding out his hand. "We find-a your seestaire!"

Marco gave a joyous skip, though he did not take the proffered hand.

"But you'll have to wait just a little, Mister," he cried excitedly. "There's some things I've got ter get first. 'Twon't take but a jiffy. Wait here—I'll come!" He turned to run, but a sharp word from the man brought him right about face in surprise. The man was smiling, however, when he met Marco's eyes, and his voice when he next spoke was gentleness itself.

"Mebbe dey no let-a you come—back," he suggested softly.

Marco hesitated. It was true. Perhaps they would not let him come back. He remembered now that his plan of going to find his sister had been frowned upon from the first. To be sure, he was going alone then, while now he had this man to guide him; and that might make a difference in the way they looked at the matter. Still, it would be better, perhaps, to be on the safe side. He certainly could not afford to let this chance slip through his fingers.

"I reckon maybe I—won't—tell 'em—where I'm goin'," he muttered slowly; and in the quick smile and grunt of approval that the man gave, Marco read that his decision was considered a wise one.

Marco found only the Widow Martin at home, and he managed to slip into the house and up to the boys' room without attracting her attention. There were but few things, after all, that he possessed, and these were mostly keepsakes of his mother's: a little green-covered book, a watch, a ring, and a locket containing the likeness of a man with sombre eyes, very like Marco's own. These trinkets, together with a few odds and ends of clothing, formed a bundle not too large for a small boy's arms to carry, even in addition to the violin in its case.

Only one thing troubled Marco—the money that he owed the good Widow Martin for his three weeks' board and for the doctor's visits. It did not seem right to slink off like this without a word. Ever since the boy could remember, this one thing had been instilled into him: what he could not pay for, he must not have. As he looked back at his life now, he knew that the very reason that his mother so specially emphasized that point was because that all about him in his gipsy life he saw so many cases of having—and not paying.

So it was the debt now that troubled him, and it was the debt that nearly sent him to the Widow Martin with the frank statement that he was going away, but that he would come back some day and "pay up." More potent than all this, however, was the fear that such a confession would end in the defeat of all his schemes; so, after some hesitation, Marco wrote a few words on a scrap of paper and pinned it to his pillow. Then he stole from the house and ran down the street as fast as he could go.

Long hours afterward the Widow Martin, coming into the boys' room, found this on Marco's bed:

"DEER MIS WIDDER MARTIN:

"I O you 5 dollers and 40 sents and for the Doctor 3 times. I will Pay up sum day. Good by.

"MARCO FERDINANDO BONELLI."

CHAPTER VII

"LOST ON THE OCEAN WAVE"

IT WAS a rude awakening for Marco. He had pictured a joyous, easy pilgrimage over wooded hills and through sleepy villages, with a good, kind man to help him find his sister. He experienced something quite different.

The "joyous pilgrimage" became a forced march, on which his tired little legs were compelled to keep up with the strides of a man accustomed to walk miles every day; and the "wooded hills" and "sleepy villages" became long stretches of dust-white road leading to villages that were very much awake to the undesirability of harboring a vagabond organ-grinder and a shabby small boy. It rained frequently, too, and the wide blue sky became then only a chill expanse of misty gray.

Nor was the "good, kind man" the same. Marco had not passed two days with the organ-grinder before he learned this. By that time there was not even a semblance of kindness in the man's voice or manner; and Marco found himself with a traveling companion whose only conversation consisted of a sharp command or a surly grunt. The boy learned something else, too—something that puzzled him very much: the man had forgotten almost everything he knew about English. He could not speak it nor understand it—except very occasionally; and yet, as Marco well remembered, they had experienced no trouble at all in making themselves clear to each other on that first day.

Continued on next page

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

There was another thing, too, which the man seemed strangely to have forgotten—the very reason for Marco's presence. From the first Marco had talked of Flossie. It had almost seemed to him, indeed, that from the top of the hill he could see the gipsy tents where she would be; and it was a keen disappointment to him to find on the other side of the hill only a long straight road leading to the top of still another hill. He had said little at the time, but when three days had gone by, and there was still no sign of the longed-for tents, he asked the man what it meant, explaining that the gipsies had promised to wait not far away for his mother to come to them, and that he knew they intended to camp somewhere in that vicinity all summer.

The man, however, did not understand. He seemed to have forgotten all about Flossie and the search. He listened to Marco's carefully worded explanation with an angry scowl, and he replied with only a grunt.

If the man had forgotten Flossie, however, Marco had not; and day after day his eyes swept the landscape for some glimpse of a tent. He had almost given up hope when one day he saw them—those gray-white tents in a field down the road ahead.

With a joyous leap he sprang forward and tugged at the organ-grinder's coat.

"It's Flossie—it's my folks—I've found them!" he shouted excitedly. "Come—let's hurry!"

The organ-grinder frowned and shook his head. He did not appear to know what Marco was talking about, and he jerked himself free from the boy's touch with an angry word. Worse yet, he turned off at a cross road before he came to the tents, and insisted that this was the way they must go.

"But I can't—I mustn't! Don't you see?" cried Marco, frantically. "It's Flossie—I'm goin' ter her!" And he turned and ran back by himself.

With a snarl of rage the organ-grinder hurried after him, and clutched his arm.

"You come-a dis way. You hear?" he growled with an oath, and with a series of expletives that Marco could not understand. What Marco did understand, however, was the way he was dragged along the hated road that led away from those gray-white tents.

Suddenly into his mind came an illuminating thought. It was already nearly dark, and they would not go far—things might not be so hopeless, after all! So, with a studiously contented air he laid himself down in the dilapidated shed which the organ-grinder a little later found for their night's shelter.

Marco did not go to sleep, however; that was not part of his plan. He waited until the sonorous breaths from the man at his side proclaimed that his guardian slept; then he picked up his violin and stole out into the moonlight.

It was quite a mile back to the field where were the gray-white tents; but Marco's tired little feet did not falter. On and on they sped down the long white road until they came to the turn just beyond which lay the field with the tents. Marco went more cautiously now. He had no wish to rouse the camp. He wanted to see Flossie, and only Flossie, at first.

It had been a puzzle to him at first just how he was to accomplish this interview with Flossie; then in a flash had come the solution: he would play "Lost on the Ocean Wave," and she would know that he was there.

"Lost on the Ocean Wave" was a plaintive little melody of Marco's own, which Flossie had loved. "It's just like the ocean, and it moans and moans," she had sighed rapturously one day.

Very stealthily Marco slipped into the field, and approached the tents. On the farther side, a clump of bushes offered a hiding place, and in the shadow of these he took up his position to play. That others in the camp besides Flossie might hear him, he did not doubt; but that they would associate him with the melody, he did not believe. He intended, too, to stop playing the moment there was a stir of life about the tents; and he would not make himself known until the bright moonlight had told him whether it were Flossie or some one else that had been aroused.

To Marco this playing in the moonlight to charm his sister from a gipsy tent in the middle of the night, did not seem unusual in the least. Neither did it seem strange to him that he should have found the camp. Always before Marco's confident eyes had been the gray-white tents; and as for the rest—since babyhood he had lived a dream life that was much more real than the reality; and anything that had to do with music and moonlight and lost-sisters-found was the most natural thing in the world—in his world.

The music rose and swelled and died away, then rose again in a plaintive call. Marco strained eyes and ears, but there was no stir, no sound. Suddenly a hand touched his arm.

"Marco!" cried an amazed voice.

"Jake!" And Marco turned to confront a small boy who, with a caution that matched Marco's own, had crawled through the grass on the farther side of the tents, and had skirted the field to reach the player's side. To be continued

To Our Young Friends

DOUBTLESS you have noticed the department we have been running of late, under the heading "Little Chats With Our Junior Agents." Now the question is, why do YOU not enlist in the work? If it pays these others, it will pay you; that is pretty certain.

It isn't work that will take you away from your school studies or other duties, but work that you can easily do "between times." It simply means a certain amount of energy, enthusiasm and determination, and a certain amount of time put to good account each week in a systematic effort to make successful sales.

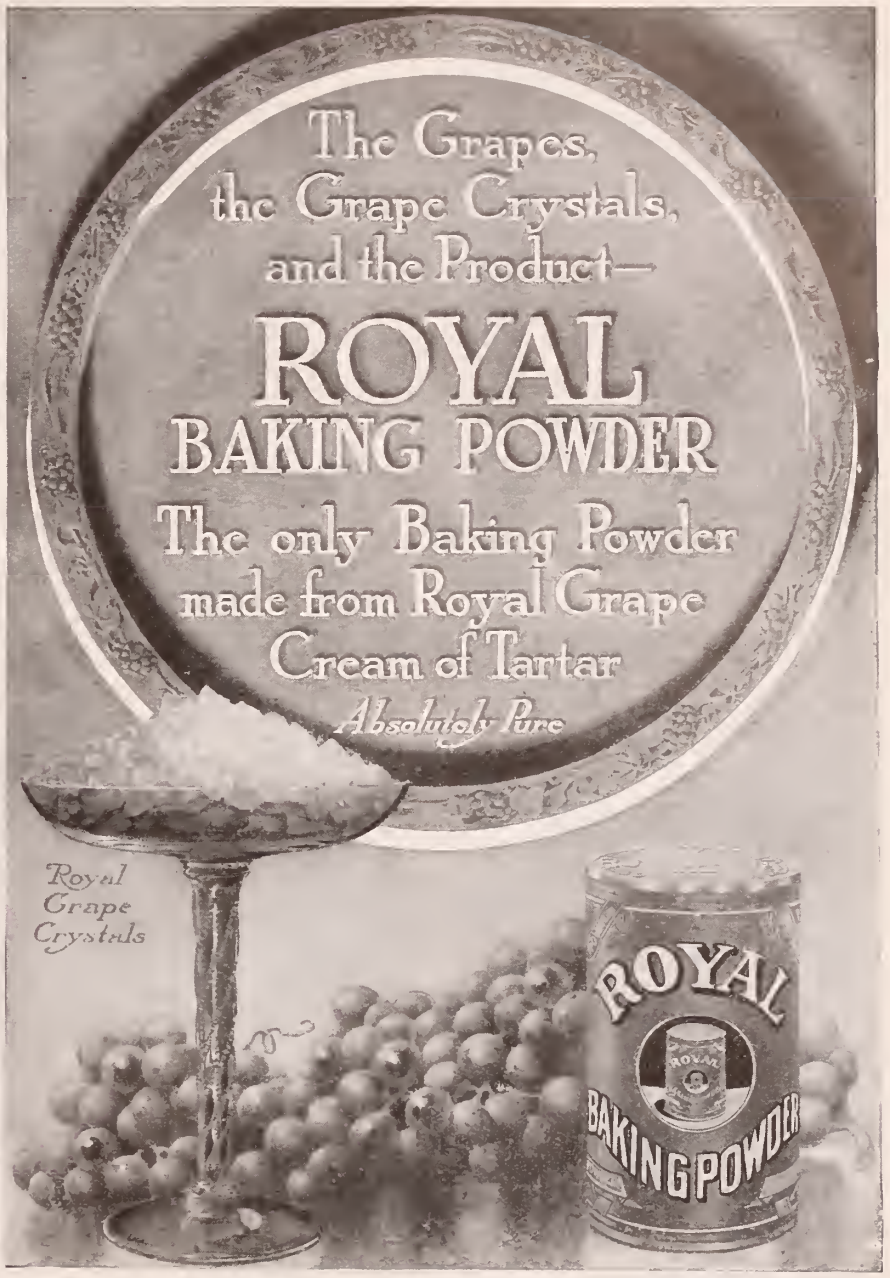
It means a chance for you to earn spending money, church and Sunday School money.

It means a splendid preliminary Business Experience for you right now, and an opportunity to learn how to deal with human nature, which will prove of big advantage to you later on, when school days are over forever and work begins in earnest.

And it means more than all these things: it means that you can secure ABSOLUTELY FREE, in addition to the liberal cash commissions on the papers that you sell, whatever and as many things as you choose from our Premium List of Special Rewards.

If you think there is anything in our proposition for you, write us TO-DAY for TEN FREE COPIES of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, to start with, a copy of our Premium Booklet, order blanks and envelopes. Address;

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD JUNIOR DEPT.,
Bible House, New York City



Six Pairs Guaranteed Six Months

The Best Hose Made

For Men Women and Children

Six pairs of genuine "Holeproof" Hose—the softest and finest hose made—will last any child, woman or man six months without darning—or we replace every pair that wears out.

Made of the finest Egyptian cotton, with especially reinforced heel and toe.

We pay an average of 63c per pound for our yarn.

Yet we could buy yarn at 35c a pound.

Try "Holeproof" Stockings for the children. They'll like them and you'll save all the darning.

We make "Holeproof" Hosiery for the whole family.

It is sold in your town. Write for the dealers' names. Or we'll ship direct, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

FAMOUS
Holeproof Hosiery
FOR MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Holeproof Lustre-Sox—6 pairs, $3.00. Finished like silk. Extra light weight. Black, navy blue, light and dark tan, pearl gray, lavender, light blue, green, gun-metal, khaki and mode. Sizes, 9½ to 12.

Holeproof Full-Fashioned Sox—6 pairs, $3.00. Same colors and sizes as Lustre-Sox.

Holeproof Stockings—6 pairs, $2.00. Medium weight. Black, tan, and black with white feet. Sizes, 8 to 11.

Holeproof Lustre-Stockings—6 pairs, $3.00. Finished like silk. Extra light weight. Tan and black. Sizes, 8 to 11.

Boys' Holeproof Stockings—6 pairs, $3.00. Black and tan. Specially reinforced knee, heel and toe. Sizes, 5 to 11.

Misses' Holeproof Stockings—6 pairs, $3.00. Black and tan. Specially reinforced knee, heel and toe. Sizes, 5 to 9½. These are the best children's hose made to-day.

Reg. U.S. Pat. Office, 1906.

Holeproof Sox—6 pairs, $1.50. Medium and light weight. Black, black with white feet, light and dark tan, navy blue, pearl gray, lavender, light blue, green, gun-metal and mode. Sizes, 9½ to 12. Six pairs of a size and weight in a box. All one color or assorted, as desired.

Holeproof Sox (extra light weight)—6 pairs, $2.00. Made entirely of Sea Island cotton.

Are Your Hose Insured?

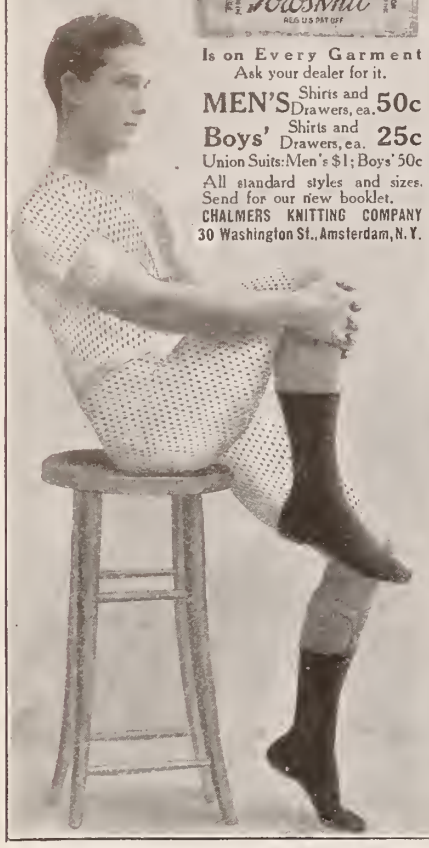
HOLEPROOF HOSIERY COMPANY, 298 Fourth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

It was before the day of SAPOLIO They used to say "Woman's Work is never Done."

Yours for a clean, cool summer—
"Porosknit"
SUMMER UNDERWEAR
—natural ventilation, consequent sanitation—solid summer comfort. And Porosknit quality insures longest wear.
This Label

Is on Every Garment
Ask your dealer for it.
MEN'S Shirts and Drawers, ea. 50c
Boys' Shirts and Drawers, ea. 25c
Union Suits: Men's $1; Boys' 50c
All standard styles and sizes. Send for our new booklet.
CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY
30 Washington St., Amsterdam, N.Y.



THE TRAVELER'S FRIEND
If you travel, wear LITHOLIN Waterproofed Linen Collars and Cuffs. They save "carrying space" in the grip, "stop-overs" for delayed laundry, and make you comfortable. You know your collar is in shape always, and clean—or that you can make it white as new in a minute with a damp cloth. Never wilt or fray. All styles and sizes. If you don't travel, wear LITHOLIN just the same, and save expense. The same collar you have always worn, only waterproofed.
Collars 25c Cuffs 50c
Always sold from a RED box. Avoid substitution.
If not at your dealer's, send, giving styles, size, how many, with remittance, and we will mail, postpaid. Styles booklet on request.
THE FIBERLOID COMPANY
Dept. 2, 7 Waverley Place, New York

IGNORANCE of the laws of self and sex will not excuse infraction of Nature's decree. The knowledge vital to a happy, successful life has been collected in "SEXOLOGY."
A BOOK FOR EVERY HOME
(Illustrated)
By William H. Walling, A.M., M.D.
It contains in one volume:
Knowledge a Young Man Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Husband Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Impart to His Son.
Medical Knowledge a Husband Should Have
Knowledge a Young Woman Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Wife Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Impart to Her Daughter.
Medical Knowledge a Wife Should Have.
"Sexology" is endorsed, and is in the libraries of the heads of our government, and the most eminent physicians, preachers, professors and lawyers throughout the country.
Rich Cloth Binding, Full Gold Stamp, Illustrated, $2.00
Write for "Other People's Opinions" and Table of Contents.
PURITAN PUB. CO., Dept. 167, PHILA., PA.

OUR MAIL-BAG

Questions and Answers

R. G., Newberg, Ore. Please inform me with regard to the temple spoken of in the last chapters of Ezekiel. Are we to understand it in a spiritual sense, or will sueh a temple be built when the Jews return to Palestine?

There have been many differenees of opinion concerning the true interpretation of the latter part of Ezekiel's prophecy, mueh of which is obscure. Some authorities have held that he gave an account of what Solomon's Temple was, others of what the second temple should be. Still others regard it as a symbolie representation of Messianic times and the establishment of God's kingdom on earth.

Reader, Newark, N. J. Is it right from any point of view—moral, humanitarian or Christian—for a person to aceumulate money or property running away into the millions? I should think that there should be a limit.

If riehes come through just and honorable methods, and are properly used, they may be and often are a means of blessing. Wealth that comes through extortion, oppression or usury carries no blessing with it, but usually the reverse. The "unrighteous rich" are frequently denounced in Scripture. That land is probably happiest where there are fewest great fortunes. We have no right to judge men, however, rich or poor. There is no community in the world where there are not some men who, through superior ability and courageous enterprise, will inevitably become leaders in commerce and industry and reap the largest rewards.

M. A. W., Crooksville, O. Please explain Aets 8:33; the first two clauses of the verse.

The passage is reproduced from Isa. 53:7, 8, and the last of these two verses is self-explanatory.

G. V., Mansfield, O. 1. What was the date of the fall of Port Arthur? 2. When was the battle of Mukden fought? 3. How many men fought on each side at Mukden?

1. Port Arthur surrendered on January 2, 1905. 2. There were a number of battles on different dates, grouped under the title of Mukden. The armies came in contact near Mukden in the middle of February, 1905, and the decisive aetion was not fought until the middle of the month. On February 19 the Japanese advanced, several engagements were fought, and on March 8 Kuropatkin withdrew part of his army and made a sueeessful attaek on Aoki and Nogi, but was compelled later to withdraw. On March 9 and Mareh 10, the Japanese entered Mukden. It should rather be called the campaign of Mukden. 3. The Japanese had 500,000 men, while Kuropatkin had about a hundred thousand less. All of them were not present at Mukden.

Subscriber, Alhany, N. Y. What is the law in New York State regarding the disposition of a man's real estate and personal property after death, when leaving widow without children? Does she have one-third, or all?

Whether a husband leaves a will or dies intestate, in either case the widow is entitled to the use or income of one-third his real estate. If he leaves a will, he may bequeath all his personal property to whom he pleases. If he dies intestate, leaving a widow and no children, or descendants of deceased children, his widow takes as follows: 1. If husband leaves a parent, widow takes one-half personal estate. 2. If he leaves no parent, but does leave a brother, sister, nephew or nieee, the widow takes one-half and in addition $2,000 out of the other half if there is so mueh, and if not she takes all the other half. 3. If he leaves no parent, brother, sister, nephew or niece, widow takes all personal estate. 4. If husband leaves any deseendant, widow takes only one-third personal property.

P. D. E., Middlesex, Vt. What eonnection has the Salome danee, with its immoral tendeney, with the Salome mentioned as being one of the women present at the erucifixion? Is mention of her made elsewhere in the Bible?

No conneetion whatsoever. The Salome who was present at the crueifixion was the wife of Zebedee (see Matt. 27:56 and Mark 15:40, also Mark 16:1). The Salome of the dance was the daughter of Herodias (see Matt. 14:6).

A. T. J., Evington, Va. Please explain Mark 16:17, 18. Why do not those signs follow believers in Christ to-day? Is it on account of unbelief?

These verses are peculiar to Mark. They indicate signs by which Christ would confirm, in a miraculous manner, the preaching of his believers. They were to be speeial experiences for a special purpose, and there is no ground for assuming that they were to be continued indefinitely.

Reader, Enon, Pa. If a woman is granted absolute divorce from her husband, is the man free, by the laws of Pennsylvania and Ohio, to marry again? When she obtains the divorce, does this free the husband?

It depends on the local law. Usually, if divorce is on the statutory ground, the deeree forbids the guilty party to marry during the lifetime of the other party. But this may be evaded by marriage in another State. Better ask a local lawyer.

C. H. K., Sterling, Ark. Why are eggs used on Easter Sunday, and how and where did the custom originate?

The custom of giving eggs is an old Eastern custom. It was found among the Persians and Jews. Christians probably adopted it to symbolize the resurrection.

J. D., Gladwin, Mich. When and by whom was the Gospel first brought to England, and where was the first church built?

The conversion of England has been called the first foreign missionary movement of the Western Chureh. The County of Kent reeeived Christian missionaries in the sixth century, when King Ethelbert married a Christian wife, who was a daughter of a Frankish King. St. Augustine really founded the Christian Church in England. The first church in England was doubtless built in Kent, and the oldest church in England is at Canterbury. There is even a tradition that Paul, in his wanderings, visited the southern part of Britain.

J. G. W., Grand Haven, Mich.; Reader, Nebraska, and others. Give some aeeount of the Rhodes scholarships; how many, and to whom awarded?

Ceeil Rhodes in his will provided that a fund should be created to pay the expenses of a certain number of students at Oxford. In Ameriea, two students were eligible from each State and Territory. Fifteen scholarships were

Continued on next page

The May-Day Parade in New York City

FOR years, May Day in Europe has been chosen by those who are discontented with the present system of government and society, for demonstrations and speeches. This year New York saw a similar parade composed largely of those from the continent of Europe, who had participated in such affairs abroad. Thousands turned out, but rain interfered with the meetings in the squares.

Vudor Porch Shades Will Make Your Porch Cool, Shady, and Comfortable on the Hottest Day.

They keep out the glare and heat of the sun yet leave the porch airy and breeze-open.
Vudor Porch Shades are made of wide strips of linden wood, firmly bound with strong seine twine and are artistically stained with weather-proof colors. They last for years. Vudor Porch Shades cost from $2.25 up, according to width, and a porch of ordinary size can be completely equipped with them at a cost of from $5 to $10.
Write for Booklet and Name of Local Dealer
We will send you free, upon receipt of a postal card request, the beautiful Vudor booklet, fully describing and illustrating, in actual colors, Vudor Porch Shades and Vudor Re-enforced Hammocks. With the booklet we will send you name of dealer in your town.
HOUGH SHADE CORPORATION, 242 Mill St., Janesville, Wis.

How Loss is Avoided and Income Increased
STATISTICS prove that Savings Institutions supervised by the New York Banking Department are among the safest in the Union. For 16 years the operations of this Company have been regularly examined and its statements confirmed by the New York Banking Department.
Our patrons are protected by Assets of over $1,900,000. Surplus and Profits, $138,000. Testimonials from hundreds of investors, who pronounce our dealings exact, fair and equitable, go still further to justify your confidence.
We receive for investment, at 5 Per Cent. per Year, any sum from $25.00 to $3000.00. Earnings are paid for every day the funds are in our hands, and the principle is subject to withdrawal at any time on 30 days' notice.
Note that 5 per cent. yields an income one-quarter larger than a 4 per cent rate. Loss of earning-time at the latter rates due to arbitrary dates for crediting interest, makes the difference still greater.
It is less trouble to deal with us by mail than to bank locally.
Let us send testimonials and write you fully.
INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

CORNISH FROM FACTORY TO HOME
On a Year's Free Trial
Easy Terms
Why Shouldn't You Buy As Low As Any Dealer?
Buy on the Cornish Plan
which, in brief, places a strictly high grade piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish, at rock-bottom factory price, upon terms of your own choice, giving you 1 year to test the instrument before you need decide to keep it, and we give you an ironclad Bond of Indemnity which holds us to this offer and also insures instrument against defect for 25 years.
Send for the New Cornish Book
The most beautiful piano and organ catalogue issued; it shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now.

Save One-third. Buy on the Cornish Plan
CORNISH CO. Washington, N.J.
Established Over 56 Years

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

WEDDING INVITATIONS 100 for $3.50
Announcements, etc., engraved and printed. Latest styles, best quality, sent prepaid anywhere. Visiting Cards, 100 50c; with case 75c. Write for samples.
The Estabrook Press, 27 Head Bldg., Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

"ASTRONOMY AND BIBLE CLASS"; 1400 enrolled. Write Pres., C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa

OSTERMOOR
Mattress
is clean, sanitary and comfortable beyond compare. $15.

It is not stuffed into the tick like dirty horsehair, which lumps and bumps and sags and bags in a month.

It is built of clean, springy OSTERMOOR-SHEETS, hand-laid in the tick and will hold its shape forever.

Dust-proof, damp-proof, vermin-proof; a sun-bath is all the renovation it requires.

Buy an Ostermoor—and an Ostermoor only—if you really want the maximum of sleep-giving comfort; the satisfaction of cleanliness and health under you during your resting hours.

Send for Samples of Ticking With Our 144-Page Book

With them we send the name of your Ostermoor dealer. When you buy, be sure that the name "Ostermoor" and our trade-mark label is sewed on end of mattress. Then, and then only, will you have a genuine mattress. If your dealer has none in stock, we will ship direct, express prepaid, same day check is received. 30 NIGHTS' FREE TRIAL granted, money returned if dissatisfied. Send for our free book, "The Test of Time."

OSTERMOOR & COMPANY
115 Elizabeth Street, New York
Canada: Alaska Feather & Down Co., Ltd., Montreal

REVERSIBLE
"Linene" COLLARS
MADE IN 10 STYLES.
10 collars for 25 cts. at stores. By mail 30 cts., or sample 6 cts. in stamps. Give size and style.
REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. T Boston, Mass.

YOU have a Right to INDEPENDENCE

If you have an honest desire to escape salaried drudgery, I can instruct you how to gain financial independence—how to secure a business of your own. Over 800 others have succeeded and are ready to help—for you will help them.

Let Me Send You, NOW, the story of this new business, with convincing FACTS and FIGURES.

Write to-day for Pointers on the Collection Business.

American Collection Service, 63 State Street Detroit, Mich.

OUR MAIL-BAG

Continued from preceding page

awarded to Germany, and from one to nine to each of the colonies of Great Britain. "The scholarships are awarded on marks only three-tenths whereof shall be given to a candidate for his literary and scholastic attainments, the remainder being for his love of outdoor athletics and sports; for strong manly qualities, such as courage, generosity and kindness, and for high moral character, and especially for ambition to serve and lead in large public affairs." In some States the scholars are appointed in rotation by the leading colleges. The candidate must be a citizen of the United States, under twenty-four, and must have studied two years at an American college. Each student receives $1,500 a year, which just about pays his necessary expenses at Oxford. Inquiries may be addressed to the nearest college or university.

S. K., Newark, N. J. Can one be a Christian and engage in the beer brewing or whisky distilling business, or retail it over the bar?

"One cannot serve two masters." The Christian profession is incompatible with the liquor business, which is a main source of so much sin, misery, crime and suffering; which degrades its victims to the level of the brute and annually drags down tens of thousands to untimely graves.

J. B. S., Jordan, Mont. 1. Where is the largest natural bridge in the world? 2. Where can I get The Great Hereafter? 3. Is there any proof that there ever was such a person as St. Patrick, or that he chased snakes, etc.?

1. We have no data as to the various natural bridges of the world. One of the largest, if not the largest, is the natural bridge in Rockbridge County, Virginia. It spans a chasm 200 feet deep and 90 feet wide. 2. The Great Hereafter may be obtained from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Its price is $2.50, cloth binding. 3. Yes; St. Patrick is an authentic historical character, and the principal facts of his life are well known, not only from the writings of historians who lived about his day, but from his own writings, which have come down to us. He was born at Dumharton, on the Clyde, in Scotland, about the year 400 A.D. He went to Ireland about 440 A.D., where he converted many to Christianity. He founded many schools, churches and monasteries. He died at an advanced age.

Mrs. H. I., Tilton, N. H. Is there any difference in the height of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans at Panama?

The general average level of the two oceans is the same. One or the other might be raised temporarily by the trade winds or certain meteorological conditions, the waves being blown against the coast.

E. W., Mexico, Mo. 1. Who has the privilege of deciding whose portrait shall be exhibited in the Hall of Fame? 2. Who is buried in Westminster Abbey, England, and who determines who shall be buried in Westminster Abbey?

1. Every ten years a certain number of names are voted on by a committee appointed by the University Council of New York University. There are no portraits in the Hall of Fame, only bronze tablets, with the names and deeds of those who are selected to be thus honored. 2. The church authorities and the government usually. Doubtless the sovereign is also consulted. There is no set rule; only the most distinguished authors, soldiers, etc., are buried there. It holds the dust of many of England's greatest kings and queens.

T. A. B., San Antonio, Texas. Is it consistent that a father perform the marriage ceremony for his son?

If the father in question be an ordained clergyman, there is nothing improper whatever in his performing the ceremony in question.

N. G. S., Leominster, Mass. What is meant in Luke 11:29 (last clause)? In what way was Jonah the "sign"?

This was the second public announcement of Christ's resurrection three days after his death. Jonah's case was analogous as being a signal judgment, or decree, reversed in three days and followed by a glorious mission to the Gentiles. The "heart of the earth" simply means the grave.

A. H. N., Iowa. 1. Is there anything in profane history (I find nothing in sacred) to show the number of Abram's family when he came to the "Valley of Hebron"? 2. Also, why are so many words, most of them unimportant ones, of the Bible printed in italics?

1. Josephus, in Antiquities of the Jews (Book 1, Chapter 7), says Abram had no son of his own when he left Chaldea, and there is no mention of daughters. In chapter 15 (after his settlement in Hebron), mention is made (besides Isaac and Ishmael) of six sons by Keturah, and ten grandsons. 2. These are words not in the original, but implied and necessary to the English rendering of the text.

Mrs. F. A. W., Plainview, Minn. What is the meaning in the Apostles' Creed of this sentence: "The communion of saints"?

It is usually interpreted in the sense of Christian fellowship: (1) with God, and (2) with one another. See Acts 2:42; Gal. 2:9; I. John 1:3; Eph. 2:19; II. Cor. 8:4, and similar passages.

G. L. N., Waxhaw, N. C. 1. Do our island possessions and dependencies have representatives at Washington? 2. What is the number of the United States Senate and House of Representatives?

1. The island possessions of the United States send delegates to Congress at Washington. These sit in the House of Representatives, and may speak on a bill affecting the possession from which they come, but they are not allowed to vote. 2. There are 92 Senators; 31 are Democrats and 61 are Republicans. There are 391 Representatives in the House of Representatives; 161 are Democrats and 223 Republicans. We are unable to answer the other question sent. Write to secretary of the Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, Va.

J. O. C., Auxvasse, Mo. Tell us something of Ocean Grove; where it is located?

Ocean Grove is a town in Monmouth County, N. J. It is thirty-nine miles east of Trenton, and on the Atlantic coast. It has a fine beach, and is a very popular summer resort. It was founded in 1870 by the Methodist Church. The midsummer camp meeting at the Grove is an event of almost national importance, and when at its height the population of the Grove is from 50,000 to 75,000.

Miscellaneous

L. S., Baltimore, Md. Send full name and address for reply.

A. R., New Jersey. Write to a pastor of any Methodist Church in Toronto, Canada, for the desired information.

J. N. L., Davenport, Neb. See answer to another correspondent about length of time Noah was in the Ark.

Mrs. G. W. Douglas, South Prairie, Pierce County, Wash., will be glad to receive from any reader of this journal the address of Rev. H. A. Jones.

N. D. S., Pennsylvania. 1. See answer on page 234, 1909 volume. 2. It is claimed that Lincoln was a Presbyterian, although he really laid claim to no particular denomination.

J. F., Peapack, N. J. We have already stated, with reference to the miracle in question, that God is the author not of evil, but of good, and that he has never bestowed upon man any gift that was not good.

Mrs. Frank Zeiger, Niagara Falls, N. Y., would be grateful to any one sending her the address of Thomas Jelfs and Mrs. Harriot Pierce, of Birmingham, England, who came to the United States thirty years ago.

Miss A. M., Philadelphia. There are many ministers who will not marry divorced persons. It would be well if all pastors were more particular in this respect and were careful to ascertain whether or not the parties were legally entitled to marry.

Lest You Forget!

Again we say: "One copy of the 'NATIONAL' Style Book is Yours, Free."

All season long we have been advertising to YOU that one copy of the Great "NATIONAL" Style Book is YOURS — FREE. That one copy belongs to YOU—you only need to write for it.

And now, Lest You Forget, again we say one copy of the "NATIONAL" Style Book has been reserved for YOU — is YOURS. Won't you write for it now?

The "NATIONAL" Style Book will show you every new style in all kinds of apparel for Summer wear, including hundreds of NewYork's best styles in Lingerie Dresses and Tub Suits from $3.98 to $19.98, Ready-Made Skirts, $3.98 to $18.98, Waists from 98c. to $8.98, Petticoats, 59c. to $9.98, Hats, $1.98 to $12.98, and also the famous "NATIONAL" Tailored Suits Made to Your Measure of silks and other materials for Summer wear. Prices $7.50 to $35.

Isn't it WELL worth while to stop now and write for your "NATIONAL" Style Book To-day?

The "NATIONAL" Policy:

The "NATIONAL" Guarantee Tag our signed Guarantee of satisfaction or your money back—is tied on every "NATIONAL" Garment.

We pay Postage and Expressage to all parts of the World.

National Cloak & Suit Co.,
218 West 24th St., New York City
Mail Orders Only No Agents or Branch Stores

Princess Chic
TRADE MARK REGISTERED
SIX STRAP FIGURE SHAPER
Demanded by Present Styles
Perfect Support
Perfect Comfort.

Gives better results in figure shaping than the new corsets, at a trifle of their cost.

The only device that healthfully supports instead of dragging on the muscles of the back.

At the leading stores or direct from the makers if you don't find them.

Price $1.00 for 6-strap as illustrated. 4-strap style, 50c. Colors, black, white and blue.

Give waist measure in ordering.

A. STEIN & CO., 338 W. Congress St., Chicago

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief For PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all afflictions of the skin.

Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free.

GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

LITTLE CHATS WITH OUR JUNIOR AGENTS

THE picture of Edith M. Snyder, one of our most successful Junior Agents, which we publish to-day, is another proof of the gratifying fact that our Girls are by no means behind our Boys; we simply have fewer of them. And we want more; we want more Boys and Girls both, and the greater the number of our Junior Agents the more attractive we can make the proposition for You, and the more profitable, for we can then afford to offer more rewards. But for the present we do not see how anything could come nearer to being exactly the right thing at this season of the year than our Baseball Outfit, previously announced, or the Roller Skates or Camera, mentioned last week. We want every one of our Boys and Girls to possess at least one of these splendid premiums.

Edith M. Snyder
Hamburg, Pa.

Which are we going to send you? Address:

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD JUNIOR DEPT., BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

We recommend for the investment of savings or surplus funds

6 per cent.
First Mortgage Gold Bonds of the Twin Falls Salmon River Land & Water Company

Denominations--$100, $500 and $1000

The mortgage upon which these bonds is based is sanctioned by the United States Government and the State of Idaho ---

The bonds are further secured by deposit of purchase money mortgages of individual owners, and are absolutely guaranteed as to both principal and interest by The American Water Works and Guarantee Company, of Pittsburgh, owning and controlling 40 waterworks plants and having a capital and surplus of $4,000,000.

We do not know of any safer, more satisfactory investment for the man or woman with $100 or more to invest.

Write for circular and illustrated book on irrigation. Address Dept. V

J. S. & W. S. KUHN, Inc.,
INVESTMENT BANKERS
Bank for Savings Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Philadelphia Chicago St. Louis

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Chiclets
REALLY DELIGHTFUL
The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum
Particularly Desirable after Dinner

YOUR DOCTOR KNOWS that the six drops of real peppermint in every Chiclet are good for the stomach

Sold in 5¢ 10¢ and 25¢ packets
Frank H. Fleer & Company Inc.
Philadelphia, U.S.A. and Toronto, Can.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?
If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business.
Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.
CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

SUNMOUNT SANATORIUM SANTA FE New Mexico
An ethical institution for the climatic and modern treatment of
TUBERCULOSIS
In the foothills of the Rockies. Ideal Cool Summer.
Moderate Rates Send for Booklet

I-N-S-E-C-T-O-N-O-S
Non-poisonous. Kills Flies, Ants, Roaches, Bed-bugs, Fleas, Cabbage and Currant Worms, Red Spiders, Rose Slugs, Poultry Lice, etc. A complete success; highly endorsed; awarded diploma.
Agents Wanted. Two Sizes—25c. and $1.00, postpaid. Address: Wm. Branson Mfr., Wooster, O.

The Grace of Letter Writing*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

OUR lesson to-day is part of a letter. Letter writing has become so common that we are not sufficiently thankful for it as one of life's greatest privileges—a means of speaking to friends who are far away, and of hearing from them in return. When a traveler in Africa wished to communicate with friends one hundred miles away, through territory which would be dangerous for him because of tribal wars, he attempted to get some of the savages to carry a letter, which, he told them, would speak for him to the other white men to whom it was delivered. The savages knew the location, for they had left the white men, to whom the letter was to go, only a few days before; but when it was explained to them that this piece of paper would talk to the people to whom it should be given, the superstitious fears of the natives were aroused and the first man who had volunteered to carry the letter dropped it in alarm and ran away. A great crowd assembled, and at a distance gazed at the piece of paper, which fluttered on the ground. "It is medicine," they said; "it is charmed." No reward was sufficient to induce any one of them to touch it, because it was "a paper that could talk." The traveler finally put the paper in a tree and asked the natives to point it out to his friends if they came that way, but they were too terrified to do even so much as that, and his friends passed that way without getting any knowledge of the letter. This incident may help us to realize what a wonderful thing it is that a paper can talk. Written language is only second in wonder to spoken language—both of them great blessings as a means of expressing thought and love; a means also of receiving knowledge and help. In early times letters were written on stones and pottery, which of course made letters expensive and cumbersome. Up to 1839, when Rowland Hill invented cheap postage, letters were as expensive as express packages, and were, therefore, beyond the reach of the poor. We may well put high in the list of our blessings the cheap postage and rural delivery and fast mail of our time. It costs only two cents to send a letter to any part of our own country, and recently the privilege has been extended to Great Britain and Germany, and will probably be extended to the whole world in a few years. For one cent we can send printed leaves, that are for the healing of the nations, to China and India—pages that will make the Gospel known and that will help to make a better world here and now.

The letter in our hands to-day is probably from the brother of Jesus. Surely we should gather about such a letter with intensest interest, and carefully note every word. It is not absolutely certain that James, who wrote the epistle, is James the brother of Jesus, but the evidence points that way. It was probably the same James who settled the controversy we studied in the last lesson. The church of Jerusalem looked up to him as a wise and kind father, and surely we should expect to find in his letter things that would make us wiser and more useful.

A Letter from God

But the Bible is a letter from Jesus himself. On the family Bible of the teachers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S great Bible class, to make the Bible seem really like a letter, are printed these words from its pages:

"I have written unto you, fathers."

"I have written unto you, young men."

"I have written unto you, little children."

The Bible is a letter from our heavenly Father to us all, to show us how to live usefully and happily in this world, and find our way home by and by.

The Bible contains many little letters. Some of these are like the one of our lesson, for everybody. That is why this letter is called the "epistle general" of James, which means the same as the words "open letter" in modern times. But the Bible also contains some very sweet personal letters that were originally written to individuals, but have been put into the Bible for us all to profit by. One of these is the second letter of John, addressed: "To the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth. I rejoice greatly that I have found of thy children walking in truth as we have received a commandment from the Father." The third letter of John also is a personal letter "to the well-beloved Gaius." There are two personal letters from Paul to Timothy that are interesting to children, because they tell how Timothy from a child knew the Holy Scriptures and was made by them wise unto salvation, with the aid of his mother Eunice and his grandmother Lois. There is another personal letter from Paul to another of his helpers, Titus; and yet another personal letter to Philemon. One of the sweetest of Paul's open letters, written to a whole church, is that to the first Christian church in Europe, at Philippi, to whom Paul says: "I have you in my heart." That surely was a wonderful love-letter of a pastor to a church that he loved as if it had been his bride.

Doing Good by Letters

Perhaps one reason why there are so many letters in the Bible is that God wants to teach us that one way to do good is by writing letters. The subject of the lesson to-day is "doing good," and we ought to be thinking of all the ways in which we can ourselves do good, so that this will be a lesson that we have not only learned but lived. A little later I will suggest many ways in which we can all do good, but let us all now consider that letter writing is one way in which almost everybody can do good. In Christian lands there are very few people except the babies who cannot write a letter, and we ought not to use this wonderful blessing of the mail to write letters only for money or other selfish purposes. Letter writing is a proper way to do good even on the Lord's Day—only the letters should not be letters of gossip or business, but letters in which we try to say something to absent scholars or children or others that will in some way help them to be good or do good. Some people think that Sabbath observance means doing nothing, but Jesus taught that the true way to keep the Sabbath is by doing good—all the more on that day because work for money would be suspended. Jesus wrought miracles of healing in all parts of Palestine to show the people that doing good was the very best kind of Sabbath keeping. And when Jesus came back from heaven to visit John on Patmos, on the Lord's Day, he told him to write seven letters to make seven cities better. A great many magazines have been induced by letters to put out advertising that invites the people into whose homes they go to buy intoxicating drinks and drugs. One of the papers exposing the medicines

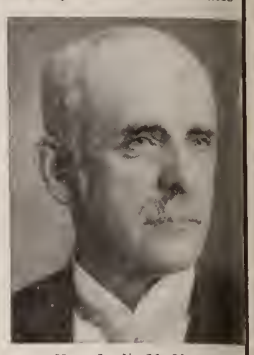
Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for May 30, 1909. James 2 : 14-26. GOLDEN TEXT: "Faith apart from works is barren." James 2 : 20.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 442, and write them for full information.

$1 will open a bank account for you in
The First Mortgage Guarantee & Trust Company, of Philadelphia

The president of this institution, the Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the United States Treasury, believes that the best help to thrift is a savings fund account; and that the idea should be especially encouraged with those of modest means.



Hon. Leslie M. Shaw

The hardest thing about saving is to make a start. Mr. Shaw's plan makes it easy to start, NOW, at the moment you are reading these words. Simply mail a dollar (more if you wish) and the Company will open an account in your name and send your bank book by return post, together with pamphlet of banking information.

4% paid on savings fund accounts. 2% on accounts subject to check.
Savings fund deposits accepted up to $1000.

The First Mortgage Guarantee & Trust Co.
LESLIE M. SHAW, President
943 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

FREE
10 BEAUTIES of FRIENDSHIP 10
Souvenir Post Cards—These Six and Four More—All Different

The most royally beautiful set of Souvenir Post Cards ever produced. Every flower in natural, life-like, gorgeously beautiful colors on a gold background. Each card contains a pretty verse of sentiment suitable for any time or person. We will send our Farm News journal on trial 3 months for 6 cents. Send 4 cents to prepay expense of cards—and 6 cents for trial subscription to our great journal—only 10 cts in all. Either offer separately. Send today.
Simmons Pub. Co., 407 Washington St., Springfield, Ohio

THIS BARRE GRANITE MONUMENT $81.00

Barre Granite Monuments at $81.00 to $385.00.

Five hundred styles and sizes of Marble and Granite Tombstones and Monuments at $3.60 to $385.00
If you want the best in stonecraft at direct-from-the-quarry prices, write for No 526E Tombstone Catalogue
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., Chicago

"Get There"
at a price to suit you direct for a
BLACK MOTOR BUGGY

Built for country roads, hills and mud. Engine—14 H. P., 2 cylinders, air cooled, chain drive rear wheels, double brake. Speed 2 to 25 m. per hr.—30 miles on 1 gal. of gasoline. Highest quality finish, workmanship and materials. Absolutely safe and reliable. Write for Book No. A-74
BLACK MFG. CO., 124 E. Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

LAKE HURON AND LAKE SUPERIOR
A magnificent summer trip is enjoyed by taking this "fresh water sea voyage" from Sarnia, Ontario, to Fort William, Ontario, through these great inland seas. This year new steamers have been added to the Northern Navigation Co.'s fleet, and the finest and fastest vessels on the Great Lakes will fly the house flag of this popular Company. The steamers run in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway System, and all particulars, rates and descriptive literature, etc., can be had for the asking by applying to G. W. Vaux 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BOYS AND GIRLS
Can earn many dollars during vacation or after school selling household novelties. Large catalogue, instructions and sample Perfection Cake Tin and four other useful novelties, worth over a dollar, sent at once if you will send 25 cents to pay cost of packing.

Household Novelty Works, 30-100 Republic St., Buffalo, N.Y.
Shipments made from Chicago or Buffalo, as desired.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

that are made mostly of alcohol received a letter saying: "You are attacking whisky by the spoonful and advertising it by the bottle." The manager replied that the point was well taken, and they would keep up the fight against the quack medicines and banish forever the liquor advertisements.

Letters to Working Girls

There is a splendid suggestion in the "letter guild," started some years ago in Birmingham, England, by some ladies of leisure, who agreed each to write a helpful letter to some working girl every month, in a plain, simple style, and in a spirit of good comradeship, on subjects likely to interest girls, such as friendship, home life, rainy days, worries, work. The girls were persuaded to answer these letters and the movement became not only helpful but popular, until the number of working girls in the guild was much greater than that of the ladies of leisure. There is a splendid instance of letter writing by a busy public man, John Sherman, then Secretary of State, by which a disheartened younger man was aroused to a successful life. The letter which wrought this change is as follows:

"You say that your life has been a failure, and that you are thirty years old, and ready to die. You say that you cannot find work, and that you see no hope in life. You say that your friends do not care to speak to you now.

"Let me tell you that you have reached that point in life when a man must see the very best prospects for his future career. You, at thirty, stand on the bridge that divides youth and manhood. The one is dying, perhaps, but the other will soon burst young and hopeful from the ashes, and you will find in yourself a new being—a man. Do not let your discontent kill this new life before it is born.

"Unless you are physically deformed, go to work. Go to work at any honest work, if it only brings you a dollar a day. Then learn to live within that dollar. Pay no more than ten cents for a meal and twenty cents for a bed, and save as much of the balance as you can, and with the same intensity as you would save your mother's life. Make the most of your appearance. Do not dress gaudily, but cleanly. Abandon liquor as you would abandon a pestilence, for liquor is the curse that wrecks more lives than all the horrors of the world combined.

"If you are a man of brains, as your letter leads me to believe you are, wait until you are in a condition to seek your level, and then seek it with courage and tenacity. It may take time to reach it; it may take years, but you will surely reach it—you will turn from the workingman into the business man or the professional man with so much ease that you will marvel at it. But have one ideal, and aim for it. No ship ever reached its port by sailing for a dozen other ports at the same time.

"Be contented, for without contentment there is no love or friendship, and without those blessings life is, indeed, a hopeless case. Learn to love your books, for there is pleasure, instruction and friendship in books. Go to church, for the church helps to ease the pains of life. But never be a hypocrite; if you cannot believe in God, believe in your honor. Listen to music, whenever you can, for music charms the mind, and fills a man with lofty ideals.

"Cheer up! Never want to die. Why, I am twice your age, and over, and I do not want to die. Get out into the world. Work, eat, sleep, read and talk about the great events of the day, even if you are forced to go among laborers."

Among the abuses of the mail one of the worst is writing angry and abusive letters. It may sometimes be well for a man who is greatly excited to sit down and write out his feelings as an overcharged engine lets off steam, but letters written in excitement should always be kept over night, and then usually torn up or burned. One will seldom regret not having sent such a letter, but thousands have bitterly regretted the sending. A part of a poem by Amos R. Wells illustrates this:

I have written them, keen and sarcastic and long,
With righteously wrathful intent,
Not a stroke undeserved nor a censure too strong;
And some, alas, some of them went!

Ah, blessed the letters that happily go
On errands of kindliness bent;
But much of my peace and fortune I owe
To the letters I never have sent.

MEMORY MENDING

What Food Alone Can Do for the Memory

The influence of food upon the brain and memory is so little understood that people are inclined to marvel at it.

Take a person who has been living on improperly selected food and put him upon a scientific diet in which the food Grape-Nuts is largely used and the increase of mental power that follows is truly remarkable.

A Canadian who was sent to Colorado for his health illustrates this point in a most convincing manner:

"One year ago I came from Canada a nervous wreck, so my physician said, and reduced in weight to almost a skeleton and my memory was so poor that conversations had to be repeated that had taken place only a few hours before. I was unable to rest day or night, for my nervous system was shattered.

"The change of climate helped me a little, but it was soon seen that this was not all that I needed. I required the proper selection of food, although I did not realize it until a friend recommended Grape-Nuts to me and I gave this food a thorough trial. Then I knew what the right food could do and I began to change in my feelings and bodily condition.

"This kept up until now after six months use of Grape-Nuts all my nervous trouble has entirely disappeared, I have gained in flesh all that I had lost, and what is more wonderful to me than anything else, my memory is as good as it ever was.

"Grape-Nuts has remade me all over, mind and body, when I never expected to be well and happy again." "There's a Reason."

Look for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Best Seal for Jelly Glasses

The way to be certain of keeping jellies unharmed by mold or damp is to discard troublesome paper covers and pour melted paraffine directly on the contents of each glass after jellies are cool.

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

when cool, makes an air-tight seal and is more convenient than the old way. Fruit jars are sealed by dipping caps into melted paraffine after closing.

Use Pure Refined Paraffine as a polish for uncarpeted floors—put a little in hot starch to give finish to linens—add it to hot wash water and make the washing easier. Write for a neat Paraffine Paper Pad for use on ironing-day. It keeps sad-irons from sticking.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

Soda Cracker Logic

Any baker can make an ordinary soda cracker — but to produce Uneeda Biscuit requires the specially fitted bakeries of the

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

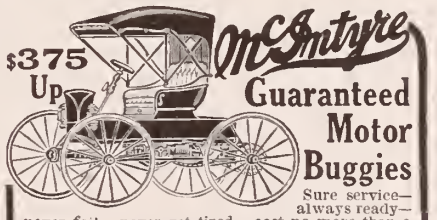
All soda crackers are food. But there is only one soda cracker highest in food value as well as best in freshness. Of course, that soda cracker is

Uneeda Biscuit 5¢



$375 Up McIntyre Guaranteed Motor Buggies

Sure service—always ready—never fail—never get tired—cost no more than a good horse and buggy—cost far less to keep—sure goers over Any Kind of Roads

Speed up to 30 miles an hour. Simple, durable, guaranteed mechanical construction. Solid tires — no tire troubles or repair expense. A woman or child can drive them. Farmers of high standing may secure appointment as agents. Twenty models to choose from. Complete line. Write for free catalog No. 87, illustrated and descriptive.

W. H. McINTYRE COMPANY, Auburn, Indiana
256 Broadway, New York; 1730 Grand Ave., Kansas City; 418 Third Ave., S., Minneapolis; Canadian Factory, Tudhope-McIntyre Co., Orillia, Ont.

$50 TO $300 SAVED

We are manufacturers, not merchants. Save dealers, jobbers and catalog house profit. I'll save you from $50 to $300 on my High Grade Standard Gasoline Engines from 2 to 22-H.-P.—Price direct to you lower than dealers or jobbers have to pay for similar engines in carload lots for spot cash.

GALLOWAY

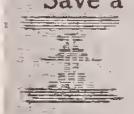
Price and quality speak for themselves and you are to be the sole judge. Sell your poorest horse and buy a

5-H.-P. only $119.50

Direct From My Factory on 30 Days' Free Trial. Satisfaction or money back. Write for special proposition. All you pay me is for raw material, labor and one small profit. Send for my big BOOK FREE.

Wm. Galloway, Pres.
Wm. Galloway Co
945 Galloway Station
Waterloo, Iowa

Save a third on your matting



We import direct from China and Japan in immense quantities, and sell direct to you. No middle profits; you save four to six dollars a roll.

We know that the quality is best; that the straw is long, strong and wear-resisting; that the weave is even and accurate, that the designs are beautiful and exclusive.

We guarantee every roll, and will refund your money if you are dissatisfied.

Japan matting, roll of 40 yds., $9 to $10
China matting, roll of 40 yds., $7 to $9.50

Sold in 40 yd. rolls only. Quick shipment.

We pay the freight.

Send for our catalogue showing 16 designs (actual colors. Also ask for our handsome catalogue of Hancock Rugs at manufacturer's prices. Both are free.

Hancock Rug Mills, Dept. E 15 Philadelphia

The Rapid Fireless Cooker

You'll Be Surprised at the Low Direct Price I'll Make You

Satisfaction guaranteed by full 30 day's trial or no charge—Pays for self fastest—Cooks fastest—No experience necessary—Saves 80 percent on fuel, time and work—Non-rusting metal lined—Perfect insulation—Steam can't escape—Boils, Steams, Stews—Roasts, Bakes, Fries—Sent promptly on

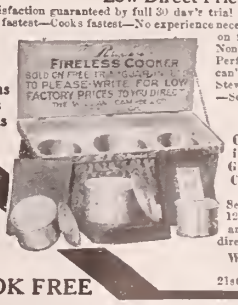
30 FULL DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Complete With Roasting Attachment. Also GENUINE ALUMINUM COOKING UTENSILS FREE

Send name today for over 125 splendid Recipe Book and Catalog Free, and low direct-to-you factory prices.

WM. CAMPBELL CO.
Dept. 2
21st St. Detroit, Mich.

Steams
Stews
Roasts



Bakes
Fries
Boils

BOOK FREE

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Profitable Hospitality*

IT is asserted by pessimists, and sometimes even by many of a hopeful spirit, that the Church is losing its influence.

This may or may not be true. Statistics indicate that it is not; and certainly there was never a time when the Spirit of Christ was so plainly manifested as now throughout all ranks of society.

On every side we see men and women of wealth and culture leaving their homes to work among the poor and neglected. Instead of crusts and pennies flung forth to them, work, instruction and good society are seen to be the helps most needed. Without subscribing to the violent and often startling tenets of the so-called Socialist party, most of the members of our evangelical churches are cherishing a noble socialism. This means that, as Charles Zueblin has expressed it, the more fortunate members of society are no longer contented to enjoy the good things of life, while they see their brethren suffering destitution. The conscience of the well-to-do world is awakening.

And good men are no longer satisfied merely to put their hands in their pockets and dole out coins to the needy. They see that personal service is what the poor need. We are all coming to understand that physical disease is at the root of much of the sin which we have been wont to consider purely moral and voluntary. We must call in the lame and the halt and the blind to eat with us, to talk with us, to fellowship with us, before we can hopefully expect to convert their souls.

It has been asserted by a minister in a great church in one of our largest cities, that another minister, not far away, had recently set before his congregation the duty of calling upon those who had just united with their organization.

"Of course, when you visit these people," he explained, "you can make them understand that your call is simply for the purpose of welcoming them into the Church, and not as a social attention, which they are expected to reciprocate."

In a sense, the fact that such an utterance could be made by a Christian minister is depressing and discouraging. In another sense, the knowledge is encouraging that nearly every one who hears of this deliverance will thrill with indignation at the man's miserable snobbishness.

To enter a person's house and tell him there that, as a member of the same church, you are willing to associate with him, while, as a social being, you do not care to continue the acquaintance, is such barefaced and brutal caste-building, that one wonders if the man who does it can ever again look his fellow-men in the eye.

You may defend him by saying that in a great city few can afford to enlarge their social circle.

Very well. Then keep away from the houses of new people. Do not go there to give them the hand of Christian fellowship, only to slap them in the face the next minute.

The value of the individual man—as Christ values him—that is what we need to realize. "We must open our New Testament," says Dr. Jefferson, "and read again of the one sheep, the one coin, and the one boy. We must come back to Peter's Pentecostal phrase, 'every one of you', and learn how to speak with Pauline accent the names of individual men. We must come back to the New Testament point of view." Then and only then shall we know the true charity, which is universal love.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday. May 30. TEXT: Luke 14: 12-14.

Home Mission Heroes*

IT is an undoubted fact that a considerable element in the impulse to enter the foreign mission field, is sometimes the love of adventure and the romantic desire to visit strange lands. All of this exciting glamour is absent from the home missionary's vision. He has usually less of personal danger than the foreign missionary, and he is nearer to the base of supplies, so that he can appeal for help more quickly in an exigency; but his whole outlook seems more commonplace than does that of the laborer over seas.

Something of this commonplaceness vanishes as we read the history of the home mission movement. Its early days were full of wild enthusiasm and perilous adventuring. Every one knows the story of Lee and Whitman, and few can read it without tears.

New England, as far back as 1793, sent forth nine pastors, to labor for a limited time as frontier missionaries. Clark, in his Leavening of the Nation, says: "In a generation, New England spent, out of her penury following the long drain of the Revolutionary War, a quarter of a million dollars in sending the Gospel to communities entirely outside her borders."

Wherever early settlers went, the missionary followed. Without him, barbarism would have supervened. Mr. Puddefoot, in his interesting book, The Minuteman on the Frontier, says: "When God shall make up his jewels, some of the brightest will be found among the pioneers who carried the ark into the wilderness, breaking through the forest, guided only by the surveyor's blaze on the trees."

In Mr. Ward Platt's The Frontier we are told of a missionary of a new sort. He is a German professor in a North Dakota college, who ranks next to Burbank in his expert knowledge of vegetables. He has made luscious fruit to grow where it was considered impossible. "His three journeys to Asia, in tracing alfalfa northward, are among the heroic feats of history. He said, in a college chapel service, that he thought he was doing the Lord's work. One can hardly compute what an acclimated alfalfa may mean to the Northwest."

Surely such men are true missionarics, trying to benefit their fellowmen and to make life better for us all.

Among the lives of the lesser-known heroes of the home field, none is more beautiful than that of Foster, who undertook to plant a little Christianity among the rude shacks which constituted the town of Council, Idaho. "He gathered together a little church there, and reached out," says Mr. Platt, "to all the surrounding country in that district. His young wife shared his hard service and his long rides, so far as her frail body and the care of her four little girls would permit. At last, her strength gave way and before her life was half spent she passed on through the golden gate. One who was present at her funeral says: "The little city was still on the day we buried her. Even the saloons were closed. Love ruled in all hearts. Tears flowed down the cheeks of hardy men. Her death was a holy benediction." Thus, even in our own day and land, the blood of the martyrs becomes the seed of the Church, and perhaps the death of this sweet missionary accomplished as much as her longer life might have done.

Read Dr. Strong's Our Country. Realize that through home missions we may save America for Christ.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, May 30. TEXT: Matt. 10: 7-16.

Reduce the Cares

of housekeeping. One decidedly practical way is to use Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk in all cooking where milk or cream is required. Results will be more satisfactory than with most "fresh" milk. The convenience and economy will please you. Dilute Peerless Milk with water to any desired richness.

What Will You Give To Be Well

I CANNOT tell you how happy I am that I have been able to bring health and strength to 30,000 women in the past six years. Just think! this means a whole city. It is to my thorough study of anatomy, physiology and health principles, and to my 12 years' personal experience before I began my instructions by mail, that I attribute my marvelous success. It would do your heart good to read the reports from my pupils—and I have done all this by simply studying Nature's laws adapted to the correction of each individual difficulty. If vital organs or nerve centers are weak, I strengthen them so that each organ does its work.

To Have Good Figure, Vibrant Health, Rested Nerves?

I want to help every woman to be perfectly, gloriously well, with that sweet, personal lovcliness which health and a wholesome, graceful body gives—a cultured, self-reliant woman with a definite purpose, full of the health and vivacity which makes you

A Better Wife
A Rested Mother
A Sweeter Sweetheart

You can easily remove the fat and it will stay removed. I have reduced 15,000 women.

Too Fleshy?

One pupil writes me:

"Miss Cocroft, I have reduced 78 pounds and I look 15 years younger. I feel so well I want to shout! I never get out of breath now.

"When I began I was rheumatic and constipated, my heart was weak and my head dull, and oh dear, I am ashamed when I think how I used to look! I never dreamed it was all so easy, I thought I just had to be fat. I feel like stopping every fat woman I see and telling her of you."

Too Thin?

I may need to strengthen your stomach, intestines and nerves first. A pupil who was thin, writes me:

"I just can't tell you how happy I am. I am so proud of my neck and arms! My busts are rounded out and I have gained 28 pounds; it has come just where I wanted it and I carry myself like another woman."

"My old dresses look stylish on me now. I have not been constipated since my second lesson and I had taken something for years. My liver seems to be all right and I haven't a bit of indigestion any more, for I sleep like a baby and my nerves are so rested. I feel so well all the time."

I bring each pupil to symmetrical proportions and I teach her to stand and to walk in an attitude which bespeaks culture and refinement. A good figure, gracefully carried, means more than a pretty face. Nature's rosy cheeks are more beautiful than paint or powder. I help you to

Arise to Your Best!

The day for drugging the system has passed. In the privacy of your own room, I strengthen the muscles and nerves of the vital organs, lungs and heart and start your blood to circulating as it did when you were a child. I teach you to breathe so that the blood is fully purified.

You Can Be Well Without Drugs

And the vital strength gained by a forceful circulation relieves you of such chronic ailments as

Constipation Dullness
Torpid Liver Irritability
Indigestion Nervousness
Rheumatism Sleeplessness
Weaknesses Weak Nerves
Catarrh

by strengthening whatever organs or nerves are weak.

I wish I could put sufficient emphasis into these words to make you realize that you do not need to be ill, but that you can be a buoyant, vivacious, attractive woman in return for just a few minutes' care each day in your own home.

Individual Instruction—I give each pupil the individual, confidential treatment which her case demands. My information and advice are entirely free.

A CORSET IS NOT NEEDED FOR A GOOD FIGURE

Write me today telling me your faults in health or figure, and I will cheerfully tell you whether I can help you. I never treat a patient I cannot help. If I cannot help you I will refer you to the help you need.

Send me 10 cents for instructive booklet showing how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT, Dept. 18, 57 Washington Street, CHICAGO

Author of "Growth in Silence," "Character as Expressed in the Body," Etc.

Miss Cocroft's name stands for progress in the scientific care of the health and figure of woman.

An All-Around Stove

Your kitchen may be well planned—everything apparently handy—yet if there is not a New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove in it, the one greatest convenience of all is lacking.

The "New Perfection" is a home and family stove—big enough and powerful enough to do all you'd ever ask a cooking-stove to do, and, best of all, it does its work without overheating the kitchen. The

NEW PERFECTION

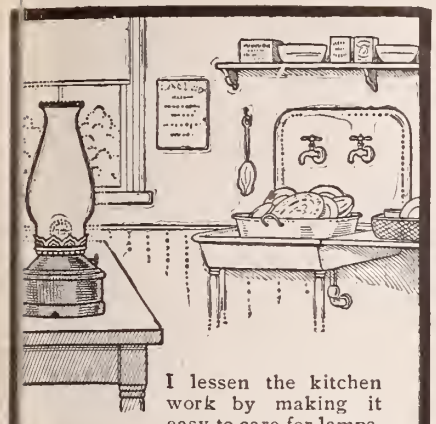
Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove

is built with a CABINET TOP just like a modern range. It is the most convenient stove ever made and is almost indispensable to summer comfort.

Three sizes. Can be had either with or without Cabinet Top. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

The Rayo LAMP is the most perfect all-round home light. Has large font, best and latest center draft burner and beautiful porcelain shade. Nothing complicated about the Rayo—easily cleaned, easily managed. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)



I lessen the kitchen work by making it easy to care for lamps.

I make lamp-chimneys that fit, that compel proper combustion—good light—without smoke, smudge or smell.

MACBETH lamp-chimneys are made of glass that won't break from heat, My name is on every one.

My guide, sent free, shows which is the right chimney for each of your lamps.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh

ASK FOR OUR FREE

nvalid Chair Book

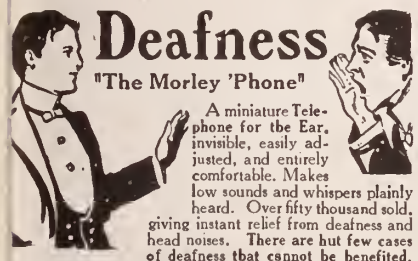
NVALIDS, SHUT INS, CONVALES-ENTS, OLD PEOPLE, CRIPPLES!

We have a Book of Invalid Chairs that will surprise you, offering 100 styles of the newest, best and most improved rolling, propelling, adjustable reclining chairs at very much lower prices than ever before quoted—about one-half retail prices. Every chair we sell is on ten days' trial and you are the judge. If you are not more than satisfied we refund the price and pay all charges. Our heel chairs afford an invalid more comfort smaller expense than you ever before ought possible. Write today for our free valid Chair Book No. 526D

EARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO

Deafness

"The Morley 'Phone"



A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.

rite for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO.,
pt. E, Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

LIGHT BOOZE

Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with ffee, and her experience is interesting. She ys.

"During the two years of my training as a rse, while on night duty, I became addicted coffee drinking. Between midnight and ur in the morning, when the patients were leep, there was little to do except make the unds, and it was quite natural that I should ant a good, hot cup of coffee about that ne. It stimulated me and I could keep ake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking became a nervous wreck and thought that simply could not live without my coffee. ll this time I was subject to frequent bilious tacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me leave off coffee, for he feared that it had eady hurt me almost beyond repair, so I solved to make an effort to release myself m the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum and for a few days t the languid, tired feeling from the lack of e stimulant, but I liked the taste of Postum, d that answered for the breakfast beverage right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and d steadier nerves. After a year's use of stum I now feel like a new woman—have t had any bilious attacks since I left off ffee."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to ellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new e appears from time to time. They are nuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Holy Spirit's Ministry

By Mrs. M. Baxter

It was part of Christ's redemption work to make it possible for fallen man to receive the Holy Ghost. The promise of the blessed Spirit is one of the most precious of God's promises; it runs throughout the Bible. There are many who try to urge themselves into a spirit of prayer; but in so doing they are usurping the work of the Holy Ghost, for "praying in the Holy Ghost" (Jude 20), "prayer and supplication in the Spirit" (Eph. 6:18) is that which God accounts true prayer, and that it is which obtains an answer. Who knows what might not be given to the prayer of faith, if Christians as a body prayed "in the Holy Ghost"?

There are many who, by mental effort, by thought and study, get up talented and eloquent discourses. Is not this to usurp the place of the Holy Ghost? Paul would be no party to any such preaching; he was a man full of the Holy Ghost, and, discarding "enticing words of man's wisdom," he spoke "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power; that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God" (I. Cor. 2:4, 5). Peter tells of those "that preached the Gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." When the Holy Ghost preaches something comes of it. It is God's Word, the entrance of which gives light, and gives understanding to the simple; whether in person, or by his messengers, he speaks as One that hath authority, and not as the scribes. And yet, when we are speaking by the Holy Ghost, or praying in the Spirit, we are not conscious of ourselves, we are are not pleased with our own earnestness, or gratified by a sense of power: nothing so empties us as the presence of the Holy Ghost, for He wants all the room for Jesus, and so there is none left for self. Every worker who knows anything of the power of the Holy Ghost knows how, often, when we have had much consciousness of power hardly any result has followed; but how, often, when we have felt empty and powerless—almost dispirited with our lack of power—the Lord has done great things, and has shown us that conscious power is not always the power of the Holy Ghost.

The great need of the Church in the present day is the recognized power and authority of the Holy Ghost; the great need everywhere, whether in work among the heathen, in missions at home, in schools, or in families, is the need of the Holy Ghost. And yet, the Holy Ghost is given, he is in the world, he is in the Church, he is in every believer. But is he recognized? Is each of us living as the temple of the Holy Ghost, really yielded to him as a house is to its owner, for his sole use? If not, let the deeds be made out, signed and sealed, let there be a definite, once-for-all yielding up to him of his property, and a definite acknowledgment of him as its owner. Then things will come into order. Then God will be able to have full play in our being, and our life will begin to answer its true purpose, the life of Christ will begin to be manifest in our mortal bodies and we shall become "an habitation of God through the Spirit."

No man is converted by an intellectual persuasion of the truth of God. It is only as the Holy Ghost imparts to him another life that he passes from "death unto life," "from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." What sight is to the blind, what life is to the dead, that is the Holy Ghost to the natural man. By the Holy Ghost he is born from above, and in the Holy Ghost he has a source of life quite other than his natural life, so that he enters on a life and an experience which were foreign to him before. He sees both himself and God in a new light. He sees men and things in a new light. Whereas before, God was to him a mere intangible idea, now "all things are of God." The Holy Ghost lifts him up out of his own world, into the spiritual world, a new man.

ALL SPOONFULS MAY LOOK ALIKE
—They are not. Weigh them—Test them in actual work—Test them in making Soft Soap. Use the same quantity of water and powder in each test.
¶ PEARLINE is Condensed Soap—Energy—the Original Washing Powder It established the directions, a Tablespoonful to a Pail of Water. You will have to use double or more of its followers to accomplish the same work.
¶ PEARLINE is made of Pure Fats and Vegetable Oils—no refuse used. It is Absolutely Harmless—Brightens Colors—does not turn White Goods Yellow.
JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE
Use a Little Gumption.
A Tablespoonful of Soap Powder should weigh an ounce and make a Quart of Solid Soap Paste or Soft Soap

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle—highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1909 Ranger Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offers we will give on the first 1909 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS: you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKES, single wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalog beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, Dept. T-71, CHICAGO, ILL.

"I MADE $12 PER DAY Selling This 7-Piece Kitchen Set"—Sworn statement of H. S. CUNNINGHAM.
AGENTS coining money. Selling from 50 to 500 sets per week. You can do it. Send your address today and let us PROVE IT. Experience unnecessary. We show you how to make $3 to $10 a day. OUTFIT FREE to workers. Start quick—write today.
THOMAS MFG. CO.
1609 Barney Blk., Dayton, Ohio

DARNS ON ANY SEWING MACHINE with darning cotton and thread any child can attach it and put a new heel or toe in stocking in five minutes. Weaves new piece into hole and makes it stronger than stocking. Attachment and Holders sent prepaid for 50c. Agents Wanted-Rapid Seller. UNITED DARNING CO., 105 HUDSON ST., N. Y.

A. B. C. AUTOMOBILE

A fine hill climber. Speeds up to 35 miles an hour. Most simple, practical, powerful and durable Automobile of its class. Easy to operate—no complicated parts—no repairs. Solid or pneumatic tires. Air or water cooled. Safest and best. Built for 2, 3 or 4 passengers. 16 to 35 h.p. $600 up. Catalog Free. Write today for particulars.
Solid or Pneumatic Tires
A.B.C. Motor Vehicle Mfg. Co., 3941 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo.

FREE Relyea SAMPLES

Send your address and we will mail you packet of Relyea Samples, containing the very latest Relyea White Lawns, Long Cloth, Nainsook, Lingerie Chiffon, Dimities, Linen, Waisting and Colored Rep Cloth Suitings. We save you money and prepay express on all orders in the United States. Money returned if goods are not satisfactory. Write for Relyea samples to-day
RELYEA & CO., Dept. C, 287 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

PULPITS, Platform Chairs, Sunday School Seats, Collection Plates, Church Pews, School Desks, Opera Chairs, Lodge and Bank Furniture, Office Desks. Ask for Catalog by number only

C112 Church Furn'ture	S112 School Desks
L112 Lodge Furniture	O112 Opera Chairs
B112 Bank Furniture	D112 Office Desks

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO

COMBINATION OFFER

10 Fine Birthday Post Cards mailed for 10 cents.
10 Beautiful Rose Post Cards mailed for 10 cents.
10 Nice Post Cards, assorted subjects, for 10 cents.
The three packages mailed for 25c.
MADISON ART COMPANY. Madison, Conn.

PATENT SENSE and PATENTS THAT PROTECT yield our clients enormous profits. Write us for PROOF. Inventors lose millions through worthless patents. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Dept. 36, Washington, D. C. Estab. 1869.

ARE YOU DEAF?

We have 25 INSTRUMENTS TO ASSIST HEARING. On approval. Send for Catalogue.
WM. C. WILLIS & CO., 134 So. 11th St., Phila.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book, "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.
Patent Obtained or Fee Returned
CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Attorneys
Established 16 Years
1003 F. Street, Washington, D. C

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.
Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

Auto Masseur REDUCES
40 DAY FREE TRIAL FOR BOTH SEXES

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh that I mail it free, without deposit.
When you see your shapeliness speedily returning I know you will buy it.
Try it at my expense. Write to-day.
PROF. BURNS, 1298 Q, BROADWAY, N. Y.

SPRAY POTATOES WITH THE Watson—High Pressure

—Automatic—including Agitator and Strainer Cleaner—Sprays 40 acres daily—State experiments show gain of more than $75 per acre by using the WATSON. Booklet FREE.
FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 11th St., Elmira, N.Y

LAWN FENCE

Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind

CORNS Don't risk blood-poisoning and death by cutting corns with a razor. A-CORN SALVE is absolutely safe and painless. Brings instant relief to aching corns. 15c. at druggist's or by mail
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

"NO BURN" WIRE KETTLE BOTTOM
Rapid Seller. Agents make $3 to $5 per day. Write for large catalogue and free sample offer. Richardson Mfg. Co., Dept. 6, Bath, N. Y.

The Christian Herald

in reviewing this great publication, said in part:

"Ridpath's History of the World may be regarded as a complete library in itself. No other work of its kind has ever supplied a History so well suited to the needs of all classes and conditions of men. We mark the marvelous influence of Christianity upon the world's progress. He would be a blind reader of history indeed who did not discern, throughout all, the influence of a great Omnipotent hand, guiding and developing all things. We cheerfully commend this most popular and complete of all world histories to our readers."

Ridpath's History—A Household Treasure

President William McKinley said:

"I am familiar with the merits of Ridpath's History of the World, and cordially commend it to the scholar as well as to the plain people generally."

Bishop J. P. Newman, D.D., said:

"In reading Ridpath I experience the pleasure often realized when looking at some grand panorama. The superb pictures of temples, palaces, scenes, events and men add a charm to the clear and vigorous style of the learned author."

Prof. W. F. Warren, LL.D., President Boston University, said:

"I should be glad to see it placed in the library of every young person in the United States, and even in the English-speaking world. In families where there are bright children it will render excellent service to the cause of popular intelligence."

CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS are Offered Once More the Exceptional Opportunity

To Place in Your Homes the World-Famed Publication

Ridpath's History of the World

THE PUBLISHER'S FAILURE placed in our hands the entire unsold edition of this monumental work. Brand New, down to date, including Peace Treaty of Russia-Japan War, beautifully bound in Half-Morocco

At LESS than even DAMAGED SETS were ever sold

Here is your opportunity to secure Ridpath's History of the World at the lowest price ever offered—and on easy terms. Dr. Ridpath is dead, his work is done, but his family derive an income from his History, and to print our price broadcast for the sake of more quickly selling these few sets would cause great injury to future sales. We will name our price only in direct letters to those sending the coupon below. Tear off the coupon, write name and address plainly and mail now before you forget it.

ORIGINAL STOCK OF MANKIND
STEM OF THE PREHISTORIC BROWN OR MONGOLOID RACES
STEM OF THE PREHISTORIC BLACK RACES
STEM OF THE PREHISTORIC RUDDY OR WHITE RACES
Aryan or Indo-European Family
Semitic Family
Hamitic Family
East Asiatic Mongoloid Family
North Asiatic Family
Malayo-Mongoloid Family
Polynesian Mongoloid Family
Eastern or Oceanic Division
Western or African Division
Stem of the North American Indians
Celts
Teuto-Slavic
Slavic Stem
Germanic Stem
Forse Stem
Greco-Italians
Illyrians
Thracians
Macedonians
Hellenes
Italians
Romans
Celtic Branch
Irish
Scotch
Welsh
Cornish
Manx
Breton
Gaelic
Cymric Branch
Old British Cumbrian
Welsh
Teutonic Branch
Low German
High German
Anglo-Saxons
Frisians
Dutch
Flemings
Old High German
Scandinavian Branch
Icelanders
Danes
Norwegians
Swedes
Normans
Slavic Branch
Russians
Lithuanians
Livonians
Great Russians
Little Russians
Western Slavs
Poles
Bohemians
Wends
Croats
Servians
Bulgarians
Slovenes
Montenegrins
White Russians
Red Russians
Vlachians
Roumanians
Albanians
Greek Branch
Modern Greeks
Ancient Greeks
Italic Branch
Latins
Romance Languages
French
Provencals
Spanish
Spanish-Americans
Portuguese
Wallachians
Italians
Sabellians
Oscans
Umbrians
Sabines
Volscians
Latins
Etruscans
Rhaetians
Illyrians
Pelasgians
Albanians
Phrygians
Asiatic Greeks
Dorians
Spartans
Ionians
Athenians
Moreans
Cappadocians
Lydians
Lycians
Pisidians
Cilicians
Mysians
Bithynians
Carians
Greek Colonies
Iranian Division
Indian Division
Medo-Persians
Persians
Lores
Parthians
Modern Persians
Guranes
Tajiks
Chaldeans
Afghans
Beloochs
Armenians
Georgians
Caucasians
Nagaises
Hindoos
Mahrattas
Bengalese
Punjabees
Kurds
Assyrians
Chaldees
Babylonians
Syrians
Phenicians
Carthaginians
Sidonians
Tyrians
Aramaic Branch
Hebraic Branch
Canaanites
Hebrews
German Jews
Spanish Jews
Russian and Polish Jews
Arabic Branch
Joktanians?
Cushites?
Bedouins
Sedentary Arabs
Pelasgians
Etruscans
Egyptians
East Mediterranean Colonies
Copts
North Africans
Tunisians
Moors
Guanches
Tripolitans
Berbers
Algerians
Tuaregs
Imoshags
Abyssinians
Semito-Galla
Danakils
Somalis
Libyans
Nubians
Japanese
Chinese
Tungusic Group
Manchus
Coreans
Mongolians
Family of Mongols Proper
East Mongols
Buriats
Khalks
Mongols
Corechs
Samoyeds
Lamuts
Ural Altaics
Turks
Yakuts
Finns
Chuk-Chees
Koriaks
Kamchatkans
Aleuts
Chuk-huk Mula
Yukaghirs
Dog Tungusic
Forest Tungusic
Horse Tungusic
Eskimos
Dravidians
Old Dravidians
Todas
Kotas
Tamils
Polynesian Branch
Tongans
Samoans
Society Islanders
Hawaiians
Maoris
Tahitians
Micronesian Branch
Ladrone Islanders
Marshall Islanders
Brown Fijians
Melanesian Branch
Fijians
Papuans
Tasmanians
Australians
Negritos of Polynesian Blacks
Negritos
Indo-Malaysian Branch
Malacca
Sumatrans
Javanese
Philippine Islanders
Black Fijians
Aetas
Indo-Chinese Branch
Siamese
Burmese
Annamese
Cambodians
Malagasy
Philippine Islanders
Inhabitants
Nubians
Ethiopians
Abyssinians
Berbers
Tuaregs
Guanches
Imoshags
Libyans
Kabyles
Algerians
Tripolitans
Moors
Tunisians
Copts
Egyptians
Semitic Family
Hamitic Family
Aryan or Indo-European Family
Western Branch
Eastern Branch
Indian Division
Iranian Division
Medo-Persians
Armenians
Georgians
Caucasians
Celtic Branch
Teutonic Branch
Slavic Branch
Greek Branch
Italic Branch
Albanians
Illyrians
Thracians
Phrygians
Asiatic Greeks
Colonies
Pelasgians
Etruscans
Latins
Oscans
Umbrians
Sabines
Volscians
Sabellians
Romans
Wallachians
Italians
French
Provencals
Spanish
Spanish-Americans
Portuguese
Moreans
Modern Greeks
Lycians
Lydians
Pisidians
Cilicians
Mysians
Bithynians
Carians
Greek Colonies
Dialects
Modern Persians
Gurans
Tajiks
Chaldeans
Afghans
Beloochs
Bengalese
Mahrattas
Punjabees
Kurds
Assyrians
Babylonians
Syrians
Phenicians
Carthaginians
Sidonians
Tyrians
Aramaic Branch
Hebraic Branch
Canaanites
Hebrews
German Jews
Spanish Jews
Russian and Polish Jews
Arabic Branch
Joktanians?
Cushites?
Bedouins
Sedentary Arabs
Abyssinians
Semito-Galla
Danakils
Somalis
Libyans
Nubians
Egyptians
East Mediterranean Colonies
Copts
North Africans
Tunisians
Moors
Guanches
Tripolitans
Berbers
Algerians
Tuaregs
Imoshags

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Copyright, 1909, by Louis Klopsch

$1.50 a Year—5c. A Copy
Published 52 Times a Year

New York, May 26, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 21
Offices: Bible House, New York

Photographed for The Christian Herald

See page 456

THE OLD VETERAN'S "DAY OF DAYS"

Questions and Answers

Fannie, Burke, Va. Please explain Jude 9.

Origen states that the incident of Michael and Satan contending about the body of Moses was first mentioned in a Jewish work called The Assumption of Moses, which is quoted also by Ecumenius. It is believed by commentators to refer to an ancient Jewish tradition based on Deut. 34:6. The contest is referred to in Rev. 12:7. It was a judicial, not a physical, contest, Satan opposing the raising of the body, but that he was unsuccessful is shown in the transfiguration, where Moses appeared with Elijah.

F. M. J., Cozad, Neb. 1. What is the difference between a cyclone and a tornado? 2. How many land miles in a knot?

1. A cyclone is "an atmospheric disturbance extending over an area of 100 to 500 miles in diameter. It is characterized by decrease of barometric pressure and by winds directed inward." Probably all of the great storms which cross the United States from west to east are cyclones. A tornado is a very violent storm, covering a small extent of territory. They occur usually on the southeast border of a cyclone, and are accompanied by rain, hail or lightning. They are rarely more than a few hundred rods in extent, and seldom travel more than twenty-five miles. 2. A knot is a mile and one-eighth.

J. H. A., Yonkers, N. Y. Has there ever been a time in the history of the world when women have been tortured, crucified or beheaded, the same as men have?

Yes; during the Middle Ages the same punishments seem to have been inflicted regardless of sex. Probably not nearly as many women were killed as men, for a great many of the crimes for which the death penalty was exacted, such as highway robbery, sheep stealing, etc., were crimes which were more likely to be committed by the stronger sex. In days of religious persecution, the same torture was inflicted on women as on men.

J. E. W., Danville, Ky. On what date did the battleship fleet start on its cruise around the world? How many vessels were there in the fleet?

It left Hampton Roads, Va., on December 16, 1907. It returned on February 22, 1909. There were sixteen battleships in the fleet. You can get full information from the Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

A reader in Indianapolis, Ind., who modestly withholds his (or her) name, sends us some very pretty verses, telling how from "far-away Alaska" there came a white-winged messenger (a letter) from an "army boy in blue," containing a request for CHRISTIAN HERALDS. The receiver sent "quite a package." This led to a correspondence:

Then the missives grew more frequent, and a friendly feeling grew
'Twixt THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sender and the Army boy in blue; (Charge me not with impoliteness, if I am first this time,
As in writing correct poetry you must conform to rhyme.)

Then the regiment was ordered to pack up and journey West
To the State of Indiana, where it's hoped they'll do their best
As defenders of the country, proving soldiers strong and true,
Proving loyal to the old flag, as Army boys should do.

Thus the friendship that was started in the land so far away
Has been strengthened and grown dearer and still dearer day by day;
Soon the Army boy's enlistment will be drawing to an end,
Then with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sender many days he hopes to spend.

D. B. L., Circleville, O. 1. Has Wales, in the British Isles, a capital? Who rules it, and where does he reside? 2. Explain the "international date line."

1. Wales has no capital, and is now an integral part of Great Britain. It is called a principality and gives the title of Prince of Wales to the heir-apparent of the British crown. It has twelve counties. The last native ruler was Llewellyn of Gryffydd. He was conquered in 1282 by Edward I. and killed in battle. Then Wales was annexed to the British crown, and the union completed by Henry VIII., the laws and government being assimilated to those of England. 2. The date line is an imaginary line running through Behring Strait and drawn irregularly through the Pacific Ocean. East of the line the day is dated one day earlier than west of it.

Reader, Saugerties, N. Y. Please give some information on the Gulf Stream.

It is an oceanic current in the North Atlantic, and takes its name from the Gulf of Mexico. It is chiefly caused by the "heaping up" of the waters in the warm equatorial current in the Gulf. It flows from the Gulf as a current, 2,000 feet deep and 50 to 100 miles wide, along the east coast of the United States. At Newfoundland it merges with the general eastern movement of the waters of the Atlantic. This movement is caused by the prevailing southeast winds. The movement, or "drift," divides; one washes the west coast of the British Isles and reaches the Arctic by three arms; the other goes south along the coast of Spain and west coast of Africa.

J. H. L., Galt, Ontario, Canada. 1. Where can I find the annual expenditure for war purposes of the different nations of the world? 2. What caused the trouble between the United States and Japan? 3. What does the term mean, The evangelization of the world?

1. You can get the amounts appropriated each year for the army and navy of the United States by sending to the War and Navy departments, Washington. Most of the great powers keep their actual expenditures for armaments a state secret. The figures given out are often a blind. 2. The question whether Japanese students of mature years should attend the same schools as American children in California, and the question of Japanese immigration. At present, the Japanese government is pledged to divert immigration as much as possible to Manchuria and Korea. 3. The evangelization of the world is the desire of all Christian people. It is that there shall not be a people, nor a single person, who has not heard the Gospel story.

E. S., South Norwalk, Conn. St. Patrick, the apostle of Ireland, was born in the village of Bannavem Taberniæ, near Dumbarton, and though the place of his birth is now in Scotland, yet, for centuries before he was born and for centuries afterward, the place belonged to the Britons, from whom Patrick himself sprung. When sixteen years old he was captured by predatory Irish. Carried to North Ireland, he spent six years there as a slave. Then he escaped, went to Gaul, where he became a monk, and later returned to Ireland as a missionary.

Old Subscriber, Corning, N. Y. 1. As our real estate property is jointly deeded to us as husband and wife, can we legally make joint will to our heirs of such property? If not, how should such property be willed? 2. What magazine will give the best account of the political reformation in Turkey?

1. Mr. G. H. Crawford, our attorney, answers as follows: A deed of real estate to husband and wife creates what is called an "estate by entirety," the peculiar feature of which is that the survivor of the two owns the entire property absolutely. Joint wills are not recognized by New York law. The husband and wife should make separate wills, but in that case the survivor could make a new will, disposing of the real estate as he or she pleased. If the parties in this case want the real estate to go to a particular person, they may execute a deed of trust, reserving a life estate to themselves and to the survivor of the two, and providing that upon the death of the survivor the property shall go to a designated person or persons. 2. The Review of Reviews, 13 Astor Place, N. Y., will give what you wish.

J. C. C., Eastman, Ga. 1. How many countries are there which have not heard the Gospel? 2. What was the difficulty between Mexico and the United States that was settled in 1849, and what amount of indemnity did we receive? 3. What progress are they making on the great bridge at Quebec? 4. Did Taft ever make his report to Congress on the Panama Canal after his last trip to Panama?

1. Probably every country of the world has been visited by some missionary, though there are many dark spots in Africa, China and other places, where there are no missionaries, and whose people are ignorant of the Bible. 2. The Mexican War was caused by the annexation of Texas by the United States, in 1845. Mexico had never recognized the republic of Texas, and had planned to retake it. The United States also took up the claim of Texas to the land between the Nueces and Rio Grande del Norte. The United States was victorious. By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, the United States took New Mexico and Upper California, and the Rio Grande was decided on as the boundary. The United States paid Mexico $15,000,000 as compensation. 3. Since the accident we have seen no report on the condition of the Quebec bridge; it will be finished, however. 4. President Taft embodied his opinions on the canal in his message to Congress. He made the trip largely for his own information, and does not have to report to Congress.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood

FLAG DAY ON THE FARM

ON June 14, Flag Day, young Americans and old, patriotic citizens far and near, will pay a graceful tribute to their country's Flag. In the school and on the farm, from public building and private residence, from humble cottage and lordly mansion the Stars and Stripes will proudly float on that day. No flag in all the world is so beautiful as "Old Glory," and, we may add, no more beautiful American Flag will fly from any home in the land on June 14 than those already secured Absolutely Free by hundreds of our readers under the terms of our great Patriotic Offer. For full details see issue of May 12.

We will send you FREE FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER: (1) An American Flag, Best Quality, size Four by Six Feet; (2) A Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 Inches; (3) A Large Double-Tone Picture, 18x21 Inches, of All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft.

We will send you FREE FOR TWO SUBSCRIBERS, ONE NEW and ONE of which may be a RENEWAL, the same Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence and the same Large Picture of All the Presidents, but a much larger Flag, measuring Five by Eight Feet. Our Art Gallery De Luxe is sent FREE to every subscriber.

ALL PATRIOTIC OUTFITS SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE, CHARGES FULLY PREPAID BY US

Address To-day: CHRISTIAN HERALD FLAG OFFER, Bible House, New York City

Miscellaneous

A. B. B., Saratoga, N. Y. A proper noun when applied to a particular planet.

Mrs. S. B. H., Williamson, Pa. The inaugural ball, at the beginning of a new administration, has long been a fixed social feature, and we do not believe that any effort such as you suggest could change it.

Mrs. G. A. H., Springfield, O. Stick to your denomination. The man or woman who goes gadding about from one denomination to another is making a poor use of spiritual opportunities.

Subscriber, Winchester, O. 1. Rules governing baptism vary in different denominations. In a majority, the rite is essential to membership; but in most cases, a declaration that baptism was performed in infancy is considered sufficient. 2. We cannot answer all questions received for THE MAIL-BAG.

Subscriber, Richmond, Va. 1. There are very many to whom the memory of a faithful and godly wife is so precious that a second marriage would be highly improbable. 2. For a husband to allude to his first wife in the presence of his second would, to say the least, be in bad taste. 3. Good poetry is scarce.

Subscriber, Oregon. You will find the names of all the Presidents, dates of birth, etc., in any good almanac or encyclopedia.

Subscriber, Madison, N. J. It may have done so, but we certainly would not reproduce any such matter in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. E. H. G., Newark, N. J. 1. No Scripture bearing on the matter. 2. The Lord's Prayer was given for the use of believers throughout the world, and not for any one nation or race. 3. Paul's teaching as to women speaking in public had special application to social and religious conditions in Corinth at the time. This has already been explained fully in THE MAIL-BAG.

Reader, Chestertown, N. Y. 1. Buying stocks on margin is gambling, pure and simple. Buying railroad shares outright, that is, owning the certificates, is a legitimate investment. 2. No man who professes to be a Christian should have anything to do with the liquor business, which is unquestionably one of the greatest producers of crime, poverty, misery and general wickedness of the present age.

NEW YORK, MAY 26, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

THE QUIRINAL PALACE, ROME, ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL AND IMPOSING OF EUROPE'S ROYAL RESIDENCES

AN AUDIENCE WITH ITALY'S KING

I HAD determined to take a month's vacation, in order to put myself in good trim for the summer work at Mont-Lawn, and together with my wife took passage, April 10, on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika. Our programme was very short: nine days over, ten days on shore, and nine days back—four weeks in all.

We were three days out when I received a wireless telegram, informing me that when Baron Edmondo Mayor Des Planches, the Italian Ambassador at Washington, heard that I had started for Europe he expressed the hope that I would visit Rome, in order that I might meet King Victor Emmanuel III. To facilitate matters, he immediately forwarded by the Kronprinz Wilhelm, a faster vessel, letters of introduction, which I would find on my arrival in Berlin.

As this was the first protracted outing in twenty years for my wife and myself jointly, and our plans had all been arranged in advance, I hesitated to seriously entertain the thought of a trip to Rome, as it would cut out five of the ten days we planned to spend together in Europe. But when I reached Berlin the letters forwarded by the Italian Ambassador determined my course. There was an introduction to His Excellency, Prime Minister Tittoni; another to the customs and railway officials, requesting them to show the traveler every courtesy consistent with their duty; and the third one, addressed to me, urging me to go to Rome, where the government had already been advised of my prospective visit. The last letter was so very cordial and yet so insistent that I concluded it my bounden duty to comply.

Monday morning at half-past one o'clock I took the train at Leipzig, and, traveling forty hours, reached the Eternal City Tuesday afternoon. I at once communicated with Hon. Lloyd C. Griscom, the American Ambassador, and received from him a reply that the King was at his country-seat, and regretted very much that he could not receive me the following day, as he and the Queen were scheduled to leave in the morning direct for Naples, where they were to meet the King and Queen of England and the Dowager Empress of Russia.

Now, I had promised my wife that I would sail home with her on the Amerika; she to sail from Hamburg on Thursday, and I on Friday from Cherbourg. Hence I could not await the King's convenience without disappointing her. I therefore telephoned Ambassador Griscom that I must leave Rome the following day, and also telegraphed my wife to that effect. It was then nine o'clock in the evening. Two hours later, a large envelope, addressed to me and marked "Urgentissimo" (very urgent), was left at the Hotel Quirinale, where I stopped. It was immediately brought to my room, and on opening it I was informed by Ambassador Griscom that he had read over the 'phone to Prime Minister Tittoni the Italian Ambassador's letter, and had acquainted him with my inability to stay longer than the next afternoon. Shortly after he had received a letter, stating that "His Majesty, the King, had decided to come to Rome in the morning and would receive Dr. Klopsch in private audience at 10:20. Would His Excellency, the Ambassador, kindly inform Dr. Klopsch of the King's determination?"

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy

The next morning a coach was ordered and, in accordance with the programme, a visit was paid to the Ambassador's residence, where the driver was supplemented by a tall footman, who wore on his tall silk hat a red, white and blue cockade, indicating that he was attached to the American Embassy. Then I was driven to the Royal Palace, while the pedestrians on the streets peered in through the open windows to get a glimpse of the lonely occupant of the impressive equipage.

It was a few minutes after ten when I arrived at the gateway, and, flanked by the footman, walked through a long courtyard, on either side of which were stationed numerous soldiers, dressed in gorgeous uniforms, who saluted in military fashion as we passed them; then down another courtyard at right angles with the former, until we reached the entrance to the palace, before which were stationed more soldiers. Here the footman left me, and, having ascended the outer steps, I was escorted by two uniformed men up two flights, at the head of which a door opened, and I was ushered into an anteroom, where two gentlemen-in-waiting received me, mentioning my name in an inquiring tone, and, when assured that they were right, introducing themselves. One of them then went back as if to guard the door leading to the royal reception room, while the other engaged me in conversation.

We touched on many subjects, among them the present rivalry among different European countries in the construction of Dreadnoughts. "Think of it," he said, "$15,000,000 for a single Dreadnought—75,000,000 lire! How very, very much money! It keeps our countries poor. Too bad!" He also referred to the great things America had done for Italy to relieve suffering incident to the fearful calamity that had befallen Messina and Calabria. Just then the door opened and he immediately excused himself and went inside. A minute after, he returned, and announced, "His Majesty will now receive Dr. Klopsch."

When I left New York I had no idea of a

Continued on page 453

THE
American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. J. A. Chambliss, D.D.*

THE LIVING WATER

TEXT: John 4 : 11—"Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep."

THE wells of the East in the time of Christ were provided with no fixtures for drawing water, not even the simple machinery of the sweep or the windlass. A rude pitcher was formed from the skin of the goat or the sheep, and this, with a long cord attached, was sunk by means of weights into the water, sometimes at great depths. Jacob's well is said to have been at one time more than a hundred feet deep.

It was midday, and the fierce heat of the sun compelled to thoughts of shade and rest, when a woman, coming out of the town of Sychar, close by, with her pitcher on her shoulder, approached this well. She had trod the path often before and had little thought that any new and wonderful experience awaited her to-day; little thought but that she would go on as she had always done, a poor burdened, weary, sinful woman.

The Stranger by the Well

But what gracious surprises the Lord sometimes prepares for those who most need and least expect his blessing! See how it was with this woman. She finds a stranger sitting by the well, resting himself from his journey. To her casual glance he is just a tired, dusty foot-traveler, such as she has often seen resting there in the shade. She perceives from his dress that he is a Jew, and expects of him nothing but silent contempt, which she is ready to return with interest.

But how mistaken she is! The stranger speaks to her politely, asking the favor of a drink of water. She can hardly believe her ears. "Thou art a Jew—I am a woman of Samaria. The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans, yet thou wilt speak to me and even beg a favor of me!" Again the stranger speaks. He tells her she does not know him—does not know what a gift God is offering her in the golden opportunity of this moment, else would the tables be turned; she would be the supplicant and he the benefactor, giving her living water. She is astonished at the answer. She never heard speech so strange as this. She looks at the traveler again. He does not seem to be demented, he has the air of soberness and truth. But what, then, can he mean? She will find out, if possible.

"Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep. Whence then hast thou that living water?" She does not tell him in plain terms that he is talking nonsense; she would not needlessly offend one who is evidently good and kind. But her question is one of half-amused incredulity. She was familiar with the term "living water," and supposed he used it in the natural physical sense of fresh-flowing water as distinguished from that which has been standing.

A Natural Error

"Why," she says, "thou art not prepared even to draw up the water which stands nearest the surface; by what means, then, dost thou propose to reach down to the living water—the very fountain itself—as it springs alive and fresh at the bottom of the well?" You remember how Jesus met this objection of her ignorance, how he gradually poured in light upon her darkened mind, convinced her of sin, made her feel her urgent spiritual need and then revealed to her himself as the Messiah of prophecy, the desire of all nations, the one all-satisfying good for every laboring, heavy laden soul to the end of the world.

Now for the rest, I want to ask you to reflect, with me, upon the mistake which this Samaritan woman made, and consider whether it was not such a one as we might make—as some of us, no doubt, have made here and there on the journey of life. She underestimated the resources of Christ. That was her mistake. She did not think of what he might have in reserve. She did not suppose that he had any means or instrumentality for accomplishing his wishes beyond what she was able to see. To her he was no more than an ordinary man, talking strangely about things too great for him. Yes, indeed, she would like to have living water, especially such as this dreamer talked of—never to thirst any more, never to have to come on this toilsome journey to the well. But that would be an unheard of thing. Not even father Jacob, who gave them the well, could have done so much as that. How utterly impossible for this poor young man!

You see, hers was a mistake of ignorance, and so the gracious Lord tenderly considers her lack of knowledge and gives her credit for a willing heart. She had probably never heard of Jesus, and no wonder she failed at first to recognize the divine power and grace which lay in the background of his mysterious words. But if we have ever made her mistake, for which of us could her plea be offered? Not know the gift of God? Not know who it is that asks us to give him to drink of our trust, our gratitude, our love? Not know the ability and readiness of the Lord to do anything required for the welfare and happiness of those who look to him for salvation? No! no! Our trouble is not that we are ignorant, but that we are unbelieving. With us it is not the untaught mind, but the doubting heart, which so often makes reply to his offers of present grace and his promises of future good, "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep."

Let me speak of two or three such times, one or another of which may come back to you in memory, if indeed it is not recognized as a present experience.

"Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with"

There was a time—it may be a good many years ago—when you felt the weight, the misery, of unforgiven sin. You wished and sighed for the peace, the rest, the good hope of the Christian. Sometimes you could shake off the hand which the Blessed One had laid upon you, but not long could you be at ease. The anxious question would thrust itself upon you, "Am I not unsaved?" You could not cheat your soul, like a man I was talking with, who said, "If I pay every man one hundred cents on the dollar and don't wrong any man, I'm pretty safe for a home in heaven." You felt that you must have Christ—or no eternal salvation. Then Jesus drew near. Again and again you heard his gentle voice, "Come unto me," "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." He offered to deliver you from sin, to fill your soul with peace, to keep you from falling and to present you at last unaccused in the presence of his glory. But you were not immediately blessed. Day after day, perhaps month after month, you continued to go comfortless and burdened. Why? Was it not because you said in your heart, "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep." Lord, I don't see how it is possible. I can't trust without doubting. I can't hope without fearing. I can't feel that I should be safe and happy as a child of God by just accepting and trusting in the word "Whosoever believeth in Him hath eternal life and shall never come into condemnation." I should be sure to fail and fall and be cast out if I made the start. But Jesus did not leave you; he continued to stand at the door and knock, and plead, "Open unto me!" And only then, when your heart was at last persuaded, when you fell helpless and trusting into his waiting arms, you found that it was all true—you lacked nothing, you were complete in him. Underestimating Christ's pardoning grace, how many have by this been kept waiting long for peace and the joy of the Lord! But perhaps I can recall to some of you a later and a different time. I am very sure that more than one of us will own the experience.

You entered joyously on the path of discipleship. For some months or years you walked steadily in the light—prayerful, watchful, faithful and fruitful. You were making progress in the spiritual life. With strong courage you had stood in the ranks and beaten down many a foe, within and without. You stood fair as a Christian in the eyes of the world, and also, too securely in your own eyes. And then one day the tempter came, charming never so wisely. You were off your guard, and listened to his flattering song. Softly he spread the snare for your feet.

The Backslider

With gentle hand he cast his cords about you; now here, now there, now over, now under, around and around and around, until at length your soul started from its slumber to hear the cry of deceived and violated conscience, "Samson, the Philistines are upon thee," and you were shorn of your locks and bound. Then the Saviour was crucified afresh and put to open shame. Then the world, which had smiled upon and flattered you, stood aloof and pointed a mocking finger. Then the brethren who had trusted and honored you and rejoiced in your constancy and faith bowed their heads in grief and shame. But you were not forsaken. Your injured and betrayed Redeemer came to you with words of hope and cheer. He bade you rise and break your cruel fetters. He said his grace should yet be sufficient for you, that his love was still strong and faithful and undying.

Why, then, did you not instantly arise out of the dust of contrition and walk forth free and happy again in your Lord's restoring love? Why, but that you answered, out of a weak and trembling soul, "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep." I can never get away from this mighty demon. Grace can't help me now. I am fallen too low ever to be lifted up. I am too polluted ever to be washed clean. Ah, but it was not so! And ere long you found the purpose forming in your soul to rise in the strength of God and conquer or die. You felt the arm of the Lord about you, heard the voice of his reassuring love, and knew that you had made the bitter mistake of underestimating his restoring grace.

I sometimes think that the backslider is slowest of all sinners to hope in God's mercy, to believe in God's unchanging love. But why should it be so? What man among us can stand against his children's repentant tears?

A Father's Forgiveness

A generation ago one of the most prominent among the literary women of Europe was the outcast daughter of an illustrious house. For years she wandered over the continent with shame in her heart, repudiated by the home of her childhood. One day she learned that her father, in extreme old age, had invited all his children to meet at his house for what would probably be his last birthday. Old memories revived, she longed to go back and see her old father once more and her brothers and sisters, but dared not go without permission. She was filled with shame and grief and penitence for her past life, and determined to go home if she might. She sat down and wrote to her father just one line: "And may I come, too?" Back came the answer from the trembling hands of the old man: "You have poured the last drop of joy into the cup of your aged father. Come, my daughter, come, come." And so she went, with a veil over her face, crossed the threshold with garments of mourning, entered the room where her father was sitting, and, kneeling before him, said: "Father, forgive me, forgive me!"

The brothers and sisters, with joy in their hearts, were gathering around her when, looking into her father's face, they saw the eyes set. The hand was motionless, remaining in blessing upon that forehead from which a moment since it had lifted the veil. The spirit of the good old man had gone to be with God. Tell me, in all the years of that child's wanderings had her father ceased to love her and watch for her return? Oh, the face of our Father

Continued on next page

* Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Plainfield, N. J.

AN AUDIENCE WITH ITALY'S KING ❋

Continued from page 451

royal audience; hence I lacked the regulation clothes, but Mr. Griscom set me at rest by saying that His Majesty was a very common-sense man, and that in view of the circumstances a dark suit would answer the requirements. I therefore entered the royal presence clad in a plain, dark cutaway suit.

Almost at the very door the King received me, taking my hand and shaking it cordially, remarking at the same time, "What a beautiful work you are doing! Come and sit down." And down we sat, but not before I had thanked His Majesty for inconveniencing himself to grant me this interview. When we were seated, I had abundant opportunity to observe the quiet, unassuming King and to enjoy his excellent English. He spoke freely, without any hesitancy, as though English were his mother-tongue.

He said that the princely generosity of America had deeply touched his heart, and that he was glad of the opportunity to give expression to his sincere gratitude for the practical shape the sympathy of the American people had assumed. Particularly in behalf of the Queen he wished to thank me personally, and through me the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, for what their liberality had enabled Her Majesty to do for the relief of widowed mothers and fatherless babes. "America," continued he, "is a rich country; indeed, very, very rich, and its people know how to use the bounties of a kind Providence in a way that must be pleasing to the Giver of every good gift."

He then asked me, "How do you raise such vast sums? Do the millionaires of your country give you large sums?" I replied that the money was generally from people in moderate circumstances, who give as God has given them and in His Name. "Then they must be very good people. Do they give large amounts?" "No, Your Majesty," I answered, "the average contribution is $2.75." "But that is very large. Fourteen lire* is a great deal of money in Italy."

To show him what a great sacrifice, in many instances, the contributors underwent in order to have a share in the good work I recited several instances that had come to my attention, and the King was genuinely affected by what I told him. He said that he had learned a good deal about the charitable work of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, but when I mentioned to him that in fifteen years it had received and disbursed four million dollars it seemed to the King almost incredible. "Twenty million lire!" he said, as though he could better realize the enormous proportions of this labor of love if translated into Italian money, "twenty million—twenty million lire—simply stupendous!"

He changed the subject for a while, saying that he was very sorry that Ambassador Griscom was to leave. "He is a very fine man, and very popular, and has done most excellent work in connection with the Red Cross relief operations; too bad he must leave us." I ventured to remark that he would probably continue to stay for some time, as, owing to the crisis in Turkey, it was unlikely that Ambassador Leishman, who has been transferred from Constantinople to Rome, could leave his present post, at least for a while. "It will be only a few days," he replied, implying that in his estimation the new order of things in Turkey was practically an accomplished fact. "Is it not marvelous that the Sultan could so long have held his own with Turkey alone stagnant, while all the rest of the world was making tremendous progress?" I inquired. "Thirty-three years," the King replied, as though himself marveling at the great length of the "sick man's" incumbency, and then continued, "the Sultan was a very hard-working man. He worked eighteen hours a day, and knew minutely all that was going on in Turkey. I am surprised that the Young Turk movement should have so quickly and completely overwhelmed him. He must have been very oversanguine of late, or very poorly and incorrectly informed."

*One lira is equivalent to a trifle less than twenty cents.

Then, suddenly changing the subject, he said, "I was very much pleased at meeting President Roosevelt the other day, at Messina. He is a very fine man. He must be shooting wild animals by this time." I told him that Mr. Roosevelt was deeply interested in Red Cross relief work, but that much of its present success was due to the hearty co-operation of our new President, Mr. Taft, who is also president of the American National Red Cross Society. "But can he find time to attend to all that work besides his own?" he asked. "It is not necessary for him to devote much time, as Miss Boardman, the executive head of the Red Cross, is a remarkably clever and active woman." To which he impressively replied, "She must have been very busy of late."

I expressed regret at the injury which the Queen was reported to have met with while ministering to the suffering in Messina. "It is very sad," said I, "that she fractured a rib, and I sincerely hope that she is not permanently hurt." "Oh, no," replied he, "she simply stumbled and fell, striking against a bottle, bruising herself, but now she is fully restored."

Hon. Lloyd C. Griscom
U. S. Ambassador to Italy

We then discussed the needfulness of providing for the orphans resulting from the Messina disaster, and I intimated that we could readily find homes for most of them in America. "That would be impossible," remarked he very promptly, "as our people would never consent to their being sent from the country." He expressed the hope that I would confer with the Duke of Aosta and the Central Relief Committee in connection with orphan support.

"You have met many crowned heads?" queried he. In reply I mentioned a number, and among them the Queen of England and the Dowager Empress of Russia. "I am going to meet them both at Naples to-morrow," he said, with a smile, which indicated that he anticipated a pleasant time. "You have also met the Emperor of Russia?" "Yes," I answered, and added, "I fear that he is not very happy." "Why?" asked the King. "Well, the papers say that he is not." "I assure you that you are mistaken. I know the Emperor of Russia is very happy, and very contented. One must not believe half the papers say," he said, with a pleasant, reassuring smile, as though to convey to me that he did not mean to include THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. "I fear," said I, "Your Majesty, that talking to royalty about royalty is like carrying coals to Newcastle," at which he again smiled.

"How many copies does your journal circulate?" was his next query. "Two hundred and forty-six thousand a week," was the response. "Two hundred and forty-six thousand," repeated he, "that is a large number. You must reach over two million people a week. We figure here in Italy that every paper is read by ten people on the average. How long have you had the paper?" "About twenty years." "What was its circulation then?" "Thirty-one thousand." "You must be very proud," was his comment on this bit of information; but as he immediately added, "I have heard of your great work in India," I was left in doubt as to its proper application.

We talked of several of the more important charitable enterprises which our subscribers had enabled us to engage in, and particularly of our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn, at which over 500 Italian boys and girls and 2,500 others are entertained every summer. The King was at once greatly interested, and requested me to send him a descriptive circular of the Home, "as that charity is so beautiful."

We had conversed over an hour when the King, looking at his watch, said, "I will now have to take my train for Naples, to meet the King of England." We arose; he shook my hand and, wishing me a pleasant voyage home, led me to the door and with another hand-shake we parted, and the audience was over.

. . .

The next day the daily papers of Rome printed very complimentary accounts of the great work of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, making special appreciative mention of the generous share it had taken in Messina relief work, particularly among mothers and children, under the direction of gracious Queen Helena.

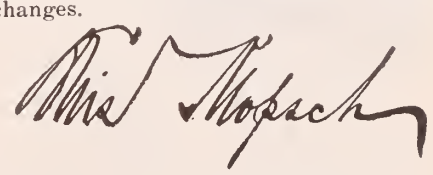
. . .

LUNCH AT THE AMERICAN EMBASSY

After the audience I drove to the American Embassy, to thank Ambassador Griscom for his kind offices in arranging for the audience when conditions were rather unfavorable. He invited me to lunch at his house, where I met Mrs. Griscom, a queenly woman and a most charming hostess, who expressed intense interest in CHRISTIAN HERALD relief work the world over.

We sat down. There were at the table, besides Ambassador Griscom and his wife, Mr. Griscom's brother, the writer, Messrs. Wilbur and Orville Wright, the world-famed aeronauts, Miss Katherine Wright and the manager of the Associated Press. Miss Wright is a very vivacious and bright young woman. She said that they had had a splendid time while abroad, had been treated royally, and were looking forward with pleasure to their return. She has great faith in her brothers and in their experiments, and has given all her money to help them in their work. Her devotion to her brothers and her sisterly admiration of the work in which they are engaged are truly beautiful to witness. Her father is a Methodist clergyman, and, if his health permits, they will take him to France, where their aerial experiments will be continued.

Before lunch was half over I was compelled to leave, as the only train I could take to catch the Amerika at Cherbourg was to start in an hour, and as I had some packing to do I had of necessity to ask to be excused. I left Rome at three o'clock, caught the Amerika, and reached New York Saturday, May 8, exactly four weeks from the day we started. Our schedule had in the main been carried out to the letter, though the royal audience necessitated some important changes.



THE LIVING WATER

Sermon by Rev. J. A. Chambliss, D.D.

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

in heaven is never turned away from a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

There is one other form in which we may make the mistake of the Samaritan woman. How prone we are to underestimate the Lord's power to uphold and deliver in the day of trouble! You remember when you came to the time of your greatest trouble? Perhaps it was misfortune overtook you and the accumulated goods of many years slipped out of your hands, took to themselves wings and flew away. Perhaps sickness came, painful and incurable. Perhaps the terrible shape of death appeared at your door, entered without a pause for courtesy and bore away your dearest to the darkness of the grave. In your misery you cried with Jacob (whose well had no water for such a time!), "All these things are against me." Surely all things do not work together for good to the Lord's children. If my God meant to bring me nearer, meant to purify me and lift me up to greater strength and usefulness, his resources have failed. At last he has nothing to draw with. The well is too deep for even the farthest reach of his promises; and wretchedly, despairingly you said, like Job, "My soul chooseth strangling and death rather than life." But the storm passed. The rainbow of the covenant was spanning the cloud, and with strange sweetness, as if whispered by angel lips, the words found entrance into your heart, "When thou passest through the waters I will be with thee, and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee. When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flames kindle upon thee." Believe it, thou child of God, the Lord has still something to draw with—the well is not too deep for him. Only trust him, and thou shalt see.

Oh that the Lord of the well—that is, not Jacob's but his own, who bringeth the gift of God—may be heard as he speaks to each of us to-day, whether thirsting for rest, or thirsting for hope, or thirsting for pardoning mercy, saying "Lo, I give thee the living water; take it, drink it, my child, and it shall be in thee a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

JASPER GRANT'S FAMILY REDEEMED

I AM sure the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be pleased to see the picture of the late Jasper Grant's immediate family, for whose redemption they so generously gave the money. Theresa, the mother, occupies the centre of the group, being seated with her baby girl, Mary, in her arms. Minnie, the one next to the baby in age, stands in front by her mother. On the mother's right are three girls, Kate, Jessie and Lettie; on the left are two others, Grace, named for Miss White, who led the father to Christ, and Sallie. The little boy on the left is David, and the one on the right is Taylor, named for Bishop William Taylor.

Wesley Fish is now, by right of seniority, "headman" for the entire family, heathen and Christian. He and Jasper were only cousins; but according to native custom that makes them "brothers." Wesley is one of Miss White's converts also, and though now a man perhaps seventy years old, is one of the best workers we have. His energetic little wife, Diodie, who got the heathen people to help her persecute Wesley when he was first converted, is shown in this picture (marked with a cross). She is now clothed and in her right mind, a power in the hands of the Master to save others. The girl who stands at Mrs. Grant's right is Alice, one of our mission girls, whose father was trying to take her from the mission in order to sell her to a heathen man. Since Jasper had only seven girls instead of eight, Alice was stubstituted, and we have redeemed her also.

Mrs. Jasper Grant and Her Children, Redeemed from Heathen Slavery by "The Christian Herald"

I am sure it will interest you to know something of the "palaver" which preceded my taking over the Grant family. Strange to say, the heathen man who was head of the family died in January of the present year, and this made Wesley, who came next in age, "headman." When I talked with him about redeeming the family, he said: "Bishop, you no must pay money for Jasper people. I be headman, I don't want nutten; I give him all for mission." Then I explained to him that he is an old man and cannot live long; when he is gone, then he who would become headman is not a Christian and will take the children from us. He saw the situation at once, and agreed that I send out to his native town, twelve miles, and call his brother, who comes next to him, and a nephew next in age. Their names are Blebo and Wooreh. The older man, Blebo, is a proud old heathen. He preferred to have the mission take the children without papers or money, and let him sell them when they became old enough. He can get two bullocks, a goat or two, etc., for each girl, so that, when all "dashes" are paid, they calculate they could have anywhere from $60 to $70 for each.

I said, "Blebo, you see that small bullock out there" (and I pointed to a calf). "Yes, I see him." "Well," said I, "you think the man who owns him is going to feed him and take care of him till he grow to be big bullock, and then let you come sell him and take the money?" He laughed and said, "All right, palaver cut." (That ends it.) That is, he had nothing more to say. The papers were then prepared in proper form and the men called in to sign. Wesley signed first. When we told Blebo to touch the pen, he drew back and said he didn't want to sign papers, "so we would never tell the children that he was their father"; that is, that he is related to them. This we promised to do, and he signed. Then Wooreh touched the pen, and thus they relinquished all right to the girls and their issue. Wesley, God bless him, stuck to it that he wanted no money and would take none. Hence, after "dashing" the two men, the balance of the money was set apart for scholarships in two of the missions, Garraway and Wissika, for the older children, and to build a good country house at Wesley's station for the mother, also to provide clothing, etc., for the younger children during the year.

Blebo and the younger man left perfectly happy, but I think Wesley was happier than either. After the two men had gone, he returned to the house and, with his old black face shining with the pleasure he felt, said, "Bishop, I tank you, I tank God and I tank our Christian people."

Thus THE CHRISTIAN HERALD adds one more chapter to its most interesting volume of benefactions. God bless THE CHRISTIAN HERALD!

Monrovia, Liberia. BISHOP I. B. SCOTT.

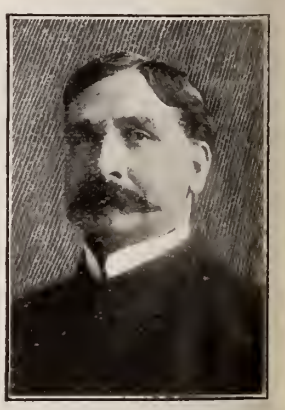
PREACHING THE GOSPEL BY THE SEA

Mr. T. C. Roberts-Horsfield

DURING the past seven summers the divine command, "Go, preach the Gospel," has been carried out by the Brooklyn City Mission and Tract Society at Coney Island, and for the eighth season the work is to reopen on Decoration Day, May 30. The services will be in charge of Evangelist T. C. Roberts-Horsfield and Rev. Robert Rein, with the assistance of a number of Brooklyn pastors and laymen. They do not have to go to Italy to preach to the Italians; they are here. Also Greeks, Hebrews, Syrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Hindoos, and a great number of other different nationalities, who seldom go to church or mission, but come in large numbers to this famous seaside and pleasure resort. During the past seven summers of work among this great cosmopolitan crowd that gathers there every year the Gospel has been preached to no less than a million people, and it is expected from the preparations made by the amusement companies of Coney Island that the crowds will be greater this season than ever.

Any one visiting Coney Island, after having had experience in the city churches and missions, cannot help but realize that the people are drifting away from the churches. Thousands who were once either church members or church attendants have lost their interest and are seeking worldly pleasure. It is to such people that these services are directed, in the hope and expectation that their hearts will be touched and consciences awakened by the preaching of the Gospel. From past observation such people drift into these services, and their attention and interest are at once attracted and aroused. They are often riveted to the spot by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. Dormant feelings are stirred to new life, and a conviction of sin is awakened.

The Coney Island meetings afford an immense opportunity to reach the so-called masses. The people go there in throngs. The statistics of the railroads centring there show that all the way from 100,000 to 500,000 visit this popular resort in a day. They are, for the most part, in the open air. They are there to see and hear. Weary with the noise and excitement of the shows, thousands of them are glad to listen. What an opportunity! This work ought to be planned and carried out on a greater scale. Besides the open-air services, there should be a sheltered place, opening on Surf Avenue or the Coney Island Bowery, where services could be held three times a day, and where the greatest preachers in the land would feel it to be a privilege and an honor to address the crowds. Young men and women by the thousands out of the churches go there for trolley rides and the sea breeze. Instead of becoming summer backsliders, the summer might be made a period of Christian development. The Brooklyn City Mission Society seeks the co-operation of friends to make such a work possible, and trusts that a liberal response will be the outcome of this brief report and explanation of the work. Last year 91 Gospel services were held, with an estimated attendance of 161,000; 683 persons signified in some way their purpose to live a Christian life. All communications should be addressed to H. E. Nitchie, treasurer, 215 Montague Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., Room 813.



Rev. Robert Rein

An Interested Audience in the Open Air, at Coney Island

CHINA'S MARCH TO THE FRONT

Three Young Students

Fishing with Cormorant Birds on a Chinese River

Lord Li's Three Daughters

By REV. Z. CHARLES BEALS

WUHU, CHINA

ABOUT thirty years ago, China sent quite a number of her young men as students to England and America to study Western sciences and international law. Among these were Lord Li, now Minister to Great Britain; Wu Ting Fang, now Minister to America, and Tang Shao Ye, now Minister of the Interior, but who was sent to the United States last year as Special Envoy to thank our government for the return of the Boxer War indemnity money.

The First Native Bible-woman

The Boxer War was the nation struggling out of superstition and darkness into light and civilization. To-day we have a new China, which is determined to throw off the old fetters—the opium curse, foot-binding, ancestor worship, necromancy and the like. To educate her people, she has erected in every province many school buildings, where Western sciences are now being taught. She realizes that the men whom she can depend upon to-day are the men who have been educated abroad. The Chinese student is also now obliged to take up the study of English, for China knows that English is now, and will be increasingly so, the great commercial language of the world. The newspapers and colleges are awakening the whole vast population to the national consciousness and conviction that they must learn from the feet of Western teachers. Modern education in China covers a period of only a few years, but the system has made wonderful strides in this time. Before this, the missionary paid little or no attention to educational work. There seemed to be no demand for it, but now conditions have changed. Our young men and young women demand well-equipped schools and all Western sciences.

In the last five years China has sent over to Japan many thousands of students, and to-day she has 11,000 in that country. She has also sent to America over 500, and arrangements have been made to send over 100 more each year, for four years, and then a minimum number of 50 until the year 1940, the government paying all expenses. A large number was also sent to Great Britain, among others Gaston Li, only son of Lord Li. He has just entered Christ College, Oxford. He is a bright fellow, and will be one of China's coming statesmen. It was the writer's privilege to be his first American teacher.

Missionaries of all denominations are opening up academies and colleges to enable their native church people to educate and equip their children for their mission in life. Colleges and universities, sustained by them in Shanghai, Tien-Tsin, Nanking and Wu Chang, are now full to overflowing. These schools have been a mighty influence for good. Young China knows that the missionaries, at least, are there for their welfare and are trying to help wake China out of her sleep of death. A large number of the young men who have graduated from these schools are leading men of influence to-day among them: Mr. Koo, M.A., of St. Johns University, Shanghai, who is editor of the Columbia Spectator; W. C. Yen, of the same school, who is first secretary of the Chinese legation at Washington; Mr. H. Wang, of the Chinese legation, London, and his brother, Mr. K. Wang, of the same college, who is Consul-General at Melbourne, Australia. Mr. W. Wu is chief director of railways at Peking, and Mr. N. Han, of Chao Hsien, is taking post-graduate work at Cornell. In fact, young professional men are everywhere at the head of affairs in China.

Missionary Beals and a Group of His Native Converts and Teachers

Many of these young men, a few years ago, were very anti-foreign and could see no good in missionary propaganda. For instance, Chao Hsien is one of the cities noted for its many literary men. The people of this place were determined to keep the foreign missionary out of their city. One day Mr. Arnold, of the Christian Mission, tried to sell Bibles on the street there, but he was arrested as a Japanese spy and barely escaped being killed. Then Mr. Helgersen, of the Alliance Mission, attempted to preach there, but he was severely beaten by a mob. Yet to-day we have Mr. Han, of this place, at Cornell, and Mr. Hong, who was one of the leaders that beat Mr. Helgersen, is our Chin Che evangelist. To-day, Chao Hsien is wide open to the Gospel and foreign missionaries reside within its walls.

Until a year ago our mission had only three day schools at our stations, but last year we opened an academy at Wuhu, where we could board and look after the boys and young men properly. We opened school with a good number; this year it has increased twofold. These students rise early every morning, and keep up their studies until late at night. Their memories are remarkable. They can readily learn Scripture verses or assigned lessons by heart and can quote them by the hour. Start a boy to recite any chapter or verse in the New Testament, and he will go ahead; you stop him and change him to another chapter and verse, and he can go right on as though it was one continuous piece. One eight-year-old, George Gee, could do this to perfection. We are preparing our young men for evangelists and teachers. The majority of them are Christians. Those that are not already converts are soon brought into the Church through the faithful efforts of those who are Christians. Some of them have come out of sad homes. Stephen and Samuel Wang are sons of a very degraded woman, who was beaten to death by order of the city officials because of her wrongdoings; yet these two young men are earnest Christians and members of our Endeavor Society and Y. M. C. A., and hope some day to become preachers to their own countrymen.

A number of our students have already gone out to preach the Gospel. Some of these preachers are being supported by readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The "substitute plan" is to have a native worker in the foreign field, working for Christ in your stead, supported by your gifts and backed by your prayers. It costs you, to have an evangelist in China, from $60 to $72 a year, and for a Bible-woman from $36 to $40 a year.

Central China is blessed with many small rivers and canals, which is a great aid to the missionary. For many years the readers of this paper have kept running a houseboat called The Christian Herald, in connection with our Wuhu Mission. It has been useful in the past, but being a sailboat it has become too slow for present needs, so we are going to invite our friends to come to our aid and help us to get a motor-boat, which would be a tremendous advantage to our work. This boat should not be too large, and, because of the shallow water in these small rivers and canals, it should be flat-bottomed. With such a craft, we can reach places quicker, thus saving much valuable time. Cities and towns have been opened up to the Gospel because we could visit them comfortably by the old boat; but we believe many more will be opened up with our new boat. Who will lend a helping hand in this work?

I brought home with me a month ago many small, hand-carved "slipper boats," which are a genuine Oriental curiosity. We will be glad to send one of these slipper boats (as long as they last) to every donor who helps us.

The Mission Church at Wuhu

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Memorial Day

AS the years swiftly pass, our annual Memorial Day loses some of the sad significance it originally had. The veterans of the Civil War, both North and South, are old men now and every twelvemonth shows their thinning ranks. Children and young people listen to the patriotic airs as the processions march to music, look with the love it always awakens on the starry flag above the soldiers, and carry flowers to lay on the graves of those who died long years ago.

When first the beautiful custom of keeping a Memorial Day was instituted, there were those who dropped hot tears on their dead. There were many who carried bitterness in their hearts, as they thought of the strong, young lives laid down in sacrifice. The vials of wrath are no longer poured out; the tender note of peace has effaced the scars of war; everywhere the nation is one, and the new republic is starting forward, its progress ever onward in prosperity, wealth and greatness.

We are thankful that there is not now sectional animosity, jealousy or rivalry in this vast country. We are thankful that we are forging ahead, and that we have taken a front place amid the powers of the world. Our responsibilities are tremendous, our opportunities constantly increased and our duties are manifold and multiplied. The men who died to prove how much they loved their native land, on whichever side they fought and perished, have their names embalmed in the memory of this country and their fame will never perish. Nature herself weaves decorations for the graves of the dead on their Memorial Day.

The Inauguration of the Sultan

TURKEY still manages to maintain its place in public interest, now by a revolution, then by the deposition of a Sultan, or the inauguration of a new one by the Old World ceremonies, which are necessary to make Mohammed V. the accepted ruler of Islam. Though Mohammed, to the outer world, seemed to be as secure in his authority as he ever will be, the orthodox Mohammedans were most anxious that all of the ancient ceremonies should be carried out. The equivalent in Turkey to a coronation or inauguration is the girding on by the new Sultan of the sword of Othman, his famous ancestor. This occurred on May 10, in the Mosque of Eyoub. As he re-entered the city he performed another act which recalls one of the great tragedies of Christian history. On the spot where the Turks entered Constantinople when it was taken from the Greeks, he drew his sword and held it on high, a fitting reminder of the fact that from early ages the Turk has gained all he has—land, power and the hatred of persecuted thousands—by the sword. Later, the Sultan plowed a furrow in the palace grounds, to prove to the Mohammedan mind that he was physically able to sustain the burdens of the office.

The "city of the Golden Horn" was beautifully decorated and illuminated, and it was difficult to believe that but a few days before the streets ran blood. The enthusiasm of the people was unbounded and apparently sincere.

That this is a world of contrasts, and that the triumph of one is accompanied often by the tearing of all power from some one else, was well illustrated by the fact that, while his brother was cheered by thousands, Abdul Hamid was being forced to disclose to his captors the location of the last remnants of his treasure. Most of it is in European banks, but the Young Turks expect to get it on notes wrung from Abdul in ways which probably will never be made known to the world at large. We think that all people are living in the twentieth century, but some have only reached the Middle Ages.

A Queen on the Suffrage

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S recent message to the Women Nurses' Congress, at Liverpool, delivered by Princess Louise, is quoted as an indication that she is opposed to woman suffrage. She said, by her representative, that she had the fullest sympathy with them in their work. "She feels that this is the work which woman can do. Some women, nowadays, try to be like men; but this is the thing that men can't do, and it, therefore, is here that we feel superior to anybody else."

Such words from royal lips sound strangely at a time when the women of the United Kingdom are apparently on the point of winning their long battle. It may be, after all, the Queen's purpose simply to rebuke the noisy and vociferous suffragettes, rather than to cast any reflection upon the thousands of noble, earnest women who are endeavoring on legitimate lines to win representation. Besides, it should not be forgotten that the real suffrage leaders in England have themselves disavowed responsibility for the remarkable course pursued by their sensational sisters. The hint should not be lost upon American women, who are also finding the sensational element a hindrance rather than a help.

Wall Street and the Gospel

WE are glad that a special effort is to be made this summer to give Wall Street the Gospel. We hope it will strike deep and take root. Who knows what transformation might not follow a real spiritual awakening in Wall Street!

A business man said the other day, half seriously, "You preachers seem sometimes to look upon us business men as all Mammon worshipers." Certainly no sensible preacher holds such an opinion. A man is not a worshiper of Mammon because he tries hard to make money; he may do that with clean hands and a clean heart—may even do it unto the glory of God. There are, indeed, men who make gold their god, always have been, always will be. Jesus knew it, else he would not have spoken the solemn words of warning about it. But there are men who talk of nothing, think of nothing, scheme for nothing but money. Such men look up to those who have already won wealth as though they were little human gods. Yes, they make an idol of money. We should be fools and blind to deny that some of us are ourselves not beyond the possibility of falling into such idolatry. For, let us remember, they were good Christians to whom John wrote, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols," and they were dear disciples to whom Jesus said, "Take heed, and beware of covetousness."

Christianity does not require us to set no value upon earthly goods or bodily pleasures—that is asceticism, monasticism, not Christianity. The requirements of Christianity are always characterized by sound common sense. They are always workable. What Christianity does require is that God should be supreme in the heart; that nothing else should ever be put on a level with him; that he should reign in the soul as he does in the universe—alone. When Wall Street gets this sort of religion it may yet be purged and become a mighty power for good, whose influence would be felt throughout the country.

Some Future President

SOME future President or Presidents of this vast republic are at present in the schoolroom. They are receiving instruction in the primary grades; they will go straight forward to the high school and perhaps from there to college. A future President of the United States is somewhere playing baseball this spring, and he may be on a football team next autumn. It is quite possible that he is a boy on a farm; or he may be a boy in a town, doing errands for his mother and in his spare time earning pennies to help her along. Our Presidents have been drawn from every social rank in the community. They have had a great variety of training in boyhood, but every one of them had to be a boy. A President does not come into the world a grown man. Our great men the world over do not escape the universal lot, but start from the cradle and are taught their first lessons at the mother's knee. We formerly held up to every American boy, as a glittering prize to stir his ambition, the possibility that he might one day be elected to the Presidential chair. Latterly, perhaps, we hear less about this legitimate goal which boyhood may strive to attain. Why not let the boys do their best in school, at home, in business, with the thought that one day the grown-up boys shall single some one of them out and ask him to be their leader, their commander, the head of their government in the eyes of the world? A king is born to his high station; a President achieves it. Teachers and parents should do their best, remembering how great is their responsibility to the nation, as well as to the boys.

A High Tribute

IT is a gracious and grateful message which we print to-day from the Italian monarch. In the course of an interview with the proprietor of this journal, King Victor Emmanuel took occasion to express for his Queen, himself and his people, their cordial appreciation of America's golden-hearted generosity in contributing so liberally to the relief of the earthquake sufferers. He made especial reference to the work of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its readers in providing a "Mothers' and Babies' Fund," which, under the Queen's personal direction, has accomplished results that the Italian people will long remember. To the American people he paid the highest possible tribute when he said that "they knew how to use the bounties of a kind Providence in a way that must be pleasing to the Giver of every good gift."

The Sunday Question in Seattle

AS the time draws near for the opening of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, in Seattle, the advocates of an "open Sunday" are making a strong fight to have the Exposition doors thrown wide to the public on the Lord's Day. This means, of course, that all the "side shows" and the usual accompaniments of such expositions will be "wide open" also and the day will be given over to sightseeing and indulgence.

Practically all the ministers and the church-going people of the Western city have united in protest against the proposed Sabbath desecration. One section of the public has declared for a closed Sunday; another for partial restriction, and a third for an open Fair, with the widest latitude, taking the stand that this is essential to the financial success of the Exposition. It does not seem to have occurred to them that there are, no doubt, many thousands of good people throughout the country who have a wholesome respect for the Sabbath and whose plans for visiting the Exposition might be somewhat affected by such a decision.

Perhaps if the management of the Fair were to invite from the public generally, and especially from intending visitors, a frank expression of opinion by letter on the subject of Sunday opening, they might be disillusioned as to the advisability of such a step. Why not try this plan, instead of yielding altogether to local pressure, which in such a case might be swayed too much by purely financial considerations? We believe the Exposition can be made a big success, even if, as one hundred thousand people in the State of Washington have urged, every one of the so-called "pay streak" features should be suppressed on the Lord's Day, leaving the Exposition Park open to the public and the great Art Building open for services, lectures and sacred song.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, May 26, 1909

	PAGE
The Old Veteran's "Day of Days"	Cover
OUR MAIL-BAG	450
Flag Day on the Farm (Illustrated)	450
An Audience with Italy's King (Illustrated)	451, 453
The Living Water (Illustrated)	452, 453
Sermon by Rev. J. A. Chambliss, D.D.
Jasper Grant's Family Redeemed (Illustrated)	454
Preaching the Gospel by the Sea (Illustrated)	454
China's March to the Front (Illustrated)	455
By Rev. Z. Charles Beals
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	456
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	457
More Aid for Massacre Survivors (Illustrated)	458
The Story of Marco (Illustrated)	459, 464
Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter
The Scourge of the Tongue	460, 461
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
The Soldier Brothers. Poem (Illustrated)	462
A New Gipsy Evangelist (Portrait)	463
The Power of the Tongue. By Mrs. M. Baxter	465
Young People's Societies	466

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

The Wright Brothers Honored

WITH every steamship, tug and ferryboat sending forth a noisy welcome from their whistles and cheering crowds lining the docks and landing place, the Wright brothers, who have conquered the air in their aeroplane, and their sister Katherine received such a welcome as is seldom accorded to any one, no matter how famous, arriving on these shores. They were passengers on the Kronprinzessin Cecile, and a large party of prominent people went down to quarantine in tugs and boarded the ship to bid them welcome to the homeland after their triumphs abroad, which have made the name of the intrepid brothers a household word the world over.

Both of the brothers are exceedingly modest over their scientific achievements, and have decided objections to being lionized, but they goodnaturedly submitted to being photographed and interviewed. From New York they went to their home at Dayton, O., where a royal welcome had been arranged for them. According to the programme the entire city was to take a holiday, the State troops were to take part, there was to be a parade, with an aeroplane as a prominent feature, and enough receptions and banquets to the aeronauts to ruin the brothers' digestions for several years to come.

Such a reception in their native land cannot but be almost a greater satisfaction to the inventors than their financial success with their machines abroad. Up to three years ago they were known to but few in their own city. Their father is a Methodist preacher and, as the family was large, the brothers had to go to work early. They were employed in a number of occupations, and finally started a bicycle repair shop. This gradually developed until they undertook the care and repair of automobiles. All of their extra time and money they put into experiments in aeronautics, but keeping their failures and successes to themselves, as in those days any one who experimented with flying machines was considered as visionary.

At last they were so successful that the representatives of a French company came to America to watch their flights. As a result they paid down a certain sum as an option, and the Wrights agreed to build a machine for them. Their sister Katherine, who now deservedly shares their triumph, put in all of her savings and the machine was built. The French company, however, let the matter drop, as two French inventors, who had roughly copied the Wright's ideas from newspaper sketches, had constructed machines which proved temporarily successful.

Failure seemed to be the only reward for the inventors, for they had spent all they had on the venture. They went back bravely, however, to their business, and worked to restore what they had lost. Several Americans became interested, but not enough so to back the brothers financially. Army officers were in favor of the aeroplane, but Congress would not appropriate the money, as one inventor had failed who had received a large sum. Enough, however, was secured from a friend of the Wrights for the brothers to devote their entire time to the building of what proved to be successful aeroplanes.

It was in France that they achieved the success which brought them fame and fortune., and the successful flights there are known to every one. Their machines are now being built there, and rights have been secured in England and Germany. One of the brothers said to an interviewer at New York that sixty machines were now being built to fill orders. Orville Wright said, when asked as to the future of the flying machines: "It is not our opinion that the aeroplane will ever be a regular freight carrier, nor do we think that it will become a passenger vehicle. It will be an especially quick conveyance, more like an automobile." Wilbur Wright said that in the future it could be driven through the air a hundred miles an hour. He himself had gone at forty miles. The country at large well shows its appreciation of the Wrights' discoveries, as Congress has voted them medals, which will be given them by President Taft on June 10.

The singular mental ability of the Wright brothers, which led them to the mastery of the forces of nature for the benefit of mankind, the industry and dogged persistency which have characterized their endeavors, and the uprightness of their character, have commanded the congratulation and gratitude of the civilized world; and we Americans have a special reason for pride and a recognition of their singular success.

Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise. (Gen. 49 : 8.)

Orville (1) and Wilbur (2) Wright and Miss Katherine Wright

Burial of a Man's Heart

Irenæus Prime, for forty years editor of the New York Observer and one of the most widely known and influential Presbyterian ministers in the country, had a son, Rev. Dr. Wendell Prime, who was for many years pastor of the Union Presbyterian Church, of Newburgh, N. Y. About a score of years ago the wife of Dr. Wendell Prime died. The shock of her death permanently impaired the health of the husband and disqualified him from further professional service, and, while abroad for his health two years ago, he died. The Prime family had a fear of being buried alive and, at the request of its members, there was a post-mortem examination to prevent such a horrid calamity. Pursuant to the wishes of Dr. Prime, expressed to friends before he died, an autopsy was performed in accordance with the family custom. His heart was removed also, according to a wish expressed before his death, and placed in a leaden box, sealed, and this in turn placed in an iron case. On April 23 last the case was brought to Newburgh, N. Y., and interred in the grave where the remains of his wife are buried, in Cedar Hill Cemetery. It would have been the natural thing to have had the husband's body brought; but as the heart is the centre of life, it is likely that that organ was buried by the side of his companion as the symbol of life and love.

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. (Prov. 4 : 23.)

Mrs. Small Receives a Carnegie Medal

Mrs. Lulu Small, wife of the florist at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, received a telegram from Pittsburg recently announcing that a Carnegie hero medal had been awarded to her for saving the lives of Mrs. Allan S. Towson, of New York, and Mrs. Edmund Mays, of Newark, N. J., at Sea Gate. This is the second medal Mrs. Small has received for this act, the first having come from the United States Government last October. The two women rescued were swimming when one was seized with a cramp, and shouted for help; the other went to her rescue and was seized by her drowning companion and dragged to the bottom. Mrs. Small, seeing the two disappear, plunged into the surf and soon reached the struggling women. She grabbed Mrs. Towson with her right hand and Mrs. Mays with her left and, turning on her back, tried to swim ashore. By slow movement she reached a place where she could touch the ground, and succeeded in dragging them both to the shore. The two who were rescued were soon resuscitated, but Mrs. Small in her struggles for saving the women and in the pounding against the bottom and against the bodies of those rescued had three of her ribs broken and was otherwise so seriously injured that it was with great difficulty that her life was saved, and it was only after a long period of invalidism that her health was restored. Just as she was about to be laid upon the table for a serious operation at the French Hospital she received a package from the Life Saving Service of the United States, containing a gold medal, which the United States had awarded to her, and now the Carnegie Medal, the second honor for the heroic act, has been bestowed.

It is well to chronicle and honor such singular heroism, such a risk of life to save the lives of others. There is a vast deal of selfishness in the world, which expresses itself in the minutest details of every-day life, and there are records of humble deeds of benevolence and heroism that would fill libraries. Human life seems more precious as we notice such efforts to redeem it and as we witness the courage and unselfishness of those who work for the salvation of others. The home and foreign fields are full of heroic men and women who are risking their health and lives in their efforts to save the souls of their fellows, and there is no language that can describe the rewards that await them through grace divine at the hands of the Master.

Ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. (I. Peter 5 : 4.)

The Most Curious Toad in History

Charles Van Zandt, a miner at Butte, Mont., in working in a "pocket" several hundred feet below the Butte Mountain, came upon one of the most marvelous scientific discoveries of the world. It was a spade-foot toad, which had been asleep for centuries in the limestone rock and had been released by the blast underground, which had split the rock. He found the creature alive. Word was immediately sent to Director W. T. Hornady, of the New York Zoological Park, who gave minute directions as to the treatment and shipment of the toad to New York. Men of science declared that the toad was a thousand years old. Because he is supposed to have remained in the rock so long they called him Methuselah. This latest scientific wonder of the world, which had come from the West in a glass jar with a little oxygen in it, picked up a little more life, ate a few flies, regained some of its color and then died. Now, the scientific world is in a debate as to how that spade-foot could lie imbedded in the limestone rock for a thousand years, without air or food, and remain alive. We have often read of creatures being found in rocks that have been split, who were supposed to have preserved suspended animation for some time; but it stretches the credulity of the average person to believe that Methuselah, the toad, did actually live in the rock for a thousand years, without air or food. It may be possible that there was some little crack which allowed a breathing space, or some crevice through which there came a supply of food; or there may have been some mistake in the mind of the miner as to whether the toad belonged in the air-tight chamber from which it was supposed to have been released. Or it may be that the scientists who claim that animation was suspended for so long a period may be correct in their judgment. The longevity of this toad gives a strong hint of immortality. Neither the darkness of death nor the prison of the tomb can extinguish the spark of real life, which God has kindled in us forever.

And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. (Gen. 2 : 7.)

More Aid for Massacre Survivors

THE "CHRISTIAN HERALD" SENDS $5,000 FOR RELIEF TO ADANA, TARSUS AND BEIRUT

IN response to the continued appeals of the American missionaries in Asiatic Turkey, in behalf of the great numbers of destitute survivors of the recent massacres, the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has sent by cable, through our State Department in Washington, a second remittance of $5,000 for immediate use in the relief work. This remittance is sent with instructions to be apportioned as follows:

Rev. Wm. N. Chambers, Adana	$2,000
Rev. Thos. D. Christie, Tarsus	2,000
U. S. Consul Ravondal, Beirut	1,000

Dr. Chambers will apply the money to relieve suffering in the Adana district, where there are from 12,000 to 14,000 starving and destitute. President Christie will relieve sufferers in St. Paul's native city and the surrounding villages, where there has been great slaughter, and probably 10,000 are homeless and in want. The Beirut Committee, of which Consul Ravondal is chairman, will supply the needs of the vast swarms of refugees at Kessab and Latakieh. At the latter place there are 6,000 refugees in a desperate condition.

Armenians of Kessab, where a Massacre Took Place

This remittance is sent by Dr. Klopsch in anticipation of contributions to the Relief Fund. It is earnestly urged that all of our readers who sympathize with the unfortunate Armenians should send in their contributions without delay and thus enable the missionary workers to save as many lives as possible. Every gift will be acknowledged in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

A cablegram from Rev. W. W. Peet, of the American Board, Constantinople, dated May 11, says that order is being gradually restored in Cilicia. Missionary W. N. Chambers has left Adana and gone to Hadjin, and the other missionaries who were besieged in Adana have gone to their respective stations. The government has promised to punish those Turkish officials and military officers who were guilty of carrying out the recent frightful massacres. It will also take steps to relieve the needs of the Mohammedan population; but there is no promise or expectation that anything will be done to succor the many thousands of homeless sick and wounded Armenians, who are looking to the missionaries for aid. There are many widows and orphans, whose recent bereavement has left them utterly helpless. Many more must perish unless the missionaries are enabled to give them food, medicine and shelter, for a time at least. Mr. Peet adds that he has received simultaneous appeals for help from six different localities.

Latest advices from Beirut state that 14,000 are starving in that section. Near Marash, sixteen villages, with an aggregate population of 8,000 souls, have been wiped out, all being Armenians. Only old women and boys under ten years were permitted to escape the general slaughter. The girls were carried away and the men killed. The cries of the hungry, and especially the plaintive wailings of the children, are heard day and night.

It is estimated that the total of those who must be helped will not fall short of 50,000.

. . .

THE MISSIONARIES APPEAL

BY REV. HENRY JESSUP, AMER. BD., BEIRUT

YOU have learned already of the dreadful scenes of massacre and conflagration in the cities of the beautiful plain of Cilicia, Adana and Tarsus, where thousands have been killed and wounded, and the Christian quarters of Adana and Tarsus laid in ashes and thousands of Armenians are now refugees, destitute, hungry and homeless.

Dr. Christie, the energetic head of the St. Paul's Institute, in Tarsus—the birthplace of St. Paul—telegraphs that there are four thousand houseless and hungry refugees on his college premises, and he pleads for help to feed them.

We have tried to send a little from Beirut, but it will be only a drop in the bucket. Immediate help is needed. Mr. E. Freyer, our mission treasurer, will be glad to receive any contributions from America and forward them at once to Dr. Christie in Tarsus.

This dreadful uprising of the Moslems against the Armenian and Greek Christians was unexpected, but evidently planned beforehand by the reactionary and fanatical element of the Moslem Turkish populace. The whole empire is in a state of ferment and unrest. The fanatical Moslems do not believe in liberty and equality. They regard the constitution as hostile to the Koranic law, or "Shera Shereef," which gives Moslems the preference and precedence before the law, and would keep all Christians in a subordinate position. The new reform party claim that, with all deference to the prejudices of the Moslems as a religious sect, all other sects must now have equal rights and privileges. This infuriates the ignorant masses of the Moslem population, who say that Islam is already perfect and needs no reform. Intelligent Moslems are in full sympathy with the constitution and belong to the party of "Union and Progress."

The fanatical reactionaries will, no doubt, in many places, rise against the Christians and even against the Moslem reform party, and you may yet hear of many scenes of massacre. Around the Gulf of Scanderoon (the ancient Gulf of Issus) probably not less than twenty Christian villages have been burned during the past week. European ships of war are hastening to these and other Turkish ports. The murder of Mr. Rogers, American missionary in Adana, and Mr. Maurer, Mennonite missionary from Hadjin; the wounding of the British Consul, who had gone to Adana to try to stop the outbreak, and the burning of English and German factories have awakened the European powers to the gravity of the situation. It will be long before this greatly distracted empire will be at rest.

Rev. D. Kondakjian
Native Pastor of Kessab

Lord Cromer says "to reform Islam is to destroy it." This may be true of Islam as a system; but individual Moslems will assert their right to the enjoyment of "liberty, equality and fraternity," come what may, and will maintain it.

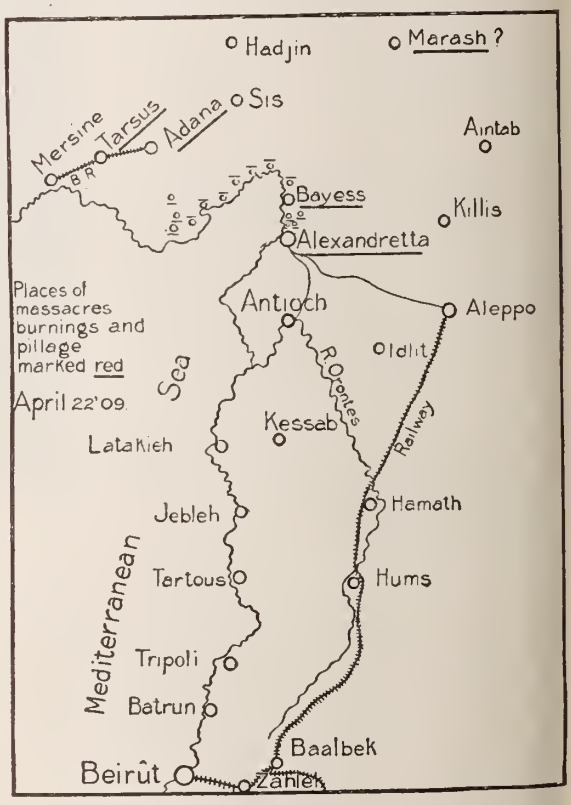
But the old demon of Islamic hate of light and liberty will not be easily cast out. It will, in many times and places, rend and tear the body politic before it is cast out.

Meantime let us help the victims of these recent massacres, and do what we can to feed the hungry and clothe the naked.

HENRY H. JESSUP,
Fifty-three Years a Missionary in Syria.
Beirut, Syria, April 21.

Map of the Massacre District

Prepared by Rev. Henry Jessup, of Beirut



The following Contributions have been received in aid of the Survivors of the Massacres:

Alexander, Mrs J H	1 00	Davis, Mrs B M.	1 00	Jaegs, L F.	2 00	Packard, Elmer	1 00
Appleton, Geo A.	5 00	Doak, Mrs N I.	2 00	Jones, Mrs C L.	1 00	Parmenter, G W.	8 40
Arnold, A	10 00	Drury, Mrs G E.	2 00	Jones, Mrs E G.	2 00	Peebles, Mary E.	5 00
Averell, Wilson	3 50	Duvale, L H.	5 00	Jones, J D	5 00	Peterson, Nelson	1 00
Ball, John	20 00	Dyer, Mrs Martha	2 00	Kellogg, Ramon	1 00	Pollock, Samuel	3 00
Ballard, Mrs S.	1 00	Featherston, T J.	1 00	Kerr, Mrs W S.	1 00	Pratt, Mr Mrs J C	5 02
Bass, Annie F.	2 00	Flanagan, Mrs C S	1 00	Lena, Etta	2 00	Printz, Anna J H.	2 00
Bettys, J Y	10 0	Fossler, Mrs E.	1 00	Lewis, Mrs H.	1 00	Rice, Dr E.	1 00
Bewkes, Lambert	10 00	Gardner, Mrs S M.	5 00	Lewis, Miss S R.	1 00	Richert, Geo	1 00
Bobb, Peter F.	1 00	Gibbon, R W.	5 00	Longenecker, Mrs E J	25	Robinson, A	1 00
Brodhead, Rev C R	5 00	Gillespie, Robt	5 00	McDonald, R H.	5 00	Ross, Alice I.	1 00
Brooks, Mrs M A	1 00	Goodrich, Mr & Mrs F M & Harold B.	3 00	McElree, S E.	1 00	Rudd, Harriet C.	1 00
Brown, G C.	5 00	Graham, C F.	5 00	McKay, J R.	10 00	Sabold, E C.	3 00
Brown, Perry	20	Griffith, Clara F.	50	McKreardy, Agnes	2 00	Salisbury, Hannah	50
Buxton, E H.	5 00	Hagaman, C A.	5 02	McVicar, Mrs N.	2 00	Scott, John T.	1 00
Carter, L H.	2 00	Hankins, L T.	2 00	Magnuson, C	5 00	Seidel, F W.	2 00
Clayton, F C.	2 00	Harman, Jno R.	5 00	Manthe, Mrs A.	2 00	Senter, George A.	1 00
Clelland, Samuel	5 00	Harris, E	1 00	Masters, Mrs J C.	3 00	Shinabarger, Ann	1 00
Clemans, G S.	5 00	Harwod, Mrs A P.	10 00	Matthews, Mr & Mrs B G	2 00	Shoemaker, Mrs R A	1 00
Church, Mr & Mrs O G	2 00	Hatch, C W.	2 00	Miles, Mrs Jane	1 00	Smith, Mr & Mrs L	2 00
Codding, F E.	1 00	Haws, Kate	1 00	Miller, Edward S.	5 00	Snowe, B F.	10 00
Coleman, J W.	2 00	Higgins, F A.	5 00	Miller, Geo McL.	10 00	Stewart, A M.	5 00
Colquhoun, Alice E	1 00	Hodges, Mary E.	1 00	Morris, W R.	2 50	Street, Mrs E A.	1 02
Coxhend, G C.	1 00	Howard, V E.	26	Mottaz, A	10 00	Towle, Mrs S M.	1 00
Cunningham, Wm	50	Hughes, Johnson	2 00	Nett, Alice E.	1 00	Upham, Mrs C A.	2 00
Dailey, B D.	2 00	Hunt, C E.	5 19			Valentine, Miss S C	1 00
						Vallette, Maria M.	1 00
Vandewater, I R.	5 00	—, Haddonfield	10 00	"326," Phila	5 00	McCarty, Dan	1 00
VanDuze, Miss C O	1 00	—, Harrisburg	5 00	"Fancy," Stonington	10 00	Orr, Nettie	2 00
Veirs, Minnie	1 00	—, Louisville	1 00	The Grove Pres Ch, Danville	11 25	Peck, E H & fam	5 00
Walch, K	10 00	—, Lyons	7 00	Newington Congl S Sch, Newington	10 00	Robart, Mrs G.	5 00
Weaver, Mrs C S.	1 00	—, Palmetto	5 00	Prairie Gem C E, Norton	3 75	Rogier, J L.	2 00
White, Mrs A K.	1 50	—, Rockville	1 00	Ladies Aid Soc of Prairie Dell Ch, Shannon	5 00	Torbert, Mrs K V.	7 00
Wing, C E	5 00	—, St Thomas	1 00	Allendorph, L H.	1 00	Truly, Jacob A.	3 00
Winslow, H W.	50 00	—, S Wales	50	Bolles, Mr M.	5 00	Weimer, C E.	10 00
Yard, W C.	1 00	—, Walkerville	1 00	Burtless, J & E.	5 00	Young, Jacob	5 00
Yates, Sarah	1 00	—, Warren	5 00	Campbell, Mrs J B	1 00	—, Belmar	1 00
Young, O G.	10 00	—, West River	1 00	Chamberlin, Mrs E S	2 00	—, Calvertville	2 00
J M F, Broken Bow	1 00	Anon, Saratoga	10 00	Crane, S D.	5 00	1 H S, Beverly	2 00
E W B, Brooklyn	2 00	A Friend, Bridgewater	5 00	Degler, D R.	10 00	M M D, Brooklyn	1 00
H D E, Dee	1 00	A Friend, Peoria	1 00	Filer, Mrs P.	2 00	Mrs R C C, Detroit	1 00
E C C, Mereta	3 00	A Friend, St Paul	50	Forsyth, Mrs M S.	2 00	Miss B, Janesville.	25
T G B & S J B, Middletown	2 00	A Friend, Troy	2 00	Freeman, J W & family	10 00	A & J S, Los Angeles	2 00
Mrs E S, Muncy	2 00	A Mass Friend, —	1 00	Higgins, Joseph	2 00	Mrs E G W, Poultney	1 00
A B C, New Haven	2 00	1 H N, Beverly	2 00	Jones, Callme	2 00	B, Schenectady	1 00
Cash, Pleasantville	3 00	1 H N, Vanleer	2 00	Jones, Ezekiel	1 00	1 H N, Columbus Grove	3 00
M D, Souris	5 00	Two Sympathizers, Chillicothe	5 00	One who loves the Saviour, Jaffrey	2 00	1 H N, Flanders	1 00
C L,	2 00	Grunewald, Honey Creek	2 00			For Love of Christ, Brooklyn	1 00
"L"	25
—, Bainbridge	1 00
—, Dewey	2 00

THE STORY OF MARCO

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

THE two boys stood for an instant and confronted each other in amazed silence. At last, the boy called "Jake" broke it with:

"What ye doin'? Where ye been all this time, Marco?"

Marco tossed his head impatiently.

"Never mind that now. Where's Flossie? I want Flossie."

Jake dropped his eyes and shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

"What do ye want o' Flossie? Why ain't I good 'nuf?" he demanded.

"'Cause ye ain't," retorted Marco, sharply. "I want Flossie, an' I'm goin' to have her, too!" he finished, raising his violin to his chin.

Jake put out a restraining hand.

"Sh-h! Look-here, do ye want ter rout out the whole camp? 'Sides, Flossie—ain't—there."

"Ain't there!"

"No. She's gone."

"Gone!" In his stupefaction Marco could only repeat Jake's words. But after a moment his tongue and his wits came back, and he poured into Jake's ears a torrent of questions.

It was Jake's turn to toss his head.

"I don't know, an' there ain't many of us what does," he muttered sulkily. "She was here one day an' the next she wa'n't. All I know is, there was a man, an' he got her. Some says he was her dad, an' some says he jest 'dopted her. There don't no one know rightly, only Uncle Jake what fixed it up with the man, an' he ain't doin' no talkin'."

"But don't you know anything? Not where they've gone, nor nothin'?" Marco's voice shook. He was afraid he was going to cry—and to cry before Jake was unthinkable disgrace.

"Ter New York, mebbe. Some says 'twas New York."

New York! Marco lifted his head suddenly. That was the name which the organ-grinder had snarled out the night before, when he had insisted on turning down the cross road. He was going to New York. Like a flash now came Marco's decision. Without so much as a word to the amazed boy at his side, he turned and sped across the moonlit field.

Five minutes later he had made the turn, and was hurrying down the long white road that led to the shed where he had left the organ-grinder.

It was a very simple matter, after all, the boy decided. He had but to go with the man and he would reach New York, and in New York was Flossie. Then he need only play "Lost on the Ocean Wave" before every house, until Flossie should hear, and should throw open the door.

CHAPTER VIII

ANNETTA

IT WAS very cold when Marco reached New York. For days now he had been plodding through what seemed to be endless streets, that led between interminable rows of houses. Marco had not supposed, indeed, that there were so many houses in the world. As for New York itself—Marco could but wonder how he was to find one particular fluffy-haired, blue-eyed little girl amid all that wilderness of roofs.

"He would have half the children round him"

In New York Marco began at once to learn many things. Strange to say, the organ-grinder's knowledge of English seemed suddenly to have come back, and he imparted several bits of information that were both startling and disconcerting. To begin with, he said that the money was all gone—spent on the way. Marco was surprised at this, for he knew that almost every day his little cap had jingled pleasantly with coins, and he thought that few of these had been needed to pay for food or lodging, or for the occasional "lift" given them by some obliging driver. Still the man said the money was gone, and surely the man—who had taken charge of the money from the first—must know.

Marco was grieved and disappointed. He had not known exactly what he meant to do; but there would be the money, and there would be Flossie waiting to be found. The rest seemed simple. But now that the money was gone, it was not simple at all. Marco was very much discouraged. The man, too, seemed sorry, and suggested that Marco live with him for a time, so that he might earn more money; and Marco, thinking that after all the man was not so unkind as he seemed, gratefully accepted the offer.

The boy discovered then that there were people in the world who lived in the most extraordinary fashion: hived in groups of four, eight, even twelve or more, in a single room—and that room a loathsome thing of dirt and darkness at the top, or at the bottom, of some dismal house. How a man who, like the organ-grinder, knew the joy of sunny days and starlit nights out in the open, could live like this, was beyond Marco's comprehension. As for the others—Marco questioned some of them, and was more surprised than before, for he found that these knew grass only as something that must not be walked upon, and flowers as something that must not be picked. They had never seen the sky where it came down and touched the earth; and they knew brooks and hills and sunsets as words, not pictures.

Marco did not like the organ-grinder's home. He did not like the dirty street and the dirtier alley that led to it; and he did not like the view from its one window—broken-hinged blinds, and straggling clotheslines festooned across a ten-foot, refuse-strewn back yard. Neither did he like the room. There was little light and no comfort in it: moreover, all the best corners were already occupied by the organ-grinder's brother and his wife with their six children. Even at that, one must climb four rickety flights of stairs to reach it, and feel one's way through long dingy halls where sometimes a drunken man lay stretched across one's pathway. Bad as it was, however, Marco was forced to admit that it was better than nothing; for in it one might obtain at least a respite from the terrible rush and roar of the streets. Marco privately decided, nevertheless, that he would not long impose on the organ-grinder's kindness. As soon as sufficient money was earned, he would set out at once upon his search for Flossie.

It did not take the organ-grinder long to make his plans. Marco was to go out with Annetta, the organ-grinder's niece. Annetta could sing, and dance—after a fashion of her own; and together they would pick up much money—so the organ-grinder said.

Annetta was twelve years old, pretty, pert, and self-confident; and though the musical Italian syllables rippled through her red lips like bubbling waters from a never-failing spring, yet the English came, too—such English as it was—almost as rapidly. She knew the city streets at every twist and turn, and would make a most efficient guide and companion for Marco. She liked the idea, too, and she liked Marco. She began at once to lay her plans.

"Tune her up. Let's hear youse play," she said to the boy.

Marco hesitated. He was tired and homesick. Not once since he came had he touched the violin. The sordid dreariness of his surroundings had crushed out all his desire to play. It seemed to him that the violin itself would refuse to speak in the stifling atmosphere. But even as he hesitated he realized suddenly that he must play, for in his violin lay all his hopes of escape. There was one melody, too, that he could play—one melody that would be a relief to his aching heart. The next minute he was throwing all his longing soul into the first strains of "Lost on the Ocean Wave."

For a time Annetta listened in silence, then she jerked the boy's sleeve angrily.

Continued on page 464

The Scourge of the Tongue*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

IN the study of this lesson the following brief commentary will be found helpful: Verse 1. "Be not many of you teachers," etc. A warning against assuming the high office without fitness for it.

Verse 2. "In many things we all stumble" (we offend all). It is bad enough to stumble, but it is worse to fall. There is victory in righting one's self up, either morally or physically. Let not one who stumbles despair of doing right. "If any stumbleth not in word (offend not in word), he is a perfect man." Who of us can say that we have never spoken a word to be regretted?

Verse 3. "Put the horses' bridles into their mouths" ("we put bits in the horses' mouths"). How easy it is, therefore, to guide a horse! It is a picture of exercising control. But man must bridle his own mouth, must exercise self-control.

Verse 4. "Ships, though so great, are yet turned about by a very small rudder." And why? Because the rudder is under the control of the steersman.

Verse 5. "The tongue, also, is a little member." It is as the rudder, but when it gets started wrong, the whole body moves accordingly: a man speaking angry words will do violent things.

Verse 6. "The tongue is a fire." "As coals are to hot embers and wood to fire, so is a contentious man to inflame strife" (Prov. 26:21).

Verse 6. "Setteth on fire the wheel of nature" (the course of nature); that is, the whole being, soul and body.

Verse 6. "Is set on fire by hell;" the impulse is so evil, hell alone could instigate it.

Verse 8. "The tongue can no man tame." Hardly longer than a finger, and yet untamable! If man cannot tame his own tongue, who can tame it for him? The power of God alone can conquer the power of hell.

Verse 10. "Out of the same mouth cometh blessing and cursing." The context shows that even a so-called "good man" may use his tongue for both purposes (see verse 9).

Verse 10. "These things ought not so to be." Man was made to bless God, and not to curse his fellows.

The Scourge of the Tongue

It is nearly nineteen hundred years since James, the brother of our Lord, wrote about the tongue the things we are studying to-day. Tongues must have been the same then as now! At least fifteen hundred years before James wrote, tongues were the same, for "Moses spoke unadvisedly" (Ps. 106:33). And long before Moses the tongue was the same. In the time of Job it was spoken of as the "sword of the mouth." And "the scourge of the tongue" was one of the seven evil things which it was promised Job he should be delivered from. And ever since then mankind has been struggling to overcome the sins of the tongue. The scourge of the tongue does not belong to America alone, nor to England, but no matter what language the tongue speaks it finds words for its vileness. That it is a world-around scourge, witness the sayings of different nations about the tongue:

"The boneless tongue, so small and weak,
Can crush and kill," declared the Greek.
"The tongue destroys a greater horde,"
The Turk asserts, "than does the sword."

REV. PHILIP BURROWS STRONG.

Almost in the very beginning of his letter, James refers to the unbridled tongue. He writes: "If any man thinketh himself to be religious, while he bridleth not his tongue but deceiveth his heart, this man's religion is vain." By this test let us measure ourselves. We are not one whit better than our tongue shows us to be. If we are given to evil speaking, or scolding, or scandalizing, or flattering, or lying, we can hardly claim to be Christians.

We may speak vile words in whispers, and take some comfort in the thought that those against whom we are speaking do not hear us. But God hears us! "There is not a word in my tongue, but lo! O Lord, thou knowest it altogether (Ps. 139:4). And how ashamed we should be to know that God hears us! If our shame moves us to ask his forgiveness, will it be all right then? Oh, no!

Boys flying kites haul in their white winged birds,
But you can't do that when you're flying words.
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes drop back dead,
But God himself can't kill them when they're said.

CARLETON.

Professor Thornton had given a class of young girls a beautiful exposition of the fifty-second Psalm:

Thy tongue deviseth very wickedness,
Like a sharp razor working deceitfully.
Thou lovest evil more than good,
And lying rather than to speak righteousness.
Thou lovest all devouring words.
O thou deceitful tongue. Ps. 52:2-4.

The girls discussed what the professor had said as they were putting on their hats in the cloak room. "I don't think any of us love evil more than good, or lying rather than righteousness," said Evangeline Sewall; "I am sure I do not, neither do we love devouring words." "Except, perhaps, Meg Stacey," chimed in another voice. "She does let her tongue run away with her, for sure! I never heard such bitterness in all my life." "But, then, she is so witty and clever," said Evangeline; "she doesn't mean to do harm, really."

No; Margaret Stacey had no evil intentions at all. But her tongue was a little fire, brightening and sparkling, and occasionally burning. But she had been very much impressed by Professor Thornton's words. As she rode home, she studied the fifty-second Psalm. "Anyway, I do not think my tongue is a sharp razor. And I do not work deceitfully. I wonder why Dr. Thornton was so emphatic on the subject," she said, as she turned into a lovely garden surrounding her home. She heard boyish shouts. Her brother Max, home from college for vacation, was having some fun with the boys. Max, seeing her, threw himself down on the grass under the sun-dial and said, "My motto is like the sun-dial's, 'I count none but the bright hours.'" "You really are the idlest boy in creation, Max," she said.

"Max is not idle," said his sister Eva. "He has won the prize for industry, Meg. Think what that means!" Meg laughed, and said, contemptuously, "He never would have won it if Smith hadn't been sick. We all know what Max's industry is. I would not boast of a prize won under such circumstances." "But, indeed, Meg," expostulated her young brother eagerly, "the chief said I had worked well all the term, and Smith didn't go into the infirmary until close to the end of it."

"Mr. Afton tells another tale," answered Meg, with a hasty little nod. "He came to see father yesterday, and I know what I know." "Tell us what he said," pleaded Max, a blush mantling his cheek. Meg chose to believe it was the red rag hung out by conscious guilt. "Ho!" she cried, "you see Max knows in his heart he does not deserve the prize. Well, I wouldn't take one on false pretenses." Many more words followed, and Meg, having effectually spoiled her brother's pride in his

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for June 6, 1909. The Power of the Tongue, James 3:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT: "Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles." Prov. 21:23.

A Prominent Horticulturist Writes:

I have found a home insecticide that costs next to nothing and is vastly superior to the expensive ones on the market: Melt a quarter of a pound of Ivory Soap and add to it a pailful of water, and it is ready to apply to your bushes with an ordinary garden spray.

Those who give it a trial will be delighted with the results.

Ivory Soap
99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure

3 in One

REGISTERED 3 IN TRADE-MARK

Look for this trade-mark. It appears in red on every bottle of genuine 3 in One oil.

If you don't get 3 in One you don't get the first, the best and the only oil for lubricating, cleaning and polishing—preventing rust.

3 in One removes spots, stains, scratches, and scars from fine furniture, all varnished, veneered or polish surfaces; makes a bright, glossy, lasting finish on piano-cases more quickly, more cheaply, and better than any furniture polish. Contains no grease or acid to soil or injure. Absolutely odorless.

Our new way of cleaning and polishing positively revolutionizes furniture polishes. One tenth the oil will accomplish ten times more results with one half the labor.

FREE—Write for full details "how to use" and generous sample—both free. Do it now. 3 IN ONE OIL COMPANY, 54 Broadway, New York City.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

JUST OUT Low-priced, 3-lb. Mop; keep clean. Women all buy; turn crank to wring; hands Agents; exclusive territory given; catalog free. U. S. MOP CO., 559 Main St., Leipsic, O.

PATENT SENSE and PATENTS THAT PROTECT yield our clients enormous profits. Write us for PROOF. Inventors lose millions through worthless patents. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Dept. 36, Washington, D. C. Estab. 1869.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

prize, sauntered off into the house. But Max was not the only one to suffer from her tongue. The very next day she could not find her breastpin, and was in a hurry to go to school. She said to the housemaid, "Mary, this is not the first time I have missed things, as you know. I shall certainly tell mamma if it is not found."

That day at school there was another talk by Professor Thornton on the fifty-second Psalm; solemnly the girls listened as he told them hurtful words were terrible things to deal with. When she returned home, she found Mary packed up and ready to leave; her eyes were red with weeping. "Didn't you find my pin?" asked Meg, rather shocked. "No," Mary replied, "and the housekeeper has as good as told me I am a thief." A few days after, Meg found her pin in the collar of her waterproof, where she remembered putting it. And she had blamed Mary for taking it! Of course Mary was brought back and reinstated as housemaid. Meg never forgot the lesson she herself had learned, and she became noted for the caution with which she gave mouth to her suspicions.

Was it all right with Mary then? There certainly was no ill-feeling on Mary's part, but there was a wound. Just as when you draw nails out of a board, the holes are left in.

A typewriter was for sale at a second-hand store. It was bought to be used in the office of a church paper. Upon inquiry about the former ownership of the typewriter, it was learned that it had belonged in the office of a wholesale liquor house! On it had been made bills of lading for whisky, and tables of prices current, to be sent out all over the land to liquor dealers. The keys and levers and type-bar were not changed when the machine was moved to its Christian quarters. Simply what had been used in the service of Satan was put into the service of Christ. And so many a tongue that has been talking infidelity has taken up the different work of teaching Gospel truth. When James wrote in his letter, "Out of the same mouth cometh forth blessing and cursing; these things ought not so to be," he wrote, of course, of a tongue that had not been cured of the cursing. But how glorious is it to see blessing coming out of a mouth that hitherto had been cursing; the same lips, the same teeth, the same tongue all now in the service of Christ, instead of in the service of Satan.

One Tongue Taming Another Tongue

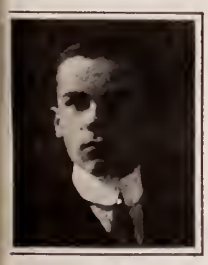
It is not done by louder talking, by harder swearing. Early in the eighteenth century, St. Claude, a Christian Frenchman of noted piety, was confined in the Bastile through the efforts of his atheistic enemies. In the same prison was a brutal and ferocious criminal, who raved and blasphemed whenever he was spoken to. The kind-hearted jailer had tried in vain to humanize this monster, and he finally begged St. Claude to undertake the task. The good man allowed himself to be placed in his company, and bore in patient silence his curses and horrible revilings and even his savage buffetings and blows. Through all his worst fury he endured him, and in the pauses of his rage he prayed for him. At last the monster desisted and stood staring into the face of his saintly companion, as if wondering what sort of a being he was. Then, entirely overcome, he threw himself on the floor at his feet, crying, and besought forgiveness of the man he had maltreated. From that moment the human fiend was a meek disciple.

And St. Claude had learned it all of Jesus, for "when he was reviled, he reviled not again." When malignant accusations were brought against him "he answered nothing."

James asks in his letter, "Can a fig tree yield olives, or a vine figs?" And he answers his own question thus: "Neither can salt water yield sweet"—sweet in the sense of being fresh, not saline. No, a fig tree cannot be made to bear olives, neither can a vine be made to yield figs; and yet we have seen some fig trees trained against a wall look very like a vine. But can salt water be made to yield sweet? Yes; we read in Exodus about the journeyings of the Israelites; when they had been three days without water, they came to the waters of Marah, but they were bitter and they could not drink. The people murmured against Moses, and he cried to God for help. And God showed him a tree, which, when he had cast it into the waters, they were made sweet, and the people drank of the water.

LITTLE CHATS WITH OUR JUNIOR AGENTS

EVERY now and then we get a letter from one of our boys or girls, who is a bit discouraged. Now, as a matter of fact, almost all of our successful Junior Agents who now write us that they have no difficulty in selling their papers, and who are earning our biggest premiums, were discouraged at first. So, if it seems to you who have not as yet been so successful, that these boys and girls, whose pictures we have been printing, are particularly lucky, we can assure you that it has not been nearly so much LUCK as PLUCK. They have simply shown that invaluable quality of "Stick-to-it-iveness" and a resourcefulness in interesting new customers that has enabled them to build up trade.



Paul Lucas Jones
Farmington, Mo.

Canvassing for a paper, you see, is a good deal like going fishing: the other fellow may get all the fish at first, but if you persevere and make your bait attractive to the kind of fish you are after the tide is pretty sure to turn and luck will come your way. Use tact if you want to make big sales. To the Sunday School teacher point out the great help he or she will find in the weekly Sunday School lesson; to the man or woman interested in current news and events, point out the fact that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is right up to date and alive and awake to everything of real interest that is going on here and abroad; and then there are hundreds of people who read "the Bible and Newspaper" page before anything else.

. . .

With the picture of Paul Lucas Jones, published this week, came a letter which read in part: "At first I was discouraged because I could not sell ten copies in one afternoon, but I soon learned not to get discouraged so easily, and in a short time had increased my sales considerably. It seems that all classes of people enjoy the HERALD, and my customers include many who never go to church. If it were not for school and my music I could sell fifty copies a week."

But, boys and girls, vacation days are coming, and then there will be "time to burn"; time for play and time to earn big premiums—and we shall have new ones, too—and spending money selling THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Don't make the mistake of giving up just before the goal is won.

Address Christian Herald Junior Agent Department, Bible House, New York

Shall Your Foods be Drugged or Not?

Much has been said about Benzoate of Soda in foods. It is not a matter, however, of mere press or political discussion—it is a vital health question that concerns you and your family.

Experts here and abroad, including Dr. Wiley, who has stood for the health of the American people for 25 years, have said that Benzoate of Soda in foods has an injurious effect upon the digestive organs. Benzoate of Soda is not a food. It is a tasteless, odorless drug made from coal tar.

Although used in many well-known brands of foods, the greatest danger in this drug is that it permits the use of inferior raw materials, as well as slipshod, unsanitary methods. In short, it is safe to assume that its use indicates uncleanliness or bad materials. It is never used to improve good materials. Does it mean anything to you that no manufacturer who uses Benzoate of Soda defends its use in his advertising?

Products of the best manufacturers (of whom there are many) do not contain or need Benzoate of Soda, because they are made of approbed materials in clean surroundings.

Heinz "57 Varieties"—Ketchup, Sweet Pickles, Preserbes, etc., etc., are prepared without Benzoate of Soda or any other drug—yet they may be purchased any time, anywhere, with absolute confidence in their keeping quality. Money returned if you are not pleased.

No person need accept a food containing Benzoate of Soda, for the law protects you by requiring its presence to be stated on the label. This statement is generally hidden in obscure type, an acknowledgment in itself of the maker's desire to conceal it. Read all type on labels; it is for you to choose whether food brought to your own table, or served to you on a public table, shall be drugged or not.

H. J. HEINZ CO.

Members of American Association for the Promotion of Purity in Food Products

THE SOLDIER BROTHERS

By ROSE C. WEBB, Jordan, N. Y.

"WHY two flags? Were both boys soldiers?
Only Captain John I knew;
Was his brother just as handsome,
Just as noble, brave and true?"
"Listen, while I tell the story,
Proving what full well we know—
We may all be soldiers, fighters,
Though each fight a different foe.

"They were twins, these soldier brothers,
Jolly, handsome, fearless boys;
Aye together, comrades ever,
Sharing all their griefs and joys;
But disease—that guest unwelcome—
Passes not the happiest by,
And we saw that sooner, later,
By its hand our James must die.

"When the war came, John was silent,
Loath to let his brother know
His desire; the sick one guessing,
Said, 'My brother, you must go!'
Ah, how brave he was, how cheerful!
Though he suffered no one heard
Sigh nor groan, his lot bewailing—
Never one complaining word.

"But the feeble life grew feebler;
Then came news that John was slain;
With one rapturous cry of 'Brother!'
Two brave souls were one again.
So we laid them here together
'Neath the flag both loved so well;
And the words, 'The Soldier Brothers,'
From our lips in tribute fell.

"Years have passed, these flags and flowers
Make me live again that day;
And I hear the drums' dull beating,
Hear our good old pastor say,
'Not in wars are all the battles,
Not with men is all the strife;
Who shall say? God only knoweth
Just who lives the soldier's life.'"

AMONG THE WORKERS

—MISSIONARY Z. C. BEALS, of Wuhu, China, is now home on furlough. He is making an active campaign for a new and much larger boat to extend his mission work on the great Chinese rivers.

MISSIONARY J. M. L. HARROW writes from Barrobo, Liberia, Africa: "We are just opening a mission in a new field, two days' distance inland, and getting a house ready to live in. We have some twenty native scholars."

—A SERIES OF UNION SERVICES took place lately at Carmel, N. Y., the evangelist being Rev. Dr. Pierce, Presbyterian, and the pastors of the Baptist and Methodist churches uniting. Miss Grace D. Hildebrand, the "Gospel Nightingale," was the soloist.

—THE BAPTISTS, METHODISTS, Presbyterians and other Protestant churches of Vancouver, Wash., united and built a tabernacle, with a seating capacity of 1,800, in which a series of successful revival services was held by Evangelist Shannon, lasting six weeks. Over 1,000 professed conversion.

—EVANGELIST WILBUR L. CLAPP, Appleton, Wis., is using a novel method to attract people to his meetings. He uses about forty varieties of Gospel texts and picture postcards, each containing an appropriate verse of Scripture, besides an invitation to the meetings. He finds them very effective.

—REV. R. H. BENDER, of the Central American Mission, San Salvador, Central America, writes that the work of the mission is progressing most encouragingly. He is about to start on a much-needed evangelistic tour of the interior. The mission now has twenty-two stations under its care. Mrs. Bender has been laid aside for several months through severe sickness.

—THE TWIN-CITY MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION, of Winston-Salem, N. C., which is composed of the pastors of the various city churches, is arranging for a series of evangelistic services during the coming summer, on interdenominational lines. Rev. E. F. Crosland, chairman of the committee, has associated with him Dr. H. A. Brown, Dr. N. L. Anderson, J. E. Abernathy and E. A. Schenk.

—THE PRESBYTERIAN and Baptist churches at Hot Springs, Ark., some weeks ago united in what is called the "Everybody Revival," under the direction of Rev. R. A. Walton and his associates, Robert Jolly, G. Preston Smith and Vern. Works. Dr. Walton was for a number of years associated with Dr. Chapman. The services were conducted in the Opera House. A large number of confessions are reported.

—MISSIONARY PAUL MOSEL writes from the Moravian Mission at Wittewater, Cape Colony, South Africa: "There are 300 Hottentots living here. The greatest need is water, especially in summer. Near the mission house I found several springs. On May 16 we celebrate our fiftieth anniversary of the day when the Gospel was first preached to the Hottentots at Wittewater. We greatly need $500 to sink a well for a water supply."

—J. M. AND JESSIE A. PERKINS, missionaries at Garraway, Cape Palmas, West Africa, have returned to the field after a furlough, necessitated by African fever. They obtained permission from the President of Liberia to open up a new work in the interior. They report that cannibalism still prevails among some of the interior tribes. Ten tribes recently sent messengers begging that they might be taught the Gospel.

—MR. W. M. CUMMING, Wilmington, N. C., writes: "We have been under prohibition in North Carolina for three months. At the last term of the court in Wilmington there were over 100 cases on docket. That was under saloon regime. Yesterday, court convened for the first time under prohibition, and there were on docket 9 new cases and 37 cases that came over from last term, making 46 in all. Wilmington has 30,000 inhabitants. Some people say 'prohibition does not prohibit,' but it certainly seems to prohibit crime. Other communities might take notice."

—MISSIONARY ANDRUS, of the A. B. C. F. M., writes from Mardin, Asia Minor, giving the results of the investigation of the slaughter and dispersal of the Yezidees, after the suppression of Ibrahim Pasha's rebellion. The government's report is a most remarkable one. It explains the large number of fatalities in the different villages on the ground that more than twice as many Yezidees died from fright as were killed by the Sultan's troops, and that many women and children were lost in the flight or died in captivity.

"Mrs. Rice's best story—transcending in import all her former stories."
—Edwin Markham.

"MR. OPP"

By Alice Hegan Rice, Author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"

A novel full of genuine humor, pathos, and heart interest, with a character in it

"Worthy of Dickens"

Readers of "Mrs. Wiggs"—DON'T MISS "MR. OPP"

Unusually interesting illustrations by Leon Gmpon. $1.00 everywhere.

THE CENTURY COMPANY, NEW YORK

THERE is a Cake-Baking Secret known to good cooks that should interest every housewife.

¶ It's the use of Kingsford's Corn Starch—not only in the filling, but in the cake itself — one part Corn Starch to three parts flour. It makes the daintiest smooth, light cake imaginable.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

is absolutely necessary for the best Angel Cake, White Mountain and other white cakes. Use one-half cup corn starch mixed with the flour.

¶ KINGSFORD'S has a hundred uses. The good cook reaches for the familiar yellow package a dozen times a day. It's on her grocery list every week.

¶ A Word to Kingsford Friends—Send us the name of any young housewife who thinks that Corn Starch is used only for puddings or desserts; we will send her our new little Book (O), "What a Cook Ought to Know About Corn Starch." We will gladly mail you without cost a copy too if you like.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, OSWEGO, N. Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

ONLY THE Full Profits

Both the INCREMENT and the INCOME

have created and have made possible The Great REAL ESTATE FORTUNES

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE

has hardly commenced its growth. Our Properties have increased already in value many times their cost, and in FOURTEEN YEARS, yielded large profits and produced an undivided $765,000 surplus.

$100 will buy a share of stock yielding

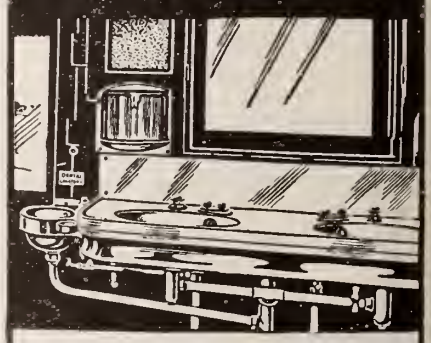
12% Annually { 3% in Cash / 9% in Accumulations

Write for Booklet 14 to-day

New York Realty Owners
489 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK

Dental Lavatories
THE "ALTON'S" LATEST



Does away with the ugly habit in sleeping cars of people cleaning their teeth in the regular lavatories. The new Pullman equipment of the Chicago & Alton Railroad has a neat little dental lavatory. The water has the chill removed. A rinsing apparatus for automatically cleansing the bowl is also a feature. Separate water glasses are provided.

W. L. ROSS, Vice-President . Chicago . GEO. J. CHARLTON, Gen. Passenger Agt.

"THE ONLY WAY" BETWEEN
Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City Peoria, Springfield

FREE BOOK ON DEVELOPERS
with every order of
ENSIGN FILMS
Hauff Developers, Imperial Plates Sussex Paper
Free catalogue on request
G. GENNERT, Dept. 20
NEW YORK, 24-26 E. 13th St.
CHICAGO, 20-24 State St.

THE "BEST" LIGHT — THE "BEST" LIGHT

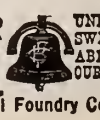
ABSOLUTELY safe—Is very brilliant, powerful and steady.—One burner gives more light than six 16-candle power electric light bulbs—more economical than kerosene. Each lamp is a miniature light works.

FULLY GUARANTEED. OVER 200 STYLES. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Write to-day.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St.
Canton, O.

FOLDING BATH TUB
Weight 16 lbs. Costs little. Requires little water. Write for special offer.
N. Y. H. BATH MFG. CO.
103 Chambers St., New York, N.Y.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.



UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond Du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum, for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. 'There's a Reason.'

"I like the delicious flavor of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Where Your Savings Are Placed to Earn 5%

AMBITIOUS young mechanics and business men, paying for homes by monthly instalments, form the best class of borrowers in the world. In New York their number is legion. The Industrial has dealt with them for 16 years, more exclusively, systematically and profitably than any other loaning institution. The Company's assets of $1,900,000 are chiefly in mortgages on these properties.

It is your $25.00 or $1,000, combined with similar sums from hundreds of other clients, that we invest in that way. We pay you regular dividends at 5 per cent. You withdraw the principal at any time on 30 days' notice. Dividends are reckoned to the day we return the money, from the day we receive it.

ASSETS $1,900,000

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

The New York Banking Department supervises our business, as required by the rigid protective laws of the State governing Savings Institutions. Our 16 years' successful record is in the public files of the Superintendent of Banks, and is also open at our office to the inspection of every one interested in making a safe investment.

Surplus and Profits $138,000

Let us send you our booklet and more detailed information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

Dessert Book Free

I want every housekeeper in the land to send for my new dessert book. It has been greatly enlarged and improved, contains many new recipes and is handsomely illustrated in colors. The book is full of the dantiest and most delicious desserts imaginable, suitable for any and all occasions at every season of the year. For the name and address of your grocer I will send you the book free. If he doesn't sell Knox Gelatine, for 2c. in stamps and his name I will send a full pint sample or for 15c. a two quart package.

CHARLES B. KNOX, 55 Knox Ave., Johnstown, N.Y.

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

PILLOW OXFORDS

Ideal Summer Shoes for Women—Absolute Comfort for TIRED, TENDER FEET; no breaking-in required; relief from pet Corns and Bunions; soft, flexible, durable, dressy and stylish. Genuine Vici Kid, soft, pliable. RUBBER HEELS. No lining to wrinkle or chafe.

$3.00 Postpaid in U.S.A.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Write to-day for our Free Illustrated Catalogue and special self-measure blank and join our Grand Army of delighted customers. Address:

Suffolk Shoe Co., 184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

MY BOOK FREE

Memory the Basis of All Knowledge

Stop Forgetting THE KEY TO SUCCESS

"HOW TO REMEMBER" Write to-day

You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Easy, increases income; gives ready memory for faces, names, business, studies, conversation; develops will, public speaking.

DICKSON MEMORY SCHOOL, 701 Auditorium Bldg., Chicago

A New Gipsy Evangelist

THOSE who are already familiar with the romantic life-story of Gipsy Smith, the famous evangelist, will be interested in knowing that John Hawkins, another gipsy boy, who has developed wonderful evangelistic power, is about to visit this country.

Evangelist John Hawkins

He was born thirty-six years ago in a gipsy camp in Peeblesshire, Scotland. His boyhood was spent with the wandering tribe, and when he was about ten he ran away and, reaching London, became a newsboy and bootblack. After a time, he was helped by the kind-hearted manager of a Boys' Refuge to learn the shoemaking trade. He was led to Christ through the ministry of a godly shoemaker, who often led the Gospel meetings in the institution. Within a few months, every boy in the place, led by young Hawkins' example, began to pray and many were converted.

Hawkins soon began to take an active part in evangelistic work. It was proposed to send him to Pastor Spurgeon's Laymen's College, but Mr. Spurgeon preferred that "the little gipsy lad" should go on as he was doing for a year more.

"I felt that if God had a work for me to do," says Mr. Hawkins, "gipsy as I was, with never a day's schooling, although I had had several winters at night school, he would enable me to do it without a scholastic education. Some years after, when I was about twenty, a vacancy occurred in the Railway Mission, which I was appointed to fill, and for fourteen years I have been an evangelist to railway men, preaching the Gospel of the grace of God to railway men in all parts of Great Britain, and, thank God, I have seen hundreds of these men pass into the kingdom."

Evangelist Hawkins is said to have a remarkable gift of natural eloquence, and his services are marked by spiritual power. He is now in Canada and is expected to visit New York.

OLD SOLDIERS' DAY

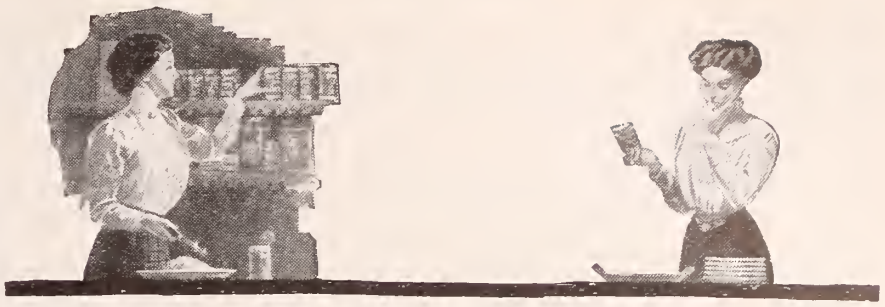
FORGET? No, never, marches long;
The hospital and camp;
The stirring thrill of fife and drum;
The hurried onward tramp;
The silent bivouac 'neath the stars;
The night before the fight;
Forget the lonely picket line?
The bullet's whistling flight?

Slow, shuffling, are the halting steps
That strive along the route;
And dim the eyes that answer back
To comrades mustering out.
The roll is called. Who answers now?
On sick leave, or away?
On furloughs to the Better Land?
Promoted, did you say?

O sentinels on lofty heights,
Beyond the tides that swell,
Our dull ears seem to hear you call
To us that all is well.
"Attention, company! Fall in!"
Passing the Ides of May,
"Brothers of Gray and Blue, mark time!"
'Tis Decoration Day.

Then gently let the blossoms fall.
"Lights out!" At last "Retreat!"
"The countersign?" A little sleep.
At Reveille we'll meet.

Seaford, N.Y. ARTHUR WARD.



Buy a Dozen Cans

You never buy potatoes one meal at a time—nor eggs, nor flour, nor tea. Why then do you buy a single can of Van Camp's?

You lose your greatest delight when you fail to have these delicious meals ready to serve.

Beans are 84% nutriment—Nature's choicest food. They form an ideal hasty meal. There is nothing to take their place.

Why run to your grocer for one meal at a time? Have them on the pantry shelf.

There are millions of you now using Van Camp's.

You have found them digestible, so they don't form gas, as do home-baked beans. You know the need of our modern steam ovens, heated to 245 degrees.

You find that Van Camp's are all baked alike, none crisped and none half-baked.

You find them nutty because they are whole—not mushy like beans baked at home.

And you find that the tomato sauce, when baked in, forms a delicious blend.

You know all this, and would never go back to home baking. Now, we ask you to learn the immense convenience of having such meals on hand.

Buy by the dozen cans.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

If you will serve Van Camp's with some rival brand you will never forget the comparison.

Do this sometime when somebody says, "Here are beans just as good."

This dish is our specialty. We have spent 48 years in learning how to perfect it.

We pay $2.25 per bushel for beans, while some cost but 30 cents. We spend on tomato sauce five times as much as some sauce costs ready-made.

As a result, as most of you know, no other baked beans can compare with Van Camp's. When you prove this be sure you get them.

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can.

Van Camp Packing Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

2 IN 1 SHOE POLISH

The only polish combining the best properties of liquids and pastes.

No Turpentine
No Acids

THE F. F. DALLEY CO., Ltd., Buffalo, N.Y. Hamilton, Ont.

10¢

At All Dealers

Here Is Something New From Kalamazoo

Prove for yourself in your own home, that the Kalamazoo is the most perfect—most economical—most satisfactory range for you to use—Your money back if it's not.

Send for Catalog No. 103 with special terms and compare Kalamazoo prices with others

Cash Or Time Payments

We want every housewife to know the comfort and convenience of a Kalamazoo in her home. You can buy on easy time payments or pay cash if you like. Either way—you save $10 to $20 on any Stove in the catalog. We make it easy for responsible people to own the best stove or range in the world.

We Pay the Freight

Kalamazoo Stove Co. Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

—LADIES OF THE CHURCH—

here is a great opportunity to make money selling articles that are new, every woman needs and will buy.

SHINO CHEMICAL DUST CLOTH

a chemically treated dust cloth 25"x33" that not only prevents the dust from scattering but absorbs and causes it to disappear entirely. It leaves a beautiful lustre on all polished surfaces better than furniture polish. Every room in the house can be dusted without shaking it out, and can be cleaned with warm water.

WRITE to-day for a large sample cloth enclosing 25 cents and ask for special prices on quantities

The "SHINO" Mop chemically treated for hardwood and painted floors, price, 50c. cleans and polishes at the same time; absorbs all dust and will last years. Write for special prices on quantities. AGENTS WANTED.

PIONEER MFG. CO., 518 Citizens Bldg., Cleveland, O.

$50 TO $300 SAVED

We are manufacturers, not merchants. Save dealers, jobbers and catalog house profit. I'll save you from $50 to $300 on my High Grade Standard Gasoline Engines from 2 to 22-H.-P.—Price direct to you lower than dealers or jobbers have to pay for similar engines in carload lots for spot cash.

GALLOWAY

Price and quality speak for themselves and you are to be the sole judge. Sell your poorest horse and buy a 5-H.-P. only $119.50

You Can Make From $5 to $10 a Day

Direct From My Factory on 30 Days' Free Trial. Satisfaction or money back. Write for special proposition. All you pay me is for raw material, labor and one small profit. Send for my big BOOK FREE.

Wm. Galloway, Pres.
Wm. Galloway Co
945 Galloway Station
Waterloo, Iowa

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from page 459

"See here, youse—cut it out! Dis ain't no fun'ral," she jeered. "Give us somepin' what's alive. Youse ain't a-goin' ter play no sich tune as dat along wi' me!"

Marco frowned. He stopped playing instantly, and drew himself stiffly erect.

"Then you needn't come with me," he retorted decisively. "That's my sister's piece, an' it's a-goin' ter be played! So there!"

Annetta stared; then she gave a gleeful laugh in recognition of a spirit as untamable as her own.

"Whew! An' ain't he de nice little man now, what t'inks he owns de hull block!" she chuckled. Then with mocking meekness she added: "'Course, if youse want 'em ter t'ink it's a fun'ral, why I ain't sayin' nothin'; an' 'course I didn't know yer fiddle couldn't play but one tune!"

The shot went home. Marco jerked his violin into place and burst into such a swirl of runs and trills and merry little tunes that Annetta's feet could not keep to the floor, but danced about the room in a very ecstasy of joy.

"Oh, stop—stop!" she panted, dropping to the floor in a little heap. "'Tain' fair ter spring it like dat—all ter once. Say, but youse—are—great!" she exulted then, with a blissful sigh.

They began to practise after that soberly, and with an eye to business. Half of Marco's "pieces" were improvisations, or little melodies of his own that he had played often enough to memorize, and to all of these Annetta had no difficulty in timing her eager little feet. But Annetta's songs were another matter. They were a curious jumble of street ballads, vaudeville jingles, and Salvation Army hymns, and they were all quite new to Marco. Annetta had only to sing them over a few times, however, before Marco had caught their tune and rhythm and was playing with her, now in unison, and now in harmonious thirds and sixths, which brought a delightful sparkle to Annetta's eyes.

"My!—but youse are great!" she would cry again and again. "Jest wait till we git after 'em! We'll make 'em fork over de chink!"

CHAPTER IX

THE "SCHOOL MAN"

AT THE very beginning of their "concert tower" (as Annetta called their invasion of the city streets), Marco made one stipulation: every time they stopped to play and sing, he should be allowed to play, at least once, "Lost on the Ocean Wave," otherwise, he would not play at all. Much as Annetta hated the "fun'ral tune," she was forced to consent to its being included in their "show," and she acquiesced all the more readily when she learned the purpose for which it was played.

This fantastic search for the missing Flossie by means of a familiar melody appealed to her love of adventure to no small degree; yet she could not hold out much encouragement that it would be successful.

"I ain't sayin' but what it's all right, an' I'm glad ter do it," she told Marco: "but as fur t'inkin' it's a-goin' ter fetch her—nit! Jest as if we'd git ter find her house in all dese millions an' millions o' streets! Pooh! 'Course we couldn't!"

Notwithstanding her misgivings, however, Annetta showed the liveliest interest on that first day when Marco began to play Flossie's piece; and she found herself looking at every door in sight, really expecting to see one of them flung wide open by a fluffy-haired, blue-eyed little girl, who would fly into Marco's arms. No such little girl appeared, however, neither on that day nor on the next, until even Marco himself was near to giving up in despair, and Annetta had to turn comforter.

"Don't youse fret," she soothed him. "'Tain't as if dere wa'n't heaps an' heaps more streets, where we hain't been yit. 'Sides, I said 'twa'n't nohow sure we'd git her yet a while."

"Yes, I know," moaned the boy. "But, you see, Annetta, I want her—and I want her right now!"

It was not many days before Marco and Annetta had the routine of their performance well in hand. Marco played and Annetta sang; then while Annetta passed her little cap for money, Marco played alone, the brightest, liveliest music that he could think of. He would have half the children round him dancing by that time; and many were the passers-by that stopped to smile and listen, and to toss a coin, until Annetta's cap quite jingled with wealth. So much money, indeed, did Marco and Annetta bring home that the organ-grinder was well pleased. He told Marco that he would keep his share for him where it would be safe from harm. He said that there were thieves and bad men in New York, and that it would be better to have the money hidden away. And Marco, again remembering the red bandana handkerchief, agreed.

The organ-grinder was really pleasant these days—except when he was drunk, which was rather often. He was quite jovial, indeed, at times. He had money to spend, though he did little work himself, which was a combination quite to his mind. His joy, however, was shortlived; for into the paradise of his ease crept discomfort in the shape of the "school man" who came to look for Annetta, and to inquire into her prolonged absence from school.

Annetta's father was wary; so, too, was the organ-grinder. They said nothing about the street-playing and the money earned. They told of illness, and even hinted at broken bones as a reason for Annetta's absence. But they told none of it very clearly, and they pretended that they did not know what the school man was talking about, most of the time. They were in the midst of the argument when Annetta and Marco walked into the room.

The organ-grinder said a sharp word behind his teeth, and attempted to thrust Marco out of sight; but it was too late. The school man had seen him, and he began at once to question him.

It all ended as the organ-grinder knew it would: Annetta must go back to school, and with her must go the new boy, Marco, so that he might be properly examined and put where he belonged.

"But I don't want to go to school," stormed Marco, when the man had gone.

To be continued

HE LEADETH ME

WHAT if the way be rough and long,
"He leadeth me" shall be my song;
And though sharp thorns are in the way,
Yet to my soul I still will say:
"He leadeth me."

Should storms of grief my spirit meet,
And my path lie through waters deep.
I will press on and trust and pray,
While to my weary soul I say:
"He leadeth me."

And if at times from trials free,
Through "pastures green" He leadeth me,
I'll meekly walk the brighter way,
While to my soul I gladly say:
"He leadeth me."

And when my days on earth are past,
When death's dark stream I meet at last,
Gladly I'll cross the deep, dark way
While to my fainting soul I say:
"He leadeth me."

L. J. H. FROST.

A Dainty Enameled Bedroom

WHAT could be prettier or more inviting than a dainty bedroom with walls, furniture and woodwork all enameled in white or some delicate tint to harmonize nicely with draperies and furnishings?

ACME QUALITY ENAMEL (Neal's)

gives that smooth, beautiful, genuine enamel surface so sanitary and easy to keep bright and attractive. Anyone can apply it by following the simple directions on the can.

ACME QUALITY VARNISH—Gives a durable, lustrous finish to door frames, window-sills, scuffed stairs, etc. Inexpensive and easily applied.
ACME QUALITY NEW LIFE—Cleans, polishes, and renews the finish of all kinds of wood, metal and polished surfaces.
ACME QUALITY FLOOR WAX—Ready for use. Gives a handsome, lustrous, satin-like surface easily cared for and very durable. Equally adapted for the wax finish so popular for furniture and woodwork.

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an ACME QUALITY Kind to fit the purpose.

The Acme Quality Textbook on Paints and Finishes tells you just what paint, enamel, stain or varnish to buy for any kind of work and the best way to apply it. Everyone should keep a copy handy. Gives you just the information you want, when you want it. Write for a complimentary copy.

ACME WHITE LEAD AND COLOR WORKS
Dept. O., Detroit, Mich.
IN DETROIT-Life is Worth Living

SOMETHING NEW—DIFFERENT

Readers, listen sharp—don't miss! Investigate—the best thing ever happened. Astonishing, yet true.

INGENIOUS OHIOAN INVENTS A NEW DEVICE THAT CLEANS FAMILY WASHING IN 30 TO 50 MINUTES, WHILE YOU REST.

NO RUBBING, NO CHEMICALS, NO MOTOR.

NO SUCH DEVICE SOLD IN STORES—DIFFERENT FROM ANYTHING YOU HAVE SEEN. Nothing else like it—great seller—enormous demand. Customers delighted. R. O. Cowan, N. Y., placed 13 in 6 hours (profit $39.00). Mrs. J. Brown, Pa., sold 10 in 3 days (profit $30.00). You can do the same.

Miracles don't happen now, but listen—wash-day troubles wiped out. Good-bye to wash boards, washing machines, troubles, etc. Their day is passed. "Easy Way" of cleaning clothes is here to bless our dear women. Invention that killed wash day called "Easy Way." Has awful appetite for dirt—goes after all the dirt in all clothes at same time. Small, but mighty—silent, but powerful.

SEE HOW SIMPLE, EASY, DIFFERENT. Operated on stove—water inside, then soap, then clothes—move knob occasionally. Dirt lets go as hot water, suds, scalding steam and vapor begin movements. 8 to 10 minutes—clothes clean—rinse dry, that's all! Next batch same operation—same water—30 to 50 minutes family washing clean. You just wait between batches—child can do it. Laundries clean clothes without rubbing—the "Easy Way" does the same at your home. No wood, all metal, sanitary, should last lifetime, light, easily handled. Cleans laces, white goods, bed clothes, woolens, colored clothes, etc., without injury—no rubbing—no chemicals—Women's Godsend. Saves drudgery, clothes, labor, fuel, health and looks. No experiment—going on daily—you can do it. Customers everywhere delighted and praise it.

Lauretta Mitchell, O., writes:—"Done big washing with 'Easy Way' in 45 minutes. Sold 3 already." J. W. Meyers, Ga., orders 12 more, says:—"'Easy Way' greatest Invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable wash day." F. E. Post, Pa.—"Done 2 weeks' washing in 45 minutes. Clothes cleaned without rubbing." J. H. Barrett, of Ark., after ordering 38, says:—"Grandest invention ever heard of."

PRICE, ONLY $6.00 COMPLETE—ready to use—sent anywhere—not sold in stores. Guaranteed satisfactory, or your money refunded. Send no money, simply your name and address. Write to-day.

FREE SAMPLE TO AGENTS—SALESMEN—MEN—WOMEN—all or spare time—at home or traveling—showing—taking orders—appointing agents—"Easy Way" new. Wonderful seller—agents reaping harvest of dollars. When operated, people stop, look. 12 see, 10 buy. C. O. Garrett, of Ohio, showed 7 families, sold 6 (profit $18.00). A. B. Verrett, of La., sold 8 one day (profit $24.00). Mrs. Gerrish ordered sample—then dozen—then 100 (profit over $300). Write for FREE Sample, 1909 Offer, etc. Costs nothing to investigate—write to-day. Circulars, Testimonials, FREE.

HARRISON MFG. CO., 1019 Harrison Building, Cincinnati, O.

Power of the Tongue

By Mrs. M. Baxter

IN many parts of God's Holy Word he speaks of the sins of the tongue. In the book of Proverbs, the contrasts are not few between one whose words are blessed and one whose words are cursed. How many a heart has been wrung with sorrow, how many a wakeful hour has been spent, because of some unkind, perhaps untrue, words spoken by an unconsecrated tongue! When self is the engine-driver of an unconsecrated tongue, no wonder immense damage is done. Self represents everything in its own light. Self does not question whether a thing is right or wrong intrinsically; self always considers how it affects me; and the tongue, which is self's prime minister, expresses everything in this light, and repeats, through its own colored vision, that which it speaks of. Now, as the self in every man puts its own special color upon those things which are said or done by others, it is an utter impossibility for two self-centred tongues to speak the same thing. It is only by referring disputes to Christ, who sits in heavenly places with all things under his feet (Eph. 1:20-22), that quarrels and contentions can come to an end.

When the disciples disputed as to who should be the greatest, Jesus led them on to higher ground by showing how, in the kingdom of heaven, the greatest manifest their greatness by becoming "the servants of all." And so it is with the tongue: subjection is greatness. "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak (James 1:19).

Power over the tongue is one of the rarest gifts. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body" (James 3:2). Nothing is so untamable as the tongue. Man has learned to tame steam, and to apply it to his own purposes in moving vast machinery, to impel steamships across the ocean, to move immense trains of passengers and of goods. He has tamed electricity to make it obey his will in conveying messages with lightning speed from place to place, even from continent to continent. He has tamed wild beasts and wild savages; but there is one thing beyond his power to tame; "the tongue can no man tame" (James 3:8).

Even David, the man after God's own heart, attempted to tame his tongue, and found the work was too great for him. He said, "I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue; I will keep my mouth with a bridle, while the wicked is before me" (Ps. 39:1). But in a little while he had to confess, "Then spake I with my tongue" (verse 3). Later on in his career he had learned his own powerlessness, and we find him praying, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips" (Ps. 141:3).

Thank God, he has power to keep the tongue, and to make it an instrument of infinite blessing. For thirty-three long years the blessed Saviour spoke words which were spirit and life to those who heard him (John 6:63). In his mouth was found no guile (I. Pet. 2:22). He has made a way in our humanity which is possible for us to follow, and we are to have guileless lips, overflowing with blessing at all times; but this can only be as we trust him to make our tongue his instrument alone, yielded unreservedly to his control.

The apostle James asks: "Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? Let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom" (James 3:13). Paul says, "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man" (Col. 4:5, 6).

BARRELS OF AIR BURNED AS FUEL

New, Remarkable Stove—Ohioan's Great Invention—Consumes 395 Barrels of Air to One Gallon of common Kerosene oil making oil-gas the New Fuel that looks and burns like gas!

Wood, coal and oil all cost money. ONLY FREE FUEL IS AIR! Unlimited supply—no trust in control. Air belongs to rich and poor alike. We can't burn air alone but see here! Our Wonderful stove burns air and gas—very little gas—principally air. Takes its fuel almost entirely from the atmosphere. Ideal for summer use.

A miniature gas works—penny fuel for every family—save 1/3 to 1/2 on cost—save dirt and drudgery—no more coal or wood to carry—ashes unknown—absolute safety.

SEE HOW SIMPLE! TURN A KNOB—TOUCH A MATCH—FIRE IS ON. TURN AGAIN—FIRE IS OFF! THAT'S ALL.

Astonishing but true—time-tested—proven facts—circulars give startling details—overwhelming evidence.

NO SUCH STOVE SOLD IN STORES — UNLIKE ANYTHING YOU'VE SEEN OR HEARD OF.

A genius of Cincinnati has invented a new, scientific oil-gas generator that is proving a blessing to women folks, enabling them to cook with gas—relieving them of drudgery. Makes cooking and housework a delight and at the same time often saves 1/3 to 1/2 in cost of fuel.

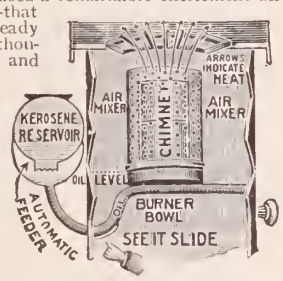
How often have many of the lady readers remarked that they would give anything to get rid of the drudgery of using the dirty coal and wood stoves—also the smoky oil wick stoves, and then gasoline, which are so dangerous and liable to cause explosions or fire at any time.

Well, that day has arrived and a fine substitute has been discovered and every family can now have gas fuel for cooking, baking and heating, and not have their kitchens a hot, fiery furnace in summer, and be carrying coal and ashes—ruining their looks and health.

Thousands a Week

Upon calling at the factory we found that this invention has caused a remarkable excitement all over the U. S.—that the factory is already rushed with thousands of orders and evidently the Company's representatives and agents are making big profits as they offer splendid inducements.

As will be noticed from the engraving, this OIL-GAS GENERATOR is entirely different from any other stove—although its construction is very simple—may be easily and safely operated and is built on the latest scientific principles, having no valves, which is a marked improvement, as all valves are liable to leak, carbonize, clog up or overflow.



SECTIONAL CUT OF GENERATOR

By simply moving a knob the oil is automatically fed to a small, steel burner bowl or retort where it is instantly changed into gas, which is drawn upwards between two red hot perforated steel chimneys, thoroughly mixed with air and consumed, giving a bright blue flame—hottest gas fire, similar in color and heating power to natural gas.

This invention has been fully protected in the U. S. Patent Office and is known as the HARRISON VALVELESS, WICKLESS, AUTOMATIC OIL-GAS GENERATOR—the only one yet discovered that consumes the carbon and by-products of the oil.

The extremely small amount of Kerosene Oil that is needed to produce so large a volume of gas make it one of the most economical fuels on earth and the reason for the great success of this Generator is based on the well known fact of the enormous expansiveness of oil-gas when mixed with oxygen or common air.

Oil-gas is proving so cheap that 15c. to 30c. a week should furnish fuel for cooking for a small family.

Kerosene oil from which oil-gas is made may be purchased in every grocery—is cheap and a gallon of it will furnish a hot, blue flame gas fire in the burner for about 18 hours and as a stove is only used 3 or 4 hours a day in most families for cooking, the expense of operating would be but little.

In addition to its cheapness is added the comfort, cleanliness—absence of soot, coal, dirt, ashes, etc.

What pleasure to just turn on the oil—light the gas—a hot fire ready to cook. When through, turn it off. Just think; a little kerosene oil—one match—light—a beautiful blue gas flame—hottest fire—always ready—quick meals—a gas stove in your home.

It generates the gas only as needed—is not complicated, but simple—easily operated and another feature is its PERFECT SAFETY.

NOT DANGEROUS LIKE GASOLINE

And liable to explode and cause fire at any moment. This stove is so safe that you could drop a match in the oil tank and it would go out.

This Oil-Gas Stove does any kind of cooking that a coal or gas range will do—invaluable for the kitchen, laundry — summer cottage — washing — ironing—camping, etc. Splendid for canning fruit—with a portable oven placed over the burner splendid baking can be done.

Another Important Feature

Is the invention of a small Radiator Attachment which if placed over the burner makes a desirable heating stove during the fall and winter, so that the old cook stove may be done away with entirely.

While at the factory in Cincinnati the writer was shown thousands of letters from customers who were using this wonderful oil-gas stove, showing that it is not an experiment but a positive success and giving splendid satisfaction, and as a few extracts may be interesting to the readers we reproduce them:

L. S. Norris, of Vt., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Generators are wonderful savers of fuel—at least 50% to 75% over wood and coal."

Mr. H. Howe, of N. Y., writes: "I find the Harrison is the first and only perfect oil-gas stove I have ever seen—so simple anyone can safely use it. It is what I have wanted for years. Certainly, a blessing to human kind."

Mr. E. D. Arnold, of Nebr., writes: "That he saved $4.25 a mouth for fuel by using the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove. That his gas range cost him $5.50 per month, and the Harrison only $1.25 per month.

J. A. Shafer, of Pa., writes: "The Harrison Oil-Gas Stove makes an intense heat from a small quantity of oil—entirely free from smoke or smell—great improvement over any other oil stove. Has a perfect arrangement for combustion—can scarcely be distinguished from a natural gas fire."

Mr. H. B. Thompson, of Ohio, writes: "I congratulate you on such a grand invention to aid the poor in this time of high fuel. The mechanism is so simple—easily operated—no danger. The color of the gas flame is beautiful dark blue, and so hot seems almost double as powerful as gasoline."

Mrs. J. L. Hamilton, writes: "Am delighted—Oil-Gas Stoves so much nicer and cheaper than other—no wood, coal, ashes, smoke, no pipe, no wick, cannot explode."

Hon. Ira Eble, J. P., of Wis., writes: "Well pleased with the Harrison—far ahead of gasoline. No smoke or dirt—no trouble. Is perfectly safe—no danger of explosion like gasoline."

ALL SIZES

Chas. L. Bendcke, of N. Y. writes: "It is a pleasure to be the owner of your wonderful Oil-Gas Stove—no coal yard, plumbing — ashes or dust. One match lights the stove and in 10 minutes breakfast is ready. No danger from an explosion—no smoke—no dirt—simply turn it off and expense ceases. For cheapness it has no equal."

Agents are doing fine—Making big money.

WONDERFUL QUICK SELLER.

Geo. Robertson, of Maine, writes: "Am delighted with Oil-Gas, so are my friends—took 12 orders in 3 days."

A. B. Slimp, of Texas, writes: "I want the agency—In a day and a half took over a dozen orders."

Edward Wilson, of Mo., writes: "The Harrison very satisfactory—Sold 5 stoves first day I had mine."

J. H. Halman, of Tenn., writes: "Already have 70 orders."

This is certainly a good chance for the readers to make money this summer.

Hundreds of other prominent people highly endorse and recommend oil-gas fuel and there certainly seems to be no doubt that it is a wonderful improvement over other stoves.

The writer personally saw these Oil-Gas Stoves in operation—in fact, uses one in his own home—is delighted with its working, and after a thorough investigation can say to the readers that this Harrison Oil-Gas Stove made by the Cincinnati firm, is the only perfect burner of its kind.

It is made in three sizes 1, 2 or 3 generators to a stove. They are made of steel throughout—thoroughly tested before shipping—sent out complete—ready for use as soon as received—nicely finished with nickel trimmings and as there seems to be nothing about it to wear out, they should last for years. Ideal for summer use. They seem to satisfy and delight every user and the makers fully guarantee them.

HOW TO GET ONE

All our lady readers who want to enjoy the pleasures of a gas stove—the cheapest, cleanest and safest fuel—save 1/3 to 1/2 on fuel bills and do their cooking, baking, ironing and canning fruit at small expense should have one of these remarkable stoves.

Space prevents a more detailed description, but these oil-gas stoves will bear out the most exacting demand for durability and satisfactory properties.

If you will write to the only makers, The World Mfg. Co., 361 World Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, and ask for their illustrated pamphlet describing this invention and also letters from hundreds of delighted users you will receive much valuable information.

The price of these stoves is remarkably low, only $3.25 up. And it is indeed, difficult to imagine where that amount of money could be invested in anything else that would bring such saving in fuel bills, so much good health and satisfaction to our wives.

DON'T FAIL TO WRITE TO-DAY

For full information regarding this splendid invention.

The World Mfg. Co. is composed of prominent business men of Cincinnati, are perfectly responsible and reliable, capital $100,000.00 and will do just as they agree. The stoves are just as represented and fully warranted.

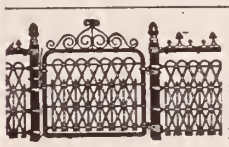
Don't fail to write for Catalogue.

$40 Weekly and Expenses

The firm offers splendid inducements to agents and an energetic man or woman having spare time can get a good position, paying big wages by writing them at once and mentioning this paper.

A wonderful wave of excitement has swept over the country, for where shown these Oil-Gas Stoves have caused great excitement. Oil-Gas fuel is so economical and delightful that the sales of these Stoves last month were enormous and the factory is rushed with thousands of orders.

Many of the readers having spare time, or are out of employment and others are not making a great deal of money, and we advise them to write to the firm and secure an agency for this invention. Exhibit this stove before 8 or 10 people and you excite their curiosity and should be able to sell 5 or 8 and make $10.00 to $15.00 a day. Why should people live in penury or suffer hardships for the want of plenty of money when an opportunity of this sort is open?



LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. 32 page Catalogue free. Special Prices to Churches and Cemeteries
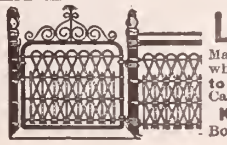
Coiled Spring Fence Co.
Box D Winchester Ind

ORNAMENTAL WIRE AND STEEL FENCE

Cheaper than wood, combining strength and art. For lawns, churches, cemeteries. Send for FREE CATALOG. Address.
The Ward Fence Co.
Box 698 Decatur, Ind.



LAWN FENCE
Many Styles. Sold on trial at wholesale prices. Save 20 to 30 per cent. Illustrated Catalogue free. Write today.
KITSELMAN BROS.
Box 302 Muncie, Indiana.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

When you see the luster on your stove come out Mirror Smooth after a few minutes' using RISING SUN Stove Polish, you will surely regret that you ever neglected that stove.

It is really so easy to make the stove an ornament and keep it so that you will wonder why you ever used anything else. Just try it for yourself.

MORSE BROS., Proprietors, Canton, Mass., U. S. A.

You Save From $5 to $20

DIRECT from FACTORY at Wholesale Prices Freight Paid

We guarantee safe delivery, all polished and ready for your home. Furthermore, after A Whole Year's Trial if not satisfactory you may send it back and we will refund all your money. This is our standing offer, warranted by nearly 60 years in making

GOLD COIN STOVES AND RANGES

This is an unusual opportunity to get a High Grade stove at a low price. Send to-day for Our Illustrated Catalogue of ranges and stoves. A postal will do.

GOLD COIN STOVE CO., 11 Oak St., Troy, N.Y.
(Successor to Bussey & McLeod—Established 1860)

MINNICOGANASHENE

A hard name to pronounce, called locally "Minnicog." This is a picturesque summer resort on one of the largest islands on the Georgian Bay, only 3½ hours' run by the Grand Trunk Railway System from the City of Toronto, Canada, and beautifully situated among the 30,000 islands of that territory. Splendid hotel accommodation, good fishing, fine boating and no hay fever. Bass, trout, pickerel and pike abound. For illustrated descriptive matter and all information, write to G. W. Vaux, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

STRATE-UP

For Man, Woman and Child.

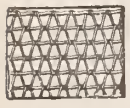
Straightens Round Shoulders, Compels Deep Breathing. Send height, weight, chest and waist measure; state if male or female.

Price, $2. Write for booklet.

Strate-Up Health Brace Co.
1212 Bremen Street, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid.

DR. LYONS, 180 Day St., Pekin, Ill.



FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

NEWTON'S Heave, Cough, Distemper and Indigestion Remedy. A veterinary Remedy for wind, throat and stomach troubles. $1.00 per can, of dealers, or express prepaid. Send for booklet.

The Newton Remedy Co.
Toledo, Ohio

I-N-S-E-C-T-O-N-O-S

Non-poisonous. Kills Flies, Ants, Roaches, Bed-bugs, Fleas, Cabbage and Currant Worms, Red Spiders, Rose Slugs, Poultry Lice, etc. A complete success; highly endorsed; awarded diploma. Two Sizes—25c. and $1.00, postpaid.

Agents Wanted. Address: Wm. Branson, Mfr., Wooster, O.

AGENTS.

New invention; never before sold in your territory; horse owners wild about them; automatic hame fastener sells at sight; coin money; a fortune in your territory; free sample to workers; write at once. Automatic Fastener Co., G 607, Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS NINE IN ONE

$75 monthly. Combination Rolling Pin. Nine articles combined. Lightning Seller. Sample free. FORSHEE MFG. CO., Box 206 Dayton, O.

⁕ Young People's Societies ⁕

Our Legal Obligations*

IT has taken the world many centuries to grasp fully the inner meaning of Christ's Gospel. Here and there throughout the ages some noble spirit has been permitted to mount a watch-tower of the soul, and has beheld the sacred vision. He has come back with a shining face, and has proclaimed that love, love, love is all the outfit that a Christian needs; but those of lesser inspiration have not believed him. They have tarried long amid the labyrinths of theology, and have labored to understand the mystical dreams of Daniel, Ezekiel and the Seer of Patmos. They did not realize that the apostle's "simplicity" and "godly sincerity" were really his chief source of joy. The thing was too plain to be understood by the long generations that cowered under earthly tyranny. Seeing the greed and despotism of earthly kings, they could not believe in the perfect freedom of the divine government, in which the law of love—love to God, the great ideal, and love to man, God's child and our brother—is the only law for the Christian to learn and to obey.

Men have preached the terrors of divine punishment—the awful frown of offended Deity—in order to win men from sin to righteousness; when, if they had only known, the far better instrument was to love men and to show it, and over and over to tell them, "God is love." As George S. Merriam has truly said: "It is the love and kindness of human hearts through which the divine reality comes home to men."

In that interesting apocryphal book, "The Wisdom of Solomon," though it is no Gospel, the love of God is strongly emphasized. This is only one of its several beautiful expressions upon this subject: "Thou [God] lovest all things that are, and abhorrest nothing which thou hast made; for never wouldst thou have made anything if thou hadst hated it. But thou sparest all; for they are thine, O Lord, thou lover of souls."

Realizing once the paternal love of God for us, love toward him is developed in the soul, and then life, even in its sternest aspects, becomes transformed. In President Hyde's remarkable book, From Epicurus to Christ, he speaks thus of this change, inscrutable to one not a Christian: "To the outsider, much of the life of the Christian looks hard and severe, but on the inside it is easy and light. The cross is transfigured into a crown of rejoicing; the sacrifice is transformed into pleasure and privilege. The cross gladly borne, the yoke unostentatiously assumed, is the supreme expression of the Christian spirit."

The spirit of the beast is selfishness: "I want this; give it to me or I will snatch it from you." The spirit of the beast is envy and jealousy: "You have more than I have; I hate you because you have won the prize, and I will do what I can to injure you and make your life miserable." The spirit of the beast is delight in the misfortunes of others: "You are having a bad time, and it makes me smile; nothing is hurting me; I can afford to laugh at your trouble."

But the spirit of the regenerated man is purged of these base animal passions. "Christian love," says George Matheson, "is the only kind of love in which there is no rivalry, no jealousy. There is jealousy among the lovers of art; there is jealousy among the lovers of song; there is jealousy among the lovers of beauty; but the gladdest moment to the Christian will always be the moment when the cry is heard, 'Thy brother is coming up the ladder also; thy brother will share the inheritance with thee.'"

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 6. TEXT: Mark 12 : 28-31.

Life Lessons from Luke*

FEW beyond the special students of Luke's Gospel realize how deep is our debt to him. If his narrative were not included in the sacred canon, we should have no record of the parables of the prodigal son, the Pharisee and publican, the unjust judge, the lost silver, the good Samaritan, the barren fig tree, the unjust steward, the rich man and Lazarus, and several others. Six of our Lord's miracles, not mentioned by the other evangelists, are described by Luke, and especially may he be called the hymn-writer of the New Testament. This was recognized by Keble, in his Christian Year, when he said in an apostrophe to Luke:

> Taught by thee, the church prolongs
> Her hymns of high thanksgiving still.

For without him we should have had no Magnificat, Benedictus, Nunc Dimittis, Ave Maria, nor Gloria in Excelsis.

Women should be especially grateful to the "beloved physician," for it is he who alludes most frequently to that striking distinction between the old and the modern world—the position of woman as a fellow-heir with man, of the kingdom of heaven. Among the Orientals generally, woman is classed as soulless, a sort of a link between exalted man and the higher of the dumb animals. The Bible implies throughout that she is entitled to all the high privileges of earthly and heavenly fellowships, and especially does Luke so recognize her claims. Dr. Strong says: "Commencing with the Virgin Mary as a type of the purity of true womanhood, we meet in succession with Anna the prophetess, the pattern of holy widowhood; the woman that was a sinner; the widow of Nain; the ministering women, Mary and Martha; the 'daughter of Abraham'; and close the list with the words of exquisite tenderness and sympathy to the 'daughters of Jerusalem.'"

Besides these Luke tells of the aged and virtuous Elizabeth, "filled with the Holy Ghost"; the helpful mother-in-law of Simon; Joanna and Susanna, who "ministered unto Christ of their substance"; the daughter of Jairus; the importunate widow; the women who prepared spices and ointments for His sepulchre; and it is he who recalls to our minds the unhappy wife of Lot.

All this is in line with what commentators have called the great "universality" of Luke. He has particularly dwelt upon the salvation which Christ brought to the Gentile, as well as to the child of Abraham. He was himself probably a heathen, possibly a slave. Therefore he would feel more deeply than could a Jew the tremendous value of Christ's world-wide Gospel. No one can read thoughtfully Luke's beautiful story without absorbing, though perhaps insensibly, something of this broadly loving and joyous spirit.

It is a tradition that Luke was a painter, as well as a physician, and to him are attributed the first pictures of the mother and child, though he does not pretend to have been personally acquainted with the Saviour, nor an eye-witness of any incidents in his life.

Christian conduct, yesterday, to-day and forever, has probably been more affected by the Gospel of Luke than by all the rest of the New Testament put together. The object lesson is the great source of impressions. No one can compute the changes in human hearts which have been wrought by the touching stories of the prodigal, the good Samaritan, the rich fool, the barren fig tree, the talents, the Pharisee and the publican, and the many others contained in this marvelous Gospel.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 6. TEXT: Luke 6 : 20-38.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 465, and write them for full information.

FOUND OUT

A Trained Nurse Discovered It's Effect.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse of Wilkes Barre, Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion.

"While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. After using Postum two weeks I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observe a curious fact about Postum used among mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness.

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. They most always serve it before it has been boiled long enough. It should be boiled 15 or 20 minutes after boiling begins and served with cream, then it is certainly a delicious beverage."

"Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

6%

EVERY DOLLAR

deposited with this Company is amply secured by first mortgages on improved real estate. Our issued in amounts of $100 or more, run for two years and bear 6 per cent. interest. They are safe, convenient, profitable. On Savings Accounts, withdrawable on demand, we pay 5 per cent. interest.

Certificates of Deposit

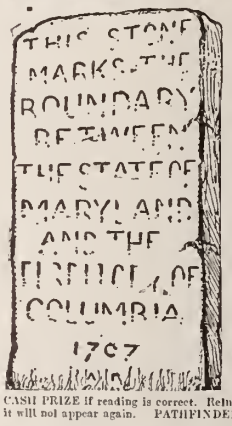
Write to-day for the Booklet telling about this Company and its methods.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

$100.00 REWARD



A weather beaten old stone marker of which this is a picture was lately found near Washington. See if you are smart enough to tell what it says. $100 in cash is to be given for correct answers. This is a sample of the many original and instructive competitions the Pathfinder conducts. Our contests are not of the silly sort, but are made to interest people of brains, such as would appreciate the Pathfinder—which is everywhere called the brightest and best family weekly there is. Published at the Nation's Capital; gives gist of world's news and everything you want to know, all in a nutshell; non-partisan, reliable, entertaining—THE paper for the home. Send your answer to the puzzle at once, inclosing 25 cents for trial 13-weeks' subscription and you will call it the best investment of your life. Contest closes June 25; prizes awarded promptly and fairly. To the person who correctly deciphers this inscription we will pay $100 in cash. If there should be more than one correct answer we will divide the prize equally among the lying contestants. You mustn't miss this chance: Pathfinder 13 weeks 25 cents, and CASH PRIZE if reading is correct. Return this advertisement with 25 cents; it will not appear again. PATHFINDER, Box 127, WASHINGTON, D.C.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH

Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS

NEW AND OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY

35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100

Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

Have You Some Leisure Time—and Are You Ambitious to Make From $5 to $50 Per Week? For full particulars concerning liberal cash commission, etc., offered subscription seekers address Desk 14, Scribner's Magazine, 155 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City

BIBLE COLLEGE AT HOME. Graduate Course. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

THE LATE PETER F. COLLIER

Founder and head of Collier's Weekly and the great publishing house which bears his name was a firm believer in Life Insurance.

His Confidence in

The Prudential

was shown by his voluntary and unsolicited selection of this Company.

The following letter from his son and executor, Mr. Robert J. Collier shows the wisdom of his choice:

Office of Collier's Weekly,
New York, May 4, 1909.

Hon. John F. Dryden, President,
The Prudential Ins. Co. of America,
Newark, N. J.

My Dear Sir:

Permit me to thank you, and through you The Prudential Insurance Company of America, for the very prompt receipt of checks for $50,000 in full cash settlement of claim on the life of my father, Peter Fenelon Collier, who demonstrated his belief in Life Insurance in The Prudential by carrying policies in your Company for several years.

Proofs were completed and checks delivered the same day and your Company did everything possible to effect a quick payment of claim.

Assuring you of my appreciation,
I remain
Yours very truly,

Robert J. Collier.

THE FLEET PROTECTS THE NATION
THE PRUDENTIAL HAS THE STRENGTH OF GIBRALTAR
PRUDENTIAL LIFE INSURANCE PROTECTS THE HOME

The Prudential pays claims small or large immediately upon the receipt of satisfactory proofs of death.

Total Payments to Policyholders Since Organization, Plus Amount Held at Interest to Their Credit, Over 313 Million Dollars!

The Prudential Insurance Company of America

Incorporated as a Stock Company by the State of New Jersey

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President Write for information of New Low Cost Policy. Dept. 70. Home Office, Newark, N. J.

FREE

10 BEAUTIES of FRIENDSHIP 10
Souvenir Post Cards—These Six and Four More—All Different

The most royally beautiful set of Souvenir Post Cards ever produced. Every flower in natural, life-like, gorgeously beautiful colors on a gold background. Each card contains a pretty verse of sentiment suitable for any time or person. We will send our Farm News journal on trial 3 months for 6 cents. Send 4 cents to prepay expense of cards—and 2 cents for trial subscription to our great journal—only 10 cts in all. Either offer separately. Send today.
Simmons Pub. Co., 407 Washington St., Springfield, Ohio

Rider Agents Wanted

in each town to ride and exhibit sample 1909 model. Write for Special Offer.
Finest Guaranteed 1909 Models $10 to $27
with Coaster-Brakes and Puncture-Proof tires.
1907 & 1908 Models $7 to $12
all of best makes
500 Second-Hand Wheels
All makes and models, good as new $3 to $8
Great Factory Clearing Sale.
We Ship On Approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow
TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL.
Tires, coaster-brakes, parts, repairs and sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalogs and offer. Write now.
MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. T71, Chicago

$200 A MONTH

Let me start you in a pleasant, profitable business of your own. No mechanical ability, experience or capital required. I supply all material, teach you how to do the work and assist you in selling the goods. Exclusive territory, good profits, big demand. Be your own boss. Write today and secure your territory. Dept. 115
H. M. SHEER, Quincy, Ill.

YOU CAN AFFORD AN IRON FENCE

Costs less than wood; lasts life-time. In price, style, beauty, quality, our Iron Fence leads the world. Before buying elsewhere get our "Free Illustrated Catalogue," over 200 designs. Agents wanted everywhere. Big demand. Big seller.
The American FENCE IRON Wks. Co., Dept. B. Cinti, O.

CONCRETE HOUSES
Cost Less Than Wood.
More handsome than Brick. Durable as granite. A Pettyjohn $35.00 concrete block machine, sand, gravel and cement are all that is needed Simple, easy and quick. We furnish full instructions Save money for yourself or make money by selling blks. Write for catalog and suggestions
THE PETTYJOHN CO., 673 N. Sixth St., TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Perfect Fitting Glasses At ½ Price

No matter where you live, you can buy a pair of glasses of us by mail just as satisfactorily as if you visited our fitting parlors and you save the dealer's and oculist's profits, amounting to 50 per cent. We sell at wholesale prices and guarantee satisfaction or money refunded. We take all the risk of pleasing you.

Over 25 years optical experience enables us to fit you accurately at home. Our eye tester the Ocularscope, patented and used by us exclusively, is the only reliable instrument for testing eyes by mail. Write for illustrated catalog of eye glasses and spectacles. We send it with our Ocularscope—both FREE

Special Offer! If you can use a book of chemically prepared tissue paper for cleaning glasses, we will mail you same FREE for 2-cent stamp. Send To-day.

GRAND RAPIDS WHOLESALE OPTICIANS,
15 Ledyard Bldg., Grand Rapids, Michigan
"Oldest and Largest Mail Order Optical House."

Whenever you see an Arrow

Think of

Coca-Cola

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Whenever, wherever, however you see an arrow, let it point the way to a soda fountain, and a glass of the beverage that is so delicious and popular that it and even its advertising are constant inspiration for imitators.

Are you hot? → Coca-Cola is cooling.
Are you tired? → Coca-Cola relieves fatigue.
Are you thirsty? → Coca-Cola is thirst-quenching.

Do you crave something just to tickle your palate-- not too sweet, but alive with vim and go?
Coca-Cola is delicious.

5c Everywhere

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, June 2, 1909

VOLUME 32 — NUMBER 22
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

GREAT SEAL OF THE EXPOSITION AND VIEW OF THE PLAZA

SEE PAGE 473

OPENING WEEK AT THE ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

Questions and Answers

Reader, New York City. An ardent and high-minded suffragist suggests that, as a quicker means than any other of securing the desired end, women pledge themselves as a party to vote for all good and proper measures, with whichever of the two leading parties will agree to incorporate woman suffrage into its platform, State or national. What do you think of such a plan? Might not the party which wishes to win in the next election wisely consider it? If the women should throw all their weight into the balance, nothing could resist it.

We are not quite sure that the plan is altogether wise or advisable. We should like to know what the women readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD think of it.

Jennie M., Cohoes, N. Y. Is it true that the uniform experience, in countries where women now have the suffrage, is that they do not care enough about it to vote and that a majority of them stay away from the polls?

We believe you have been misinformed. In New Zealand, where women have been voting for five years or more, of 212,000 registered 175,000 actually cast their votes. We have no doubt the same proportion holds good in other countries where they have the ballot.

X. Y. Z. W., Tawas City, Mich. 1. What and where is Latin America? 2. Why is China called the Celestial Kingdom? 3. Is the "low Dutch" language, as spoken, of the language used in Holland, and is it the same as used in Switzerland? 4. What is the picture head on 25-cent and 50-cent pieces used to symbolize; also, what is the eagle used to symbolize? 5. How many mints are there in the United States, and where located?

1. Latin America is the name sometimes given to South and Central America. 2. China is called the Celestial Kingdom by Europeans because the Chinese aver that the empire was established by heaven, and the emperor rules by divine right. 3. Low Dutch is spoken in Holland. In Switzerland the people speak German, Italian and French, more French than anything else. 4. The head is that of a young woman, who symbolizes liberty. The eagle with the shield is the United States coat-of-arms. 5. There are mints at Carson City, Nev. (equipped as an assay office); New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver.

J. A. M., Harriman, Tenn. What is understood by the "tree of life," mentioned in Gen. 2:9 and Gen. 2:22?

It is considered, according to leading commentators, to have been "the divinely appointed medium for securing the immortality of our first parents. When they fell, and partook of the forbidden tree of the knowledge of good and evil, they forfeited the right of access to the tree of life, and their removal followed, lest by partaking of the tree of life they should be preserved in an immortality of disobedience and misery." Some learned writers have interpreted the account of the Fall as symbolical, "shadowing forth allegorical truth," while still more have defended its literal accuracy.

C. W. Van Akin, Detroit, Mich., sends this couplet, which puts a pertinent question:

"How can we pray 'Thy kingdom come'
And go to polls and vote for Rum?"

J. P. J., Putnam, Conn. 1. Are there any children of Lincoln living? 2. Where was John Wilkes Booth buried?

1. A son, Robert Lincoln, is living in Chicago. He was for a while in the American diplomatic service. He is now president of the Pullman Car Company. 2. The burial place of Booth has never been disclosed. He was buried by the party of soldiers who killed him.

A. McC., Hepeler, Ontario. 1. Was instrumental music used in the primitive Church? 2. Will a convert from the Catholic Church be received into a Protestant Church without being rebaptized?

1. The use of instrumental music in worship is almost as old as the employment of vocal music. In the "golden age" of Hebrew music a great variety of instruments were used. See I. Sam. 18:6, 7; II. Sam. 19:35; Eccles. 2:8; II. Sam. 6:5; I. Chron. 15:16; I. Chron. 23:5, and many other passages. In the primitive Christian Church sacred music was very simple and at first exclusively vocal. It was not till the third century that responsive singing came into vogue. About the thirteenth century the organ began to be used. Early Christians in Greece sometimes used the flute to lead voices in worship, but this was discouraged. 2. Possibly some churches may receive such a convert on confession of faith, but we believe the majority would require baptism.

C. B., Paterson, N. J. Who invented the match?

The first lucifer matches were invented by Chancel, in 1805. They were made of sticks, bound together with gum, and tipped with a composition of sugar and potassium chlorate.

Reader, Greentown, Ind. 1. What does the Scripture teach regarding the wearing of jewelry? 2. Do you think it wrong for a consecrated Christian woman to wear her engagement ring? 3. What care should be given a Chinese sacred lily bulb to make it bloom a second winter?

1. The chief New Testament instruction regarding the wearing of ornaments by women is to be found in I. Tim. 2:9. This was of special application to the Christians of that day, and should not be too literally interpreted now. It simply means that ornaments beyond those of common custom and proper sentiment should be used sparingly by good women, as savoring of vanity and worldliness. 2. No. 3. Ask some florist.

J. H. B., Crisfield, Md. Which is farther from Crisfield, Md.—San Francisco, Calif., or Spokane, Wash.?

Spokane is at the greatest distance, both by rail and in a straight line. We are unable to answer the other question sent.

J. J. O'H., Janesville, Minn. When and where was the Bible first printed in English?

The first printed Testament in English was printed by William Tyndale, an Englishman, at Worms, in Germany, in 1525. The first complete printed English Bible was that of Miles Coverdale, which was printed in 1535, probably at Zurich, in Switzerland. Parts of the Scripture had been translated into Anglo-Saxon as early as the eighth century, and the first complete rendering into English was made by Wycliff in 1382.

J. R. B., Lake, Idaho. Can the President leave the United States during his term of office?

There is no law against it, but the precedent of his remaining constantly within the boundaries has become so well established that it has become a popular belief that such a law existed. Going to the Canal Zone does not break the precedent, as it is under United States law.

H. C. G., London, Ontario. 1. What was the supposed population of the world at the time of the flood? 2. Was any kind of flesh used as food for men before the flood? 3. Had Eve any children before Cain? 4. Were Cain and Abel supposed to be twins?

1. No information on this point beyond what Scripture gives us. Some scholars hold that the flood was not general, and that universal terms are frequently used in Scripture in a partial and restricted sense, meaning contiguous lands and peoples. On the other hand, its universal character is upheld by the flood narratives found in many other countries: Egypt, Chaldea, Greece, Scythia, Peru, Mexico, Cuba, and even in the South Sea Islands. 2. As there were no doubt barbarous and ferocious tribes among the antediluvians, it is not improbable that cruel customs may have existed and even that raw flesh may have been used. This would seem to be implied in Gen. 9:2-5, where the eating of raw meat is forbidden. 3. Cain was the first-born (see Gen. 4:1). 4. No; the same chapter (Gen. 4) explains this.

A long-time subscriber, Thomas H. H., Grass Valley, Calif., sends us a most cheering letter. He says: "I have been a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for a little over thirty years, and I like it as well as I ever did. I have a number of early copies on hand now of 1887 and 1888 and from there on. I have subscribed for magazines and papers since I first took THE HERALD, but after taking them for one or more years I felt like having a change; but after thirty or more years' reading THE HERALD I am not tired yet. I have in my library thirty-five books which I got from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and several I have given away." We thank our California reader for his unsolicited tribute.

P. T. K., Nottingham, O. Is it proper for a clergyman to make a charge for conducting a funeral service?

It is not customary to demand payment for funeral services. Some pastors would refuse to accept money for such services. If, however, the pastor comes from a distance, involving expense, he may reasonably expect reimbursement. Apropos of this subject we have a letter from a worthy and much respected pastor (Rev. A. S. Burdick, Saratoga, N. Y.), who writes: "I have been in the ministry nearly half a century. Have preached a free Gospel, and labored with my own hands that I might not be chargeable to any. Have attended about 350 funerals without charge. Have seen powerful revivals, and organized churches."

Mrs. E. R. B., Worcester, Mass. Where are the Ishmaelites now? Who are their descendants?

The mixed Arabic tribes are regarded as the descendants of Ishmael. Some of these tribes still retain the name of certain of Ishmael's sons, as the Nabatheans, the descendants of Jetur and Naphish (east of the Jordan); the Edomites, the province of Dumah, in Arabia, etc. Their tents and camps are scattered over the eastern confines of Palestine and over Arabia from the Egyptian border to the Euphrates River.

Miscellaneous

W H. C., University Place, Neb. No explanation given.

J. D. McB., Beaver Falls, Pa. We are unacquainted with the poem.

M. P., Melrose, Mass. Submit your question to a teacher of mathematics in your local schools.

A reader, Mr. A. W. Whittaker, of Windsor, Ontario, Canada, writes that the Mauretania was built on the Tyne and not on the Clyde.

L. E. O., Binghamton, N. Y. 1. Do not know the character or contents of publication mentioned. 2. See any good religious encyclopedia concerning the other questions.

J. M. O., Minnesota. The subject you propose is too big to be dealt with in THE MAIL-BAG. Read the book The Great Hereafter, which contains all that the human race can know about it.

S. P. C., South Norwalk, Conn. Spiritual communications are not confined to any particular language. They are as thoughts or ideas, conveyed from one intelligence to another, yet conveyed in such an emphatic way that they cannot be mistaken. Instances of this sort may be found in the case where Moses heard the voice from the burning bush, and where little Samuel heard the divine voice calling him, although aged Eli did not hear it.

Reader, Corsica, S. Dak. 1. Eating or drinking blood was forbidden by the Mosaic law (see Lev. 3:17, and other passages), and is forbidden also to Gentile Christians (see Acts 15:20, 29). 2. Dancing leads to late hours, dissipation and promiscuous acquaintanceships. Card playing has already been frequently discussed in THE MAIL-BAG. 3. Don't know. 4. It is wrong to use vain or improper language at any time. We know of no statute regarding "vain" language. 5. Parents or guardians should be consulted by a boy choosing his life vocation.

W., Belleville, N. Y. 1. One of the leading commentators explains the words, "who repenteth himself" in this connection by saying that "God's repentance can only be understood by his altering his conduct toward his creatures, either in the withdrawing of good or the permitting of evil—which change in the divine attitude is really founded on a change in the creature." It is our own changed attitude, therefore, that gives us the impression of a change in God. 2. When anger, hatred, wrath, etc., are ascribed to God, they denote his just displeasure with sin and sinners. In him they are principles, arising out of his divine nature, and are therefore steady and uniform. A "righteous indignation" against sin is far more terrible than the momentary passion of the human mind.

What Others Say of Our Great Patriotic Offer

FLAG BEST OF ALL

Dear Dr. Klopsch:—How can I tell you my feelings when I shook out from its wrappings the superb American Flag? Truly, I have received many fine premiums from "The Christian Herald" in the past, but this so far surpasses them all that I am more deeply indebted to you than ever before. For the first time in my life I read yesterday the Declaration of Independence and I feel much ashamed to think that I had never done so before. Also the large picture of the Presidents hangs in our parlor and is much admired by everyone—but "Old Glory" is the best of all.

With deep thanks, I am, very truly,
Trenton, N. J. J. L. M.

REWARDED A HUNDRED FOLD

Dear "Christian Herald":—This time you have rewarded me not ten, but a hundredfold for a very slight effort! The superb Flag looks so much bigger than I had expected it would, and the colors are brilliant and beautiful. It certainly will stand the wear and tear of many years, and I can not begin to express my hearty appreciation of your generosity. As the other two premiums included in your Patriotic Offer are also much finer than your advertisements led me to expect, I can only say that I do not see how you can possibly afford to be so magnanimous. I am, with many, many thanks, Very truly yours,
Worcester, Mass. I. M. S.

BIGGEST FLAG ON THE STREET

Dear Mr. Klopsch:—If your subscribers really knew how big and beautiful the American Flags you offer are, I think that every one of them would manage to earn your splendid Patriotic Premiums. We thought we had a pretty fair flag in our home, but when the 5 x 8 that you sent arrived, with its brilliant Stars and Stripes, our other one looked so small and dull in comparison that we gave it away.

You may be sure that "Old Glory" will float from our home on Memorial Day and the Glorious Fourth, and it will be the biggest and most stunning flag on the street. We are going to frame the Pictures of the Presidents and also the Declaration of Independence.

With deep appreciation of your generosity.
Very sincerely yours,
Toledo, Ohio. J. M. K.

HUGGED AND KISSED THE FLAG

Dr. Klopsch: Dear Sir:—I wish to acknowledge the receipt of your beautiful Patriotic premiums. The Declaration of Independence and the beautiful picture of our Presidents were much appreciated. But when my husband received the Flag he was so overjoyed he hugged and kissed it, for it reminded him of the time he had fought to save it.

Many thanks for your kindness in remembering the soldiers. Yours very truly,
Wyoming, N. Y. MRS. C. L.

Terms of Dr. Klopsch's Offer

We will send you FREE FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER: (1) An American Flag, Best Quality, size Four by Six Feet; (2) A Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 Inches; (3) A Large Double-Tone Picture, 18x21 Inches, of All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft.

We will send you FREE FOR TWO SUBSCRIBERS, ONE NEW and ONE of which may be a RENEWAL, the same Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence and the same Large Picture of the Presidents, but a much larger Flag, Five by Eight Feet. No matter when your subscription expires, you may renew now.

OUR PATRIOTIC OUTFITS SENT FREE, CHARGES FULLY PREPAID BY US

NOTE: Of course, our Patriotic Outfits are given only to those who secure the subscriptions and not to the subscribers. . . . Money refunded if not pleased

We do not supply poles, nor do we furnish rope; but we do furnish the flag, beautifully finished, otherwise all ready for use . . . Our Superb Art Gallery De Luxe goes FREE with every subscription, whether new or renewed.

CHRISTIAN HERALD FLAG OFFER, Bible House, New York City

NEW YORK, JUNE 2, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Jacob H. Schiff

On the Euphrates, Near the Traditional Site of the "Garden of Eden"

Israel Zangwill

Copyright by S. E. Purdy

JEWS LOOK TOWARD MESOPOTAMIA

A Vast Colonization Plan Involving 55,000 Square Miles of Territory and $40,000,000 Expenditure

INTELLIGENCE was received in New York a few days ago of a movement which possesses a world-wide significance, and which, if it actually takes place, may be regarded as clearly pointing to the fulfilment of prophecy. For several years past two influential Hebrew bodies—the Jewish Territorial Organization, of London, of which Israel Zangwill is president, and the Jewish Colonization Association, of New York, of which Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, the millionaire banker, is president—have been considering various plans for Jewish colonization on an extensive scale. Up to the present time all the Jewish bodies of this class, including the Jewish Colonization Association, the Jewish German Relief Society, the French Alliance of Jews and the Zionists, have been independent organizations, although showing a deep mutual interest in the various plans that have been proposed for Jewish colonization. Among these plans have been several which, after a full examination, were rejected as unsuited to the purpose. These included propositions for a large colony in British territory in South Africa and also a scheme for extensive colonization in Palestine itself. The first was rejected on account of climatic unsuitability and the second because, up to a very recent date, no satisfactory concessions could be secured from the Turkish government.

Under the new régime in Turkey, however, the whole question has assumed a different aspect. News received in New York City from London states that at a meeting of the Jewish Territorial Organization the proposition to found a great Hebrew colony in Mesopotamia was discussed for the first time. Mr. Zangwill, Sir Andrew Wingate, Meyer Spielman and other prominent leaders were present. It is further stated that a communication, in the nature of an official proposal by the new Turkish government, was laid before the meeting in which the government announced its willingness to afford every facility for Jewish colonization in Mesopotamia, on the most extensive scale. This offer, it is explained, was made by the Turkish government through the leader of the Chamber of Deputies in Constantinople to the chief Jewish rabbi, and through him to the Jewish Territorial Organization. From the fact that it is proposed to equip an exploring expedition to visit Mesopotamia immediately, and make the fullest investigation, it would seem that the proposition was well received.

Should the Mesopotamian project be finally decided upon, there will be ample room in the 55,200 square miles of land which Turkey means to turn over to the colonists for all who may go there.

"In Russia there are five million Jews," said Mr. Solomon, of the Jewish Daily News of New York, who has been in communication with the London organizations, "and there are some four hundred thousand more in Roumania. There will be abundant room for all. All the organizations will unite to carry through such a scheme."

Being asked whether the Turkish government might not prove oppressive, Mr. Solomon replied promptly, "By no means. The Turks have always been friendly to the Jews, and there is not a doubt that they will receive liberal treatment from the new régime which has made so excellent an offer."

Jews of Mesopotamia

One of the strongest supporters of the new project will probably prove to be the Jewish Colony Association of New York. Should it join forces with the English organization, it will be able to bring a very large financial support to the scheme. The Jewish Colonization Association has charge of the great fund left by Baron de Hirsch, which was originally $45,000,000 and has now increased to $55,000,000. Another powerful financial coadjutor is Baron Edmund de Rothschild, of Paris, founder of the famous Jewish colonies in Palestine, some of which have been in existence for a quarter of a century. He is said to be an ardent Zionist.

David Wolfsohn, a prominent banker of Cologne, is also understood to be strongly in favor of the Mesopotamian colony plan. He is one of the Zionist leaders. Besides, there are many other eminent Hebrews of great wealth and influence in England and on the Continent, as well as in this country, who, being personally interested in the Zionist movement, are expected to lend liberal support to make the Mesopotamian plan an industrial and financial success. There are in the United States alone 350 Zionist societies, with a total membership of 50,000, all of which may reasonably be expected to help the project should the expedition, on its return from Mesopotamia, make a favorable report.

It is estimated that not less than $40,000,000 would be required to provide irrigation for the section of the country to be occupied by the proposed colony. There will be no lack of funds, however, nor of any of the machinery essential to success. French and German Jewish organizations have given assurances of co-operation with the English and American societies. Turkey has promised to aid the colonists in various ways, and especially not to interfere with the internal affairs of the colony. It is expected that even more definite pledges will be secured from the Turkish government in the near future, including a measure of home rule, that will be a great gratification to the leaders in the colonist movement.

With the exception of Palestine, there is no country on earth the history and traditions of which are so dear to the Jewish heart as Mesopotamia. Here, according to their sacred books, from which our Old Testament is drawn, the Garden of Eden was located, in the beautiful region surrounded by four rivers, as described in the second chapter of Genesis. Here were enacted the central scenes of the great Flood and here the Ark rested. Here, too, were the Plain of Shinar, the Tower of Babel, the world-old

Continued on page 473

THE
American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. David James Burrell, D.D.*

THE SIFTING OF A MAN

TEXT: Luke 22:31, 32.—"Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not."

THE problem of problems is the Making of a Man. It is as old as creation. No sooner had God finished the earth and the heavens with the lower orders of life than he said, "Let us make man." He began by forming his body out of the dust of the ground; but this was not a Man. He then breathed into the nostrils of this inanimate image the breath of life, so that it "became a living soul." But the work was not yet complete; it lacked character. A Man is body and soul plus character. Adam at first was endowed with a merely negative virtue; he was innocent with the innocence of a graven image. It remained to invest him with positive virtue; and this was possible only by trial. Hence "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil." And, alas! he lost his opportunity by disobeying the injunction, "Thou shalt not eat of it."

The Temptations of Life

But the loss was not irreparable. By God's grace the problem of character-building is presented anew to every son of Adam; and the constant factor in the problem is temptation. We spend our lives under a "tree of the knowledge of good and evil," and by eating or refraining we settle the question whether or no we mean to arrive at the measure of the stature of the fulness of a Man.

It is important to know the precise truth as to this matter of temptation; and, being Christians, we are bound to accept the teaching of Christ as ultimate, in this particular as everywhere else. Let us therefore determine, if we can, what he had to say about it.

First. He taught that there is a tempter; and that this tempter is a distinct personality. He did not have in mind a mere "principle of evil." The only good or evil in the world of which we have any cognizance is such as resides in persons. Wherefore we find Christ not only naming the tempter, but ascribing personal attributes to him.

It is not of prime importance that we should know precisely who Satan is, or where he came from; but it would appear that, having led a revolt in heaven, he was cast out with his co-conspirators as "shreds from the pall of glory riven." He pursues his evil schemes on earth with the subtlety of the serpent and the boldness of the lion. "How art thou fallen, O Lucifer, son of the morning!"

Second. The tempter has to do personally, either directly or through attendant spirits, with the souls of men; his purpose being to lead them into sin. In Paradise Lost he is represented as sitting "squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve." But he is far too wise to present himself in such repugnant form. The devil with horns and hoofs is purely legendary. He is much more likely to assume the form of an angel of light. In tempting Christ to avoid the cross, he used Peter as his instrument, who was accordingly reproved in these terms: "Get thee behind me, Satan!" He speaks thus, on occasion, through our dearest friends and comrades. Wherefore, the struggle is a fierce one.

The Subtlety of the Tempter

It is well to understand the subtlety of the tempter. We gain nothing by trying to explain away his personality or underrating his power. It is written of an ancient hero who fought in the dark with an unknown adversary:

> Through all that deep and doleful night
> The prayer of Ajax was for light
> To see his foeman's face.

To the end that we may know the character of the tempter, it is written, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world and against spiritual wickedness in high places."

Third. We are tempted by divine permission. Not otherwise can we interpret the words, "Satan hath desired to have thee, that he might sift thee." This is not to say that God is responsible for our falling into sin. The genealogy of death is given in this wise: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man; but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:13-15).

But the divine permission is clear, as in the case of Job, where Satan is represented as presenting himself before God. "And the Lord said, Whence comest thou? Satan answered, From going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it. And the Lord said, Hast thou considered my servant Job, a perfect and upright man? Satan answered, Doth Job fear God for naught? Thou hast hedged him about on every side. But put forth thy hand upon him, and he will curse thee. And the Lord said, Behold, he is in thy hand." So Satan went forth to tempt him.

We have a like instance of this permission in the case of Paul, where he says: "And lest I should be exalted above measure, through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet me. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. And he said, My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (II. Cor. 12:7-9).

Fourth. The conflict is on a fair field. It is true that we are handicapped by indwelling sin. Christ was able to say, "The prince of this world cometh, and he hath nothing in me." But no mere man can say that; for there is sin within which responds to the approach of Satan without. Thus a man is "drawn away of his own lust and enticed." The lust of Judas was avarice; when the hand of a rabbi, holding thirty pieces of Satan's silver, was extended to him, it was this lust of money that "enticed" him to betray his Lord. So far forth the odds are against us.

Divine Reinforcement

But on the other hand, we have more than a sufficient offset in the promise of divine help. Christ, in forewarning Peter of his approaching trial, said, "But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not;" and to every one of his disciples he says, "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." It is thus made possible to overcome any and all temptation whatsoever. Paul says, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (I. Cor. 10:13).

If a man chooses to make his fight alone, he is at liberty to do so. In that event, however, he must not complain if the issue is against him. But blessed is the man who, going in the fiery furnace to be tried as gold is tried, like the three youths in Babylon, has the personal presence and support of "One like unto the Son of God."

Fifth. As to the outcome. The course of temptation, in the event of oft-repeated and habitual yielding, leads inevitably to a complete break-down of the moral nature. The will becomes paralyzed and conscience "seared as with an hot iron." But in case of resistance, over and over again until resistance becomes a habit, the result is character. Every victory a man wins makes him a better man; and to contract the habit of overcoming temptation is to attain unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of a man.

It is not to be expected that there will be no failures along the way. If we could resist temptation at every point and always, we should attain unto perfection here and now. The difference between a godly and an ungodly man is that, if the latter falleth, he hath not another to lift him up, because he has rejected the Great Helper; while the former is safeguarded by a friend who is "an help to the poor and needy in distress, a refuge from the storm and a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible one is as a storm against the wall."

Strength Comes Through Struggle

The man who, by divine help, at length contracts the habit of resistance becomes not only strong, but a strength-giver. Jesus said to Peter, "When thou art converted [i. e., turned about, restored after falling], strengthen thy brethren." It is said of Christ himself, that "having been tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." One who has been in the conflict knows its stress, and is disposed not only to speak charitably of the tempted, but to lend a helping hand.

It is wisely said, therefore, "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting in nothing." And again, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he hath been approved he shall receive the crown of life."

Let us now turn to Peter's case for a practical illustration of these facts. He was forewarned of approaching temptation, and should have been forearmed against it.

The warning was uttered in the upper room in the Lord's farewell interview with his disciples. Jesus went from there directly to the garden of Gethsemane, where he was arrested and taken to judgment. And it is written of Peter, "He followed afar off." The tempter was at his side. Take heed, there is danger before thee!

The Sifting of Peter

On reaching the judgment hall, he did not enter in company with his Lord, but paused in the outer court, where he stood warming his hands at the fire. And there he faced the thick of battle. No black-faced adversary with horns and hoofs approached him; but three fair-spoken emissaries, saying, "Thou also wast with him." His coward nature whispered from within, "Take heed, lest thou share with thy Master the danger of death." Then thick and fast came his three denials: "I know not the man!" Sifted, worsted, weighed, and found wanting? Not yet.

He chanced to turn his eyes at that moment through the open door into the judgment hall; and Jesus looked at him. Oh, that look of the Master! How many of us have seen it under like circumstances! What infinite pathos of reproach and entreaty was in it!

And Peter "went out and wept bitterly." Shame, remorse and despair were struggling to get the better of him. Days passed, endless days of dreary hopelessness. The tragedy of Calvary was over; what need of further service? "I go a-fishing," said Peter; and others of the disciples said, "We also go with thee."

In the little boat, made sacred by association with their Lord, the group were drawing their nets at daybreak, when they saw a dim figure on the shore. One whispered, "It is the Lord!" And Peter, forgetting all his sin and shame, cast off his fisher's coat and swam ashore to greet him. Then the Master's word, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" Thrice over, as if to match the threefold denial; and thrice the brave answer, "Thou knowest that I love thee!"

Facing the Conflict

So Peter, his sifting over, was restored to the apostolate. He was made so much the stronger by his temptation that henceforth he would be known as the Man of Rock. Once only, in later years, did he weaken and dissemble. He was destined to face many a fierce and fiery trial, but never again would he so lamentably fall.

See him on the day of Pentecost, confronting the assembled multitude with the words, "Ye have taken the Lord and by wicked hands have crucified and slain him!" No trembling of the knees; no shaking of the voice; this man had learned his lesson. Frank, fearless, enthusiastic, we shall mark him in the forefront of the apostles, leading the great propaganda, until, at length, he joins the noble army of martyrs, facing his doom like a man.

The word of the Lord to Peter is applicable to the needs of all who follow him: "Watch and pray!" And he added, "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not." His prayer gives emphasis to ours: "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from the Evil One." "Lord, bring us not into temptation beyond that we are able to bear; suffer us not to be pierced through with the adversary's spear; but stand by us, Lord, and see us safely through!"

The conflict is before us. It is a close grapple. What shall we do? Flee or fight? If we flee, be it remembered there is no armor provided for the back.

Continued on page 483

*Pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church (Presbyterian), New York.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Ready

THIS week sees the opening of the great Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle, one of the most interesting ever held in America, and many features of which are unique. The national government, the governments of most of the States of the Union, Canada, almost countless private organizations, and representatives of nations beyond the seas had part in the opening ceremonies, which, according to the programme, were prepared in such a way that no single thing was lacking to make the celebration historic on the Pacific coast.

Of course, it was an utter impossibility to hold an exposition in Alaska, and the best place to show the resources of that vast territory was Seattle, to which its products are brought and from which settlers, miners and tourists set sail for the north. Despite its name, however, the exposition will show the resources and products of far more than Alaska and the State of Washington. All of the States west of the Rockies will have large exhibits, as will also the Canadian Northwest. Hawaii and the Philippines will be well represented, for it is an exposition that will deal with all the interesting products and people of the shores and islands of the Pacific. This idea is well represented by the beautiful fountain, capped with a superb bronze figure, "The Spirit of the Pacific," which decorates one part of the grounds. Below it are grouped figures of the Indian, Eskimo, Japanese, Chinese and Pacific Islander. This work of art will remain after the exposition has become a memory of the past. One of the fine things about the exposition is the solidity of some of the buildings. They are not built for a day, but to last, and in the future will be part of the equipment of the growing University of Washington. At some of our largest World's Fairs the flimsy construction of some of the structures was so apparent as to detract a great deal from their architectural beauty.

These permanent structures are the Auditorium, the Fine Arts Building, the Forestry Building, Machinery Hall, Washington State Building, the Arctic Brotherhood Building and the Women's Building; $605,000 has been spent in the construction of these alone. The beautiful Exposition Park will become a part of the university campus.

The grounds with the view about them are worth the time and money expended in crossing the continent to Seattle. The centre of the landscape architect's scheme is in the Geyser Basin and the Cascades. Over the Cascades flow 14,000 gallons of water each minute. About these are sunken gardens, filled with flowers. Beyond these are handsome formal Italian gardens. Over two million roses and other flowers will make the various gardens gorgeous in color and fragrance. Thousands of cactus dahlia, the official flower of the exposition, are planted everywhere. Around the grounds are forests of evergreen. When the grounds were being planted an appeal was made, through the papers, to the people of Seattle for twenty-five thousand geraniums. In response, over forty thousand were brought in, and all were taken.

In the distance, at the south, may be seen the highest mountain in the United States, Mt. Rainier; far off in the northwest rise the glorious Selkirks, their peaks sharp against the sky. Turning toward the west, one sees the Olympics. Mt. Baker, one of the magnificent peaks of America, shows clearly in the northwest.

A short distance away is Puget Sound, which cuts in between mountain ranges, making one of the world's finest harbors, with two thousand miles of shore line.

The plaza of the exposition is notable for the Exposition Monument. It is eighty feet high and covered with gold from Alaska and the Yukon. Four figures at the base are emblematical of the South Seas, the Northland, the countries about the Southern Pacific and the Pacific coast itself. The great column is Corinthian, and holds an astronomical globe, over which hovers the American eagle. It took $7,000 worth of gold to cover the monument. Around the head of the plaza stand the government buildings, shown in the lower picture of this week's cover of this paper. The structure, with its dome, holds the national exhibit. The Alaska Building is on the left, the Hawaii Building is at the right; just beyond that is the Philippines Building. It has taken some longer to get the exhibit from Hawaii ready, as trees, fruits and flowers were brought over and planted, to be growing before the eyes of the visitor as they would in their native soil.

The national government has spent $600,000 on its part of the exposition. The total cost of the exposition is $10,000,000. Washington appropriated $1,000,000, California spent $100,000.

The Dominion of Canada has one of the finest buildings on the grounds, and has installed the permanent Canadian exhibit, which was shown last year in London and attracted much favorable comment there, affording under one roof a comprehensive idea of the resources of the Dominion and its inducements for the prospective settler.

One of the amazing things to the average visitor, who thinks of the far North as a land of perpetual snow and ice, is the large exhibit of wheat, oats and grasses, raised within the Arctic circle. The lumber exhibit is also of much interest. The tallest one-piece flagpole in the world is here. The pole is 200 feet high. It was found a little distance from Buckley, in the State of Washington, and it took five flatcars to haul it to the exposition grounds.

One of the unusual things about this exposition is that it is ready on time, buildings finished, flowers, lawns and walks in perfect condition, and exhibits in place, so that the visitors who come during the first weeks in June will see as much as those who come in September. The first night the electric lights were turned on an amazed exclamation of astonishment and admiration burst from thousands of throats. Over a million electric lights, big and little, from towers and domes, shot their golden gleams athwart the blackness of the night.

"Why, it's fairyland!" cried every one, and so will think all who are fortunate enough to wend their way to Seattle and be counted among the visitors to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

A Part of the Grounds. Agriculture and Fisheries Building; the Auditorium in the Distance city of Nineveh, and nearby is the land of Ur of the Chaldees, whence Abraham came. Here, too, dwelt many of the Jews during the Exile. Mesopotamia, in the passing centuries, has been a theatre of many of the world's greatest events. Great battles have been fought upon its soil and it has witnessed the rise and fall of empires and the extinction of dynasties. To-day, its geographical boundaries are smaller than in ancient times. It is bounded on the north and east by the Tigris River, and on the south by the Euphrates; among its larger cities are Urfa, Mardin and Aleppo, and it has hundreds of villages. It is a beautiful country, well suited for agriculture and pasture, and with Jewish energy and capital, and a liberal and tolerant government, it is believed it would fulfil all the needs for successful Jewish colonization on the largest scale ever attempted.

JEWS LOOK TOWARD MESOPOTAMIA

Continued from page 471

It is said that the land proposed to be occupied could support a population of 10,000,000. One of the strongest arguments in favor of the project is that the occupation of Mesopotamia, lying as it does near the northeastern border of Palestine, would be a great step nearer than ever before to the accomplishment of that national hope which burns in the heart of every true son and daughter of Israel—the ultimate return to the land of their forefathers.

"Coracle" Boats on the Tigris Near Bagdad

Women of Bagdad

Bosrah, on a Branch of the River Tigris

MASSACRE RELIEF FUND GROWING

DISPATCHES from the scenes of the recent massacres in Asiatic Turkey bring the cheering news that the missionaries are making excellent progress in the relief work. The number of Armenians who perished in the massacres in Adana province is now estimated at 10,000. Many who were supposed to have been killed in the country districts have since come in to the large towns for relief. Nearly 50,000 persons have received assistance from the American, French, German, Armenian and Turkish relief committees or officials at Adana, 22,000 at Marash, 14,000 at Hadjin, 3,000 at Mersina, 2,000 at Latakia, 4,000 at Tarsus and a large number at Aintab and Alexandretta.

Twenty-two thousand refugees were fed in Adana in one day. Three hundred wounded are being cared for at the American and other hospitals there. It is estimated that four thousand out of the total number of refugees are ill. There is heavy mortality among the children.

Letters from Armenians in Adana, received in the United States, say that 3,000 Armenians were burned alive in a church in the business section of Adana during the outrages. Thousands of refugees from Adana reached Cyprus in boats when the second attack upon the city was made by the Turks.

One letter says that in the second attack on the city the people were killed like cattle, and the farms and villages outside the city were ravaged by the Turks. In the second attack 1,000 Armenians had gathered in a schoolhouse, which was set afire and the people burned to death. Bogos Buzdigian, who had a farm in Sakezley, was burned alive with ten other men.

A cablegram says: "The more one investigates the Adana of to-day, the more the conviction is forced upon one that the country is ruined commercially for many years to come. What is true of Adana is true of the entire vilayet. There is a continued feeling of unrest in Tarsus. The refugees do not dare to go out openly from the grounds of the American College. In the country there is no security whatever.

"Edward I. Nathan, ex-American Consul at Patras, has arrived at Adana, commissioned by the American government to inquire into the death of Messrs. Maurer and Rogers, American missionaries. The Adana authorities are making a determined effort to prove that they were killed by Armenians. This is an altogether ridiculous and clumsy fiction. The only witness to the shooting was Mr. Trowbridge, a teacher in the American College at Aintab. Mr. Trowbridge has made a sworn statement regarding the affair to the Turkish commission and repeated it to Mr. Nathan."

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in many States are responding to the call for aid in behalf of the massacre survivors. Many of the letters received contain expressions of the deepest sympathy and prayers that further suffering may be averted. Mrs. D. A. C., North Langdon ($1), writes: "This is for the sufferers at Adana and Antioch. I wish it were a thousand, but it is the 'widow's mite,' and though small may do some good to those afflicted people. My heart goes out to them, and I wish to help them. May the dear Father open the hearts of many in response to this urgent call."

President Th. D. Christie, D.D., and Faculty of St. Paul's Institute, Tarsus

These missionary workers are now relieving the massacre survivors with funds supplied by CHRISTIAN HERALD readers

A letter from one of the missionaries in Adana, dated April 22, received in this country during the past week, says:

"The awful extent of the destruction here in Adana, and in all this region, grows more apparent every day and hour. One is almost stunned by the misery around us. One hundred and forty families are now living in the Chambers' house, crowding the yard, the rooms, the balconies and stairways. Large crowds fill the two Gregorian churches, the Catholic church, the two Jesuit schools, a large Gregorian school building and two factories. Most of these are in utter desolation, homes, business, clothing, household furniture all gone. Many, I may say most, have only the clothes on their backs. Many have most horrible wounds, and not even a mat to lie on, except as we find something for them.

"Day before yesterday and yesterday the number of wounded was so great that even those with no experience, like myself, were obliged to help with it. To-day, this work has been gotten in hand a little more by the doctors; but fresh cases are coming to light all the time. About three hundred are now under treatment. Each wounded person averages at least four wounds. One women had eleven, and eight or nine is not at all uncommon. Some had been cut in a perfectly fiendish manner, and others shot again and again.

"A woman came in this afternoon from a village ten miles distant, every member of whose family had been killed—husband, father-in-law, mother-in-law and three children, the youngest of these being a baby two days old. She herself was badly shot, and the wound had remained without care for five days. Finally, in some way, she had dragged herself in here. Two women and six children came in yesterday, all that were left from about one hundred in another village. This afternoon the wife and two children of our Osmania preacher, with two other women, were brought in by an Englishman, who happened to be there. She confirms our worst fears with regard to the condition of this village and of Hamidia. The Armenian men in these villages are practically all killed, and many of the women and children. In Hamidia, the women took refuge in the Gregorian Church and perished in the flames.

"Think of our poor pastors and preachers starting to annual meeting, with no thought of danger, only to be murdered on the way! Thus far we know of nineteen who have perished, just about one-half of the total number. The church at Osmania had become self-supporting this year, and now the whole congregation is cut off, the pastor killed and the church burned down. In Osmania, the women and children are housed in the government building, and given a piece of bread daily. We shall use every effort, through the consul, to have them brought to Adana.

"The need of relief is simply appalling. During the past two days the names of those in absolute need have been written for the different communities by a committee who know the people, and could judge of the condition of the different applicants. The total for Adana alone of those absolutely destitute is 15,000. This is about three-fourths of the Christian population.

"Something must be done for the orphans. Many children are left with practically no relatives whatever. Some have been carried off by the Turks. We want to make an effort to get these back, in cases where their whereabouts are known. But in many cases they have simply disappeared. You can see how desperate our case is. We cannot endure it to see these crowds of people starve, yet at present they are absolutely powerless to help themselves. Only to-day have they really dared to come out of hiding and appear on the streets. It is the time for work in the fields and vineyards; but no one will dare to go out to work, and the probabilities are that any one going would be killed. There is every probability of a plague. Their houses being burned, they are simply packed in these few places of refuge. We sorely need your money and your prayers.

"E. S. WEBB."

• • •

All contributions to the Relief Fund should be addressed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Every contribution will be acknowledged in these columns.

The following Additional Contributions have been received in aid of the Survivors of the Massacres:

Alden, V M 1 00
Aiken, Mrs E 1 00
Allbee, Mrs E A.. 1 00
Allen, J W 1 00
Arnold, Amanda... 1 00
Atkinson, Mrs J... 1 00
Averell, Wilson.... 5 00
Baer, Willis N.... 1 00
Bagstad L & Mrs Clara 4 00
Baldwin, M O..... 1 00
Banbury, Harriet.. 25
Barber, C E 1 00
Barnes, Mrs I H.. 1 00
Barnes, Thos 3 00
Bast, Clara M..... 1 00
Beel, Wm 1 00
Bell, Mrs E 1 00
Bellson, Mrs S T.. 1 00
Bogart, T H 5 00
Bowden, Mrs E H.. 1 00
Boyne, Mrs M 1 00
Bridgman, P B.... 1 00
Brittin, John W... 1 00
Brown, Luther 1 00
Bryan, Mrs G 1 00
Bulmer, Arline D W 1 00
Burgan, Mrs S..... 2 00
Burnett, H A..... 1 00
Bush, F 1 00
Bushnell, E J 5 00
Butler, Frances H.10 00
Butler, W H 5 00
Buzzell, George.... 3 10
Bixler, D, Jr 5 00
Blacet, Ed 1 00
Bottomley, G & L. 2 00
Carpenter, Mrs L M 1 00
Callaway, Mrs M L 1 00
Carol, J E 5 00
Chaffee, Mrs D B..10 00
Coe, Mrs D L..... 1 00
Colbert, Mrs C S & Daughter 6 00
Collier, Mrs T..... 1 00
Combs, Mrs L J... 1 00
Cook, E A 1 00
Coolidge, Mrs A... 5 00
Cornell, Mrs G W. 5 00
Cromie, Mrs J D... 3 00
Cutbirth, Mrs L... 37
Dalrymple, H 2 00
Daniels, E W 1 00
Davis, John T..... 2 00
Delbridge, Mrs H.. 1 00
Dodge, Geo D..... 1 00
Doty, Mrs G M.... 1 00
Douglass, J C 1 00
Downs, Mrs H E.. 1 00
Eley, Mrs L A.... 5 00
Elliott, Mrs T J.. 1 00
Ellis, Frank 1 00
Ellsworth, Eleanor. 1 00
Engle, A M 2 00
Essert, John 5 00
Ferris, Katharine C 10 00
Finfrock, Mrs M A 2 00
Fisher, Amanda....20 00
Forth, Agnes 2 00
Flynn, W A 2 00
Franklin, Jas H.... 50
Fry, Miss E B....10 00
Fleming, Mr & Mrs F M 2 00
French, Mrs A D.. 25
Funkhouser, C A... 5 00
Gay, Lizzie H 5 00
Garrett, Mr & Mrs A E 2 00
Gibson, Joseph..... 3 50
Gilbert, Mrs F P..10 00
Gill, T G 1 00
Girod, I 10 00
Gohuson, Rebecca.. 2 00
Greutzenberg, A.... 2 00
Griffith, Thos W... 5 00
Glattley, Mr & Mrs S R 5 00
Guy, Mrs Robt 2 00
Harrington, Mrs S G 1 00
Heckman, Mrs E M 2 00
Henderson, Wm W 50
Henry, Mrs S D... 2 50
Holbrook, Mrs L A 1 00
Hoper, Mrs W.....10 00
Houston, A Y 10 00
Howell, Mrs S C... 1 00
Havemeyer, J C...50 00
Hawkins, Nellie G.10 00
Hill, Mrs H E.... 2 00
Hyde, Mrs F C.... 2 00
Ide, Fannie 1 00
Jackson, G E 25
Jewell, T & Wife. 3 00
Johnson, Cora E... 1 00
Johnson, Mrs L.... 35
Johnson, Miss R... 1 00
Jones, Ezekiel 2 00
Jones, William 2 00
Judge, L B 1 00
Judge, M C 1 00
Kenyon, Mrs G.... 1 00
Kenyon, Mrs S H.. 5 00
Kepner, E B 2 00
Kammerer, Mrs A B 1 00
Koontz, Ida B.... 7 00
Laidlaw, John 5 00
Larsen, D 2 50
Loesel, Michael.... 5 00
Lowry, Wm S..... 3 00
Loyd, Mrs G 2 00
Lyon, Miss M 1 00
Lyons, John 1 00
Lyons, Mrs M J.... 4 00
Lytle, Jas D 5 00
Lazell, Edith A.... 1 00
Little, E 1 00
Little, Lewis C.... 5 00
Lum, Mrs E C & Mrs L S Fuller.. 5 00
McAllister, Agnes.. 1 00
McAllister, Martha. 1 00
McAllister, Mary... 1 00
McGregor, J D..... 3 00
McMillan, Kate.... 1 00
McAlvin, Elizabeth. 2 00
Markley, Mrs W V 3 00
Matthews, J B.... 1 50
Melville, S F 2 00
Merry, Mrs H B.. 1 00
Mehrling, Boyd 3 00
Miller, Mrs L..... 1 50
Mills, O S 25 00
Mills, Mrs O S...100 00
Minninger, Mr & Mrs Wm H 2 00
Moon, W W 2 00
Morell, A R 1 00
Moremen, Minnie... 50
Morrison, E T..... 5 00
Morrison, Milo 5 00
Mueller, Mrs C.... 1 02
Myers, Chas M.... 2 00
Nedurian, John S.. 1 00
Neumoyer, A B.... 5 00
Oerter, Robt N.... 3 00
Parish, G E 10 00
Parker, J A & Harriet M 3 00
Paul, Mrs J L.... 2 00
Pearson, Miss H... 1 00
Pender, F A 1 50
Peters, F H 5 00
Philips, Mrs M.... 1 00
Polk, Margaret A.. 1 00
Prindle, H N 1 00
Peele, W J 2 00
Pettit, T B 1 00
Potter, Mrs S S... 1 00
Reed, F P 2 00
Rees, J A 1 00
Reichenlach, Aleide 1 00
Reul, Wm 3 55
Reynolds, Sallie.... 50
Roberts, Mrs J.... 50
Rudolph, Mrs E.... 2 00
Rutherford, N R... 1 00
Rutschman, E 3 00
Schanz, Emma 2 00
Seely, Mr W W.... 5 00
Sharpley, Mrs A & Daughter 3 00
Silliman, Mrs J H. 1 00
Smith, H A 1 25
Snell, A H 1 00
Snyder, J W 1 00
Snyder, Mrs S E... 50
Sowers, Mrs G W.. 5 00
Spencer, Mrs A.... 2 00
Steere, Emily J.... 3 00
Stentz, Mrs J B... 1 00
Stiefvater, C M.... 5 00
Stiefvater, Mrs G E 5 00
Stoddard, D 1 00
Swan, Mrs J H.... 5 00
Talbot, Mrs P B... 1 00
Taylor, Ethel 11 00
Ten Brock, G H...10 00
Thomen, John 5 00
Thompson, R G ... 2 00
Towers, Mrs G A... 1 00
Traylor, John 1 00
Turner, Mary A.... 5 00
Turner, Mrs M H. 1 00
Underwood, C 1 00
Van Zee, Mrs W... 1 00
Walter, Mrs C..... 2 00
Warman, W H H.. 5 00
Warren, Mrs I B.. 1 00
Webster, N W 5 00
Welch, S Elizabeth. 1 00
Whalen, Mrs A.... 2 00
Wiley, John 2 00
Wilson, Mrs W D.. 20
Wing, J H 1 00
Winkley, E S 1 00
Wolfe, Mrs S E... 2 00
Whiston, Mrs G... 1 00
Wilder, S J 1 00
Wilson, Mrs T D.. 5 00
Winter, Reuben, Sr.10 00
Wood, Miss M E... 1 00
Yuille, Mrs A A... 1 00
Zoutendam, John...10 00
F L L, Brooklyn..25 00
S F S, Chicago.... 2 00
Mrs N A H, City Island 1 00
C E M, Detroit.... 1 00
Mrs R C J, Eagle Bridge 2 00
S L R, Elkhorn 5 00
Mrs H W S, Fowler 1 00
B B W, Gloversville 1 00
R E B, Jensen 2 00
E B, Plantsville... 5 00
A A E, Rochester.. 2 00
L P, San Antonio. 1 50
E K, Syracuse.... 5 00
J W A E, Towanda 1 00
E C, Westkill 1 00
—, Colorado Spgs. 5 00
—, Eltopia 3 00
—, Findlay 2 00
—, Lyndon Ctr... 1 00
—, New Brighton. 25
—, Niles 1 00
—, Norristown ...10 00
—, N Topeka..... 2 00
—, Shelter Island.10 00
—, Washington .. 1 00
—, Weedsport ... 1 00
—, Whitney Crossings 1 00
Friend, Kalamazoo. 5 00
A Friend, Abbyville 50
A Friend, Cincinnati 50
A Friend, Leetonia 1 00
A Friend, Maxton. 1 00
A Friend, Perkins. 1 00
A Friend, Vona... 1 00
A Friend, Yankton. 2 00
Friends, Fulton.... 2 50
Friends of the sufferers, Irwin 1 50
Berkeley Friend, Berkeley 1 00
I H N, Bethel 5 00
I H N, Linesville. 1 00
I H N, Weatherford 1 00
In Jesus Name, Butler 1 00
A Reader of the C H, Agosta 2 50
A Reader & Subr, Henry 1 00
A Subr, Hancock... 3 00
A Subr & Reader of the C H, Little Rock 1 00
A Sister in Christ, Dundee 1 00
A Shut in Jacquins 1 00
A Neighbor, Juhl.. 5 00
One of His little ones, Toronto 20 00
Nemo, Willimautic 2 50
He being dead yet speaketh, Shelburne Falls 2 00
Jr C E Soc of Union Ch, Upper Strasburg 1 50
—, — 1 00
E G T, Allentown.10 00
Mrs E W T, Allentown 10 00
B, Brattleboro 1 00
C M W F, Gettysburg 1 00
—, Mifflinburg 5 00
A Friend, Fallcreek 5 00
A Friend, Lawrence 2 00
A Friend, Sault Ste Marie 5 00
A Friend, Woodstock 1 00
A Servant, Felicity 5 00

World's Conference of Adventists

AN interesting religious gathering which is now in progress and will continue until June 6, is the thirty-seventh session of the World's General Conference of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, which is being held at Takoma Park, Maryland, a few miles from the city of Washington. Takoma Park is an attractive suburban community, which a few years ago was selected as the general headquarters of this religious denomination. A considerable settlement of the church workers has grown up there. Various administrative buildings have been erected for the executive work of a church body which has now 2,500 churches and more than 100,000 adherents.

The picturesque features of the present Conference are due largely to the fact that the assembled people are housed for the most part in a great white city of tents, erected on the grounds of the Foreign Missionary Seminary at Takoma Park. The foreign delegations are being entertained in the Seminary dormitories, but the more numerous home delegations are camping in over three hundred tents, each capable of accommodating from five persons upward.

The sessions of the Conference are held in a spacious auditorium tent, capable of seating fully 2,000 persons. Meals are served in a dining tent where more than one thousand persons may be accommodated at one time at long tables. The diners all serve themselves, somewhat after the fashion which prevails in "quick lunch" establishments. All the food is furnished at actual cost, and the items on the menu are restricted to vegetarian dishes, in accordance with the tenets of the denomination.

The officers of the General Conference are: A. G. Daniels, president; G. A. Irwin, vice-president for the United States; L. R. Conradi, vice-president for Europe; W. A. Spicer, secretary; and I. H. Evans, treasurer. In addition, there is a committee of thirty-eight members known as the General Conference Committee, and which is composed of the presidents of the unions (which have church jurisdiction in the geographical grand divisions) and the representatives of distinct lines of work, carried on under the auspices of the denomination, including medical, educational, publishing, young people's, and religious liberty.

There are in attendance at this cosmopolitan open-air conference, in the neighborhood of one hundred foreign delegates, including fifty from Europe, representing practically every country on that continent and also the Asiatic provinces of Russia; nine from India and Burma; seven from Africa; nine from South America; twenty from Mexico, Central America and the West Indies; six from China and four from Japan. Besides, there are delegates from Australia and the islands of the sea, and about two hundred delegates from North America. However, these regularly accredited delegates represent but a fraction of the whole attendance. Other adherents come as spectators, so that the Conference community numbers close to three thousand persons. Almost all of this army of enthusiasts remains on the grounds continuously during the sessions of the Conference.

Leaders in the World's Adventist Conference

Left to right: L. R. Conradi, Vice-President for Europe; A. G. Daniels, President; J. H. Evans, Treasurer; W. S. Spicer, Secretary; G. A. Irwin, Vice-President for the United States.

There has been a considerable growth of the Seventh-Day Adventist movement, since the last previous gathering of this kind. The last session of the General Conference was held in 1905, and it was then decided that henceforth the world-wide assemblages should only be held once in every four years, thus prescribing an interval much longer than had previously intervened between the gatherings. During the four years that have passed, there has been ceaseless activity, according to reports submitted at the present gathering. Twenty mission fields have been entered; two hundred and ninety-four churches have been organized, and sixteen thousand new adherents have been enrolled in the denomination. The tithes for 1908 were $1,101,396—an increase of more than $400,000 over 1904—while the contributions to missions were $308,000, or more than double what was contributed four years ago. One of the aims of the present Conference is to project a great world-wide mission campaign, exceeding all previous effort in this direction.

One of the phases of Adventist activity which is attracting much attention at the present Conference is the Medical Missionary Department. The Medical Department stands for the promotion of temperance and healthful living, as well as medical missionary work. Forty sanitariums, under full denominational control, are now operated in North America, Europe, Africa, Asia and South America, in addition to some thirty-six private institutions—about double the number of sanitariums in existence four years ago.

The head of the Educational Department has reported to the Conference that sixty-seven colleges, academies and intermediate schools are now conducted by the denomination. Although English is generally spoken at the Conference, many foreign tongues are heard by visitors to the fifty-acre tract in rural Maryland, which is now the hub and centre of the Adventist world.

WALDON FAWCETT.

NORTHFIELD'S MEMORIAL YEAR

'Round about the Indian village
Spread the meadows and the cornfields,
And beyond them stood the forest,
Stood the groves of singing pine-trees.
—LONGFELLOW.

IT was a dark night in the Indian village on the Quinnehtuk-ut. The council of the tribes had just broken up, and King Philip's braves were about to take the war-path against the encroaching whites. Suddenly, out on the broad meadows the great signal-fire blazed up, wild whoops resounded in the night air, and in a minute hundreds of red figures were careering wildly in a fantastic war-dance about the flaming pile.

This was the scene at the meeting-place of the tribes, Squakheag, over two centuries ago. "Well, the day of such sights is past," you say. "Those tribes are no more. Squakheag is plain, prosaic Northfield, and the Quinnehtuk the Connecticut."

Wait! It is a dark night in Northfield. The council of many tribes is over and the young men are streaming forth from the meeting-place—when suddenly a great bonfire blazes up in the midst of the broad meadow. Higher and higher stream the banners of flame, and in a minute you may see hundreds of figures, careering wildly about the blazing pile in a fantastic war-dance.

Thus do they celebrate the night of a national holiday at Northfield during the Student's Conference. Unconsciously the council of tribes, met to determine the way of repelling the hostile forces of evil, celebrate their gathering in pretty much the same way as did the war-councils of long ago. Northfield again is a gathering-place for many nations, to make them as one in the fight against a common foe.

Although the Northfield of to-day has lost, in a measure, the wild beauty of Squakheag (the Indian name for Northfield), nevertheless, it has gained a new beauty of its own; for the long street that runs parallel to the river is shaded by a double row of ancient elms, and the sand-hills above Pauchaug Meadow have been transformed into a shady campus.

Many spots, however, remain as they were long ago. Lovers' Retreat still keeps its olden charm, and the hollowed rock for grinding corn is as it was two centuries ago. Pulpit Rock and the vast boulders that surround it have not changed, and the woodland streams run on through the groves of singing pine-trees and dash ceaselessly over their mimic waterfalls. Such is the beauty of Northfield—a rare mingling of the works of Nature, and Nature assisted by man.

The beautiful green campus that replaces the desolate sand-hills is dotted in summer with hundreds of gleaming tents; and tents and buildings are filled to overflowing with the delegates to the great Summer Conferences.

All the former teachers and students of Northfield Seminary are invited back in June this year to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of Dwight L. Moody's founding the Seminary. Hundreds have already expressed their intention of returning. At this time the beautiful Chapel and Music Hall, which Mrs. Russell Sage gave the Seminary, are to be dedicated.

The first conference of the year is the Student Conference, lasting from July 2 to 11. As it commences so shortly after college examinations, many students come directly to Northfield for the beginning of their summer's vacation. And a delightful beginning it proves. D. L. Moody, the founder of these conferences, did not believe in "religious dissipation," and so arranged that the afternoon should be set apart for recreation and rest. Tennis, boating, swimming, and baseball take the attention of the athletically inclined, while there are always walks to places of interest and beauty.

But it is not for these things alone, however good, that this conference is called. The primary purpose as expressed by the founder is "to quicken the spiritual life of the students and to train them to lead the organized Christian work of their institutions," and ever since the first Student Conference of 1886, when a full hundred men pledged themselves to a new crusade, whose motto still is "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation," the conferences have continued to fulfil their purpose in a wonderful manner.

The programme during the conference is always short, but strong. In the morning there is a Bible class somewhere under the trees and then an address at the Auditorium by a forceful speaker. The afternoon is devoted to recreation, and the other two services, one at sunset on Round Top, a grassy knoll upon the campus, and the other a little later in the Auditorium, are over by nine o'clock, when the men gather in groups about the campus or in the halls for their delegation meetings.

After the Student Conference, the liveliest of the year, the Young Women's Conference holds session, this year from July 13 to 20, and during the same week, beginning a day later, the Women's Home Missionary Conference meets. It is then that Camp Northfield, in the Cathedral Pines, has "Ladies' Day."

Following these conferences there come the two Summer Schools for Women's Foreign Missionary Societies and for Sunday School Workers. These will last from July 22 to 29, and representatives not only from New England but from other sections will attend.

Best attended, however, and longest, is the General Conference of Christian Workers, open from July 31 to August 15. At this gathering more meetings take place daily than at any other conference. Tents and buildings are alike filled to overflowing by temporary guests, and the many people who rent tents for the summer, upon the campus or in Camp Northfield, or own cottages upon Rustic Ridge, bring up the total of attendance to thousands. For these summer residents and those remaining after the General Conference a Post-Conference is held, which extends until the Northfield schools open.

The most prominent of the speakers already engaged for the conferences are: From England, Rev. G. A. Johnston-Ross, Rev. J. H. Jowett, and Rev. J. Stuart-Holden; from Scotland, Rev. John Kelman and Rev. J. A. Hutton; from America, Rev. John Timothy Stone, Dean E. I. Bosworth, Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, Dr. A. T. Pierson, Dr. Len G. Broughton, Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus. Canon Cody, of Toronto, will attend, and the mission fields will be represented by such men as Dr. S. M. Zwemer of Arabia, and Dr. W. T. Grenfell of Labrador.

Such is this summer's programme for Northfield, and it is hoped that more people than ever before will come and partake of the Northfield spirit of fellowship in that ancient gathering-place of many tribes.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Federal Licenses vs. Prohibition

IS the Federal Government justified in issuing Federal licenses for the sale of liquor in a State where it has been prohibited by statute?

This interesting question, which is now being tested in the courts of Maine, is raised by Hon. William Jennings Bryan in The Commoner. He points out the fact that the Federal Government is to-day issuing licenses in territory where the local government has prohibited the sale, and claims that this is a disregard of State and local law and sentiment. The Federal Government receives $25 for each license. According to Mr. Bryan's view, the government thus becomes a partner with the lawbreakers. He further adds that it is ignoring the wishes of the people in various localities and reaping the profit from the issue of licenses which stimulate law breaking. He suggests an amendment to the Payne bill, prohibiting the granting of Federal liquor licenses in prohibition territory, State or local.

In the present condition of the liquor question in several States this discussion must be regarded as a timely one. We are not so sure, however, that Mr. Bryan has hit upon the real remedy. It may be that such a course as he proposes would be unconstitutional. But there should be a reasonable and proper way out of the difficulty, which would be just to both the State and Federal governments. We believe that the Supreme Court has held that a State has a right to outlaw the liquor traffic. In Maine, the sheriffs have seized all liquor sent into the State under the protection of Federal laws.

As many of our readers no doubt reside in prohibition territory, we should like to hear from them, stating how the law operates in their locality and what steps, if any, are being taken or are suggested to remedy the anomalous conditions mentioned by Mr. Bryan. For the information of the public generally, we invite such readers to write us briefly on the subject. It would be instructive to have the opinion of a really able constitutional lawyer on the important points involved.

A Proud King's Palace

NO other country has yielded such rich rewards to the archæological excavator as Egypt. Professor Flinders Petrie, the noted explorer of Bible lands, says that the great find of the year has been made at Memphis, where the diggers have uncovered the palace of Pharaoh Hophra, the seventh ruler of the twenty-sixth dynasty, and a contemporary of the prophet Jeremiah, about 600 B.C. This is the second palace unearthed in Egypt. It is a magnificent building, 400 feet long, with spacious courts, stone-lined walls fifteen feet thick and huge forty-foot columns. This Pharaoh, who was also called Raahprah, Vaprah and Apries, was a valiant soldier. He captured Gaza and Sidon, defeated the King of Tyre in a sea fight, and also defeated the Cyprians. He befriended Zedekiah, King of Judah, and succored Jerusalem when the Chaldeans were besieging it. But his successes spoiled him, for, like many other great men, he became proud and self-sufficient and boasted that "not even a god could overthrow him." Jeremiah foretold the downfall and death of the vain king (see Jer. 44:30). He was captured and strangled by Amosis, a rebel, who took his crown and sceptre, occupied his fine palace, and ruled in his stead. It is probable that we soon may learn more about this wonderful warlord of ancient days, whose pride and arrogance were the cause of his tragical downfall.

Will the Jews Go to Mesopotamia?

ONLY two weeks ago, in commenting on the promising aspect of the Zionist movement, this journal pointed out the fact that the new régime in Turkey held out the hope of a brighter future for Jewish colonization than has ever been possible heretofore. Now comes the speedy confirmation of our anticipation in the important announcement of a great Jewish colonizing project in Mesopotamia, the negotiations for which are now under way in Constantinople, London and New York. If the scheme should materialize, it will mark a new epoch in Jewish history, since it may lead to the settlement, not in Palestine, but in the old land of Abraham and the patriarchs, of thousands and possibly millions of Jews, principally from Russia and Roumania. It is not probable that there would be any exodus of Hebrews from those lands where they enjoy liberal laws and a tolerant government; but the Israelites in countries where they are now subject to various forms of oppression would be drawn to Mesopotamia as to a new "land of promise." The financial power of the race is such that nothing would be lacking to insure the complete success of this great colonial scheme, if it should be taken up after satisfactory investigation.

The Mecklenburg Declaration

IN Mecklenburg, N. C., they have just celebrated the one hundred and thirty-fourth anniversary of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence. All Carolinians look back to this colony declaration with pride, for it antedated the declaration of the united colonies at Philadelphia by over a year. It has even been said that a copy of the action taken by the twenty-seven patriotic delegates in Carolina was forwarded to some of the members at Philadelphia before the larger, the national declaration, was passed. At least its general tenor must have been known to some of them.

Within the last few years some historians, whose chief claim to fame lies in their ability to cast doubt on events long accepted as truths, have endeavored to prove that the Declaration is a myth, but without much success. The painstaking investigations of Dr. George Graham have resulted in the discovery of many of the original papers and proved all of the main facts of the Mecklenburg Declaration beyond any reasonable doubt.

The anniversary was celebrated by an imposing military display, regulars and State troops participating. The civic part of the celebration was also carried out on an extensive scale. President Taft made a special journey to be present, and showed the interest of both himself and the national government in commemorating the historic event. It is often claimed that the life of the nation is being sapped by the spirit of commercialism, and that the ideals of those who worked and gave up their lives that a great American nation might be built up on this continent, are being forgotten. The interest manifested all over the country, both North and South, in such historical celebrations as this shows, however, that the old spirit of patriotism is as strong as ever, and that, no matter how important mere material advantages seem for the moment, it may be depended upon to reassert itself with the old-time vigor in time of need.

Two Careers

WHEN a man, by reason of unusual ability or marked achievement, gets into the limelight of publicity, he becomes a target for criticism, a good deal of which may be undeserved. Two men died a week ago, one in London, the other in New York, whose careers, though running in widely different channels, were nevertheless alike in their antemortem experience of uncharitable depreciation. George Meredith, now esteemed as one of the greatest writers of his age—poet, novelist, philosopher, analyst—was battered and abused by the critics generally, who permitted his obvious faults to obscure his virtues to such an extent that only here and there was there one among them who realized the fact that Meredith was a new type of genius—a new master of English prose.

Henry H. Rogers for a quarter of a century was one of the biggest figures in the American business world. Strong, aggressive, with an intensely vital temperament, he was endowed by nature with the qualities essential to carry through great enterprises. Like other "captains of industry," he was forceful in his methods, and it followed inevitably that much that he did was open to criticism. But if he had the peculiar and sometimes unscrupulous ways that are inseparable from the strong fighter and the successful money-getter, he had many better qualities that might have been fairly set in the balance against these. His fierce battle with the world, which lasted all of his lifetime, was made to appear fiercer and harsher than it really was by those who did not understand him and who could not grasp the fact that he was of the stuff that develops a nation's resources and opens up new and vast industrial highways. His critics could not see beneath the armor the genial, kindly spirit of the man, which was manifested in a thousand ways. He never forgot old friends, and many were heavily indebted to his generous bounty. He enriched his native town of Fairhaven, Mass., and gave it schools, libraries, churches, fine streets and sewers, and made it a model place. Altogether, he spent nearly $4,000,000 there. And, recalling his boyhood days, when he was a newsboy and used to attend the village school, he gave every teacher in Fairhaven a vacation gift of $1,000. He was the unknown patron who paid for the education of Helen Keller, the most marvelously gifted deaf, dumb and blind girl of this age. Money to him had a value only for what it would enable him to accomplish in moving the big wheels of the business world, in unostentatious deeds of charity and in giving pleasure to others.

It is characteristic of our money-making age that many of those who have been successful in the struggle for wealth become so absorbed in it that they do not know when to quit. They miss the enjoyment of the tranquil years that should be the appropriate crown of a long and active life—years marked by loving and peaceful surroundings and which should afford time for reflection and spiritual preparation for the life beyond.

New York's Sunday Law

OBEDIENT to the demand of the decent, law-abiding citizens of New York, and in compliance with a protest of metropolitan clergymen of all denominations, the Mayor of New York has decided upon a rigid enforcement of the Sunday law in Coney Island, the city's popular amusement resort. According to the new order of things, practically all the spectacular features for which the place has been noted, including the shows, concerts and saloons, will be suspended on the Lord's Day. No more seven-day licenses will be issued. The streets will be thoroughly policed. Every place of assembly that is not either educational or religious will be tightly closed. "The law," says the Mayor, "ordains that Sunday shall be a day of rest, and that only works of charity and necessity shall be done. That is the law, and it must be enforced."

Things have been going from bad to worse at Coney Island, and it was time that action should be taken to restore at least a semblance of law and order there. All the forces that believe in a wide-open Sunday are now uniting to fight the Mayor's ordinance by injunction, mandamus and every means known to the machinery of the law. It will be an interesting battle. Out of it all, let us hope that there may come, not a fanatical, but a just and reasonable result, which shall assure at least such outward respect for the Lord's Day as Coney Island has not known in twenty years.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 2, 1909

	PAGE
Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition	Cover
Our Mail-Bag	470
Jews Look Toward Mesopotamia (Illustrated)	471, 473
The Sifting of a Man. Sermon	472, 483
By Rev. David James Burrell. D. D.
Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Ready (Illustrated)	473
Massacre Relief Fund Growing (Illustrated)	474
World's Conference of Adventists (Illustrated)	475
Northfield's Memorial Year	475
Our Editorial Forum	476
The Bible and Newspaper (Illustrated)	477
Prominent People Talked About (Portraits)	478
New Military Branch of the Y. M. C. A. (Illustrated)	478
In Flowery Spring Days (Illustrated)	479
By Margaret E. Sangster
The Story of Marco (Illustrated)	480, 481
Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter
Faith's Arch of Triumph	482, 483
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
Winning Our Young Men	484
By George M. Elsbree
The Story of a Great Painting	485
New York Society Women at a Charity Fête (Ill.)	485
Young People's Societies	486
Heroes of Faith. By Mrs. M. Baxter	487
In His Second Century (Portrait)	487

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Interesting International Wedding

MISS MARGARET MURIEL WHITE, daughter of the American Ambassador to France, was married to Count Hermann Scherr-Thoss on April 29, at St. Joseph's Church, Paris; the civil marriage ceremony had been held the day previous. It was quite a social event in Paris and throughout the civilized world. The count is an officer in the German Imperial Cuirassiers, son of Count Roger Scherr-Thoss, of Dobrau in Silesia. Miss White was the second bride within a year in the families of American Ambassadors, and like Mrs. John Herbert Ward, who was Miss Jean Reid, is an only daughter. The daughter of General Horace Porter, predecessor of Ambassador White, likewise was married while he was in France and has since lived in Switzerland.

It so often happens that American daughters of the rich marry foreigners who belong to the nobility. Many of these noblemen are far from being noble men. These brides secure the titles with very disappointing appendages as husbands. Some of the daughters of wealth fall in love with these foreign noblemen, who are noble men, and have happy lives. The marriage of Miss White to Count Scherr-Thoss rather reverses the custom, and brings together in marital relationship a wealthy nobleman and a comparatively poor American girl, which promises happiness and is likely to make for international friendship. The solemn ordinance of marriage, in the ranks of high life or in the humbler ranks, is employed in the Scriptures as a symbol of that intimate relationship which exists between Christ and his church.

He that hath the bride is the bridegroom. (John 3 : 29.)

Miss Muriel White and Count Scherr-Thoss and Wedding Attendants

Wireless Wonders

On May 12 the Omaha Electrical Show was lighted by a wireless current. This was the first time that a lighting current had ever been sent without wires. The power came from the government wireless station at Fort Omaha, five miles from the auditorium where the show is being held. There were 4,000 incandescent lamps, and for four hours those lamps were lighted by the wireless current. The system by which the experiment was made is the discovery of Dr. Frederick Millener, wireless expert of the Union Pacific Railroad. For more than a year Dr. Millener has been at work on the proposition of distant control of electric lighting, and the exhibition at Omaha was his first public test. The regular current by which the building was lighted was switched off, and the entire place was then lighted by the wireless mechanism.

Almost simultaneously with this discovery Messrs. Slaby and Arco, the chief engineers of the German Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Company, have perfected a system which it is claimed will entirely obviate the uncertainties with which other wireless systems hitherto have had to contend. Their new method consists in sending out the vibrations which form the messages as pure musical tones, which are capable of being heard by the receiver, no matter how softly they may be attuned. It is declared by the inventors that, by means of this device, it will be possible for the first time since the wireless telegraphy was established to maintain communication by this means in spite of the most violent atmospheric disturbances. These vibrations are called "singing sparks," which reach the receiver after their noiseless flight through the air.

Of all the marvelous inventions of a most marvelous age, the wireless transmission of sound and thought seems the most full of mystery. The secret of the whole invention is in adjusting instruments in harmony with each other, as it were, tuned to each other, so that each tone sent out from one, however far through the air, will find its own identical tone in the instrument at the other end.

The secret of our communication with our heavenly Father, without the aid of material wires, is the adjusting of the human heart in harmony with the divine one; the putting of the human soul in tune with the divine love. Whoever has a mind in harmony with Christ's spirit will have constant and vital communication with the heavenly Father.

Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus. (Phil. 2:5.)

A Life Sentence for Kidnapping

James H. Boyle, on the 10th of May, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the kidnapping of Willie Whitla, of Sharon, Pa., and his wife, Helen Anna Boyle, was convicted of aiding in the abduction and was sentenced to twenty-five years in the same prison and to pay a fine of $5,000. Although both expected a heavy sentence, their courage gave way. When Judge Williams pronounced the words they collapsed completely. Boyle sank down to the floor and had to be lifted to the carriage that was to take him back to jail, and his wife, having fainted, had to be carried to her cell. After the trial the convicted parties undertook to implicate others in their dastardly act, but their statements were not generally believed. The sentence seems to be severe, but it is just. Both the parties had shady records, and the crime they committed, next to murder, is the worst that could be charged up to mortals. Theft and murder, as the offspring of greed for gold, are in the heart of every kidnapper. The sorrow brought to the hearts of parents and loved ones, by the threats and suspense drawn out over days or weeks of agony, are more unendurable than even death itself.

Put this fellow in prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction. (I. Kings 22 : 27.)

England's Great Democratic Budget

Early in May Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer of England, introduced his budget. It is called by many the first democratic budget, though others claim that chancellors like Mr. Gladstone and Sir William Harcourt had made great advances in the rectification and adjustment of taxation. The budget is an appropriate one for a Liberal government, and one of the assumptions on which a Liberal government rests is that the poor are taxed too heavily and the rich too lightly. There must, therefore, be a transference from the weaker to the stronger, provided it can be made without undue harshness. A stiff income tax is imposed. There is a tax on earned incomes not exceeding £2,000, ninepence to the pound; from £2,000 to £3,000, one shilling to the pound; between £3,000 and £5,000, fourteen pence. The tax on the unearned incomes up to £5,000 is fourteen pence to the pound. Over £5,000, on such part of the income as exceeds £3,000 there is a supertax of six pence. There is a reduction tax of £10 of a man's income for each child which he has. A man with £200 who has four children will escape income tax altogether, and if there are three children he pays only 7 shillings and six pence. There is a supertax on all incomes over £5,000, whether earned or unearned. This supertax is to apply only on such part of the income as exceeds £3,000.

The budget provides a considerable sum from death duties. There is to be no change in estates up to £5,000, but between this and the limit of £2,000,000 graduation will be steepened, but it will not be increased beyond 15 per cent. for estates beyond a million. The plan of Mr. Lloyd George is not only to provide for the ordinary expenses of the government, but to wage an implacable war with poverty. He foreshadows the great and beneficent measures which the Liberal government has in view. He has laid down general lines for a plan of workmen's insurance. He hopes to submit, next year, proposals for raising hundreds of thousands of old people from pauperism to the more dignified position of state pensioners. The Chancellor of the Exchequer looks forward to a surplus of something like £9,000,000 the next year. The proposition to care generously for the old and busy itself with the claims and misfortunes of the unemployed is a highly commendable one. The budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer embodies the highest statesmanship, as well as the deepest Christian principle, in laying the heaviest burdens upon the backs that are most able to bear them and in asking the strong to aid in carrying the burdens of the enfeebled and unfortunate.

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak. (Rom. 15 : 1.)

In Search of a Legacy

Mrs. Lottie McCall and her daughter, Eliza, went from New Orleans to New York in search of a legacy which an aunt had left the mother. Being poor, they exhausted what little money they had in reaching the city, and they were compelled to seek the hospitality of the Municipal Lodging House on Saturday and Sunday nights. They borrowed 25 cents of Kitty Reagan, who scrubs floors at the lodging house, and after a visit to a lawyer's firm in Wall Street and to the hospital where the aunt had died they found a fine dwelling house in Riverside Drive, occupied by relatives, who told them that Mrs. Harris, just before going to the hospital, had written a letter asking that, in case of her death, $5,000 of her large estate be given to Mrs. McCall. It is expected that this request will be granted by the brother and sister, to whom the bulk of the estate was left, and the trip of the mother and daughter will be rewarded in securing the legacy. Our Elder Brother, in passing from the earth, left us the priceless legacy of wisdom, more to be desired than rubies and much fine gold. There are many who do little to make it their possession. The long trip and persistent search of Mrs. McCall for an earthly treasure should be a symbol of the effort which we should put forth to secure a heavenly heritage.

Which hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away. (I. Peter 1 : 3, 4.)

PROMINENT PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

George Meredith

Governor F. B. Weeks

Hon. William Williams

Henry H. Rogers

FOR the first time in nearly a century Connecticut has lost a Governor during his term of office, Governor George L. Lilley, who died during the first months of his first term. He has been succeeded by Lieutenant-Governor F. B. Weeks, who was sworn in a few hours after the death of his predecessor was announced. The new Governor, though he has been identified with the interests of Connecticut for many years, is a native of New York, having been born in Brooklyn in 1854. When he was thirteen, his parents moved to Middletown, Conn. He is a practical business man, and will give Connecticut a clean-cut, business administration of its affairs.

One of the most striking figures in the business world of America passed away when Henry H. Rogers, of New York, died suddenly on May 19.

To his rivals in business he was a man to be feared, and his eyes were like steel when he was engaged in a struggle for supremacy with some other captain of industry; but to his friends he was devotion and warm-heartedness itself. He was descended from an old Pilgrim family, but his parents were not wealthy and he went into business as soon as he left high school, at the age of sixteen. He sold papers, worked in his father's store, was for a time on the railroad and then went to Pennsylvania to learn the oil business. He became one of the three greatest oil men in America.

Once, when he was asked how he had been able to accomplish so much, he replied: "By working harder than any man I ever knew or read about."

There is hardly a post in the gift of the President of greater importance than that of Commissioner of Immigration at the port of New York. As many as eight or ten thousand come through Ellis Island in a single day, and the commissioner has to be a man of rare judgment and an executive above the average. President Taft has just appointed to this position Hon. William Williams, a lawyer of New York City, who has held the post before.

In the early morning of May 18, George Meredith, English poet and novelist, passed from earth at his country home at Boxhill. He was eighty-one years of age, and had been well up to a week previous, when he was taken ill as a result of driving out in his donkey-cart in bad weather. His life was, for years, one of hardship and disappointment. One year, while struggling to make a living with his pen, he lived entirely upon oatmeal. He was left an orphan, and his guardian destined him for the law, but he took up journalism and literature. His first poem, Chillianwallah, was printed in 1859. After trying poetry, he took up prose, and in 1859 came The Ordeal of Richard Feverel, which showed that a master of fiction had arisen.

A NEW MILITARY BRANCH OF THE Y. M. C. A.

EXACTLY ten years ago a new department was formed of the Young Men's Christian Association of the city of New York, to work among soldiers stationed in the harbor. The quarters set aside for the use of this branch by Major Roberts, then commanding officer of Governor's Island, consisted of one small room in the basement of the old barracks. At this time the committee in charge was very much exercised over the prospect of raising $70, to add to the outfit certain furnishings and games. To contrast this humble beginning with this splendid building, which was dedicated for the use of the soldiers at Fort Slocum on Saturday, May 8, reveals a providential blessing and growth. On that Saturday afternoon about one thousand friends, including soldiers and civilians, met in the spacious building for the dedication exercises. Mr. Franklin H. Warner, chairman, in introducing the programme thanked the various friends who had made the building possible, and particularly Mrs. Russell Sage, whose interest in soldiers and in the Young Men's Christian Association led her to give $50,000 to provide this splendid substitute for home; Colonel W. P. Evans, at the time commanding officer of the post, through whose influence authority was gained to erect the building; and the committee whose faithful efforts had brought about the splendid results.

Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur offered the dedicatory prayer, which was a most appropriate one. The doctor prayed most earnestly for the thousands of young soldiers who pass from home and into the Army through this post, who here must choose a new set of companions. He prayed very tenderly for the generous giver, that her life might be extended many years to help establish great things for the cause of Christ.

Colonel William H. C. Bowen, of the Twelfth Infantry, representing General Leonard Wood, made an interesting address, thanking the Army Branch for its practical work and indorsing it in the highest praise.

Captain Wilson Chase, commanding officer at Fort Slocum, gave a very hearty welcome to all the friends and expressed his great interest in the work of the branch at Fort Slocum. He said: "A building of this kind is very good for this particular post, where men come from civil into army life not knowing much what it will be, and spend here their first three months. Commercial establishments are doing many things to-day for their employees that formerly would have been considered fantastic, therefore anything that increases the happiness, contentment and welfare of the enlisted man increases his efficiency and is not only a benefit to him but to the country."

Mr. Charles M. Jesup, chairman of the Fort Slocum Executive Committee, spoke briefly and earnestly, expressing the ideals which the Fort Slocum department was striving to attain.

A short letter was read from Mrs. Sage, expressing regret that the journey to Fort Slocum would be too much for her strength, and conveying her best wishes to her "brave Army boys."

Mrs. Sage was represented by her brother, Colonel J. J. Slocum, a Civil War veteran, and his son, Major Slocum, of the United States Army, who has recently returned from a tour in the Philippine Islands. Mr. George A. Sanford, secretary of the Army Branch, expressed the joy it was to the managers to have so many friends present with them in the day of their rejoicing. He said: "We greatly regret the unavoidable absence of the generous donor of the building. It has been my pleasure to hear her make two short addresses to soldiers, and they contained most wise and excellent counsel." In his tribute to Mrs. Sage Mr. Sanford said she is wise and kind, abominates sham, loves the simple life of the home and hates everything that undermines character. "Actions speak louder than words, and this fine building expresses Mrs. Sage's interest in and approval of her 'brave Army boys.'"

Fort Slocum is one of the most important posts in the United States for such work among soldiers, as from 15,000 to 20,000 young men will spend the first two or three months of their Army life here while being broken into military ways. This is a time of discouragement and homesickness, consequently one of deep impressions. The support of the work in this building will be dependent largely upon voluntary gifts. Ten per cent. of the $5,000 budget will be met by membership dues.

GEORGE A. SANFORD.

The New Y. M. C. A. Army Building at Fort Slocum, N. Y.

IN FLOWERY SPRING DAYS

On Choosing Wallpaper

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

ABOUT this time in the year the house begins to look rather dingy. Glancing at the paint, the housekeeper is aware that it would be better for freshening with another coat. The wallpaper, too, is faded and certain rooms that have been constantly in use are no longer as attractive as they once were. Wallpaper is not necessarily very expensive, the prices ranging upward from a few cents a roll. Some of the cheap papers are very pretty, and if the work of repapering can be done at home the interior of the house may be wonderfully transformed without making a great drain on the family resources. In choosing wallpaper it is well to consider the fact that one is to live with it. If paper is chosen from samples in the decorator's book, there is danger of being misled as to the effect it will have when upon the wall. "I selected this paper," said a farmer's wife, "with the greatest care, and it was perfectly beautiful and satisfactory in the piece. Now that it is on the wall, it is a disappointment. The pattern is too straggling and the colors are too bright. I should dread having an illness in this room." Her experience has been repeated over and over by most of us.

In a private hospital in New York City the rooms are all neutral-tinted, and a nurse explained to one who inquired that, when patients were emerging from ether after a surgical operation or were convalescent, paper with a set pattern of any sort would interfere with their resting and irritate their nerves. A pattern of flowers or geometrical figures repeating themselves indefinitely will prove very wearisome to an invalid. While health is to be the rule, let us hope, yet we cannot leave out of our account the possibility of occasional illness, and for this reason sleeping rooms should have plain, soft-tinted paper on their walls.

A nursery in which children are to play, but not to sleep, may be very prettily papered with pictorial scenes in which sheep and lambs, chickens and birds are represented. There is great variety in illustrative papers for the nursery. On a plain background, a woman who has taste and who is willing to take the trouble may decorate a child's room very nicely by the use of pictures taken from magazines.

Russia's Royal Pair and Their Son, the Crown Prince

A sunless room on the north side of the house may gain an effect of cheer and brightness by the use of yellow paper, accompanied by white woodwork. A dining-room or a hall often looks well if the wallpaper is either a deep red or a warm brown. Blue gives an effect of cold, although it also has an air of immaculate cleanness. On the whole, blue is an ascetic color.

In selecting wallpaper think whether it will harmonize with the furniture and with carpets and rugs that cannot be put aside. Regard it, too, as a background for pictures. Pictures look better against a plain than a pictorial or figured background.

Helping the Pastor

One way of helping the pastor is to listen to his sermons. Does somebody say, "What else do people do in church?" Well, the art of listening is not nearly so general as it might be. In every congregation there are those who have never taken lessons in this useful accomplishment. It was once customary to require of children and young people, on their return from church, a report of what they could remember of the text and sermon. This excellent practice has become largely obsolete. Three of every four persons who have apparently been paying attention during a morning sermon cannot repeat the text when they reach home. Should it by some happy circumstance have been so striking as to fix itself in their memory, they have not the remotest idea from what part of the Scriptures it was taken. As for the sermon, it has completely left them. An eminent Episcopal rector, whose sermons were a rare delight, was once asked by a young man just inducted into the ministry how soon he thought it safe to repeat a sermon. "My dear fellow," he replied, "with the average parishoner and the ordinary congregation a sermon that is preached in the morning might be repeated in the evening."

Photos by Underwood and Underwood

The Czar Takes the Czarina and Daughters Out for a Row

THE BUILDING OF THE NEST

THEY'LL come again to the apple tree—
Robin and all the rest—
When the orchard branches are fair to see,
In the snow of the blossom drest;
And the prettiest thing in the world will be
The building of the nest.

Weaving it well, so round and trim,
Hollowing it with care,
Nothing too far away for him,
Nothing for her too fair,
Hanging it safe on the topmost limb,
Their castle in the air.

Ah, mother-bird, you'll have weary days
When the eggs are under your breast,
And shadow may darken the dancing rays
When the wee ones leave the nest;
But they'll find their wings in a glad amaze,
And God will see to the rest.

So come to the trees with all your train
When the apple blossoms blow;
Through the April shimmer of sun and rain,
Go flying to and fro;
And sing to our hearts as we watch again
Your fairy building grow.

Giving Recommendations

FEW of the common affairs of social intercourse are surrounded by so much delicacy and are of as much real importance as the giving of recommendations. Many people are very obliging in this particular and agree to recommend anybody, whether dentist, dressmaker, milliner, cook, housemaid, teacher or professional person of any class, without the slighest hesitation. This, too, sometimes on slight knowledge. The fact remains, however, that one's name appended to a recommendation is a guarantee of character and of fitness. It must also be remembered that a good deal of responsibility attaches to a recommendation, whether it be written or spoken. Life and death, for instance, are, humanly speaking, in the hands of a physician. The most natural thing in the world, since most people are very loyal to the family doctor, is to commend him with enthusiasm to the new neighbor or the inquiring friend. It is entirely right to do this, but always with the reservation that the friend or neighbor is to act with independence and to make, if he choose, further investigation before arriving at a decision. As to the milliner and the dressmaker, standards differ widely. The artist whose hats are beautiful creations in the eyes of one woman produces hideous deformities when judged by the taste of another. The dressmaker whose gowns are dreams of beauty when designed for a fair young girl may make a frumpy and awkward looking figure of a stout lady of middle age. Refrain from unqualified recommendation, or guard what you say with the statement that you are perfectly suited and have always been extremely pleased with the work done by the milliner or dressmaker.

Russia's Royal Household

SO little is really known of the inner life of royalty that we take pleasure in giving on this page three photographs, which possess a unique interest in this connection. They were taken for Underwood & Underwood, of New York City, by special permission, and have never been published. One photograph shows the Emperor, his wife and daughters out for a row on the Neva. One of the young princesses is handling a pair of oars beside her father, with a skill that could only be born of practice. Another picture shows the Czar alone in his canoe. He is apparently enjoying his spin as fully and unreservedly as though cabinets and the cares of state were things unknown. The third gives us a glimpse of the simple life of the royal household on their yacht, the Standart.

The Czar in His Hours of Recreation

THE STORY OF MARCO

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"'COURSE not," snapped Annetta, "an' no more don't I; but we got to."

"What for?"

Annetta shrugged her shoulders.

"How does I know?" she sniffed.

Marco was silent. Across the room the organ-grinder and his brother, in a torrent of Italian, were anathematizing the school, the teacher, and the man who would take a child from his honest work—where he could be of some use—and set him to learning foolish things from books, which would not bring in a single cent! The men were still snarling when Marco turned to Annetta with a sudden light in his eyes.

"Look a-here, say," he demanded, "there's girls, ain't there?—at this school, where we're goin'?"

"Sure!"

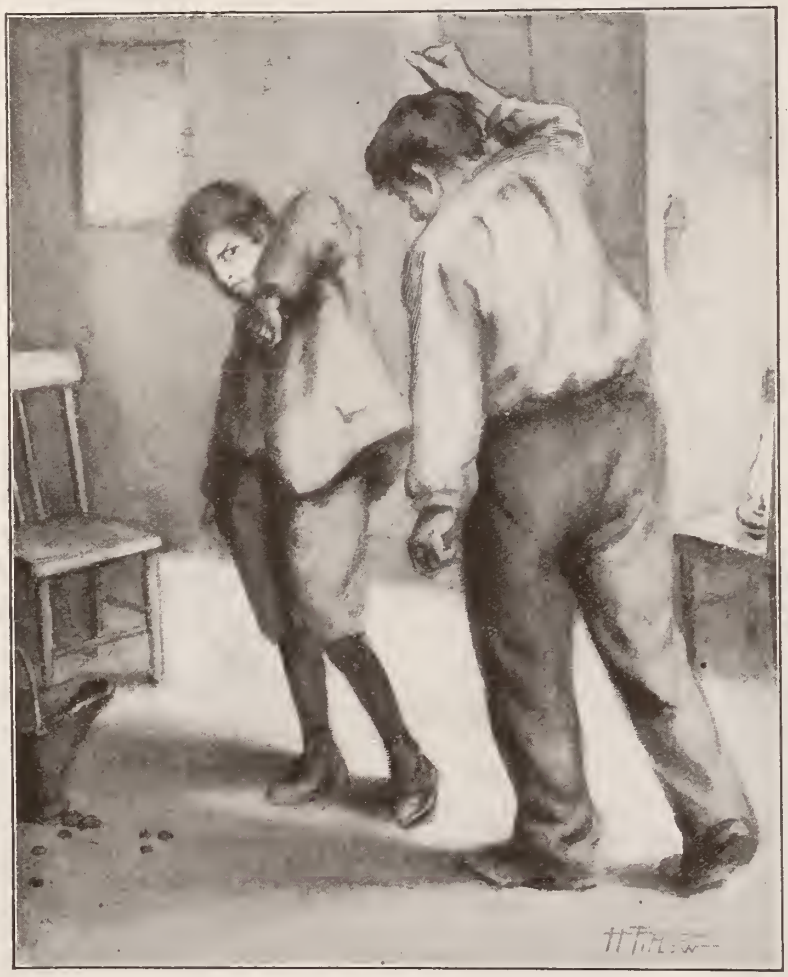
"Well, I'm goin', then. I want ter go," announced the boy, with decision. "You see, it's there that Flossie'll be, sure. Flossie always did think books with readin' an' pictures in 'em, was all there was that was worth doin'!"

In spite of Annetta's scornful protests, Marco took his violin to school with him on that first day; and great was his indignation when it was promptly taken away from him and carried to the desk. Nor was that the only source of his disappointment. School, in fact, so far as Marco was concerned, was a distinct failure; for how was he to find Flossie if he could not be allowed to go from room to room and play "Lost on the Ocean Wave"? And how was he to look for her at all if every bit of his time must be taken up with tiresome books and classes? No; certainly, Marco did not like school.

School, however, was only the beginning of his troubles, as he soon found. His life at home—if home the dingy room might be called—grew day by day more unbearable. The organ-grinder had gone back to his crossest surliness, and Marco was forced more than once to dodge an angry blow. The food, too, became daily more scanty and unpalatable, until Marco seriously thought of running away and trying to shift for himself. Just here, however, he faced a grave question: what could he do to earn money?

The street-playing now was not the profitable thing that it had been. First of all, school took most of Marco's time, and though he had valiantly tried to improve such time as was left, he had encountered a brand-new difficulty in the shape of certain officious persons who did not like to see a ten-year-old boy and a twelve-year-old girl shivering in the December twilight, trying to earn a little money. These officious persons did not rest, indeed, until they had quite put a stop to it; and Marco was soon, as he expressed it, out of a job.

How now should he find Flossie, he wondered bitterly, if "Lost on the Ocean Wave" was to be forever imprisoned in the silent violin?



"Marco was forced to dodge an angry blow"

CHAPTER X

TRAMPING THE STREETS

SEVERAL days before Christmas, Marco took to the streets. In the chill of dawn he slipped out of the dismal room, carrying in one hand the violin and in the other all the rest of his earthly possessions.

He had no money. The night before he had asked the careful guardian of his earnings to give him what was coming to him—and he had got it—but it was not money: it was a blow, together with a snarling oath. For some time afterward, Marco had lain in his corner smarting with pain and indignation. Then had come his decision. He would go away. He would travel miles and miles of those endless streets, until he came to a place so very distant that those unkind people who would not let him play could not find him. There he would begin a new life. There he would play and earn money. He had done it before—he could do it again; and this time there would be no surly man to deprive him of all his wealth. He would find Flossie, too; and, as the story books say, they would all live happy ever after. So, very stealthily, he had slipped out of the dismal room, and in five minutes he was free, with the world before him.

For some time Marco plodded steadily onward, turning such corners as pleased his fancy. Then an insistent clamoring in the region of his stomach reminded him that breakfast, even such as the organ-grinder supplied, was better than no breakfast at all.

He stopped, and hesitated. There was his violin; but was he at a distance that would make his playing safe? His judgment said no, but his stomach said yes; and his stomach, having the louder voice, won the day. Carefully depositing his bundle at his feet, he took out his violin, and began to play.

The street was wide and thronged with people, and for a time he attracted scant attention; then some one stopped to listen, followed by another and another. Marco played as if life itself depended on it. The old light came back to his eyes, and the old joyous smile to his lips. Then he doffed his cap, and presented its mute appeal to the nearest man in the crowd.

There was a quick response. The copper cents and the nickels were jingling merrily when a tall woman in black touched Marco on the shoulder.

"See here, little boy."

Marco turned swiftly. With instinctive caution he backed toward the bundle and the empty violin case that lay waiting for him a few feet away. His lips were silent, but his eyes were furtively measuring the way to the nearest corner.

"Who are you? What is your name?" continued the woman. "How does it happen that you are playing like this in the streets?"

Marco shook his head. Suddenly a sly cunning, the heritage of his recent environment, came to his eyes, and he mumbled glibly:

"No speak-a da English."

"Indeed!" retorted the woman. "All the more reason then why you should be where you belong—in school!"

School! Marco did not wait to hear more. With a swiftness born of his terror he caught up his belongings and made a dive for the nearest corner. Nor did he stop running until he had placed two long blocks between him and his tormentor. Then he paused for breath, and to take account of stock.

His money was safe. He had twenty-two cents. More than that, he suddenly awoke to a realization that he had found a new weapon for defense—a convenient simulation of not understanding what was said to him. Not for nothing had he spent those long weeks with the organ-grinder and his friends! Still, he was frightened, and a little worried as to his prospects. He felt tempted to cry; but he told himself that he was a man now, with a man's work to do, and that he must not be a baby.

By night, however, Marco almost wished that he were a baby; for babies—in his opinion—stood a fair chance of having a roof over their heads, and a place to sleep. Often in the stuffy little room in the nights past, he had longed for the stars and the open sky; but this was different. He had now the stars and the sky, to be sure, but he had also the thronging rush and roar of the streets, and he had the dread presence of the "cop," whose sharp-eyed scrutiny he had long since learned to fear. He was not hungry (ten cents of the twenty-two had attended to that); he was not cold, the weather fortunately having turned strangely warm for December; but he was sleepy. It was quite midnight, however, before he found a secluded doorway to an empty house, where he finally curled himself up to sleep.

Continued on next page

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

CHAPTER XI

A Lonely Christmas Eve

IN LESS than a week, Marco was forced to own that freedom was not the paradise he had pictured it. Earnings were scanty and irregular, particularly as he seemed never able to get away from the eyes of unkind people who, like the woman in black, asked him personal questions. Whether these questioners always meant evil, Marco did not know; nor did he dare wait to find out. He always fled at once. Naturally, this ever-present fear of molestation soon showed in his music, and he discovered that the coins tossed to him grew fewer and fewer each day. Flossie had not been found, though he had played "Lost on the Ocean Wave" at least once wherever he had dared to play at all. It was colder now, with occasional flurries of snow, and Marco's thin little legs and arms shook until they were blue. Even the organ-grinder's home seemed a palace beside the doorways and hidden corners that were Marco's nightly bed; while as for the jabbering swarms of Italians—they seemed now like dear friends to the lonely little lad who had no one in all the great cityful to call him by name.

It was on Christmas Eve that matters came to a crisis with Marco. All day he had been tramping the streets in a new-fallen snow, trying to earn a few cents for his supper. He carried now only the violin and its case in his hands. The extra coat and blouse that had been in his bundle he had put on over his other clothing; and the keepsakes of his mother's he had stowed in his pockets with careful fingers. Very dear to Marco were the watch, the ring, the locket, and the little green-covered book that had been his mother's, and not for much would he have parted with them. Everywhere about him were eager faces and hurried footsteps. Nowhere was there man, woman, or child who had time to listen to a wavering tune played by numbed fingers on a violin, and Marco had at last put up his instrument in despair.

All about him he saw the red and green of the Christmas cheer, but there was not a scarlet berry nor a tinsel star that did not seem to mock at him; and there was not a Christmas package that did not carry a pang to his lonely little heart and empty stomach. Even the newsboys and bootblacks wore a sprig of green, and plied their trade with a holiday air, bringing a bitter envy to Marco's soul.

Marco was still thinking of the newsboys when he slipped into the great railroad station at Forty-second Street to warm himself. He had been there frequently of late. It was warm and light; and by not sitting too long in one seat he had found he could easily avoid being asked embarrassing questions. To-night it must have been the thought of the newsboys that gave him his Great Idea when the man near him left his evening paper on the seat and hurried away.

The paper was whole and clean—and instantly the Great Idea sprang into life. If he, Marco, could find other papers like that, why could he not take them out and sell them? Why could not he, too, be a newsboy? With the money thus earned he could buy more papers; and with the money from them more and yet more papers. Of course! It was a very simple matter, after all! And to Marco the way led straight ahead to bewildering wealth, and all on account of one discarded newspaper there at his side.

Marco began business at once. By diligent search and wary caution he managed to possess himself of five papers. Then came uppermost the question of what he should do with his violin. As for taking it with him into the maelstrom of competition on the street, it was out of the question. He was looking about with anxious eyes for a safe hiding-place when his glance fell on the man behind one of the windows along the wall, who seemed to be taking in bags and bundles for people in the most obliging fashion. The man and the place looked safe, and with a sigh of relief Marco hurried toward the window. A moment later an amazed checking-clerk found a battered violin case thrust into his hands by an eager-eyed boy who stopped only to burst out:

"If ye'll please keep it, Mister, till I want it—an' thank ye!" Then he was gone before the man behind the counter could so much as say the word "check."

On the street Marco paused to reconnoitre. He wished to select the most advantageous position. He felt, too, the need of some instruction; and for a few minutes he did nothing but watch very carefully the movements of the newsboys nearest him. Then, taking up his position on a busy corner, he began work in earnest.

"Paper! paper! all about the big fire!" he shouted, dodging in and out of the crowd, and thrusting his paper under the noses of the passers-by.

He had sold just three papers when a shrill voice yelled in his ear:

"Hey—you—beat it! Dis is my corner!" And with the words came a stinging blow.

Marco did not stop to make inquiries. He dropped his papers and responded with fists and feet. He was getting much the better of his assailant when suddenly he stopped short—the boy whom he was pommeling was even smaller than himself, and was a hunchback.

The hunchback, amazed at this sudden cessation of hostilities at the very moment of victory, stopped too, and gazed into Marco's face in blank astonishment.

Marco was the first to speak.

"Oh, I say—I'm sorry," he stammered. "I didn't know you was—sick," he finished confusedly.

The freckled little face opposite showed a quick, dull red. Jimmy Nolan did not like to be reminded of his infirmity; yet in spite of his anger, his heart glowed at the remorseful sympathy in Marco's eyes.

"I ain't sick," he snapped in a choky voice, "no more'n you be! What ye doin' on my corner, anyhow?"

"Your corner!"

"Sure—my corner! You ain't none o' de gang, you butinsky, you! Bet two cents you ain't no newsy, anyhow. Where's yer badge?"

"B-badge?" Marco was too dazed to say more.

Jimmy grinned derisively.

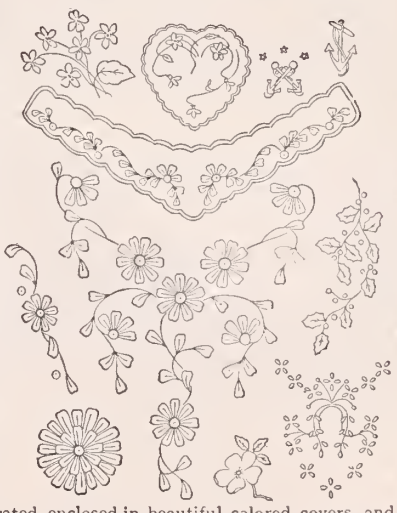
"Well, if you ain't de fresh guy!" he jeered.

"Paper!" It was a sharp voice of command, and Jimmy heard it at once. Instantly he became the alert master of his trade. For the next ten minutes he paid no attention to Marco, beyond making sure that he was not attempting to sell any more papers. Marco, however, was too dejected to do anything but stand disconsolately at one side watching with wistful eyes this alluring whirl of business into which he might not enter. For he might not enter—of that Marco was very sure. Jimmy's words had carried conviction.

To be continued

ZU ZU
GINGER SNAPS
Rain! Rain!! Rain!!! All in vain!
If you lack snap and want ginger, use the old established countersign
ZU ZU
to the grocerman
No one ever heard of a ZU ZU that wasn't good
No! Never!!
5¢
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

FIFTY BRIGGS TRANSFER STAMPING PATTERNS



Briggs Transfer Patterns represent the easiest method for stamping all materials. Place the pattern face down on the material to be stamped, place a hot iron for an instant on the back of the pattern and it instantly transfers the design to the material. These patterns will transfer on any material. This New Stamping Outfit contains fifty of Briggs Transfer Patterns and includes the following designs:

Shirt Waist Set for Wallachian or Shadow Embroidery, consisting of whole Front, Collar and Cuff; 3 Complete Alphabets; 2 Belt Designs, one for Eyelet, and one for Wallachian Embroidery; Heart for Needle Book; Designs for Babies' Yokes and Cuffs; also Tie-end; 2 Collar Designs, one for Eyelet, and one for Shadow work; Design for Baby's Bib; Chemisette Design for French or Eyelet Embroidery; 4 Sailor-Suit Emblems; Side-Bag Design; Corner for Table-Cover; Eyelet Border, Bow-knot Designs; Spray for Shadow work; Violet Design for Sachet; Chemise Design for Eyelet Embroidery; Wallachian Center for Pincushion Top; Design for Handkerchief Corner; Sprays of Violets, Poppies, Wild Rose, Daisy, Eyelet, Wallachian, Buttercups, Strawberries, Forget-Me-Nots, Holly and Maidenhair Ferns.

With the outfit we send free a little book showing illustrated directions for doing the latest Embroidery, showing also the popular stitches, etc., etc.

We will send the Briggs Stamping Outfit as above described, together with The Housewife all the rest of this year, for only 30 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

The Housewife is carefully edited, attractively illustrated, enclosed in beautiful colored covers, and each number comprises from 20 to 36 pages. There is never a dull or uninteresting line printed in The Housewife, and no household publication in existence is more thoroughly read or more fully appreciated; it is always Wholesome, Cheerful, Helpful, Practical and Timely. You will be delighted with it. The trial subscription gives you more than 150 large pages of reading matter of the best quality, and the amount cannot be used for a better purpose. Remit by P. O. order or in postage stamps.

Address THE HOUSEWIFE, 52 TO 58 DUANE STREET, NEW YORK. P. O. BOX 1198.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

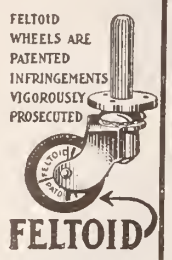
"The more you say the less people remember." One word with you, SAPOLIO

Ordinary Casters Ruin!

YOU know the cost of refinishing floors and renewing their coverings. Every time your furniture is moved about on ordinary casters, the loss to you can be figured in actual dollars and cents.

Prove this yourself! Examine the surface of your hardwood floors and look closely at your rugs and matting after metal caster wheels have passed over them.

Such damage is unnecessary. To realize a loss and not prevent it is extravagance in its worst form. It is practical economy to



Use Feltoid Casters and Furniture Tips

Feltoid Wheels are strong and durable and their velvety surface obviates further damage.

Feltoid Casters and Tips are guaranteed to wear—are economical—will save many times their cost in a single season. You know the effects of metal wheels that rubber disintegrates—wooden wheels split—wheels of leather become hard and develop sharp edges.

Feltoid Wheels and Tips mean real economy of wear.

By immediately substituting "Feltoid" for your old casters, you will have given an extension of life to your floors and their coverings.

In future orders to your dealer, insist that each piece of furniture be equipped with Feltoid Casters.

Write immediately for Booklet giving styles, prices, etc.

The BURNS & BASSICK COMPANY
Department M, Bridgeport, Conn.

SLIP A BOX OF Mayler's CANDIES IN YOUR GRIP.

IT TAKES BUT LITTLE ROOM AND MAKES YOU DOUBLY WELCOME

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER

DURING THE SUMMER avoid that red, shiny complexion caused by perspiration. Use Lablache, the great beautifier, and have no fear of exposure to the sun and wind.

Pure and harmless.

Refuse Substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail.

Send 10c. for sample.

BEN. LEVY CO.
French Perfumers
Dept. 22, 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass.

DEAF 25 YEARS

CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

BOYS AND GIRLS

PERFECTION CAKE TIN

Can earn many dollars during vacation or after school selling household novelties. Large catalogue, instructions and sample Perfection Cake Tin and four other useful novelties, worth over a dollar, sent at once if you will send 25 cents to pay cost of packing.

Household Novelty Works, 30-100 Republic St., Buffalo, N.Y.
Shipments made from Chicago or Buffalo, as desired.

Faith's Arch of Triumph*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE Golden Text (Heb. 11:1) gives us the realm in which the heroes of faith operated. It was invisible to mortal eyes, but in plain sight to the eye of the soul, which is faith. The heroes of faith endured as seeing him who is invisible.

And there have been heroes in war, in scientific discoveries, in philanthropy, in letters, in statecraft; and men have delighted to honor them by erecting monuments, in the form of arches, shafts and statues. Such memorials have served two purposes: to honor the dead, and to arouse emulation in the living. The arch is the form we particularly wish to call attention to now. In Rome there are many arches of notables, among which are those erected to Septimius Severus, Constantine and Titus. On each of them are inscriptions and bas-reliefs commemorating the victories won by them. Christian tourists in Rome are always more interested in the Arch of Titus than in any other, because it was erected to commemorate the downfall of Jerusalem under the Roman general Titus in the year 70 A.D. It is built of white Pentelic marble, with four engaged columns, fluted, divided by large panels, and the whole surmounted by an attic. The alto-reliefs on the inside of the arch represent two scenes from the triumphal entry of Titus after the war. On one side is Titus in his triumphal chariot, drawn by four horses, preceded by a personification of Rome. On the other side are Roman soldiers, bearing the chief trophies brought from Jerusalem: the golden table, the silver trumpets and the seven-branched candlestick. The honor of the Roman is the Christian's shame. It should be said, incidentally, that these sculptures are considered as giving the authentic forms of the sacred vessels in the temple. Other cities have erected arches to their heroes. At the time of the Centennial of Washington there was a fine arch erected in plaster, which should have been made permanent in marble. It bore the motto, in Washington's own words: "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair. The event is in the hands of God."

The Bible Arches

So much has been said about arches to prepare the way for an appreciation of the arch of faith, which is erected in the Bible to the heroes of faith. Let us in imagination, if not with paper and pencil, draw a many-sided arch. Let us inscribe on the arch the name of Abraham, and above his name engrave the stars of heaven, for when he gazed upon the stars he believed God's promise that he should be the father of a great multitude, even though he had not as yet one descendant. Let us place beside Abraham's name that of Sarah, who herself was old when she bore a son to Abraham in his old age. In bas-relief, let us place upon the arch that wonderful scene of Abraham about to offer his only son Isaac as a sacrifice, at the command of God. We will inscribe the name of Isaac on the arch, because we find it in the Bible arch. Let us cut a bas-relief of an old, old man, probably on his death bed, blessing first his son Jacob, and then Esau. He was greatly troubled when he discovered that he had given the older son's blessing to the younger son, "but his faith led him to accept the divine overruling of his purpose."

The name of Jacob is on the Bible arch. Let us engrave a bas-relief upon the arch, having for the background the river Nile, of Egypt, and beautiful palm trees. There, in a tent upon a couch, is an aged man, who has risen to a half sitting posture, resting upon his staff, that he may bless before he dies the two youthful sons of the ruler of Egypt, almost royal in appearance, but still the son and grandsons of Jacob. By faith Jacob was able to divide the blessing between his grandsons, which would appear to have belonged to the elder.

The name of Joseph is on the Bible arch. Let us place in a bas-relief a scene in a palace in Egypt. On a gorgeous couch Joseph lies dying. He is surrounded by Egyptian soldiers and servants, but nearest to his couch are his own brothers, in shepherd garb. Joseph has summoned his ebbing strength to assure them that God will keep his promises made to their forefathers, and as a seal of faith he charges them to carry his bones with them when, in God's time, they return to the land of Canaan.

Witnesses for God

We find the name of Moses upon the Bible arch. We shall have to devote one whole side of the arch to several bas-reliefs connected with his history. First, as a child of faith, floating on the Nile in a basket, anchored among the rushes, hidden from the cruel hand of Pharaoh; second, the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter, and heir to the crown, but refusing it in his loyalty to God and God's people; third, dwelling in the land of Midian, living the life of a shepherd, brave and true, defending the shepherdesses when the shepherds tried to drive their flocks away from the wells; fourth, again in the land of Egypt, with the elders of Israel gathered about him, while he gives them God's commands about putting the blood of slain lambs upon their doors that the angel of death may not enter and destroy their first-born; fifth, leading the host of Israel out of Egypt by night, and across the Red Sea in the dry path prepared by the Lord of Hosts. How grand a hero of faith was Moses then!

We find inscribed upon the Bible arch, "The Host of Israel," and there is a bas-relief in which their prowess exceeds that of the soldiers of Titus, for without arms they lay siege to a city and bring it low "by their faith."

We find the name of a woman upon the arch, and an alien woman, Rahab, placed there because of the information and help which she gave the spies sent into Jericho from the host of Israel. She had faith that their God was able to overcome for them.

We turn to other sides of the Bible arch, and see the names of Gideon, of Barak, of Samson, Jephthah, David, Samuel and the prophets, who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. And the names of martyrs are inscribed there—those who were torn asunder, those who were tempted but were without sin, those who were slain with the sword, and those who wandered in desert and dwelt in caves and catacombs that they might escape the fury of persecutors and have opportunity to serve their God. And these all had witness borne to them through their faith.

How glorious to have one's name inscribed on such an arch, and to have one's deeds pictured there in the eloquence of something more enduring than stone or marble!

The Crowns in the Tower

In the famous old Tower of London there is a marvelous collection of treasures:

The Queen's state crown. In the

Continued on next page

* International Sunday School Lesson for June 13, 1909. Heroes of Faith. Heb. 11: 1-3, 17-29. GOLDEN TEXT: "Faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen." Heb. 11: 1.

WHY TAKE LESS THAN 5%

If your money earns but 4 per cent. instead of 5 per cent., the income from it is not enough by One-Quarter.

If your emergency withdrawals of principal cause you to lose earnings for weeks or months, the profit is reduced to perhaps 3½ or 3 per cent. With equal assurance of safety, the higher rate is worth considering.

The Industrial has not paid less than 5 Per Cent. per annum in all the 16 years of its existence. It is a stronger institution at the end of every year than it was the year before. Its present Assets are over $1,900,000, with Surplus and Profits of $138,000. It is supervised by the New York Banking Department, and its records are open to public and private inspection. If you would be convinced how conveniently you can transact your business with us by mail, we should like to refer you to our patrons in all parts of the country—some probably in your own locality—who permit us to use their names.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

We Pay 5%

on any sum from $25 to $3,000. Earnings are reckoned from day of receipt to day of withdrawal, and withdrawals are at your pleasure, subject only to 30 days' notice.

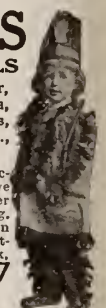
Personal correspondence is invited.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

PLAY SUITS
FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Indian and Cowboy Suits, Soldier, Sailor, Fire and Police Uniforms, Baseball and Football Outfits, Tents, Moccasins, Leather Novelties, etc., etc., at Popular Prices.

Great fun for the little ones, especially in vacation time. You will save the cost of our suits many times over in the wear of their regular clothing. Every piece strong and well made in a clean, sanitary factory—no sweat-shop work. Look for this trade-mark, and take no other kind.



Illustrated Catalog Free

If your dealer can't supply our goods we will do so.

INDIAN NOVELTY CO., Box 914 Niagara Falls, New York

A BOY'S HOLIDAYS

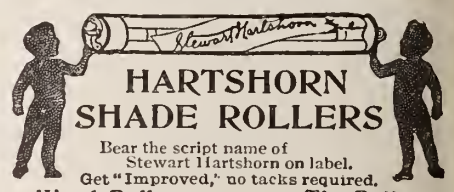
The ardent controversy which has been waging in England and America concerning the best way to dispose of school boys in the long summer vacation has prompted the Grand Trunk Railway System to issue a special publication giving suggestions and practical hints to parents, as to what to do with the public and preparatory school boy during the months of July and August. The vacation camp is one of the solutions, and the publication entitled "What shall a Boy do with his Vacation" thoroughly covers the ground and solves the problem of the best way for a schoolboy to enjoy his holidays.

A copy may be obtained for the asking by applying to G. W. Vaux, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Hair Like This

FREE Let me send you a remarkable treatment for Baldness, Dandruff, Gray Hair, etc., at my own expense. It will surprise and delight you. Write to-day to

WM. CHAS. KEENE, President
LORRIMER INSTITUTE,
Dept. 2540, Baltimore, Md.



HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.

Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business.

Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

Picture-Puzzle Post Cards

Something Entirely New and very interesting. Assorted Designs. No. 1, Six mailed for 25 Cts. No. 2, each 10 Cts., or Three mailed for 25 Cts.

MADISON ART COMPANY, Madison, Conn.

JUST OUT Low-priced, 3-lb. Mop; turn crank to wring; hands keep clean. Women all buy; 150 per cent. to Agents; exclusive territory given; catalog free.

U. S. MOP CO., 634 Main St., Leipsic, O.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.

EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for Inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps

R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Rooms 20-30 Pacific Bldg., Wash., D.C.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Delight, Biscuit, Cake and Doughnut Cutter, Apple Corer, and Strainer. 5 articles in one. Sells on sight. Large Catalog free.

RICHARDSON MFG CO., Dept. 6, BATH, N. Y.

A REBELLION
Food Demanded.

The human body will stand a lot of abuse, but sometime it will surely rebel and demand the proper food in place of the pasty, starchy, greasy stuffs on which it has been made sick.

Then is the time to feed Grape-Nuts, the most scientific and perfect food in the world.

A lady of Washington says: "Three years ago I was very ill with catarrh of the stomach and was given up to die by one doctor. I laid in bed four months and my stomach was so weak that I could not keep down medicine or hardly any kind of food and was so weak and emaciated after four months of this starvation that my daughter could easily lift me from bed and put me in my chair.

"But weak as my stomach was, it accepted and relished and digested Grape-Nuts without any difficulty the first time that wonderful food was tried.

"My doctor told me to eat Grape-Nuts, which were predigested, and although I felt certain I could not keep the food on my stomach I made the trial and it was a most complete success.

"I am now strong and in better health than for a great many years and am gradually growing still stronger. I rely on Grape-Nuts for most of the nourishment that I get. The results have certainly been wonderful in my case and prove that no stomach is so weak it will not digest Grape-Nuts.

"My baby got so fat from feeding on Grape-Nuts I was afraid I would have to stop giving the food to him, but I guess it is a healthy fat for his health is just perfect."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A Housekeeping Necessity

Pure Refined Paraffine serves a useful purpose almost every day.

Add a little (melted) to Monday's wash water and wash easier—mix a little into hot starch and have better-looking linens.

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

gives a durable polish to wood floors, and when preserving time comes it's the best air-tight seal for fruit jars and jelly glasses.

Write for a Paraffine Paper Pad for use on ironing day—keeps sad-irons from sticking.

STANDARD OIL CO.
(Incorporated)

Auto Masseur REDUCES
40 DAY FREE TRIAL FOR BOTH SEXES

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh that I mail it free, without deposit.

When you see your shapeliness speedily returning I know you will buy it.

Try it at my expense. Write to-day.
PROF. BURNS, 1298 Q, BROADWAY, N. Y.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book, "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned
CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Attorneys
Established 16 Years
1003 F. Street, Washington, D.C.

Tricycles for Cripples and Chairs for Invalids

Complete catalog sent on request. Write for it today.
WORTHINGTON CO., 201 Cedar St., Elyria, Ohio

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

front is a cross of diamonds, in the centre of which is a ruby, which Henry V. wore in his helmet at the battle of Agincourt.

St. Edward's crown, made for the coronation of Charles II., and used ever since at coronations. The orb, a ball of gold, set with jewels and surmounted by a cross, is held by the sovereigns in the right hand at coronation, and carried in the left on their return.

The King's sceptre with the dove, surmounted by a cross, with a dove as the emblem of mercy.

The Ampulla or Golden Eagle, which holds the consecrated oil at coronations.

The Curtana or Sword of Mercy, carried at coronations, between the swords of Temporal and Spiritual Justice.

The Salt-cellar of State, a model of the White Tower.

The Silver Font, used at the baptisms of royal children.

A Collection from the Bible

Magnificent as these are, they are not to be compared with a collection made up in imagination of the following:

The staff which Abraham carried when the left Padan-aram to journey to the land of promise.

The stone which Jacob set up for a pillar to honor God.

The ring and the chain which Joseph wore as the ruler of Egypt.

The staff on which the dying Jacob leaned as he blessed the sons of Joseph.

The Egyptian coffin in which the bones of Joseph were carried back to Canaan by his brothers.

The tiny ark in which the infant Moses was stowed away by his mother.

A ring from the hand of Pharaoh's daughter, who adopted Moses, the foundling, as her own son.

A bit of gold from the crown of Egypt, which Moses refused.

The shepherd rod of Moses, which was afterward given miraculous power by God.

The scarlet cord hung out by Rahab.

A ram's horn used in compassing the walls of Jericho.

The sword of Gideon.

The sword of Barak, with which he pursued the hosts of Sisera.

The jawbone of the ass, with which Samson slew a thousand men, the enemies of the Lord.

The sword of Jephthah, which he used in fighting for the Lord.

The harp and sword and crown of King David.

The cruse that contained the oil with which Samuel anointed David.

The Knights of St. John

It was our privilege to visit the museum on the island of Malta, which contains relics of armor, weapons, etc., which belonged to the famous Knights Hospitallers of the Order of St. John. That was a military and religious order which originated in the eleventh century for the purpose of building a chapel and two hospitals—one for men and the other for women—for Latin pilgrims on their way to the Holy Land. They displayed such heroic charity on the occasion of the capture of Jerusalem by the Crusaders, in 1099, that many noble knights joined themselves to the order, binding themselves to labor for ever in the hospitals "as the servants of the poor and of Christ." Their badge was a white linen cross, with eight points, in the left breast of their black robe. In 1187 the order was nearly annihilated by Saladin.

They met another reverse in 1291, at the hands of the Saracens, and then removed to the island of Cyprus. They then became a sea power, and fitted out vessels to carry pilgrims to the Holy Land. This led to fights, which sometimes brought victories and at other times defeats. The islands of Gozo and Malta and the city of Tripoli were ceded to them by Charles V.

They strongly fortified Malta, and it became the bulwark of Christendom, and the order was thereafter known as the "Knights of Malta." They defended Malta against an attack of the Turks and, after a siege of four months of incredible endurance, the Turks were forced to depart. Bonaparte finally reduced Malta in 1798, since which time the affairs of the knights have been directed by officers residing in Rome. These knights were the worthy successors of those we find named upon the Bible arch. In the museum which we visited the coats of mail of some of the most distinguished knights were set up; prayer-rolls used by them were to be seen, swords, trumpets, etc. A short distance from the museum is the Church of St. John, where a large number of the knights are buried. It is paved with tablets bearing their names, and epitaphs placed over their remains. As one goes about reading them, feeling as if they are almost too sacred to be trod upon, he feels himself to be in the midst of an invisible host of the heroes of faith.

What have we gained through all the centuries past,
Since Bethlehem's Star gleamed o'er Judean plain?
In every age since then, some star divine
Has shed its light of life o'er human hearts,
And truth has found her knightly witnesses,
And men, by love compelled, have bowed the knee,
And sacrifice her altar fires has burned
On human hearts that struggled to o'ercome.
God's pitying eye still watches from above
And heavenly blessings rest on God's true knights,
Who conquer selfishness and fleshly sin
By aiming at the highest and the best,
And unseen strength and angel guards are lent
To God's brave knights to help them on to heaven.
—MARGARET COOTE BROWN.

So we, too, may be heroes of faith! We may be heroes without the world knowing it. It will be enough to have God and the angels know it. But there are marks by which heroes unwittingly declare themselves. A Christian sailor, who lost one of his legs in the battle of Trafalgar, said that he could very often measure the faith of the people who conversed with him by the way in which they alluded to his misfortune. Nine out of ten would exclaim, "What a pity that you lost your leg!" and only one in ten, "What a blessing that the other was preserved!"

The Sifting of a Man

Continued from page 472

Nay, rather let us face the tempter.
Resist him and he will flee from thee!
Herein is the making of a Man.

Must I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?
Sure I must fight, if I would reign:
Increase my courage, Lord;
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by Thy Word.

But, above all, let us remember our dependence on Christ. The temporary fall of Peter was due to self-reliance. "Yea, though all forsake thee," he had boasted, "yet will not I forsake thee!" To speak thus is to lean upon a broken reed. To trust in our own shield and buckler is to court defeat. But Christ is our Helper; he ever liveth to make intercession for us.

Beware of Peter's word,
Nor confidently say,
"I never will deny my Lord,"
But, "Grant I never may!"

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

Hon. Leslie M. Shaw

You can open a Bank Account with $1 in the First Mortgage Guarantee & Trust Co. of Philadelphia.

"If you would be wealthy," said Franklin, "Think of saving as well as of getting." And again: "For Age and Want save while you may, No Morning Sun lasts a whole day."

The Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the United States Treasury, the president of this institution, believes that the best way to save is to have an interest-bearing bank account. For that reason, he has made it easy for every person to start a savings account in this Company.

Simply mail $1 (more if you wish) and receive bank book and pamphlet of banking information by return mail. Do it now---save while you may---as Poor Richard says.

4% compound interest on savings accounts. 2% paid on checking accounts.

Savings fund deposits accepted up to $1,000

The First Mortgage Guarantee & Trust Co.
LESLIE M. SHAW, President
943 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Chiclets
REALLY DELIGHTFUL
The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum
Particularly Desirable after Dinner

YOUR FRIEND
Going to Camp Knows the Value of Chiclets in his Outfit

Sold in 5¢ 10¢ and 25¢ packets
Frank H. Fleer & Company Inc.
Philadelphia, U.S.A. and Toronto, Can.

BORDEN'S EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK

Proven the Best for NURSERY & HOUSEHOLD

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief for PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all afflictions of the skin.

Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free.

GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

NOW IN AN ORCHESTRA

How Music Lessons FREE Started Him

"I could not play a note when I received the first lesson from you, and now I am playing in a good orchestra of ten pieces, and can read music and play as well as any of them. I shall always recommend your home study school of music." That is what Eli Smith, Jr., R. R. No. 2, Marietta, Ill., writes after a one-year course on the Violin.

Eli Smith's only expense under our free tuition plan was for postage and music. That cost him less than Two Cents a day, and he was under no further obligation whatever.

If you wish to learn to play the Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, Cornet or learn to Sing, our teachers will come to you by mail once a week with a lesson until you can read music and play your instrument to your own satisfaction.

Over ten thousand weekly lessons are now being sent to homes all over the world to pupils in all walks of life, from seven years of age to seventy.

Our free tuition plan will enable you to get weekly lessons costing You less than two cents a day. It will be your only expense and places you under no further obligation whatever.

Don't say you cannot learn music till you sendfor our booklet and free tuition offer. It will be sent by return mail free. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7, 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

CORNISH FROM FACTORY TO HOME

ON A YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

2 Years' Credit If Needed—Easy Terms

Why Shouldn't You Buy As Low As Any Dealer?

BUY ON THE CORNISH PLAN

We save you $100 and more on the purchase of a piano.

which, in brief, places a strictly high grade piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish, at rock-bottom factory price, upon terms of your own choice, giving you 1 year to test the instrument before you need decide to keep it, and we give you an ironclad Bond of Indemnity which holds us to this offer and also insures instrument against defect for 25 years.

Send for the New Cornish Book the most beautiful piano and organ catalogue issued; it shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now.

CORNISH CO. Washington, N.J. Established Over 56 Years

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS NEW AND OLD

By I. ALLAN SANKEY

35c. a copy, postpaid. $26 per 100

Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc,

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., CHICAGO NEW YORK

GENUINE BARGAINS IN HIGH-GRADE UPRIGHT

Pianos. Slightly used instruments: 12 Steinways from $350 up; 6 Webers from $250 up; 9 Krakauers from $250 up; 7 Knabes from $250 up; 3 Chickerings from $250 up; also ordinary second-hand Uprights $75 up; also 10 very fine Parlor Grand pianos at about half. Write for full particulars. Cash or easy monthly payments. Lyon & Healy, 62 Adams St., Chicago. We ship everywhere on approval.

PULPITS, Platform Chairs, Sunday School Seats, Collection Plates, Church Pews, School Desks, Opera Chairs, Lodge and Bank Furniture, Office Desks. Ask for Catalog by number only

C112 Church Furniture	School Desks S112
L112 Lodge Furniture	Opera Chairs O112
B112 Bank Furniture	Office Desks D112

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO

COMBINATION OFFER

10 Fine Birthday Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Beautiful Rose Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Brilliant Fourth-of-July Post Cards, 10 cts.
MADISON ART COMPANY, Madison, Conn.

WEDDING INVITATIONS 100 for $3.50

Announcements, etc., engraved and printed. Latest styles, best quality, sent prepaid anywhere. Visiting Cards, 100 50c; with case 75c. Write for samples.

The Estabrook Press, 27 Head Bldg., Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

"ASTRONOMY AND BIBLE COURSE": Cloth Book, $1 Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

WINNING OUR YOUNG MEN

By George M. Elsbree

THE Organized Bible Class for young men is a God-sent means for winning young men for the Sunday School and holding them until they are drawn into the church. I am especially desirous to place before you a few of the methods I have used in building up two great classes for young men ranging in age from sixteen to thirty-five, and holding strictly to the age limit.

In order to make the organized class a success it must be well organized, and its officers should be good solid Christian men, who are not only interested in the physical and intellectual side of the class life, but also in the spiritual. I have been especially fortunate in this respect, as the class officers have been splendid, clean men, who have wielded a strong influence for Christ among their associates.

The chief reason for holding strictly to the age limit is: the things which are of interest to young men do not appeal to the older men, and if you intend to hold the young man in the Sunday School you must interest him along not only spiritual lines but cater to his love of sport. Give him clean sports, and cater to his social well-being, giving him a pleasant evening often, and if he has a talent use it where it will not only keep him in line but help entertain the others.

The Wesley Class, Binghamton, N.Y., grew from two young men and myself (the founder and teacher) until we reached the splendid number of one hundred. We had a flourishing glee club, baseball teams and football team, and kept every man interested, because we kept him busy. Sometimes our methods were criticised, but we attained in a measure the desired end—the bringing of more than one-half the men to Christ. After serving the Wesley Class as teacher until last October, I was transferred to Springfield, Mass., and about December 1 we organized the Oxford Bible Class of Trinity M. E. Church. Our success has been little short of a miracle. We have now a membership rapidly approaching one hundred and fifty, and as the church is central in location we have a splendid field, and the officers and members of the class are doing wonders. Every Saturday night a committee distributes two hundred invitations to the guests of the various hotels and restaurants, and usually we have from five to fifteen visitors from these places. We have a military company called the "Oxford Guards," composed of fifty young men; two bowling teams, a basketball team and two baseball teams. We have an orchestra in sight, a banjo club, and each Sunday some special music attracts a large number of music lovers. Sunday, March 7, was "Decision Sunday," and twenty-four gave themselves to Christ as the result of an earnest appeal from the teacher, and three who were not present have since evidenced their desire to live better lives. I personally follow several rules, and follow them strictly. One is I never allow myself to speak longer than fifteen minutes, and I handle the lesson as a brief, simple address, and find the men get more out of it than from the question method. I do not attend to the business affairs of the class except to act as adviser.

The organized class will be of great assistance to any Sunday School. I have made a study of the work. I have seen lifeless schools awakened, their membership and collections doubled and souls saved. Churches where young men were conspicuous by their absence became the centre of interest to the young men of the community. I assure you the time is coming when young people will rally to the standard of the cross, and, using their enthusiasm, will make the old church the most delightful of places, from which will radiate the love of Christ.

God give us the young people for Christ, and, hand in hand with the dear old mothers and fathers in Israel, we will march on until every knee shall bow and every tongue shall own him as Christ and King.

THIRTY THOUSAND SLAIN

CHRISTIANS, where are your brothers
Murdered by Moslem hands?
Cries of the women and children,
Filling the Moslem lands!
Christ crucified by the Pilates,
Scourged and thorn-crowned again,
Cross-cursed, laid low to the Crescent,
Thirty thousand slain!

Women assailed in their death-woes,
Children hewn, fed to the flame!
Men, made in God's own image
Butchered for bearing Christ's name!
Murdered! our brothers and sisters!
Dearer are these, double-priced,
Ours by all that is human,
Ours by blood of the Christ!

What are the nations doing?
What they did when He died,
Standing far-off and watching
While He is crucified!
'Inasmuch as to the least of these Ye did it not," said He,
(That will include Armenians)
"Ye did it not to Me."

England gun-shielding her Britons,
France gun-protecting her Franks,
German warships for the Teutons,
Russia—all nations in ranks;
None to protect poor Armenia!
Christ is forsaken, "all fled!"
God, send the hosts of Beth-Horon,
Raise up Joshua, who led!

Omaha, Neb. Lu B. Cake.

TO OUR YOUNG FRIENDS

EVERY boy and girl who reads this can earn weekly spending money and big premiums by devoting just a little time after school hours to selling "The Christian Herald."

Special Rewards Offered to Beginners.

If selling The Christian Herald pays our Junior Agents in all parts of the country, it will pay YOU. If hundreds of boys and girls earn all their spending money and big rewards by working for us only a few hours per week, you can do the same.

John Allen Thames,
Junior Agent at Greensboro, N. C.

Why not begin this week? If you do you can get a good start before vacation time comes and during the summer months our Junior Department is going to offer special inducements that will be simply irresistible.

It makes little difference where you live, it takes just three things to succeed: Energy, Determination and a little bit of Resourcefulness; that is, putting on your thinking cap to find out new ways to interest prospective customers. If you live in the city, you have a larger field to canvass; but if you live in the country you have a better opportunity to get acquainted with your customers and enlist their interest and sympathy in your work.

Hundreds of boys and girls are wanted this summer to sell THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in every part of this country. WE WANT SOMEONE IN YOUR PARTICULAR TOWN NOW. Write us today for Agent's Outfit, ten free copies and full particulars of the SPECIAL REWARDS FOR BEGINNERS. Address: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD JUNIOR DEPT., 92 Bible House, New York City

A Rising Canadian Poet

AT a time when most writers are turning their attention to prose it is interesting to find one who, as a labor of love, composes verse which shows the true poetical instinct. Such a one is the young Canadian poet, Miss Norma E. Smith, of Halifax. She started a few years ago by writing short pieces for the press of her city, and then wrote more ambitious poems, which have been printed in pamphlet form. They were, for the most part, poems of serious purpose and filled with a deep reverence for religious things. Some time ago a copy of her poem, "Belthor, the Shepherd of Bethlehem," was sent to Her Majesty Queen Alexandra. A short time after there came in reply a most gracious letter, expressing Her Majesty's appreciation of the verses and her happiness in receiving them from "such a loyal subject of the king."

As Miss Smith is hardly out of her girlhood it is to be expected that she will produce poems which, in the future, will hold no small place among the verse of Canadian and American poets.

Best light for the eyes—a lamp fitted with a Macbeth lamp-chimney.

Macbeth chimneys fit, and compel perfect combustion—a steady, even flame, without smoke or smudge. My chimneys are made from glass that won't break from heat. My name is on every one.

My index, sent free, shows which is the right chimney for your lamp.

Macbeth, Pittsburgh

$375 Up McIntyre Guaranteed Motor Buggies

Sure service—always ready—never fail—never get tired—cost no more than a good horse and buggy—cost far less to keep—sure goers over Any Kind of Roads

Speed up to 30 miles an hour. Simple, durable, guaranteed mechanical construction. Solid tires—no tire troubles or repair expense. A woman or child can drive them. Farmers of high standing may secure appointment as agents. Twenty models to choose from. Complete line. Write for free catalog No. 87, illustrated and descriptive.

W. H. McINTYRE COMPANY, Auburn, Indiana

256 Broadway, New York; 1730 Grand Ave., Kansas City; 418 Third Ave., S., Minneapolis; Canadian Factory, Tudhope-McIntyre Co., Orillia, Ont.

SPRAY POTATOES WITH THE Watson—High Pressure

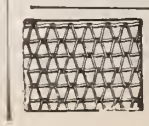
—Automatic—including Agitator and Strainer Cleaner—Sprays 40 acres daily—State experiments show gain of more than $75 per acre by using the WATSON. Booklet FREE.

FIELD FORCE PUMP CO., 75 11th St., Elmira, N.Y

IRON AND WIRE FENCES

CATALOG FREE HIGH GRADE FOR ALL PURPOSES

ENTERPRISE FOUNDRY AND FENCE COMPANY
411 South Senate Avenue Indianapolis, Ind.



FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

The Story of a Great Painting

THE unveiling of a magnificent picture of Christ, painted by Professor Carl Hecker, took place May 10 at the Salvation Army headquarters, New York City. It was hung in the auditorium the same evening. A very large and appreciative audience witnessed the unveiling and then listened to an address by Adjutant Mrs. E. M. Whittemore, founder of the Door of Hope, who told the remarkable story of the picture and how it came to be painted. Professor Hecker was a leading teacher of art and she was one of his students. Learning that she and her husband had visited the McAuley Mission, the professor, who was a sceptic in religious matters, frequently expressed surprise that any one claiming social position should visit the slums. She told him on one of these occasions, when he ridiculed religion, that she would pray that God might reveal the truth to him, for, she added, "I believe he can save an infidel as readily as he can save a drunkard." Some time afterward, the professor, during a severe illness, remembered her words and became troubled in his conscience. He became convinced of sin and was converted before leaving his sick-room. He told Mrs. Whittemore of his change of heart, and said he had determined to paint a picture of the Saviour as a gift to her, who had first led him toward the light.

A year passed, and the picture was finished. It is 12x4½ feet, and is a rare work of art, valued at $5,000. The Saviour is represented saying to the sinners, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It is altogether a noble and wonderful work of art, and one that produces a deep impression upon the crowds of sightseers who have visited the Salvation Army auditorium to gaze up at the great painting by the converted sceptic, whose art is now consecrated as well as his life.

A New Flower Book*

TASTEFULLY bound and enclosed in a neat box, Professor Binion's ingenious work on flower-writing makes a fine gift-book. He has devised an alphabet from the rose tree, though it can be formed as well from any other plant which has leaves, buds, blossoms and berries. Leaves in groups of three, five and seven, indicate the first three letters respectively. The next three are similar, with the addition of a rose. The next three are the same, except that instead of a flower a bud is combined with the leaves. The next three have two flowers, with the leaves in the same order. Thus "J" is denoted by three leaves and two flowers. Two buds come next, with ever the same arrangement of leaves. Then the berries take their place in the series. Several names are spelled out in this alphabet, and make attractive rose bushes. Mr. Binion has culled from many languages verses and sentiments celebrating the rose, the whole making a volume of considerable size. The pages are artistically bordered, and are printed only on one side.

Phyllanthography.* By Samuel A. Binion. New York. R. F. Fenno & Co., publishers.

New York Society Women at a Charity Fete

NEW YORK had an enlivening experience a few days ago on the occasion of a fête on Lenox Library Field, at Seventieth Street and Madison Avenue. The affair was given in aid of a very worthy charity, Hope Farm Protectory in Dutchess County, N. Y. This is an institution for the care of poor, sick children, which has been more than once commended in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The women of the leading families in New York conducted the fête, which was a brilliant and picturesque success from first to last. The grounds were laid out as a Grecian garden and enlivened with booths for the sale of flowers, millinery, toilet articles and many other things, and there were kiosks, restaurant tents, etc. A Hungarian band was in attendance. Not in recent years has there been so notable a gathering for charity in the metropolis. A very handsome sum of money was netted for Hope Farm.

AMONG THE WORKERS

—EVANGELISTS HART AND MAGANN, of Fairbury, Ill., lately conducted revival meetings in Dayton, O., and Belding, Mich., in which over 600 conversions were reported.

—THE ERIESIDE BIBLE ASSOCIATION, a new evangelical organization, will this year hold a summer conference at Erieside, Lake County, O., about fifteen miles east of Cleveland.

—EVANGELIST TILMAN HOBSON, of Anderson, Ind., held a remarkable revival in Waverly, Ill. At the closing service it required half of the largest church to accommodate the converts, and twenty-seven publicly consecrated their lives to Christ and the Church, for Gospel work in home and foreign fields.

—CLARENCE M. GOODMAN, Boston, Mass., writes: "I have been with Brother Moulton in his work, lived in his home at Bridgetown, Barbados, and had access to the books of the mission and his private accounts. These have all been examined and found correct. He enjoyed the respect of the respectable people of the islands. I never met a more humble, gentle Christian. He had the confidence of all the American missionaries, who greatly feel his loss."

"Entertaining a Crowd"

Songs and music never before offered in Record form can now be had in

AMBEROL RECORDS for The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

MUCH of the world's best music has heretofore been too long for any record of any sound-reproducing instrument. If used, it had to be cut or hurried.

Such music, executed as the composer intended it, is now offered in Edison Amberol Records.

Amberol Records play twice as long as standard Edison Records and longer than any other records of any kind. Thus Amberol Records bring to Edison Phonograph owners an exclusive and unusual list of songs and musical selections.

The new Edison Phonographs play both the standard Edison Records and the Amberols. Any Edison Phonograph (except the Gem) can be changed to play both at a small expense. No instrument, except the Edison Phonograph, plays Amberol Records; so if you want the music that Amberols have made possible your instrument must be an Edison Phonograph.

ANY Edison dealer will play these new Amberol Records for you and supply you with both Phonograph and Records. Any dealer will change your present Phonograph to play both standard Edison Records and Amberols. Ask your dealer or write to us for catalogues of Edison Phonographs and Records.

TRADE MARK

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH CO., 8 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J. Thomas A Edison

OVER THE FENCE

Neighbor Says Something.

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with some one along the street, or for friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Baird, Texas, got some mighty good advice this way once.

He says:

"Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk.

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away but tried a change of climate which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum.

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum.

"My bowels became regular and in two weeks all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly.

"My son, who was troubled with indigestion, thought that if Postum helped me so it might help him. It did, too, and he is now well and strong again.

"We like Postum as well as we ever liked the coffee and use it altogether in my family in place of coffee and all keep well." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Are Your Eyes Affected in ANY Way?

If So Let Us Send You

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

for 10 days at our expense.

THE NORMAL EYE

It helps Nature in a purely natural way to strengthen the eyes and restore the natural vision. Its action is in the nature of a gentle massage, which stimulates the eyes by restoring the normal circulation of blood—that is all that weak eyes require. But it does more—it moulds the eye painlessly but surely to its perfect shape. This is necessary to correct near-sight, far-sight, astigmatism, and kindred defects. It is absolutely safe—it does not come in direct contact with the eyes; and five minutes' manipulation, in your own home, twice a day, is all that is necessary to counteract eyestrain and headache, and relegate eyeglasses to the rubbish box. Throw away your eyeglasses. See nature, and read with your naked eyes. Write for instructive booklet and 10 days test to The Ideal Co., 134 H West 65th St., N. Y.

Allen's Foot-Ease

"In a Pinch, use Allen's Foot-Ease"

Shake Into Your Shoes

Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder for the feet. It relieves painful, swollen, smarting, nervous feet, and instantly takes the sting out of corns and bunions. It's the greatest comfort discovery of the age. Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight fitting or new shoes feel easy. It is a certain relief for ingrowing nails, perspiring, callous and hot, tired, aching feet. We have over 30,000 testimonials. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25 cents. Do not accept any substitute. Sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps.

FREE Trial Package sent by mail.

ALLEN S. OLMSTED, LeRoy, N.Y.

CORNS

The only safe, sure, and painless way to remove corns is to take out roots and all with A-Corn Salve. No danger from razor cuts. 15 Cents at druggist's or by mail. Giant Chemical Co., - Philadelphia

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Frances Willard*

MISS ETHEL ARNOLD, the charming and gifted sister of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, has recently delivered several times among us her remarkable lecture upon the status of woman in the various countries in which, so to speak, woman exists at all.

In spite of the fact that the most powerful personality in China for many years was its empress, for the great mass of Chinese women there is no real life. They are considered to have no souls nor minds. They are simply the drudges and burden-bearers of the community. India, Persia, even Japan, and, in only a slightly less degree, Russia, place their women in an equally degraded position. In the bloom of their beauty, they may be petted and cherished. If they are plain, or if their beauty fades, they are treated with contempt.

Miss Arnold calls attention to the fact of the almost shocking sex-emphasis which prevails in Germany. The German woman is relegated entirely to household duties, and is ridiculed and scorned if she betrays a desire for anything beyond them. The husband has almost absolute authority over the wife, and often orders her around as if she were a menial.

It is significant that it was in a German family in Wisconsin that Miss Willard first received her inspiration for the uplift of womanhood. In her own home, the father and mother were loving equals, discussing the same great subjects, consulting each other's opinions, each considering equally the other's comfort. Visiting in this German family, she saw a situation so utterly different from that in her own home, that she seemed to be in another world. She saw a woman meek and dispirited through long subjugation, ordered about, reproved before others, treated in every way as an inferior—and all, felt this ardent and generous soul, because she was a woman.

From that hour she pledged herself, though more or less unconsciously, to the service of her sex. She saw that the clothing of woman was inartistic, unhygienic, utterly unsuitable for motherhood or for effective work outside the home, and she bravely and untiringly attacked it. She perceived that the vote in the hands of women would greatly increase the power of the Church and the pure home, and, in the face of the opposition of nearly all the great, proclaimed her vision. She believed in co-education and everything else which helps to lessen sex-emphasis, that mighty foe of the higher civilization; and whatever she believed, she was not afraid to proclaim abroad.

Her charming and most womanly personality, crowned with a rare and gracious dignity, reinforced her words to a marvelous degree, and she threw all her gifts into the balance, especially when she labored for the temperance cause—the dearest object of her hopes and prayers. Her uncommon natural endowments, her thorough education, the culture of extensive travel, her rich friendships—all were dedicated to the service of woman and of temperance.

It sometimes seems as though she had labored in vain. Many of the ends for which her life was spent are still far from accomplishment. But the mighty temperance wave which is spreading over the land doubtless received a large part of its initial impulse from this wonderful woman. We thank God that he gave her to the world, and especially that he gave her to America.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 13. TEXTS: Prov. 31 : 10, 17–20,, 25, 26, 29–31.

Accepting the Truth*

IN spite of the fact that the Roman officers detected the lofty and unique character of Jesus; and that those who heard the Sermon on the Mount perceived that he taught as one having authority; and that here and there others recognized his divinity; yet it was, on the whole, true that he had no honor in his own country. He was not the Messiah, save to a mere handful of people.

The same thing has been generally true of the great men of earth. Shakespeare, says one of his chief commentators, was not appreciated until three hundred years after his death. Even now, from time to time, men arise who dispute his greatness. Tolstoi sees no merit in him, and the eccentric Bernard Shaw ridicules and belittles him. Milton has almost as many detractors as admirers. Every year critics arise who consider Thackeray, Scott, Dickens, George Eliot, Browning, Tennyson, Longfellow—nearly all of our great writers—to be over-estimated. But the long, far-seeing judgment of the best thinkers, the "common sense of most" that the poet so eloquently sings, finally allots his place to each son of genius, and no storms can shake it.

Thus, in a higher and nobler sense, not many years passed after our Saviour's crucifixion before his power was conceded in nearly every province of the Roman world. Kings and emperors denied it, and struggled to defeat it, but the truth went marching on. Julian the apostate, after a lifetime spent in an effort to re-establish the old paganism, breathed out as he died on the battlefield, "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean!"

In our day this conquest is universal among the so-called civilized nations. Though Church and State are gradually becoming separated in every government, yet the Christian ideal is the ideal of our land, and every other so-called "first-class power" on earth. The truth is making us all free.

The fact of the deep and unchanging truth of the words of Christ is noted by the astute commentator Romanes, when he says: "One of the strongest pieces of objective evidence in favor of Christianity is the absence from the biography of Christ of any doctrine which the subsequent growth of human knowledge—whether in natural science, political economy, or elsewhere—has had to discount."

As for ethical teachings, so universal and everlasting are they that even the great skeptic, John Stuart Mill, acknowledges their greatness. He says: "Not even now could it be easy, even for an unbeliever, to find a better translation of the rule of virtue from the abstract into the concrete than to endeavor so to live that Christ would approve our life."

The power of Christ's truth—the simple and fundamental nature of his life and his teachings—these are now recognized in every system of rational philosophy.

"I know nothing," says President King, "that, on either scientific or philosophical grounds, can justify us in expecting a satisfactory conclusion from an inquiry into the meaning of the world, that ignores the supremely significant fact of the world—the man Jesus—to say nothing of the prophets that preceded him. Whatever one's point of view, these great personalities ought to count as much as things and events."

"The life and death of Jesus," says Paulsen, "make plain to me the meaning of life and of all things." They are the great explanation—the great foundation truth—which only the dull can reject.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 13. TEXTS: Matt. 4: 23; 7: 28, 29; Mark 6: 2-5; John 7: 45-48.

A Summer Stove of Unusual Convenience

Your kitchen is really incomplete without a New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove.

Not only does this stove do anything that any other stove will do, but it does it quicker, better, at less cost for fuel, with less trouble to you and all without perceptibly raising the temperature of the kitchen.

Think what comfort and convenience it means to have a

NEW PERFECTION
Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove

for summer cooking. Note the CABINET TOP for warming dishes and keeping cooked food hot. Also the drop shelves for holding small cooking utensils, and bars for holding towels—features entirely new to oil-stoves. It is as substantial in appearance and as efficient in practice as the modern steel coal range. In convenience it far surpasses any other stove. Three sizes. Can be had with or without Cabinet Top. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

The Rayo LAMP If you are troubled by flickering gas and large quarterly bills for the same, get a Rayo Lamp—the best, handsomest and most economical light for a home.

If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

Big Summer Offer!

30 to 60 PER CENT SAVED IF YOU BUY NOW!

Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber Lumber

The Chicago House Wrecking Co. announces that, to reduce its unusually large stock of high-grade, brand new Lumber, it will make an exceedingly attractive price to all those who will buy during June and July. In order to test the truth of this statement we ask that you send us your lumber bill for our estimate. We will make you a delivered price, that is, freight prepaid in full to your railroad shipping point, and it will be so low that no competitor can sell it to you within 20 per cent of our price, all things being equal. Our stock embraces everything you need to construct, any kind of a building. It makes no difference whether it is a barn, church, meeting house, store or residence.

Send Us Your Lumber Bill for Estimate

Our prices in every instance will mean a money-saving opportunity for you. We guarantee our lumber strictly up to grade, just as good as it is possible to find anywhere on earth; furthermore, every statement we make will be backed by our unassailable reputation. Our capital stock and surplus is over One Million Dollars. Every representation we make will be faithfully lived up to. Ask any banker anywhere. Write the Commercial Agencies. They will all tell you our company is the foremost institution of its kind in the world, employing hundreds of people. The enormous business that we have acquired is the best proof that it is conducted on square, honest principles. Don't listen to jealous merchants or retail dealers. Get the facts from us and give us a chance to prove it.

Ask for our little pamphlet, entitled "Lumber Trust," an "Exposure of Business Methods." It tells the story so plainly that you will know just how to treat this matter. Write for our prices today—at once.

Send for Free Bargain Book No. 373

Write today for our money-saving "BOOK OF PLANS." It shows illustrations of modern houses and barns; gives illustrations from life as well as floor plans; it explains our unique offer to furnish all material needed to construct any building shown in our book. You can get a complete set of plans, specifications and bill of material for $2.00. Or, furnished free with your order. We also publish a 500-page general merchandise catalog illustrating and fully describing thousands of bargains in goods of every character, as well as a 250-page furniture catalog, showing handsome designs in Household Goods, Furniture and Office Supplies. Write at once.

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO., 35th and Iron Streets, CHICAGO

Here Is Something New From Kalamazoo

Prove for yourself in your own home, that the Kalamazoo is the most perfect—most economical—most satisfactory range for you to use—Your money back if it's not.

Send for Catalog No. 103 with special terms and compare Kalamazoo prices with others

Cash Or Time Payments

We want every housewife to know the comfort and convenience of a Kalamazoo in her home. You can buy on easy time payments or pay cash if you like. Either way—you save $10 to $20 on any Stove in the catalog. We make it easy for responsible people to own the best stove or range in the world.

We Pay the Freight

Kalamazoo Stove Co. Kalamazoo, Mich.

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"

HEROES OF FAITH

By Mrs. M. Baxter

A HERO is, according to the dictionary, a man of courage, who does courageous things; whereas a man of faith is one who, conscious of his own weakness, relies not on his own bravery and courage, but entirely on the word and faithfulness of the Almighty God. It was by this consciousness of his own powerlessness to be righteous of himself that Abel offered unto God a "more excellent sacrifice than Cain." Enoch is another of those men of faith who, having no confidence in their own power or goodness, made room for God in their lives. What we see now as the second coming of our Lord was revealed to him (Jude 14-15).

Noah, too, who was a righteous man, believed in God's warning of "things not seen as yet," the awful judgment of the flood; and built an ark, "by which he condemned the world" of scoffers. By faith he accepted man's mockery, and justified God's judgment. Thus Enoch, by faith, was caught away from the world of sin and death; Noah, by faith, was lifted above the judged world and its destruction. Now God would call another man, Abraham, who should be called out of the world to be separate from it, while living in its midst; and through whom, and through whose seed, sooner or later, all the nations of the earth shall be blessed. Some foreshadowing of Christ was in each of these men of faith.

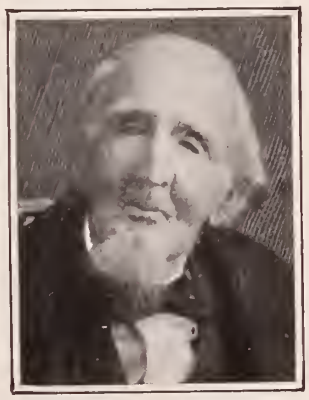
Isaac and Jacob, each in his day, followed, although they did not inherit, the faith of Abraham; for faith does not descend from father to son. By faith Joseph, the ruler of Egypt, gave commandment that when Israel should go out of Egypt, his bones should be carried up with them to be buried in the land of promise. These all died in faith, not having received the promises—of the land and of the being made a blessing to all nations—but having seen them and greeted them from afar.

"By faith Moses was hidden by his parents;" they had God's authority to go upon, and "were not afraid of the king's commandment." By faith Moses took the people out of Egypt with no provisions of food or clothing or shelter; he wrested by force from surrounding enemies that which his people needed. He knew the heart and he knew the power of his God, and that he would never give an order for which he did not take the responsibility. On Moses' side it was faith, on God's side miracle through all those long years. It is said of Moses, "He endured as seeing Him who is invisible"; this is faith. Moses did not look on the impossibility, but by faith on the unseen God. And equally so with Joshua, when God gave command for the people to walk seven days in succession round the walls of Jericho, and seven times on the seventh day, in quiet, unmoved confidence that those walls, untouched by man, should fall at the command of God; and it was so.

And now, asks the writer of the Hebrews, "What shall I more say? For the time will fail me if I tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah; of David and Samuel and the prophets; who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens." We think of David, Daniel, Elijah, Elisha, and many others. But let us note that in the midst of this description of wondrous miracles there comes the word "obtain promises." This is as much the work of faith as any of the physical miracles on record in the Word of God. Any man or woman, however simple or unknown, who takes God at his word, and trusts him unswervingly to fulfil any of his promises in the Bible, is placed among the men of faith in Hebrews 11.

IN HIS SECOND CENTURY

THOMAS CAMPBELL, of Henderson, Texas, is a remarkable example of vigorous old age. He was born in Belfast, Ireland, 104 years ago. All of his faculties are in perfect preservation, and he is wonderfully active. He is an old Confederate veteran. He is kindly, good natured and generous, and loves to tell how, about half a century ago, in the pioneering days in his own State and Arkansas, he was enabled to help young fellows who afterward repaid their benefactor with generous gratitude. There are probably few men living in this country who can look back on so long a career as the kind-hearted and lovable old soldier, who is still so hale and hearty as to be a continual surprise to all around him. Mr. Campbell's memory is one of the most astonishing things about him. He has no difficulty apparently in recalling events that happened long ago. He has been something of a traveler and delights to tell of his experiences. He remembers many of the early events in the nation's history and has a very clear recollection also of the people associated with them. He is a decidedly interesting character.



Thomas Campbell, Aged 104

Called Higher

James Heather, of Morris, Ill., passed away on March 31, at the age of seventy-two.

John H. Schmidt, of Metropolis, Ill., was called higher January 12, 1909, aged sixty-seven.

Mrs. E. C. Stone, wife of Rev. Dr. J. Ward Stone, died at their home in Kalamazoo, Mich., February 2.

Mrs. Anna M. Hutchinson, of Newark, N. J., passed to higher service January 21. She was in her ninetieth year.

David Wishard, of Kenmore, Ontario, Canada, was called to his eternal home some time ago, at the age of sixty-four years.

Sarah Ann Paul, wife of A. B. Harris, died January 3, 1909, aged seventy-nine years, at Caldwell, Kan.

Carolina T. Pidgeon, wife of John M. Pidgeon, died recently at her home near Sabina, O., in the seventieth year of her age.

Passed away recently, Mrs. J. S. Longmore, of Philadelphia, Pa., aged sixty-eight years. A beautiful Christian character.

Mrs. Lyman Cann, of New York, passed away February 6. She was a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, and active in Christian work.

Mr. Robert Leathan, of Relf's Bluff, Ark., entered into rest at the age of eighty-eight years. He was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. B. S. Roper, of El Paso, Ill., entered into her eternal rest a short time ago, in her ninety-first year. She was a member of the Baptist Church many years.

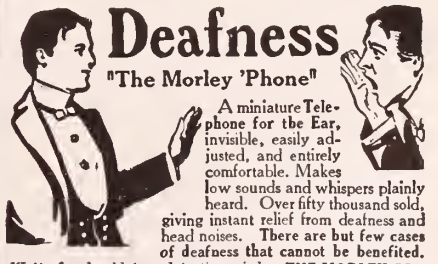
You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 482, and write them for full information.

"Porosknit"
SUMMER UNDERWEAR
FOR MEN FOR BOYS
—as much a part of any action as any part of your body. It fits—it wears longest and—it's the coolest thing for warmest weather. Ask your dealer.
This is "How to Know" the Genuine
TRADE MARK "Porosknit" REG. U.S.PAT.OFF.
FABRIC PAT. DEC. 12 1905 DESIGN PAT. DEC. 19 1905
MEN'S Shirts and Drawers, each 50c
BOYS' Shirts and Drawers, each 25c
Union Suits: Men's $1.00; Boys' 50c.
Send for new booklet on "Coolness, Comfort, Economy."
CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY
30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, New York

The Rapid Fireless Cooker
You'll Be Surprised at the Low Direct Price I'll Make You
Satisfaction guaranteed by full 30 day's trial or no charge—Pays for self fastest—Cooks fastest—No experience necessary—Saves 80 percent on fuel, time and work—Non-rusting metal lined—Perfect insulation—Steam can't escape—Boils, Steams, Stews—Roasts, Bakes, Fries—Sent promptly on
30 FULL DAYS' FREE TRIAL
Complete With Roasting Attachment. Also GENUINE ALUMINUM COOKING UTENSILS FREE
Send name today for over 125 splendid Recipe Book and Catalog Free, and low direct-to-you factory prices.
Steams Stews Roasts
Bakes Fries Boils
FIRELESS COOKER
WM. CAMPBELL CO. Dept. 2 21st St., Detroit, Mich.
BOOK FREE

Texas Fruit Farms
Will make you a big steady income of $1,000 to $5,000 a year. Wonderful opportunities here. Fine homes, schools and churches. Best water on earth. Climate is superior to Southern California. Farms here now worth $1,000 an acre.
A Texas Farm for $10.00 Down AND $10 A MONTH TILL PAID.
Get This Catalog showing farms improved and unimproved. If you want a home all your own here is your chance at a bargain. Pear trees produce over $100 a tree annually. Peaches raised here over 13 inches in circumference. Grapes ripen here 6 weeks earlier than in California. Fruit and vegetable raising pay big profits. Write us today, right now, for catalog, prices and terms.
Security Land Co., Dept. B, Del Rio, Tex

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL
We ship on approval, without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.
DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our latest art catalogs illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.
ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free postpaid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now.
TIRES, Coaster-Brakes, Built-up-Wheels and all sundries at half usual prices.
MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. W 71, CHICAGO



Deafness
"The Morley 'Phone"
A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.
Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO., Dept. E, Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium
Established Thirty-one Years.
For the exclusive treatment of cancer and all other forms of malignant and benign new growths (except those in the stomach, other abdominal organs, and the thoracic cavity).
With the Escharotic Method
(without resorting to surgical procedure).
Ask your family physician to make a personal investigation. This institution is conducted upon a strictly ethical basis. Complete information given upon request. Address,
Wallace E. Brown, M. D., North Adams, Mass.

Delicious with Strawberries Have You Tried It?

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE

W. K. Kellogg

By Courtesy of "Suburban Life"

CHRISTIAN HERALD

$1.50 a Year—5c. A Copy
Published 52 Times a Year

Copyright, 1909, by Louis Klopsch

New York, June 9, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 23
Offices: Bible House, New York

WELCOME MESSAGES

"They live, they speak, they breathe what love inspires, Warm from the soul, and faithful to its fires."

Fling out, fling out, with cheer and shout
To all the winds, our country's banner.
Be every bar and every star
Displayed in full and glorious manner.
—Cole

"A Star for Every State and a State for Every Star"

Flag of the free heart's hope and home—
By angel hands to valor given!

Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
—Drake.

A song for our banner? The watchword recall
Which gave the Republic her station.
"United, we stand---divided, we fall;"
It made and preserves us a nation.
—Morris

Offer No. 1

An Outfit Worth Two Dollars for Only One New Subscriber

(1) An American Flag, "Old Glory" in brilliant Fast Colors. Guaranteed not to fade, run, nor shrink. Size of Flag, Four by Six Feet.

(2) The Declaration of Independence, a Life-Size Facsimile, measuring 26x31 Inches, and—

(3) All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft (a beautiful double-tone picture measuring 18 x 21 Inches)—All Three for only One New Annual Subscription to The Christian Herald at $1.50.

Offer No. 2

An Outfit Worth Four Dollars for Only Two Subscribers

(1) An American Flag, "Old Glory" in brilliant Fast Colors. Guaranteed not to fade, run, nor shrink. Size of Flag, Five by Eight Feet.

(2) The Declaration of Independence, a Life-Size Facsimile, measuring 26x31 Inches, and—

(3) All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft (a beautiful double-tone picture measuring 18 x 21 Inches)—All Three for only 2 Annual Subscriptions to The Christian Herald at $1.50, of which One must be New.

"Old Glory" Appeals to Patriotic Subscribers

THERE ARE three things that should be in every Patriotic, Christian household: the Bible, the American Flag---the most beautiful flag in the world---and the Declaration of Independence—one of the grandest and noblest documents ever framed by man. To-day every Patriotic member of the Christian Herald family has it in his or her power to secure absolutely FREE, without money and without price, both a copy of this famous document and a Large, Brilliant and Beautiful American Flag, 4x6 feet, or 5x8 feet, as described above; a flag of which the proudest patriot would be proud; a flag worthy to float from the lordliest mansion; a flag that would sanctify and glorify the humblest spot on earth.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

On the "Glorious Fourth" patriots throughout these United States will fly the Stars and Stripes. Will "Old Glory" float from your home? Will YOU pay a tribute of respect on our Nation's Birthday, to the flag for which your kinsmen and fellow-countrymen laid down their lives? Could you see for yourself the superb beauty of the flag that is now yours for almost the mere asking under the terms of this most extraordinary offer---its brilliant coloring and splendid size---you would make redoubled efforts, if necessary, to secure one before our great Patriotic Holiday comes round, and, in the stirring words of a famous statesman, "Let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and the parting day linger and play on its summit."

Painted by J. L. G. Ferris — Size 12 X16 Inches

Washington's March through the Jerseys with the Flag he Fought to Save
ONE OF THE SIX PICTURES COMPRISING OUR WONDERFUL ART GALLERY DE LUXE

THOUSANDS of our readers have already taken advantage of this unprecedented Offer---an offer surpassing any we have ever made in the past; an offer wholly unparalleled in the annals of this or any other magazine; and there is no loyal American heart that would not take a just pride in the possession of these Patriotic Premiums. Secure ALL THREE before Independence Day.

Every citizen of these United States should read the Declaration of Independence at least once a year; no education is complete without some knowledge of its invaluable and priceless contents; no home is completely furnished without a copy of this, our Nation's Birthright.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

As to our third great Patriotic Premium: every American Home from the palace of the millionaire to the humblest farmhouse, would be fitly adorned by this beautiful Picture of All the Presidents from Washington to Taft; a noble galaxy of Statesmen who have helped to make our country what it is to-day.

The question asked us on every hand is, "How can you afford to make so generous an offer?" Our answer is briefly this: We are determined to raise The Christian Herald to a still loftier eminence among the powerful magazines of the times; also we are determined to make The Christian Herald a still greater influence for good throughout the whole world, and to accomplish this end we undertook to make this unparalleled inducement, at whatever financial sacrifice.

ALL PATRIOTIC OUTFITS SENT BY EXPRESS, CHARGES FULLY PREPAID BY US

To Make Sure of securing these Patriotic Premiums before "The Fourth", let us have your order at the Earliest Possible Moment

Under OFFER No. 1, the subscription must be a NEW one. Under OFFER No. 2, One subscription may be your own, (new or extended), the other ONE must be a NEW one.

We do not supply poles nor do we furnish rope—but we do furnish the flag, beautifully finished, otherwise all ready for use. EVERY CHRISTIAN HERALD SUBSCRIPTION, whether with or without premium, or with or without magazine combinations, counts as one subscription. Premium and Magazine Combinations sent on request.

SIX BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FREE!

Every New Subscriber and Every Renewing Subscriber receives FREE, our wonderful Art Gallery De Luxe, consisting of Six Beautiful Pictures, reproduction of World-famed Masterpieces, executed in all their Natural Colors, aggregating 1,000 Square Inches.

IMPORTANT NOTE: No matter what date your present subscription expires, you may renew now. Simply send us your order AT ONCE with the One New Subscription required under Offer No. 2, and Full Remittance for both. On receipt of this we will book your renewal to commence at the date that your present subscription runs out and begin the new subscription immediately.

Our Patriotic Outfits are given only to those who secure the subscriptions and not to the new subscribers. Money refunded if not pleased.

Address: CHRISTIAN HERALD FLAG OFFER, Bible House, New York

NEW YORK, JUNE 9, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Indian Statue

The Great Plaza of Quito on a Fiesta Day

Bread Peddler

ECUADOR'S CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION

By CHARLES M. PEPPER

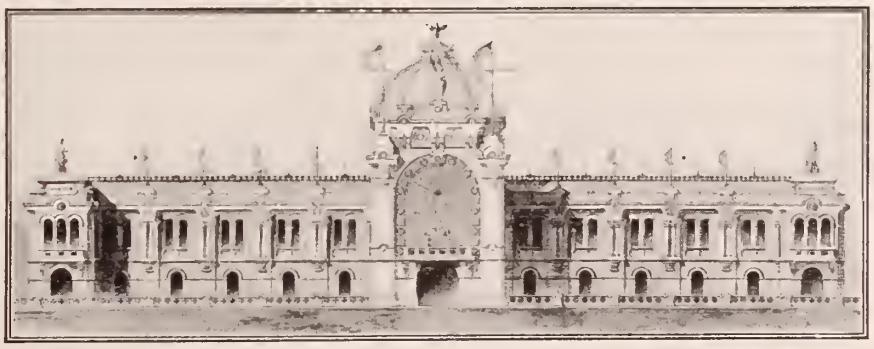
THE South American republics are beginning to celebrate their one hundredth birthdays. The period during which, as colonies, they gradually separated from Spain and set up as independent countries extends over fifteen years. During that time Bolivar and San Martin, the great central figures in the struggle against Spain, by their military genius succeeded in rendering the various countries free of foreign dominion.

The first of the Spanish colonies to carry its revolt through successfully was the country which is now known as Ecuador, or the country of the equator. Ecuador became independent on August 10, 1909. In commemoration of this event a national exposition will be held at Quito, the capital, beginning August 10 of the present year and ending October 10. While the exposition is primarily a national one, foreign countries have been invited to participate, and not only Ecuador's South American neighbors but some of the big nations farther away will be represented. Among these will be the United States and France.

It would be difficult to find a more interesting place in which to hold an exposition. Quito is not the highest capital in the world, since it is a little less than 10,000 feet above sea level, while La Paz, in Bolivia, is more than 12,000 feet. But Quito, lying within fifteen miles of the equator, a capital in a basin surrounded by twenty volcanoes, some snow-capped and some emitting fire and smoke at intervals, has attractions not common to all the cities in the heart of the Andes. The neighboring mountain peak is that of Pinchicha, from which, owing to the atmospheric effects at sunset, one of the most wonderful views in the world can be obtained. It is a panorama of unequaled softness. I have seen green sunsets there, and doubted my own eyes until a scientific friend explained that this was so and gave me the reasons.

The present Quito is nearly four centuries old, since it was founded by the Spaniards in August, 1534; but long before that it was the northern capital of the Incas, though it did not rival the more celebrated capital of Cuzco, in Peru, with which it was connected by the famous Inca road, more than 2,000 miles long. Most of the traditions of the ancient people have been lost and its history is not so well known as that of Cuzco, but the Quichua Indians still preserve many of the customs of their ancestors five or six centuries back. The city has a population of about 60,000, and I suppose fully three-fourths of these are of Indian blood. While Spanish is the language of the government and of business, the Indian dialect is still spoken by the greater number of the natives.

Quito itself is like many of the Spanish cities in the Andes, which were built by the conquerors in the sixteenth century and which still preserve the old Spanish style of architecture. Most of the houses are of adobe, or sun-dried clay, and are of one or two stories, though there are some three-story buildings of other materials. The red-tiled, sloping roofs give a very characteristic effect, but this is now varied by the use of sheet-iron or galvanized roofing, the silvery appearance of which from a distance is set off by the red tiles.



Main Building of the National Ecuadorian Exposition

The streets are uphill and downhill, and, since the heart pumps the blood slowly at this altitude, it is a long time before the newcomer is capable of the exertion of taking a mild stroll. However, one gradually becomes accustomed to it, and by not walking too fast can get a reasonable amount of exercise. But I never saw a foreigner on the run in Quito.

There is a central plaza, on which the government palace and other public buildings front, and there are also several pretty parks. Most of the trees are the eucalyptus or camphor tree, which can be grown at this altitude. The astronomical observatory, while a famous institution because of its nearness to the equator, is not a very pretentious building. The cathedral is of some architectural beauty, but some of the older churches have more in them of historic interest, particularly the religious paintings. There are several monasteries and convents, the Franciscan Monastery being the best known. It has extensive grounds.

Quito used to be a very attractive city at night, because the only lights consisted in lanterns, which the house owners were compelled to hang from their windows or in front of their doors. It now has electricity, but as late as a year ago some of the smaller streets were still lit by these lanterns, and a glance along one of them showed great variety.

The life in Quito is that of the ordinary Spanish-American city, with many fiestas or festivals. There is a small group of Europeans, mostly English and French, and also there are a few Americans, who are engaged in business. All of them like the capital. The real life, however, is to be seen among the native Indian population in the plaza on a festival day or in the market-place almost any day. The Indians are fond of bright colors, and on these occasions the hues of the rainbow are literally surpassed. Sometimes, too, there will be a group of Indians from the Napo River region, which runs through the remote forest country. These travel hundreds of miles, and when they reach Quito they are objects of curiosity even to the other Indian natives.

Travelers in Ecuador are never tired of telling of the native music. It is part Spanish and part Indian. The Ecuadorian national air is very soft and melodious. At the capital there is a famous military band of, I think, sixty pieces. On one occasion, after it had played the Ecuadorian national air, the commanding officer out of compliment to some of us Americans who were present gave the order to strike up "Yankee Doodle." This was followed by "America" and the "Star-Spangled Banner."

The exposition will be opened by President Eloy Alfaro, to whose energy Ecuador owes much. President Alfaro, or as he is better known, General Alfaro, has been one of the progressive men of the West Coast. He has had a most romantic career—sometimes in exile, sometimes at the head of revolutions, and sometimes in his position as President keeping down other revolutions.

Continued on page 503

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Fred'k F. Shannon, D.D.*

THE DIVINE POTTER

Text—Jer. 18 : 2: "Arise, and go down to the potter's house."

GOD'S sermons are always illustrated close up to life. Arguing his weakness, man stutters in abstractions, mumbles in metaphysics, darkens counsel by big words. Revealing his wisdom, God speaks through objects familiar to all. Man would analyze the beauty of the lily. But God loves the lily too much to see its beauty tarnished. Truly this is God's speech: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." Striking his brain against the clods, man says: "How do they grow?" Nothing can keep a worm from drilling in its native soil. Placed upon a snowy marble slab, a worm would die of cleanliness. But while man is burrowing about the how, God is content to behold the growth of the lilies. God prefers to teach in objectives, because he knows the rim of man's brain is not large enough to deal in subjectives to any great extent. That is why he sent Jeremiah to school in the potter's house. There is a well-defined analogy in the house of the potter and the house of man's soul. God seems to say to the prophet: "Watch the potter work, and you will see Me work. Look at the potter's clay, for that is what I made you out of. Consider the potter's wheels, for as he puts his clay upon the wheels so do I. Examine his marred vessels. I have them strewn all over the earth. Above all, be sure to see him remake his marred vessels, for that is what I delight in doing." And Jeremiah had his sermon. It is one of the best he ever had, because it came from the lips of God. It is worth our while, therefore, to consider what the prophet saw and heard in the house of the potter.

I think the first thing that attracted the prophet's attention was the partially moulded clay. It was not yet ready to be fashioned into some lovely shape. The hand of the potter had touched it but slightly. And that is why, as he looked, Jeremiah discovered that it was clay of an ordinary character. Authorities tell us that the potter never sees his clay take on rich shades of silver, or red, or cream, or brown, or yellow, until after the burning. These colors come—after the burning. The clay is beautiful—after the burning. The vase is made possible—after the burning.

The Beautifying of the Clay

Does not Jeremiah's sermon come close to life? After the burning, we own a purity that sees God. After the burning, we have a wisdom that knows God. After the burning, our weakness is coined into strength and we lean upon God. After the burning, our faith is no longer a flickering flame, but an eye set in the soul, through which we behold the face of God. If the burning hurts, as it always does, it is only a prophecy of the strength which will be ushered into the life. When the little girl told her music teacher that it hurt her fingers to practice on the piano, the teacher answered: "I know it hurts them, but it strengthens them, too." Then the child packed the philosophy of the ages into her reply: "Teacher, it seems that everything which strengthens hurts."

How wide-lying and universal is this law of life! Where did the bravest men and purest women you know get their whitened characters? Did they not get them as the clay gets its beauty—after the burning? Where did your mother get that look which, as you think, would add dignity to an angel's face? Already God has written the answer—after the burning. Where did Savonarola get his eloquence, and Stradavari his violins, and Titian his color, and Angelo his marbles, and Mozart his music, and Chatterton his poetry, and Palissy his enamel, and Jeremiah his sermon? They got them where the clay gets its glory and its shimmer—after the burning!

I have recently read again the life-story of Katie Powers, who died some time ago at a home for incurables in Cleveland. When her spirit left its twisted, misshapen body, strong men told their strength in tears. Katie was a bright, happy girl, but disease did all in its power to rob life of its winsomeness for her. In the flush of young womanhood, inflammatory rheumatism left her unable to walk. But when God made this girl out of the dust of the earth he did not forget to slip some of the dust of character-gold into her soul. Deprived of bodily power, she said: "But think how much I have left!" Then her arm stiffened, her fingers drew up like claws, and her jaw became so rigid that it would have been impossible for her to eat but for the fact that her teeth were extracted to permit the introduction of food. Her vision forsook her also, leaving only a little sight in one eye. For years she lay huddled up in an invalid's chair. She could see a little, move her arms a little, and that was all.

And what did she do? Why, she became a painter. She would lie there and paint sunny bits of water color. And the pictures revealed not the slightest hint of the sufferer in the background. They laughed with sunshine and blushed with hope. People never thought of pitying her, so they simply loved her. She carried not only her own burdens, but the burdens of others also. "Whenever I get blue," said a neighbor, "I go in and see Katie; she always cheers me up." "No life ever seemed to me so truly Christian," said one. "It makes you believe in God," said another. And when her beautiful spirit went up to receive the kiss of God, many a heart in the Forest City was draped in sorrow while the angels wreathed her "in a smile of white." The pathos and inspiration of it all is, though helpless herself, this pure, white martyr maid of pain helped others—after the burning!

The Plan of the Potter

But in his visit Jeremiah saw more than the unmoulded clay—he saw the potter working at his art. "He wrought a work on the wheels." The prophet saw the unshapely clay taking form. As the potter worked, he observed that there was a definite plan for each vessel. Some were large, and some were small; some were beautiful, and some were not; some bore one color, and some another. But he noticed that in this formative, moulding process there was an intelligent purpose in the mind of the potter. And as the wheels went spinning round it was the potter's desire to get that purpose wrought into the clay. So, also, God wants our lives to be an expression of his thought. After all, is not every creature a thought of God, and is there not a divine plan back of every life? What would you think of a potter who would hold his vessel to the wheels, having no intelligent design for it? Then do you tell me that the infinite, all-loving God puts human clay upon the whizzing wheels of life with no governing purpose, no definite plan? Let men believe such a thing and they could say: "Fatalism has hoisted a fool to the throne of the universe." With such a creed, men might well think that God is a being tossing suns and planets in reckless desperation over the fields of space, gloating over the prospect of a universal calamity, when he would have the supreme satisfaction of attending the funeral of all worlds!

But we rest in the high consolation that Christ unveiled no such a God. If there is design for the lily, and design for the bird, and design for the dew, and design for the star, surely there must be design for you and me. If the sparrow can twitter, "I am a thought of God"; if the flower can look upward as if to say, "I am a picture of God"; if the rolling spheres can strike off majestic harmonies as they sing, "The hand that made us is divine," then may not we, with infinitely greater reason, look up through Jesus Christ toward that throne "cushioned in splendor behind the stars," and say to that loving Father who sits upon it: "We are the clay, and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand"?

And yet, because the potter has design for the clay as he holds it to the wheels, does not argue that the clay understands that design. What if the clay could hear, as the potter says: "It is impossible for you to know what a beautiful vase I will make of you. I know you think this burning and spinning of the wheels are all nonsense. But just be patient and trust the skill of my hand, and when you are finished men will come from afar and carry you away to adorn some palace." And what if the clay should answer: "No, potter, I won't trust you, because I can't understand you. I know you can't make a beautiful vase out of such material as I am. Let me alone, potter, I am satisfied." I think we would agree that such clay ought to be given the satisfaction of remaining common, ordinary mud! But the potter loves his clay too much to be thwarted in his purpose. That fine old Flemish ware, that Persian plate, that Rhodian jug, that Roman cup, that Italian majolica, that French pottery must gladden the world with its beauty and its service. And so the fires blister, and the wheels go round, and after a while in some Louvre or British Museum a glorious vase looks down from its pedestal, as if to say: "See what the potter has done for me. I was once just common clay, and I didn't want to be made beautiful. But the potter loved me too much to heed my foolish protest, and fashioned my ugliness into this dream of beauty."

The Touch of the Master's Hand

And that, it seems to me, is a parable of our own poor lives. Because we cannot understand the touch of the Master's hand; because we fail, in our blindness, to glimpse the "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory"; because we fail to read the intelligent design back of our lives, we ofttimes grow rebellious and say: "God is not in his heaven, nor is all right with the world." Then is it good for us to know of the patient endurance, the mother love, the holy aspiration of this heroine who is a student in the great industrial schools of our city. Before giving her story, as it was given to me by one of the board of examiners and an honored member of this church, may I pause to say that no queenlier band of women can be found on earth than are at the head of these schools, which are doing so much to offer a chance to the boys and girls who never had a chance. These high-souled women are the chief adornment of our city. They are the architects of the Brooklyn which is to be, for back of these industrial schools is the culture, capacity and consecration of our finest womanhood. The story is this: Last January a woman fifty years old went to a teacher in School No. 2, and, with tears in her eyes, begged permission to sit down with the little ones five and six years old, that she might learn to read and write. She explained that she had two boys in the West, and desired to learn her letters that she might be able to communicate with them. Her daughter had done this for her, but three years ago the daughter died, and now the hungry-hearted mother was willing to make any sacrifice to keep in touch with her sons. So she entered school without telling any one, even her husband. Four weeks from the day she entered she was able to read through the primer, first reader, and almost through the second. Now she can write so any one can easily read every word. She learns ten new words at home every day, and always knows her lesson perfectly. She has learned to begin and end a letter, and it will not be long before she can write a love letter—a genuine mother-love letter—to her boys. Through the goodness of my friend, I have in my possession a yellow sheet of paper containing one of her writing exercises. Reading between the lines, there is something inexpressibly touching about it. The words are such as may be found in the copy-book of any schoolboy, but the mother, with her hard hands and tender heart, as she copied the words imagined herself writing a letter to one of her sons. After writing her address and the date, this imaginary epistle, brimming with a real love, reads: "My dear son Hugh:

Be the matter what it may,
Always speak the truth.
If at work or if at play,
Always speak the truth.

Surely there is no ordinary clay in this vessel! She may not be able to understand the plan of her soul's Divine Potter, but a brave trust and a high hope reside at the centre of her being. By the light of her soul she follows on to overtake that glory, the very character of God inwrought in a human life, which awaits the faithful unto death, who are always and evermore the faithful in life.

The Potter's Voice

Consider, finally, what the prophet heard in the house of the potter. "Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words." It is as if the Divine Potter had said: "There, amid the burning clay and whirring wheels; there, where the shapeless clay takes form; there, where the form grows into a thing of beauty, I will cause thee to hear my words." Here is the mystery and glory of it all, my friends. The clay hears the

Continued on next page

* Pastor, Grace M. E. Church, Brooklyn.

TAKING THE GOSPEL TO THE PEOPLE

Hugh R. Monro

David Hughes, Welsh Evangelist

Rev. E. Hallenbeck, Presby'n, N. Y.

Joseph A. Richards

Rev. A. E. Myers, New York

By DON O. SHELTON
President of the National Bible Institute

NO greater problem is before the Christian Church than that of reaching effectively, with the Gospel, the non-church-going part of the population of our country. In New York City the problem is being encouragingly solved by the National Bible Institute, under whose auspices daily outdoor evangelistic meetings, beginning in 1907, have been held for three years. At the hundreds of meetings conducted daily at Madison, Union and Herald Squares, a most attentive and reverent hearing has been given to the Gospel by all classes of men. Included in the large assemblies are clerks, business men, professional men, contractors, messenger boys, bootblacks and laboring men, most of them not members of any church.

H. A. Kinports
President N. Y. C. E. Union

This year, the scope of the meetings has been greatly widened and the most extensive and continuous outdoor evangelistic campaign ever undertaken in the city is now in progress. Of the meetings to be held at least four hundred will be conducted on the Bowery from a Gospel wagon. Mr. John Hollis, superintendent of the "Mission of the Living Waters" (which is directed by the National Bible Institute), and other redeemed men will conduct meetings for the large number of people on the Bowery who do not go to missions or churches.

The most ardent friends and advocates of this form of evangelism are the pastors and laymen who have addressed the meetings. Without exception, these have testified to their conviction that outdoor meetings of the character of those being conducted are an unsurpassed method for reaching the non-church-goer.

There are being enlisted and trained for this work a steadily increasing number of Christian business men. The conviction grows that the keen, intelligent, resourceful laymen of the churches should be led to go to the people with their personal testimony to the power of the Gospel. Some of New York's most successful young business men are already giving themselves to the work heartily and courageously.

A few days ago, one of the city's most intelligent and prosperous young business men spoke at the outdoor meeting of the National Bible Institute, in Madison Square. During the singing of a hymn which preceded his address a tall, burly man, partly intoxicated, called out, "That is the hymn they sang at my mother's funeral." The leader of the meeting feared that this man would disturb the address, and was planning how the man could be effectively dealt with; but he remained silent throughout the address, and at its close worked his way through the crowd to the speaker and said he would like to have a talk with him. They went to the walk in front of a large office building nearby, and engaged in an earnest conversation. The young business man found that his companion was a workingman, receiving good wages, but battling with the drink habit. The man had been deeply moved, and gave evidence of an eager desire to turn from his evil course and lead a Christian life.

"To show you that I am dead in earnest in this matter," he said, "I am willing to kneel down with you on this walk and cry out to God for mercy upon me."

The young business man had true Christian grit, and was determined to help the man conquer his life of wickedness and failure. And so, with the crowds moving about them in the streets, the two knelt in prayer to God for the salvation of the man who said that he was wrecking himself and family through drink, and who was eager to lead a Christian life. That was one sublime result that came from taking the Gospel to the people that day!

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD can do much to further this work, which in its helpfulness and influence is national in scope. The meetings are an emphatic response to the command of Christ, "Travel, and cry out my message." The prayers and financial help of all Christian people everywhere are requested, to the end that the meetings may be continued and multiplied; and that many thousands of people, representing all sections of the United States, may be turned from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God. During the week ending May 21 forty-seven distinct meetings were conducted, with an aggregate attendance of over 7,000 men.

The National Bible Institute warmly appreciates the generosity of the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in contributing $250 toward the support of one of these daily noon and daily evening meetings throughout the season. Readers of the paper who are interested in the work may be disposed to make up the balance of $550 required for this important Gospel propaganda. Contributions for the Outdoor Gospel Meetings of the National Bible Institute may be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, or to the treasurer, Hugh R. Monro, 156 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

An Outdoor Evangelistic Meeting in Madison Square

THE DIVINE POTTER

Sermon by Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, D.D.

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

call of the potter to become a vase, and at once begins to rise out of unshapeliness into beauty. And the soul hears the voice of its Potter, too, and thence begins the upward climb. The ascent is long and slow, the pathway is ofttimes studded with thorns, but away up beyond the mists and shadows the summit peaks are bathed in splendor. From that far height the Potter's voice sends down the call: "O soul, meet me here, meet me here!" And the soul, with its vision of white thrilling it through and through, pushes onward and upward toward that tearless city of the cloudless land!

I know that to some of us life seems one prolonged journey to the potter's house, where we touch the spinning wheels of mystery and feel the blistering fires of pain. But never mind, brethren, the universe itself, under God, is laboring to build a city worthy to be your home. According to St. John, that city is fair beyond a lover's dream of love and pure beyond the dimpled smile stealing over a babe's face in sleep. In his vision the city seemed to be as airy as a sunbeam and as solid as a marble mountain. For though he beheld it coming down out of heaven from God, the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and on them twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. It seemed as if God had swept the worlds for jewels with which to adorn the foundations of that wall. I have often wondered why the twelve gates were twelve pearls, but that was because I overlooked the material in the foundations of the wall. Nothing but gates of pearl, swinging on hinges of music, would be appropriate in a wall with such jeweled foundations. And then, after passing through such gates swinging to and fro in such a wall, nothing but streets of pure gold, as transparent as glass, could answer the demands of feet which had followed the Son of God on earth, who is now the light and glory of the holy city. And I fancy if those feet are weary and travel-stained, one silver wave from the crystal river, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb, will make them leap and thrill with immortal vigor forever.

But grander than the architecture, and next to the Lamb himself, I think the most majestic scene in John's vision of the city is the countless throng of the kings and queens of pain. Grander than the four angels holding the four winds of the earth; more commanding than that mighty angel ascending out of the sunrise, having in his hand the seal of the living God; more magnificent than splendored foundations and jasper walls and gates of pearl and streets of gold is that great multitude which no man could number, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, saying: "Salvation unto our God, which sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb!" When one of the elders asked, "These which are arrayed in the white robes, who are they, and whence came they?" John answered, "My lord, thou knowest." And the elder himself made reply, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." The prevailing color in the city of God is pure white, and the whitest whiteness is wrought in Calvary's crimson stream. Oh, let us win the white!

THE AWAKENING OF MONT-LAWN

AS the time draws near for the opening of the fifteenth season at the Children's Home there is the greatest activity among carpenters, masons, painters and workmen about the grounds. The latter cut and trim the wide lawns until they look like broad velvet carpets, studded here and there with a golden disc, where "Sir Dandylion" rears his yellow head. The trees are in full bloom—apple, cherry and pear—while the dogwood spreads its starry banners among the wild trees on the mountain-side. "Old Glory" floats over the big lawn from sunrise until sunset, waving a welcome to all visitors to Mont-Lawn, for already there are numbers of men and women who, driving or motoring by, stop to read the words of welcome at the gate and are moved to come up the driveway to the "Homestead" and ask many questions, showing not only interest but wonder that such a lovely place should be supported entirely by the free gifts of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Every season improvements and enlargements show how dear to the donors this beautiful charity has become, for their hearts seem to expand in proportion with the work.

* * *

A big, ungainly machine is at work across the road from the cottages (in the ball field), and for a time day and night men have worked in the black, grimy shed. A huge "walking-beam" turns a big wheel, which in some way gives power to a drill, now hundreds of feet down in the bowels of the earth. These are the agencies which will give to Mont-Lawn its one previous lack—a plenteous supply of water. Clear and cold it will be, and, to quote the words of the engineer, "No man now living will ever see that well go dry; the more it's pumped the more water will flow." The "swimming pool"—joy of the hearts of both boys and girls—will never have to be closed for lack of water, even temporarily, as has sometimes been the case heretofore toward the end of the season.

Sway, sway, goes the big beam, round and round the wheel, and down, down, bit by bit, goes the drill through sand, earth and solid rock, all this soon to give place to a deep well, whose waters, clear and cold, will bring health and joy to crowds and crowds of children and to all connected with the Home.

* * *

A large bay-window has added much to the beauty and capacity of the "teachers'" dining-room in the "main home" or "homestead," as it is now called. This addition extends upward to the floor above, thus enlarging the two small bedrooms in the second story. Other important improvements are under way.

"Can we Go to Mont-Lawn?"

Visitors who have traveled the world over—some who have spent many years in connection with charitable and philanthropic work—declare that never have they seen anything like Mont-Lawn, and the loving thought and care displayed in making the little ones happy.

If only the contributors to this beneficence could spend even a few hours roaming over the place, through the woods and fields, drawing into their souls the sweet, fresh air, while feasting their eyes upon the beautiful hills and the broad waters of the Hudson, surely they would give thanks that God created so lovely a place and then put it into the heart of the "children's friend," Dr. Klopsch, to found THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home on this spot.

Beginning with the "Homestead," and one or two unimportant buildings, the group of cottages has grown until, viewed from the road, one sees "Sunbeam," "Tibball's," "Hope" and "Temple" cottages, all of which are used as dormitories exclusively. The "Children's Temple" also contains beautiful sleeping quarters for some of the smaller children. The Homestead has three dormitories, including "Rosemary Nursery," where babies of three and four years sleep in the wee, snow-white cribs. A tangle of pink roses runs riot over the walls and the ceiling reproduces the same pink tint. A little white rocking-chair stands always ready to swing in time to the low lullabies of the nursery "teacher," a gentle-faced, sweet-voiced young woman, to whom the babies flee for comfort and rest when tired of romping and play. Down at the gateway stands the "Lodge," where still other children are mothered by a little woman, whose third season here will begin with the summer of 1909.

The big linen closet is being inspected, where snowy sheets, pillow-slips and towels are piled on shelves, which line three sides of the room. Stacks and stacks of blankets are being hung out in the sweet, fresh air. Strong arms and willing hands are wielding broom and scrubbing-brush. No dark corner is allowed to remain in obscurity and darkness, for a flood of Mont-Lawn sunlight shines about and through all the rooms, and soon everything will be in readiness to receive the first instalment of boys and girls, who are eagerly awaiting the opportunity of enjoying for ten days a delightful, health-giving outing.

MARY SARGENT HOPKINS.

* * *

Three dollars gives a little tenement child ten long days and nights of joy and rest. Twenty-one dollars endows a cot for the season, thus giving to seven little ones ten days each.

All contributions to be sent to Children's Home Department, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

FOR A PRESBYTERIAN WORLD-UNION

THE development of union between the different branches of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches around the globe is signalized by the Ninth General Council of the World's Alliance in New York City next week, June 15-25.

This great world's gathering brings together representatives from church organizations in many lands, among which are the United Free Church of Scotland; the Australian Presbyterian Church of Australia; the Presbyteries of Ceylon, China, Japan, Persia, Brazil, Jamaica, and New Hebrides; the Presbyterian Church of New Zealand; the Federation of the French Protestant Churches of Switzerland; the Presbyterian Church of Mexico; the Evangelical Church in Greece; the Presbyterian Church in South Africa; the Union of Evangelical Churches in France; the old Reformed Church in East Friesland; the Waldensian and the Evangelical Churches in Italy; the Reformed Church in Poland and Bohemia; the Christian Missionary Church of Belgium; the British Reformed and Presbyterian Churches; the Reformed Church of Hanover, Germany; the Calvinistic Methodist Church of Wales; the Christian Church of Spain; the Dutch Reformed Churches in Cape Colony, Orange River Colony, Natal and the Transvaal; the Federation of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian system in the United States, and other similar church bodies in various countries, including Russia, Hungary and India, where local churches are being brought together in national groups.

In addition, this notable world's gathering of Christians includes deputies from associated churches which, while agreeing in doctrines and polity with the Alliance, and approving its object and modes of work, have not yet entered into formal membership. Among these are the Evangelical Church of the Augsburg and Helvetic Confession in Austria; the Reformed Church in France, in Austria, in Bohemia, in Moravia, in Hungary; the Swiss Evangelical Union; the German Reformed Union of Germany, etc.

The direct agencies through which the General Council of the World's Alliance exercises its co-operative influence are its Executive Commission, divided into two sections, Eastern and Western, and its five permanent committees of each section. The Western section of the Alliance embraces the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in Canada, with 250,000 communicants; the United States, with 2,200,000 communicants; Mexico, 15,000; and Brazil, 25,000.

The best methods of opposing infidelity; the cultivation of the new fields for work opened in the Philippines and Porto Rico; the needs of Latin America; the cultivation of fraternal relations with the other of the great Protestant denominations; are among the matters proposed for discussion at the New York meeting of the General Council. Problems connected with the union of missionary boards will be discussed. The establishment of a "Reformation Day" similar to that on the Continent is proposed.

J. A. S.

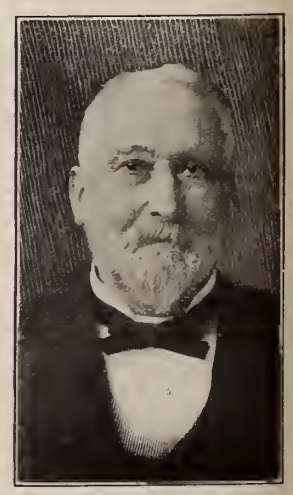
Rev. J. M. Schick
Washington, D. C.

Rev. S. H. Chester
Nashville, Tenn.

Rev. Alex. White Pitzer
Salem, Va.

Prof. W. Moore
Richmond, Va.

Rev. H. M. D'Aubigne
Paris, France



Judge J. G. Forbes
St. John, Can.

LIBERIA'S FATE IN THE BALANCE

A Mission School in the Interior

Off Cape Mesurrada, Liberia

Natives on a Sugar Plantation

*By JAMES R. MORRIS

ON the west coast of Africa nestles the little negro republic of Liberia. The mighty arms of Great Britain and France encircle it on three sides, almost drawing it into their own great African possessions, and nearly blotting this little speck of negro independence from the map; but its Atlantic seaboard is open, and Liberia looks appealingly across the sea to America, whom she still calls the "mother country," and for whose friendship, cooperation and help she longs.

That three great European nations look with longing eyes on Liberia, and would like to own this valuable corner lot in West Africa and annex it to their own possessions, cannot be doubted. One of these nations sees a splendid opportunity for trade, and to gather the products of a rich and undeveloped country, and also an opportunity to wedge herself between two of her own enemies, on which to build a great military and naval base in the very door to West Central Africa, where large forces of men and warships would have to be diverted in order to hold back her aggressiveness.

Another nation sees opportunity for the expansion of her own acreage and power, the acquisition of some of the richest and most valuable territory in the Great Black Continent, a shorter route to the sea, and vast unexplored wealth waiting an economical government to pick up and attach to itself. Still another great European power has charge of her customs and her frontier police, both sides of a river separating Liberia from her own possessions, and has even planted a military station on Liberian territory (at Kaure-Lalum). Liberia negotiated a loan of £100,000 with bankers in this latter country, at six per cent. interest. The Liberians were to receive only £30,000, but were compelled to pay interest on the whole amount. Many prominent business men, officials and others, resident and non-resident, who live near Liberia, have said that Liberia had already been taken over. The Liberians themselves hardly knew whether they had a government of their own or not, as all kinds of startling reports have been spread among them, no doubt with the ulterior motive of frightening Liberia into asking one of these countries to shield her, thus merging the republic of Liberia into a protectorate of one of these great European powers.

Internal dissensions, causing governmental weakness; encroachments by dishonest traders, social corruption, polygamy, household slavery, unwise expenditures of money, failures to make friends and allies of the indigenous population (who outnumber the civilized inhabitants eighty to one), neglect to properly educate the youth in useful trades, and a multitude of other things have formed a deadly combination against a magnificent country and a splendid people.

The geographical position of Liberia makes it an important and strategic point in West Africa for shipping, commerce and other purposes. Its area is about 45,000 square miles. It has a number of magnificent rivers, abounding with fish; mountains, hills and valleys are covered with dense vegetation, eternally aggressive, making it a land of encouraging agricultural possibilities. Its harbors could be made fine ports and open doors to the "hinterland," where vast trading industries could be carried on. Its big towns are on the coast, at the mouth of the larger rivers. Civilization extends only a few miles inland, along the rivers. There are not more than 100 white people living in Liberia. There are about 20,000 civilized Americo-Liberians and about 2,000,000 natives.

There are few mosquitoes, and no "tsetse" fly disease, even in the great jungle districts, many of which are less known than any other part of Africa. Elephants range thirty to fifty miles from the sea. Beautiful and delicate orchids grow by the side of the elephant paths and through the bush; also pineapples and other fruits and vegetables. Nature has lavishly provided for all the needs of man in Liberia. Gorgeous butterflies and birds with splendid plumage contribute to Liberia's natural beauty. But when you come to man, then problems begin.

Down the West Coast by Steamer

Liberia is really a child of America, and is just half as old as her mother. Her name means "the land of the free." The shield, emblem and motto of Liberia are a vessel sailing on the ocean, a bird flying in the air with a letter in its beak, a graceful palm tree, a plow and a spade, with some tilled ground, and the words, "The love of liberty brought us here."

A "Devil Doctor" Trying a Culprit by Fetich

The early immigrants had hard struggles to found homes among people of their own color, but they did it, and finally drew up a constitution, and adopted a flag like America's glorious banner, with only one star in it as yet. The future sucess of the country does not lie in the wholesale emigration of American negroes to Liberia, but in the proper education and development of the two million natives, being taught by civilized Liberians, and a number of selected men and women from America, of practical business capacity and education, to take up scientific farming, useful trades, develop business interests, promote commerce between Liberia and America, and place their products on the world's markets.

I had opportunity to observe, travel and learn the conditions past and present in Liberia, and have no hesitation in saying the country is in a crisis, from one end to the other. Liberia wants America's ships, foods, tools, articles of clothing; in fact, goods of American manufacture in preference to all others. She longs for the welcome sight of vessels floating the Stars and Stripes at anchor in her harbor. There is a cry on every side for the friendly help of America. One of the most prominent men in Liberia, who left America forty-five years ago and landed in Liberia with sixteen fifty-cent pieces, took me to his splendid home and showed me with pride his great coffee farms and tracts of woodland, and the boys he had raised from native heathen and placed them and their wives on these great coffee plantations. This man is known as the coffee king of Liberia.

"The old mother country," said he, "treated us badly at one time, but we love her still. We would like to be nearer to her than we are, for we feel that she has neglected us."

I have a list of thirty of the most prominent official men in Liberia, each one desiring America's friendship, help and cooperative commerce. The cry of heathen superstition, of debauched womanhood, of household slaves, of "Gree-Gree" bush girls, of women who live like cattle, and are thought less of then the goat that walks into the mud hut of the heathen, is calling to America to come and help. Young men and fathers of boys entreated me to help them get to America so they could learn trades, return to Liberia, and make a living. One of three things is open to a young man in Liberia if he remains there. He can become a lawyer, or try for a government position, or go back to the bush and prey on the natives. We cannot neglect the cry of young manhood for useful trades. We must send young men and women to Liberia who have graduated from schools like Tuskegee, and who can give the civilized young men and boys practical instruction in brick-making, house-building, weaving, tanning, masonry, soap-making; can erect migratory sawmills for lumber, cultivate rubber, grade the coffee, develop cotton-growing industry, make surf-boats and oars, gather piassava, palm oil and kernels and export them here, and extract the essential oils growing so abundantly in the fruits of Liberia.

The heathen are crying for us to come and "teach them sense," as they call it. A dozen petty kings and native chiefs urged me to come, or send some one, to teach them "sense."

President Barclay is an intelligent, faithful, able man. His policy toward the heathen has been conciliatory and helpful. The natives have profound respect for the "government" and the President, but there is a universal cry for honest trade, because

Continued on page 503

* Since this article was written two United States Commissioners have sailed from New York to Monrovia, to investigate Liberian affairs. One is white; the other is a negro.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

The Evangelistic Campaign

OUR spiritual prognosticators announce signs all over the horizon of a summer of phenomenal evangelistic activities. Great preparations are under way in many States, from New York to Kansas and from Mississippi to Canada, and the forces of righteousness in many places are already encamped. It will be a long battle line, with the promise that the Gospel triumphs of last year—one of the greatest ever known in evangelism—will be repeated and multiplied this summer.

It has been claimed that the churches are losing their hold on the common people. This is only partially true. It has become the fashion among a certain class to make all sorts of charges against the Church, the majority of them resting on very slim foundation, or none at all. Now it is the churches almost exclusively that are conducting, year by year, the great campaigns that reach the non-church-going multitudes. If any one doubts that the churches are employing every means to go out into the highways and byways and gather in souls, he need only read the accounts of the many current evangelistic efforts under church auspices and co-operation.

"Less stately treading and more democracy" should be the watchword of the Church to-day. "Get out in cars, in wagons, on the curbstones—anywhere—only so you may win men," is the advice of Mr. John H. Converse, who has been one of the chief supporters and most enthusiastic workers of many recent evangelistic campaigns. And it is good advice for churches anywhere. A church or congregation that is too dignified to go out after sinners has not in it the love of the Master, nor the true, living, Gospel spirit.

May God give his blessing to the evangelism of 1909, and acknowledge the efforts of the great army of earnest, consecrated workers in many fields, by a great ingathering of precious souls.

A Presidential Rebuke

WHEN President Taft walked out of a Washington theatre, the other evening, in unconcealed disgust, because he had been inveigled into attending an immoral play, he did what thousands of other people should do, and would do if they had the moral courage. Even admitting that there may be some theatres that draw the line at improper plays, it is beyond question that many make no such distinction. Hence the safest place for self-respecting people is on the outside. There may come a time—let us hope that it will come soon—when the theatre will purge itself and become a place of clean, rational, uplifting entertainment. May Mr. Taft's stinging rebuke help along the reform.

Too Much Liberalism

IT is a somewhat discouraging story which a writer in the Cosmopolitan tells of his experiences during a protracted and painstaking investigation into the character of the religious and political teachings in a number of leading American colleges. While this is an age of liberal opinions, thoughtful people will seriously question the extreme liberalism which seems to prevail in some of these institutions, and which permits members of a college faculty to feed the student mind with views and inductions concerning religion, philosophy and morals, that would hardly be accepted in any church of any denomination at the present time. This, of course, is not true of colleges in the main, but only of some, and we might also add of comparatively few professors.

Passing to another theme, it appears from the writer in question that, in these same colleges, many of the national traditions that are dearest to the American heart are lightly esteemed, and that the teaching is in some cases so unpatriotic as to excite remark. One professor boldly asserts that the "minds that prepared the way for the republic were dominated by all that is fanciful, unreal and misleading"—in other words, our patriots and pioneers were no better than freaks and impractical enthusiasts. The "lofty teachings" of the days of '76 are set down as "high-sounding rhodomontade," and the famous and oft-quoted alliterative phrase, "government of the people, by the people, and for the people," is flippantly treated as a "mere meaningless jingle." The Revolution "was fought to uphold a delusion and maintain the fallacy that all men are created equal." The Declaration of Independence was "a piece of spectacular rhetoric," and should be placed on the shelf.

Of course, nobody can view such teachings seriously. There is no danger of college patriotism dying out. It is to be regretted, however, that unpatriotic tomfoolery should be taught anywhere on American soil, or that there should be found in school or college men who would belittle patriotism and decry love of country. Such teachings as those referred to carry their own remedy in their very absurdity. They will hardly add to the popular respect for the wisdom and serviceability of the colleges in which they are taught.

Turkey and the Jew

IT now seems likely that the lately projected scheme of wholesale Jewish emigration to Mesopotamia—land of Abraham and the patriarchs—may develop sooner than was expected. According to a cablegram, the president of the Turkish Parliament has extended, through the Haham Bashi, the chief Jewish rabbi in Constantinople, an invitation to the Jews of Russia and Roumania to settle in Turkey. Promise is made that all restrictions against Jewish immigration will be removed and full citizenship conferred immediately on arrival. It is not improbable that the present summer may witness the beginning of the greatest Jewish exodus in modern history.

America's Foremost Woman

WITH congratulations and gifts pouring in from every State in the Union, and from every civilized country the world over, and with relatives and friends about her, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, America's foremost woman, passed happily the ninetieth milestone of her life. She has wonderfully maintained her vitality. She received over three hundred guests at a reception held at her home on Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. Mrs. Howe was apparently not at all wearied by the reception. She talked for a moment with each one presented, and was most pleased by the affectionate greetings of her guests.

At the close of the reception the guests waited in the drawing-room while Mrs. Howe left for her own apartment. She rose from her chair and walked unassisted to the elevator and pushed the button. She stepped in when it stopped at the second floor, and bowed smilingly back at the crowd of guests, who waved their farewell as she went upward. It was a most dramatic scene at the close of an eventful day.

Mrs. Howe still takes an active interest in the events of the day, neither has she ceased to work along the lines she has made her own. It was nearly fifty years ago that her famous poem, The Battle Hymn of the Republic, sounded a clarion call to the American people to save the nation, and now she is again at work on another poem of patriotism, which is to be set to music.

We offer congratulations in behalf of our readers to this most distinguished of American women, and wish for her still other birthdays as happy as that of a few days ago.

A Quick Philanthropy

FROM time to time the proprietor of this paper is requested to act as the almoner for readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, who have made provision in their wills for certain benevolences, feeling that the experience of Dr. Klopsch in both domestic and foreign philanthropies would assure the wisest distribution possible. A short time ago there was received from the executors of a former reader the sum of $1,000, which was to be divided among charities and missions, indicated in a general way in the will. The money was received May 24, in the nine o'clock mail. The necessary arrangements were made, the checks signed and sent out through the mail at three in the afternoon of the same day, to bring gladness to the hearts of those who are doing the Lord's work in different parts of the world. To many the checks will give the means of advancing some cherished project for the spiritual and moral uplift of humanity.

The entire transaction at THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office was without any cost to the executors, or to the legacy. The following is the list of worthy causes among which the money was apportioned:

American Sunday School Union, Philadelphia	$50.00
Bowery Mission, New York City	50.00
CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, Mont-Lawn	50.00
Daisy Field Home for Crippled Children, Englewood	50.00
Florence Crittenden Mission, New York City	50.00
Gospel Mission, Washington, D. C	50.00
Gospel Settlement, New York City	50.00
Rev. Wilfred Grenfell, Labrador Mission	50.00
Hadley Rescue Hall, New York City	50.00
Memorial House, 242 East Broadway, New York City	50.00
Home for Invalid Children, Verbank, N. Y	50.00
Rev. Fred. Jansen, Presbyterian Mission, Cebu, P. I	50.00
Rev. and Mrs. I. Kimball, Tappan, N. Y	50.00
Rescue Mission, Poughkeepsie, N. Y	50.00
Society for the Suppression of Vice, New York	50.00
Soul Winners' League, Wilmore, Ky	50.00
Steele Orphanage, Chattanooga, Tenn	50.00
Taylor University, Upland, Ind	50.00
Water Street Mission, New York City	50.00
Inheritance tax	50.00
Total	$1,000.00

The Italian Relief Fund

READERS of this journal who contributed toward the relief work in Messina and other earthquake-stricken Italian cities, will be specially interested in the financial statement of the Relief Fund, which appears in another part of this issue. Practically the whole Fund, except a sum appropriated for the relief of the Waldenses in the earthquake districts, was disbursed under the authority of the gentle-hearted and lovable Queen Helena, for the benefit of the widows and little fatherless children in Sicily and Calabria. We congratulate the contributors on their identification with a benevolence which has not only assuaged many hardships, but which we believe has been providentially used as a means of saving very many precious lives.

Among the Workers

—ABOUT ONE THOUSAND to one thousand two hundred persons have professed conversion in Coffeyville, Pittsburg, and other cities in Kansas, where Dr. Biederwolf has conducted meetings.

—BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY, of the M. E. Church, South, who died recently in Jackson, Miss., was one of the most eloquent leaders of a denomination which is famous for its oratorical preachers. He was called the "golden-mouthed" orator. His voice was a baritone, strong and clear; his language was well chosen. He was especially great in his extemporaneous addresses.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 9, 1909

	PAGE
Welcome Messages	Cover
Ecuador's Centennial Exposition (Illustrated)	491, 503
By Charles M. Pepper
The Divine Potter. Sermon	492, 493
By Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, D. D.
Taking the Gospel to the People (Illustrated)	493
By Don O. Shelton
The Awakening of Mont-Lawn (Illustrated)	494
For a Presbyterian World-Union (Portraits)	494
Liberia's Fate in the Balance (Illustrated)	495, 503
By James R. Morris
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	496
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	497
Caring for Over Forty Thousand Refugees	498
Children's Day (Illustrated)	499
By Margaret E. Sangster
OUR MAIL-BAG	500
The Story of Marco (Illustrated)	501, 502
Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter
"Just for To-day." Music	502
The Primitive Church. By Mrs. M. Baxter	502
Witnessing for Christ	504, 505
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
Young People's Societies	506
Something the World Greatly Needs	507

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

King Alfonso at Work

ALFONSO, the young King of Spain, is well-bred and highly educated, and gives promise of being a successful sovereign. The old idea, that the children of royalty are to be raised in luxury and live in idleness, does not hold in these days of strenuous endeavor, heated competitions and enormous responsibilities. The Hohenzollerns, recognizing the necessity of physical fibre and practical knowledge in preparation for the rulership of a nation, compelled the princes, including the prospective sovereign, to learn some trade, some electing one and some another practical occupation. Alfonso is an enthusiastic sportsman, but he is also very fond of work, and takes the keenest interest in the management of the affairs of his people. A reasonable amount of hard work is good for the bodies, minds and souls of men, rulers or ruled. There is no reason why a prince or a king should not busy himself conscientiously with the tasks committed to his care. There is scarcely any work in the world more strenuous than that required of a man who is entrusted with the leadership of a nation. The industry and integrity of the young King of Spain promise much for his people and his fellow-men.

Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings. (Prov. 22 : 29.)

John S. Huyler Honored

Twelve hundred men, mostly Methodists, sat down to a dinner at the banquet hall in Wanamaker's store, New York City, the evening of May 24, in honor of Mr. John S. Huyler, president of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Every Methodist church and mission in Manhattan and the Bronx was represented by from one to one hundred and fifty members. Mr. Samuel Bowne and Mr. Huyler, men of ample wealth and incomes, have worked for a quarter of a century as a team of leaders in drawing the financial burdens of Methodism in New York City, the State and the nation, and in almost every conceivable kind of benevolence outside of, as well as within, the church. About two years ago, a dinner was given in honor of Mr. Bowne, on the eve of his departure on a trip around the world. Mr. Bowne then gave over the presidency of the City Church Extension and Missionary Society into the hands of Mr. Huyler. Dr. Frank Mason North, the able secretary of the Society, who was largely responsible for the dinner, called Mr. Bowne to the chairmanship of the meeting, who said among other things: "I have never seen anything like this in the Methodism of New York, in the forty years I have been associated with it." Bishop Daniel Goodsell made a beautiful and timely address, as did also Dr. C. L. Goodell, the pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, to which Mr. Huyler belongs. Messrs. Leacraft and Anderson, officers of the Society, made encouraging reports.

Dr. North called to the platform a number of men who have missions in the poorer districts of the city, and as he did so Mr. Huyler arose and took his place among them, saying, "I want to stand up and be counted with these men." The twelve hundred guests cheered lustily and some eyes were moistened with tears, for while Mr. Huyler has been deeply interested in the success of the wealthy churches of New York and in the causes of education and philanthropy in the community, he has for twenty-five years made slum work his hobby, and can be found at midnight in the mission, kneeling on the bare floor, with his arms around some poor drunkard, praying God to redeem him from death. It is an important fact that, though Mr. Huyler is one of the most successful business men of the country, not one of his seventy houses in the different cities of the country is allowed to open its doors for a single moment on the Sabbath. It is significant that a man of so large an income should give so large a proportion of it each year to the various benevolences of the church and community; but the most important thing about him is the manifest presence of Christ in his soul, to simplify, sweeten and beautify his character and to beget in him a burning passion for souls. He is one of the modern exponents of the old-fashioned Methodist experience and revival zeal. The twelve hundred men, serious men from the various practical employments of life, were like boys in their buoyancy and hope at the banquet given to this humble, worthy Christian man. Messrs. Bowne and Huyler, and the other men of wealth who have been associated with them in the benevolent enterprises, and the various pastors and laymen in the different churches, have wrought faithfully through the years for the uplifting of the Master's kingdom and will have a new inspiration for future work in the banquet recently held.

Christ shall be magnified in my body. (Phil. 1 : 20.)

Children's Joy

The children of New York City who swarm out of the tenement houses are beset with perils everywhere. They are killed by the trolley cars, run down by the automobiles and other conveyances, and often meet with fatal accidents while engaged in their simple play. As the warm weather is coming on, the problem becomes more serious, and the Board of Aldermen of New York City is considering the proposition of closing up certain streets from traffic for specified hours during the day, and permitting the children to use them as a playground. Children's Day is the expression of the highest and holiest joys of childhood; the flowers, the music, the sweet faces of the boys and girls, the happy hearts of parents, the cheerful messages of the hour, the generous contributions of the young, and the Spirit of Jesus—the children's Friend—all contribute to the joy, inspiration and life of the day. Many churches use the collection on Children's Day to help in the education of young men for the ministry. There is a becoming circuit of influence in the Sunday Schools aiding in the education of ministers and then the ministers turning and, in loving compensation, building up the Sunday Schools of the Church. The world now, more than ever before, recognizes the relation between Christ and childhood, between childhood and the Church, as two-thirds of the membership of the Christian Church comes out of the Sunday School, and every true pastor and worker puts a high estimate upon this branch of the Master's work.

His children are blessed after him. (Prov. 20 : 7.)

The King of Spain at Work in His Office

A Dog Tries to Prevent a Woman's Suicide

Hector, a huge St. Bernard dog, with white color and brown markings, lived with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gaspar, who kept a restaurant in New York City. When the dog was two years old he ran a nail in his foot, and was so tenderly nursed by his mistress that he manifested unfailing devotion to her. Though ordinarily of a cheerful frame of mind, Mrs. Gaspar had periods of despondency. She experienced one the other day, when her husband was arrested for disorderly conduct and fined in the police court. The janitress of the house heard the St. Bernard barking at eleven o'clock Sunday morning and also detected a smell of gas, which evidently issued from the Gaspar apartment. The door was forced open and Mrs. Gaspar was found lying upon the floor, with her head wedged between the leg of a gas stove and a kitchen partition. She had placed in her mouth a tube, from which the gas was pouring. Hector, who was tugging at her dress in an effort to dislodge her, had also taken the tube away from her, as was shown by the marks of his teeth upon the rubber. He had torn her gown in his attempt to extricate the woman from danger. He himself had not been affected by the gas, and at the window two canaries were singing as sweetly as though they were in the open air. Mrs. Gaspar was taken to Bellevue Hospital still conscious, but died there at eight o'clock the next morning. In many places in the Scriptures the dog is the symbol of the vicious and mean, but in our time there are many dogs that manifest the highest intelligence and warmest regard. It makes us feel more kindly toward the whole canine tribe to read the story of Hector's heroism. If this beast should be so concerned about saving a human life, how much more anxious we, with higher and diviner abilities, ought to be to rescue our fellow-men from physical, intellectual and spiritual destruction.

He delivereth and rescueth. (Dan. 6 : 27.)

From Shoe-Blacking to the Senatorship

The deadlock which has been on since last January in the Illinois Legislature was broken by the election to the United States Senatorship of William Lorimer, Congressman from one of the Chicago districts. Although Senator Hopkins had been nominated by the Republican primaries by fifty thousand majority there was a revolt against him in his party which, with the Democratic votes, elected Mr. Lorimer.

He came with his parents to America, a little emigrant boy, and was so poor that he was compelled to go out on the street as a bootblack; then he took to selling papers; afterward he secured a position as streetcar conductor in Chicago. He finally became a builder and amassed a fortune, and was elected three times to Congress from Chicago. He is the leader of his party in Chicago, and one of the two or three leaders in the State. The rise to so high a position from so humble a station has required much ability, industry and integrity. His promotion is a tribute to the many opportunities of advancement that are afforded under our progressive system of government, and to his own laudable personal ambitions and his enormously hard work.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. (Eccles. 9 : 10.)

Death to Park Trees

The terrible havoc that has been wrought to the chestnut trees in Forest Park, Brooklyn, by the mysterious disease known as Diaporthe Parasitica, a fungus-like growth that saps the life from the trees, has created wide-spread interest as well as regret. Never in the annals of forestry in this country have so many trees been killed at one time. The total number of chestnut trees destroyed in Forest Park is estimated by the Park Department of Brooklyn to be 16,695, which is over fourteen per cent. of the total number of trees in the park. Without warning, thousands of minute particles, known as spores, floated through the air and found lodgment underneath the bark of the helpless victims. It seems that there is no cure for these trees thus blighted, and that nothing is left for them but the axe and torch.

Wherever there is life, either vegetable, animal or spiritual, there is some enemy to prey upon and destroy it. From the earliest times the farmers have had to use their utmost wits and energy to save their crops and forests from destruction by the myriad creatures that fly and crawl.

That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the cankerworm eaten; and that which the cankerworm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten. (Joel 1 : 4.)

CARING FOR OVER 40,000 REFUGEES

NEWS from Adana, the centre of greatest suffering in Asiatic Turkey, as the result of the recent massacres, is not encouraging. A special cable dispatch says 6,000 Turkish troops are now stationed in Adana, yet there is no security. All that has been done is to arrest prominent Armenians. The government promised safeguard to Armenians who went to the fields to reap the barley harvest. They had not been gone two hours from the city before they were set upon and killed. Their guard made no resistance. This incident has completely ruined the hopes entertained of gathering the barley crop. The wheat crop will soon be burned. The enormous cotton crop already is ruined.

There are 14,000 refugees in Marash from the surrounding villages, which have been destroyed. The country between Marash and Adana is a ruin. Bodies are lying in heaps on the roadside.

Dr. Shepard, of Aintab, made a tour of inspection among the villages of the Amanus Mountains. He found that three thousand women and children are crowded in a little Protestant church at Baghche, some wounded and all nearly starving.

It is now estimated that the numbers of the destitute in the three provinces are as follows:

Adana, 23,000; Tarsus, 4,500; Mersina, 800; Larnaca, Cyprus, 1,200; Baghche, 3,000; other Amanus villages, 5,000; Latakia neighborhood, 4,500. The lowest estimate of money needed to prevent actual starvation and give even the most elementary medical attendance is $15,000 a day. It is impossible to hide the fact that unless help comes speedily and generously the mortality will be frightful.

Up to the present time, the promise by the government to punish the perpetrators of the massacres has not been redeemed, nor is it likely to be.

It is announced that the Turkish government will send several more battalions to Asiatic Turkey to restore order. There are now several foreign warships at Mersina, including the French cruisers Jules Michelet, Victor Hugo and Jules Ferry; also British, American, French, Italian, German, Russian and Austrian ships. The warships served to check the fanaticism of the villagers around Mersina and proved efficient agents in Red Cross work at Adana and Tarsus. The ships lent surgeons, marines and supplies for relief work; the surgeons made sanitary camps and the marines acted as hospital orderlies. The British and Germans have had hospitals of their own, under their flags, for several weeks. When the American cruisers arrived they also erected hospitals under the United States flag.

A Group of Missionaries at Adana

These devoted men and women are conducting the relief work, and some 23,000 destitute are depending upon them for the actual necessities of existence

It is learned that among the victims of the massacres at Osmaniyeh, near Aintab, was Professor Sarkis Levonian, of the Central Turkey College, Aintab. He was burned alive, with the local pastor and members of the latter's family, with whom he was staying.

Among the many sympathetic letters from readers of this journal, sending contributions to the Relief Fund, we quote the following:

J. A. T., Markle, Ind. ($3), writes: "I send it in the name of Jesus, who died and suffered for all who love him."

Mrs. E. A. A., Montpelier, Iowa ($1), writes: "This is for the poor suffering Armenians. Such things seem so awful to comprehend why it must be, but our Father knows. If every reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD would send a dollar it would go a long way toward helping those poor, homeless, starving ones."

Rev. J. D. Lytle, Hanover, Ind., writes: "I have been waiting for your appeal in behalf of the Christians who have survived the cruel persecution of the terrible Turk. I take pleasure in remitting my check for $5, to be applied to this good work."

Rebecca J., Bronson, Mich. ($2), writes: "I feel that I must help some, even if it is but a small amount. Would to God I had $1,000 to send, it would go freely. May he bless what we all send."

Mrs. M. A. F., Versailles, O. ($2), writes: "May the Lord bless and protect the missionaries, and all Christians."

E. R., El Dorado, Kan. ($3), writes: "May the Lord bless and multiply this mite, as he did the loaves and fishes, is my prayer."

E. J., Wainwright, O. ($2), writes: "I enclose $2 more of the tenth for the Lord, for the Armenian Relief Fund. May God pour his blessing on the mite."

A. F., Denver, Col. ($20), writes: "As I read of the terrible sufferings of our missionaries at Adana, Tarsus and other places in Turkey, I am moved to send some of the means God has given me to alleviate their sufferings. May God speedily come to their rescue, is my prayer."

All contributions to the Relief Fund should be addressed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Every contribution will be acknowledged in these columns.

The following Additional Contributions have been received in aid of the Survivors of the Massacres:

Akin, Elizabeth M. 1 00
Akin, Emnice H.... 1 00
Akin, Julia A 1 00
Akin, M H 1 00
Akin, Wayne M.... 1 00
Allen, Florence I.. 1 00
Anderson, Mrs E... 7 00
Anderson, Mrs F T 2 00
Armstrong, R P... 1 00
Atwater, L C 5 00
Austin, Mrs C B... 25
Avery, Mrs F 1 00
Baay, Miss M 1 00
Bacher, Mrs N..... 7 00
Baker, H 1 00
Balche, A 1 00
Ballard, L C 1 00
Barber, Elizabeth.. 2 50
Barber, Mrs T P.. 5 00
Barnes, Mr & Mrs J M 5 00
Barney, Mrs C D. 5 00
Barney, Mrs E 1 00
Barney, Laura E C 5 00
Baswell, L 5 00
Battelle, W 1 00
Baxter, Mrs G L.. 1 00
Berry, A H 5 00
Bickenbach, Mrs S. 1 00
Bignall, Jos 5 00
Birckelbaw, Mrs A. 3 50
Bowden, Annie M.. 5 00
Brainard, A E..... 2 00
Brand, Mrs M O.. 1 50
Brechersen, C 3 00
Briggs, S J 5 00
Brinton, Susanna..10 00
Brooks, Mrs M A.. 1 00
Bruce, L A 1 00
Brush, Mrs C E & Daughter 8 00
Bryan, Mr & Mrs E A 10 00
Bryant, Mrs F L.. 1 00
Buland, K 50 00
Bunker, Henry.... 1 00
Burch, R H 1 00
Burnside, W A.... 1 00
Busch, E 1 00
Caddy, J N 1 00
Caln, Mrs J M.... 1 00
Calhoun, S A..... 3 00
Campbell, Mrs G W 1 00
Camper, J F 2 50
Carnahan, D E 1 00
Carpenter, Cora.... 1 00
Carpenter, Mrs D.. 50 00
Carrier, C F, Jr... 2 00
Casselman, Mrs C R 1 00
Chapin, Miss J E.. 5 00
Charlton, Mary E.. 1 00
Chedester, F I.... 1 00
Chesholm, Wm.... 2 00
Child, E R 5 00
Choate, Miss H E. 1 00
Christensen, Mrs M 3 50
Clarke, Wm 5 00
Clelland, S & Wife 5 00
Clift, H R 5 00
Clingan, J H & Wife 5 00
Confer, Mrs J G.. 50
Connolly, Geo A... 5 00
Cook, Mrs I N..... 25
Cook, J G 2 25
Coon, Mrs Wm & Edward D 3 00
Copeland, Mrs G.. 5 00
Corwin, C E 3 00
Covell, Edw 1 00
Coy, Mrs S E..... 1 00
Crawford, W B... 2 00
Creely, Amos 10 00
Cumming, W M...10 00
Cunningham, C 1 00
Curtis, Irene A.... 1 00
Cusac, Wm 5 00
Dadman, Mrs C... 2 00
Dasch, P & A..... 2 00
Davey, Rev J 1 00
Davis, Mrs F M... 1 50
Davison, A 5 00
Davison, Mrs T C & Mrs E W Neal 2 00
Dawes, Mr & Mrs John H 5 00
Day, Mrs C A..... 2 00
Deane, Mrs C R.. 2 00
Deane, Mr & Mrs G S 8 00
Densmore, J H 2 00
Desk, W K 10 00
Dickson, May S...10 00
Dingee, Theresa J. 1 00
Dinsmore, G E.... 1 02
Dodd, J F 1 00
Dodson, N T 1 00
Doty, Mrs C 1 00
Drake, Mrs M 1 00
Drury, Mrs D C.. 5 00
Ebersole, E R.... 1 00
Eckles, Wm 1 00
Ellis, Mr & Mrs E L 10 00
Ellis, Mrs E 2 00
Ellis, T G 2 00
Ellsworth, F D & Wife 50
Elson, Mrs E 1 00
Engstrom, C 1 00
Erwin, W A 2 00
Evans, Butler 5 00
Everett, Rev F A. 5 00
Farmer, Mrs H.... 1 00
Farnsworth, Miss M 1 00
Fay, Mrs H F..... 5 00
Fiege, Mrs 50
Field, Miss H 1 00
Flawn, Louisa..... 1 00
Foote, Geo H..... 1 00
Forsyth Mfg Co...15 00
Ford, Mrs O A....25 00
Fournier, J F.....10 00
Fowler, Miss E J.. 1 00
Fraser, J A 3 50
Friend, W 3 00
Gamble, G E 5 00
George, E J 2 00
Gilchrist, W A.... 1 00
Gladstone, D 5 00
Goldspohn, Wm.... 3 00
Good, Rev & Mr Morris F 5 00
Goodloe, Mrs S H.. 5 00
Goudy, Mrs A..... 1 00
Graves, W M V .. 2 00
Greenlees, D R 1 00
Grove, Mrs A R.... 1 00
Guyer, Mrs J W... 4 00
Hagaman, C A..... 5 02
Hall, Wm F 2 00
Halshue, Mary 5 00
Hamilton, Jos..... 1 00
Hammond, Wm W 5 00
Hansen, Mrs M.... 1 03
Hanson, P 2 50
Harris, Eliza K... 4 00
Harrison, B 1 00
Harrison, Chas.... 2 00
Hartley, Mr J.... 1 00
Harvery, Mrs C N. 25
Haskins, W W..... 50
Hatch, Mrs H B.. 1 00
Hawkins, T F..... 1 00
Hedgcock, Matilda. 1 00
Hensly, E S 5 00
Herr, L E 5 00
Hesson, Jennie..... 1 00
Hill, Mrs H P.... 1 00
Hill, Julia A.....10 00
Hilton, A 20 00
Hinckley, E N..... 2 00
Hodgson, L E..... 2 00
Hodgdon, Mrs S C 2 00
Hodge, Miss H..... 50
Holden, Anna L... 5 00
Hommer, Sarah A. 3 00
Hopkins, Mrs 22 00
Hopkins, Mrs M J. 3 00
Horine, Miss M C.. 5 00
Houghton, Mrs J C & Daughter 2 00
Hughes, C B 2 00
Hughes, G 2 00
Humphrey, J R.... 1 00
Hunter, Eliz 2 00
Hunter, Wm H.... 1 00
Hurrel, Jacob 1 00
Hurst, Mrs E H.... 1 00
Ibsen, Mrs F C.... 3 00
Ingerson, A L..... 2 00
Irvine, Mrs G.....10 00
Isaacs, T E 50
Isbell, Mrs A..... 1 00
James, Mr & Mrs O O 10 00
Janney, A 1 50
Jeffers, Phoebe.... 1 00
Johnson, Mrs S.... 3 00
Jones, Mrs A K.... 50
Jones, R W 3 00
Jones, Wm L 10 00
Kaler, P E 10 00
Keene, James 1 00
Keister, Lola 50
Kelley, Maud R.... 1 00
Kendall, M A..... 2 00
Kenney, A W 25 00
Kerns, Elias 5 00
Kerr, E E 2 00
Kershaw, Anna J.. 1 00
Killian, Mrs J D.. 1 00
Killian, Rev J D.. 1 00
Kinney, Credilla... 2 00
Kintner, C V..... 5 00
Kirk, Mrs J 1 00
Kite, Mrs G W.... 1 00
Klein, A G 1 00
Knight, Mrs J F.. 2 00
Knowles, Mrs E L. 5 00
Knowlton, W 1 00
Kraemer, Wm 1 00
Krick, Eli 2 00
Lafler, Henry 2 00
Lash, Rev O 5 00
Leamer, Mrs H.... 1 00
Lehman, D B..... 2 00
Leighton, C M.... 1 00
Lelean, Lilah A....10 00
Lemmerman, Mrs S 2 00
Lens, Mrs M 2 00
Lewison, M J 5 00
Lilga, Edw J 2 00
Lillie, J S & A K 3 00
Linn, Fannie 2 00
Little, Mrs C 1 00
Logsdon, Mrs H C. 1 00
Long, F D 1 00
Longland, Mrs A & Husband 2 00
Loomis, C W 5 00
Loy, Mrs Ella C... 1 00
Lufi, Oswald C.... 1 00
Lusk, D S 3 00
McAdam, Wm 7 00
McClean, Rev & Mrs R F 5 00
McCrae, W 1 00
McCully, Mr & Mrs R G 2 00
McDonald, R H.... 5 00
McDonald, R H.... 10
McGath, W S 5 00
McGregor, Miss M. 1 00
McLaughlin, G L.. 4 00
McLanghlin, Mrs J 1 00
McMaters, Mrs J, Sr 2 00
McMath, Mary A.. 5 00
McMillan, Mrs A.. 2 25
McMillan, Marg't.. 2 75
Macy, Mrs E C.... 50
Mangold, Mrs K... 4 00
Marshall, Mrs C G 1 00
Martin, T A 1 00
Mennel, Floretta... 5 00
Meyers, Mrs H F.. 1 00
Miller, Jeanette.... 1 02
Miller, Martin..... 1 00
Millman, A H..... 1 00
Millman, Mrs A H. 1 00
Milner, E 1 00
Minor, Mrs P E... 2 00
Mitchell, W H..... 1 00
Morgan, Lilly 2 00
Moore, Merle 05
Moore, Verne 05
Moore, Mrs V..... 1 00
Morehouse, C H... 1 00
Moritz, Lydia H... 2 00
Mosier, Emma 2 00
Neely, Marg't J... 1 00
Newcomb, J A..... 1 00
Newcomer, R T.... 1 00
Neygandt, Mrs J K 1 00
Nicholas, Mrs E C. 10
Orth, H 1 00
Osborne, F 5 00
Oston, R N 1 00
Ottmyer, Mrs G... 5 00
Overhiser, Henry.. 1 00
Painter, J B..... 1 00
Parker, Edwin..... 5 00
Paul, M D, Ph D.. 5 00
Pearce, Lulu 1 00
Peck, Thos M.....15 00
Perry, Mrs L S.... 1 00
Pigueron, H C..... 5 00
Pohle, Mrs E W.. 3 00
Pond, C N 5 00
Poole, Mrs J 5 00
Porr, Miss Alice... 7 00
Porter, Robt 5 00
Pratt, Miss L..... 2 00
Price, Mrs J W.... 4 00
Price, Mrs W W.... 50
Raines, Mary L.... 3 00
Ramey, Mrs W T.. 1 00
Randolph, Mrs E R 2 00
Randolph, T J 2 00
Ranney, Mrs M J.. 1 00
Ranney, Mary 5 00
Reed, W R 5 00
Revell, C M 50
Rice, Mr & Mrs W A 5 00
Richardes, R E & Family 2 00
Ricker, Samuel....10 00
Ridle, Mrs M 1 00
Rieke, Mrs H J... 1 00
Ripple, Louise H.. 1 00
Robertson, Mrs D M 1 00
Robinson, Mrs H... 1 00
Roop, J H 5 00
Roop, Mrs J H.... 5 00
Rose, Mrs A 5 00
Runyon, A B 1 00
Rupley, H 1 00
Rupley, Mrs H.... 1 00
Rutledge, Anna.... 1 30
Saline, Chas 2 00
Saigent, E M 2 00
Schlucter, Mrs W. 1 00
Semon, Mrs J H... 1 00
Shafer, Geo F.....10 00
Shank, Mrs O B... 50
Shanks, Mrs 50
Shaw, Mrs E 1 00
Shaw, Geo R 5 00
Siegrist, J G & Wife 10 00
Simkin, Ellen 1 00
Simon, Mrs J 2 00
Simonton, A K.... 3 00
Sinclair, Edna L... 1 00
Smith, Mrs A H... 5 00
Smith, Mrs D 1 00
Smith, Mrs E M...10 00
Smith, Ida P 1 00
Smith, J M 5 00
Smith, Miss L.....10 00
Smith, Stuart N... 1 00
Snider, C H 2 00
Snook, Sarah E.... 1 00
Spicer, Mrs C 1 00
Spink, L A..... 1 00
Stevens, Mr M E. 1 00
Stewart, Mr A M.. 5 00
Stewart, W J 2 00
Stockman, Mrs S.. 1 00
Stockwell, G W... 1 00
Summers, L 5 00
Swan, Mrs N C.... 2 00
Swift, O F 3 00
Taggart, Mrs E A & Mrs M C Berry 2 00
Tateosian, A M.... 1 00
Tancham, Caroline.10 00
Taylor, E & Ada H 1 00
Taylor, N S 1 00
Thiessen, Wm 3 00
Thomas, Mrs E.... 5 00
Thomas, Mrs E M. 2 00
Thompson, Mrs W H 1 00
Toft, Mrs E 2 00
Tolhurst, Lu 1 00
Toogood, Mabel.... 1 00
Travis, Frank 1 00
Tubb, Mrs H J.... 1 00
Tucker, Mrs N..... 1 00
Tufts, Mrs M E T. 1 00
Turner, Serena.... 2 00
Tweeddale, Mrs.... 1 50
Tydemer, J F 50
Ulrich, H 2 00
Urkson, A 5 00
Vander Meer, L.... 1 00
Van Valkenburgh, Rev B 1 00
Wagner, Mrs L.... 5 00
Walker, B D 2 00
Walker, Mrs 1 00
Walter, J J 2 00
Warde, Ella G 3 00
Warren, E C 1 00
Watson, M S 1 00
Watt, Mrs M 25
Watts, Rachel 2 00
Weaver, A D 5 00
Weaver, Oscar ... 75
Weber, Fanny M... 2 00
Webster, J A 1 00
Weese, Mrs C M.. 25
Wehr, O B 2 00
Weikart, Miss R.. 25
Westcott, M 1 00
Westland, A B..... 1 00
Whidden, Mrs M E. 2 00
Whidden, Paul S.. 22
White, Geo W & Wife 2 00
White, Jesse 1 00
Williams, C S..... 3 00
Williams, H D..... 1 00
Williams, J D 2 00
Williams, J D, Jr.. 1 00
Williams, R A..... 1 00
Wills, D T 1 50
Willis, Mary B..... 1 00
Wilson, Mrs M 50
Winters, Mary E.. 6 00
Witman, Mrs C A.. 1 00
Wobber, Mrs W... 2 00
Wolf, Mrs S E.... 2 00
Wood, Mr & Mrs F W 1 00
Woodard, Mrs A L. 1 00
Woodward, Mrs R C 1 00
Woodworth, Rev C A 1 00
Wright, Mrs F H. 1 00
Wrightington, Mrs C W 10 00
Yost, Oliver 1 00
Young, Mrs M E.. 50
Young, W W 2 00
Zinert, Mrs B..... 2 00
Wm J B, Buffalo.10 00
William A, Grand Rapids 10 00
F W, Ashbourne.. 1 00
M R T, Atlantic Highlands 5 00
V I B, Belchertown 5 00
Mrs H N R, Benhams 1 00
C F, Billings 1 00
M H B, Bristol... 5 00
Mrs O A K, Brockport 1 00
Mrs G W R, Burnville 3 00
Mrs J M P, Carlisle 5 00
E A M, Chapman..10 00
W, Concord 2 00
Mr & Mrs J Y, Cuba 5 00
Mrs F M P, Cumby 2 50
H L M, Eighty-Four 2 00
M C N, Eureka Spgs 50
Mr & Mrs D R W, Era 1 00
S J, Gallipolis.... 2 00
M J, Ganzales..... 2 00
Mrs M A L, Grants Pass 1 00
R F D, Hanover.. 1 00
A M M, Hartford. 5 00
W A C, Heyworth. 2 00
E S, Houston 1 00
Z, Huntingdon 5 00
A R McG, Hutchinson 1 00
M F S, Jersey City. 1 00
C E B, Jones 5 00
R Kent 1 00
E A, Mount Forest. 5 00
C A D, Mulliken.. 2 00
J N Y, New Dorp.. 2 00
Mrs M E, Newell.. 1 00
L, New Market.....10 00
B E M, Oneonta.. 1 00
R H, Panama 25
A A, Phila 5 00
A Reader, Phila 1 00
C D, Pittsfield.... 55
C D, Rantoul 2 00
E R C, Reading... 1 00
E D M, Reading.. 2 00
C M T, Rock Elm.. 1 00
Mrs A C W, Roslindale 1 00
R V, Rushville 5 00
Mrs A J O, Sandy Hill 1 00
F J, Shrewsbury.. 2 00
J A H, Sudbury... 50
J W J, Terminal.. 5 00
M A M, Traverse City 2 00
L D, Tupper Lake. 1 00
W A M, Utica.... 1 00
K W E, W Phila. 1 00
C M G, Xenia.... 1 00
A X, —— 5 00
——, Colorado City. 1 00
——, Ellis 5 00
——, Enid 1 00
——, Essex Co 10 00
——, Hackensack .. 3 00
——, Jamestown ... 5 00
——, Kingston 1 00
——, Lodi 5 00
——, Lownderville . 1 00
——, Millerton 1 00
——, Montrose 50
——, Mt Vernon.... 5 00
——, New Brighton. 25
——, Pella 1 00
——, S Bend 5 00
——, Stockton 2 00
——, Tarrytown ...10 00
——, Walkerville .. 1 00
——, Washington .. 1 00
——, Wellsville 2 00
For Jesus Sake, Patchogue 2 00
Friend in Pa 20 00
A Friend, Amagansett 1 00
A Friend, Bear Lake 1 00
A Friend, Beaver Creek 3 00
A Friend, Bridgewater 50
A Friend, Clare.... 2 00
A Friend, Cortland 1 00
A Friend, Fillmore.10 00
A Friend, Fort Wayne 5 00
A Friend, Goodland 5 00
A Friend, Hardy.. 1 00
A Friend, Hickman 1 00
A Friend, Oxford. 25
A Friend, Minneapolis 2 00
A Friend, Muskegan 1 00
A Friend, Pittsfield 5 00
A Friend, Portland. 3 00
A Friend, Portland 2 00
A Friend, Saluvia. 1 00
A Friend, Sandwich 2 00
A Friend, Statehill 26
A Friend, West Orange 5 00
A Friend, West Spring Lake ... 1 00
A Waltham Friend, Waltham 2 00
A Friend & Subr, Northeast 2 00
Friends, Front Royal 5 00
Two Friends, Benerly 1 00
Two Friends, Waterford 5 00
A Few Friends, Pequabuck 1 65
Friends of Humanity, Dodge City.. 8 00
I H N, Camden.... 1 00
I H N, Gordonville. 1 00
I H N, Timber Ridge 2 00
I H N S, Washington 1 00
In Jesus Name, Lacona 5 00
A Reader, Gettysburg 2 00
A Reader of C H, New Castle 1 00
A Reader, Sharon Springs 1 00
A Subr, Lafayette. 2 00
A Subr, Saranac.. 1 00
A Subr, Solomon.. 2 03
A Life Subr, Allentown 2 00
Three Subscribers, Friendship 1 10
Sympathizer, Beverly 1 00
A Sympathizer, Medina 5 00
An Old Vet 2 00
A Canadian, Black Creek 5 00
A Lelandite, Leland 5 00
The May Bakery, Martinsburg 5 00
A Hmmble Follower, Phila 1 00
Fancy, Stonington..10 00
Mrs G F Jones' S S Class, Venedocia.12 50
First Pres S S, Bradentown 15 11
Sabbath Congregation, Fairport..15 00
Independence S S, Snyder 2 70
Young People Gathering, Bergen 12 45
C E S of Presby Ch, Pleasant Hill 4 00

IN FLOWERY SPRING DAYS

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Children's Day

ANNUALLY, on the second Sunday in June, the children of the Church overflow the pews in a tide of bloom and sweetness. No Sunday in the year has a deeper meaning or a wider outlook than this which is given up to the boys and girls. Older people are contented on Children's Day to sit wherever they can find room, and they listen with eager interest to the fresh young voices in song and responses, and find much to profit them in sermons that are preached expressly to the children.

The thought occurs that it might be an advantage if sermons were always as simple, practical and direct to children of an older growth as they are when preached to the little folk. To hold the rapt attention of a juvenile congregation is no easy task, and only the minister who loves and understands young people succeeds in the undertaking. He must have in his heart, too, great love and burning enthusiasm for One who said long ago, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Suppose we send our thoughts back across the centuries and across the seas to that land of Judea, where our Saviour spent three and thirty years of his wonderful life upon earth. What gentleness there must have been in his face when the children ran to him, what tenderness and kindness when the mothers were not afraid to ask him to hold their babes in his arms! When the children sing:

> Jesus loves me, this I know,
> For the Bible tells me so;
> Little ones to him belong,
> They are weak, but he is strong,

we who have almost forgotten how children feel join with them, and are thankful for the truth in the lines. We, too, can sing of His strength and his love and can rest our hearts on the thought that he is living and loving still.

In the ideal church every Sunday is Children's Day. Although the Sunday School does not march into the auditorium class by class, with banners and flowers, yet there ought always to be children in the pew, sitting by their fathers and mothers. The Sunday School is the nursery of the Church. Faithful teachers are drilling the recruits for the Army of the Lord. The Bible School is as needful in the training of the children as the secular school of the week, yet it is a mistake to let children limit their attendance on the worship of God to the Sunday School. They ought to go to church, too. So far from finding this irksome, children who have the habit of attending church regularly love to be there. They like the organ music, they enjoy being seated on equal terms with their elders, and they understand much more than might be imagined of what the preacher is saying. The prayers and responsive readings sink into their memory. Unless the habit of church-going becomes fixed in childhood it is very seldom acquired in later life.

. . .

Let us see dear little heads in the pew every Sunday in the year. When Children's Day comes and the youthful brigades, with shining eyes and rosy cheeks and looks of eager joy, fill the sanctuary, let us be there on the outer edge of all this beauty, our hearts over-brimming with praise and prayer. Here is the real hope of the country and the world. Here is the advance guard of those who shall evangelize the earth; here are the little ones who show us what the kingdom of heaven is upon the earth.

Baby Talk

The little folk just learning to talk imitate what they hear. It is quite as easy for them to learn to use good English almost from the first as to prattle in a sort of broken speech, which is the merest gibberish. Why people have ever thought it necessary to treat little children as if they were imbeciles is one of the secrets hard to unravel. The little tongue may not at first get hold of consonants, labials or vowels accurately, but if the child hear only correct speech by the time it has begun to make itself understood, to connect words and frame sentences, its language will be like that of grown people and there will be little to unlearn. Equally, if little children hear none of what we call bad grammar, they will speak from the first with precision and in accordance with grammatical rules.

ON THE COAST

THEY have climbed the rocks to gather their flowers,
Summer is royal on land and sea;
The children are spending the happiest hours
That even in childhood's life can be.
Nature is making the world so gay,
The sun is so warm and the air so sweet,
That the rocks themselves are a king's highway
With cloth of gold under children's feet.

THE PATCHWORK QUILT

IN sheen of silken splendor,
With glinting threads of gold,
I've seen the priceless marvels
Once hung in halls of old,
Where fair hands wrought the lily,
And brave hands held the lance,
And stately lords and ladies
Stepped through the courtly dance.

The Working Girl's Evenings

IN the altered conditions of commercial life, young girls the world over are being employed in daily labor. Not merely in New York and Chicago are girls employed in carrying on the industries of this stirring period, but in Bombay, Calcutta, Tokyo and Shanghai women go forth in the morning to daily toil, returning from it, wearied and worn, at the fall of night. The Young Women's Christian Association is actively engaged in every great commercial centre east and west in trying to raise the standards, strengthen the principles and afford opportunity for the development of working girls. These girls have the same need of innocent recreation and of social enjoyment that the daughters of wealth expect as a matter of course. When the factory doors close at night, and the long stream of jaded, tired girlhood pours forth upon the pavement, one hears laughter and jests, not invariably refined nor keyed to the melody of the drawing-room. There must be a rebound. Youthful spirits assert themselves. The girl who has been standing at a loom or pasting labels on bottles, or making boxes, or rolling tobacco the live-long day is as much a girl as she who spent her morning at the dressmaker's and her afternoon at a matinée. The big hat she wears on Sunday, with its flowers and feathers, is not more absurd than that on the head of the girl who, instead of one best hat in the season, has one to match every toilet.

For the poorest and most illiterate among the working girls the low dance-hall and the saloon have long laid traps. To say, without exception, that all such girls are unprotected by mother love and family care would be to assert that which is not true. The mothers of the tenements do their utmost to shield their daughters and safeguard them from danger. But a girl must have somewhere to go to breathe outside air, and she must meet companions of her own age and of the opposite sex. If her home is a five-room tenement, crammed to suffocation by a large family, she has no place but the street or the park benches where she can receive and talk with a friend. If she and her friend go to a common dance-hall, they go straight into the jaws of the most deadly peril of virtue. Drink is offered and taken, and the first step on the downward road will ere long have given the impulse to a descent that ends only in destruction. The city of Chicago has opened, under the guardianship of the municipality, social halls, lighted by electricity and situated in the city parks, to which young people of both sexes may come freely in pleasant weather, spending their evenings under chaperonage provided by the city until eleven o'clock. At a small rate, meals may be obtained without intoxicants in restaurants connected with these halls. Much the same thing is done in many of the social settlements in all our large cities and by the Young Women's Christian Association.

The Tromart Inn, opened some time ago, and the other boarding homes for girls on the same model in New York are affording working girls the opportunity of receiving their friends just as they would were they under the shelter of their parents' home. This, too, is a movement in the right direction. In ancient days children were sacrificed to Moloch. We, too, in modern days are making burnt sacrifices of youth and happiness to the Moloch of money-making.

Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

—READER. Love may not always win its object. Sometimes the lover discovers the one he hopes to win when it is too late for success on his part. Her pledge may already be given to another. This does not discount love itself. The poet says truly that "it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." As for the divorce cases that are the shame of our period, they simply prove that the parties concerned in them have never known the realities of pure love.

Questions and Answers

A. L., Oberlin, Kan. Please give a short explanation of II. Peter 1:20.

It is the first principle to be observed in studying prophecy, that no individual, uninspired solution or interpretation is deserving of consideration. God alone, through his Holy Spirit, can illuminate the mind and give the power to interpret what is otherwise a sealed book to human wisdom. In other words, the Inspirer of prophecy alone can give the power to understand it.

R. E. P., Campbellsville, Ky. 1. Who is our representative in Belgium and who is Belgium's representative in Washington? 2. When did the French have control of St. Thomas, in the West Indies?

1. Henry Lane Wilson, of Washington, is American Minister to Belgium. The Belgian Minister to Washington is Baron Ludovic Moncheur. 2. St. Thomas was never held by the French. The island was colonized by the Dutch, and has been held by England and Denmark. It now belongs to the latter.

Reader, Mexico, Mo. When and where were the Jews first called Jews? Are they all, or a part, of the tribe of Israel?

"Jew" was first applied to members of the tribe of Judah, or of the separate kingdom of that name, to distinguish them from the seceding ten tribes of Israel. During the Captivity, the term "Jew," according to Josephus, the historian, was applied to all Hebrews without distinction, and has been so employed ever since.

C. L. A., Port Clinton, O. 1. In a magazine article on "Caste the Curse of India," we are told that the British government maintains this "caste" because caste alone keeps India in subjection and makes the British supremacy easy. Is this true? 2. Is not caste the cause of the Indian famines, and other miseries of India? 3. Has our country any national ranges? If so, where?

1. The British government does not maintain caste. Caste is maintained by the people of India themselves. The British government is in a neutral position on the subject, and interferes as little as possible with native customs as long as they are not in opposition to law and order. Until Great Britain stepped into India it was the scene of constant bloodshed, every petty State fighting its neighbor, and human life being held of no value. 2. Caste had nothing to do with the famine. Famine in India is caused by failure of crops and over-population in certain districts. 3. The United States has been purchasing forest preserves. You can get full information by writing to the chief forester, Gifford Pinchot, Washington, D. C.

Anna M. W., North Greenville, N. S. 1. What does Deut. 14:22 mean? 2. Where is the passage found in the Bible which says: "The wicked shall not live out half their days"?

1. The dedication of a tenth part was then a religious duty. It was a tenth part of all the produce or increase. The first tithes were the legal dues of the Levites. 2. See Psalm 55:23.

C. P., Pontiac, Ill. What is it to have faith? How may I have faith in prayer? I have been praying for something for three and a half years.

Faith is trust. It is the gift of God, wrought in the heart by the Holy Spirit, which quickens and directs all our faculties toward the one object. We must pray to have faith, and to have our faith increased. It will be strengthened, too, by the frequent remembrance of Christ's repeated promises that our prayers to the Father, in his name, would assuredly be heard and answered, if we asked in faith, and believed while we asked. See Matt. 7:7; Luke 11:9; John 14:13, 15:16; James 4:2; I. John 3:22, 5:14; Luke 11:10.

J. A. H., Rockford, Wash. What does the Bible teach regarding the future state of people who die in ignorance of the true God and his Word?

God has his witnesses in every land and every nation. There is no race, as far as known, which has not a definite idea of a Supreme Being and of right and wrong. The Jews held that the heathen were lost, but Christianity has always held that they will be judged under God's natural law and may be accepted as being a law unto themselves (see Rom. 2:14, 26, 27). No one can set limit to the divine grace and forgiveness, and no church or creed can dogmatize concerning those who, not having the Gospel, have yet lived according to their lights. If Christ's atonement was made for all mankind, it is logical to believe that it includes the virtuous and upright in pre-Gospel days as well as those who come afterward.

M. McK., New York. 1. What is meant by Job 2:1? 2. How did the Lord speak to Moses, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and many others? Was it by vision or by an inward manifestation?

1. It was a day appointed for the angels giving an account of their ministry or service. The word "Satan," some commentators hold, is applied generically and means "adversary," or "opponent," in a general sense. He comes among the "sons of God," though not one of them, and his malice and envy are permitted to have scope, but only for God's purposes. This is a part of the general plan of the trial of Job. The adversary, tempter or accuser, having fallen himself, is convinced that Job will not stand the test. But his power is distinctly limited. He can accuse and afflict, but can neither condemn nor destroy those who firmly trust in God. To grasp the full meaning of Job's trials and triumph the book must be read as a whole, when it will be seen that God's providence overrules evil, though its triumph may be permitted for a season. 2. A spiritual communication may take any one of various forms. It may be a strong, impelling conviction, an audible message, or a mysterious spiritual force that urges us forward where human reason and perception fail. God speaks to those who wait upon him as he spoke to Moses, to Samuel and to the prophets, and the quickened conscience needs no interpreter, though to the rest of the world the message may be inaudible.

A. E. W., Glenwood, Iowa. How large is the Atlantic cable?

The size of the cable varies. As it leaves the shore and runs through shallow water it is a foot or more in thickness; as it gets out in the ocean its size diminishes until it is not thicker than two or three inches; as it comes in shore, its size again increases.

H. G. S., Jennings, N. C. 1. Was it the hireling or the sheep that the wolf caught? (John 10:12.) 2. Does ex-President Roosevelt intend to write a book of his African trip? 3. Please explain the "parcels post" system.

1. Jesus referred to the sheep being caught. The hireling, being a false shepherd, would not care for them and defend them as would Christ, the true Shepherd. 2. Mr. Roosevelt will first write a series of articles for the magazines. These, later, will doubtless be gathered into book form. 3. Parcels post is the term used for a postal system by which packages, usually up to ten pounds, may be sent through the mails at a reasonable postal charge. In England packages of quite large bulk are taken, and it is being agitated in this country for a more extensive system. No one would be able to answer the other question sent.

E. B., Anna, Ill. Is it possible to live a strictly moral and Christian life, and at the same time become a rich man; for instance, a millionaire?

We are repeatedly told in the Bible that it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom, but nowhere is it said to be impossible. Wealth unquestionably operates, in many cases, as a barrier to spiritual development. There are, however, many notable exceptions, where men and women, obtaining wealth by honorable means, have loyally consecrated it to noble purposes, giving glory to God and benefit to humanity. Do not be led into the error of supposing that all rich men are worldly and unspiritual, because some are so. Though the age is marked by many abuses in money-getting, we find numerous instances which show that the idea is slowly gaining ground that great wealth is not a personal possession, but a stewardship, to be righteously used and for which there must be an ultimate accounting. Nothing is more certain than that riches, unrighteously gotten and selfishly used, become a curse to the possessor.

J. L., Redbush, Ky. 1. Who were the angels who lost their first inheritance, or estate? 2. What "spirits in prison" did Christ preach to while his body was in the sepulchre? 3. What is an angel?

1. Of the nature of angels we know very little beyond the few references to them in Scripture and of the facts concerning those who "lost their first estate" we know practically nothing. Yet many volumes have been written on the subject, and there are traditions of a rebellion in heaven when Lucifer, a great angel, and his followers were cast out. Milton has made use of this in his poems. It is referred to in Rev. 12:7, 9, and II. Pet. 2:4, and also in Jude 6, Matt. 25:14 and Luke 10:18. The inference is that they fell through pride. 2. Commentators have suggested that the "spirits in prison" were the ante-diluvians doomed to destruction by the Flood, to whom Christ announced his finished work of redemption. 3. The good angels are generally supposed to be heavenly servants, or messengers, who do God's will and who "minister" in guiding the destinies of man.

Mrs. F. B., Portland, Mich. We have had a debate in Sahbath School as to the name of the tree on which Judas Iscariot hanged himself. Was Christ crucified on the wood of this tree?

There are several accounts of the death of Judas. One tradition says the tree was a fig tree. A legend says the tree was called Zacoum, and was accursed. Early writers (Beda, Juvencus and others) call it a fig tree; Adrichomius says it was a sycamore. Oecumenius and Papias state that he burst asunder, being crushed by a chariot. There is nothing in the Bible or elsewhere to connect the tree of Judas with the cross.

THE ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE FUND

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

From December 29, 1908, to the close of the Fund

By net Receipts of Contributions from all sources		$57,220.77
REMITTANCES
The Queen's Fund for Mothers and Babies, through His Excellency the Italian Ambassador	$ 5,000.00
The Queen's Fund for Mothers and Babies, through His Excellency the Italian Ambassador	20,000.00
The Queen's Fund for Mothers and Babies, through His Excellency the Italian Ambassador,	25,000.00
To Rev. Arturo Muston, President of the Waldensian Missions, Italy, through the Department of State, Washington, D. C.	5,000.00
		$55,000.00
EXPENSES
Earthquake Fund Representative in stricken district	$250.00
Clerical help	388.16
Printing acknowledgment blanks, postals, stationery, etc., on 22,728 separate remittances	502.55
Cable, telegraph and telephone service	173.70
Bank exchange	31.15
Miscellaneous postage	3.21
Office expenses, etc	23.04
Miscellaneous expenses	71.94
Auditor's fees	7.50
		1,451.25
One per cent. Administration Fee, donated to our "Any Good Cause Fund"		572.20
		57,023.45
Balance on hand		$197.32

Public Accountant's Certification

This certifies that having taken off the above Statement from the Books of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and examined the Receipts and Disbursements in connection with the Italian Earthquake Fund, comparing Vouchers and Checks and verifying additions, I find the same correct and in accord with the above statement.

SWORN TO before me this 28th day of May, A.D., 1909.

Notary Public

Public Accountant,
150 Broadway, New York.

Miscellaneous

Reader, Chillicothe, O. To fear God does not mean to be affrighted at him, but to reverence him and obey his will.

W. E. B., Villisca. 1. No. 2. We believe not. Everything that came from His hands was perfect, and not evil but good.

T. J. E., Whitehaven, Md. The evils of dancing include promiscuous acquaintanceships that lead frequently to the worst results, late hours and drinking. It is a menace to health and morals.

F. E. A., Shawville, Quebec. "Soul" and "spirit" cannot be discussed in a paragraph. Many books have been written on the subject. See any good standard religious encyclopedia.

Apropos of a recent question in THE MAIL-BAG concerning the origin of purgatory, S. H. Ward, Chatham, N. J., writes, calling attention to the reference to purgatory in the Sixth Book of Virgil's Aeneid.

Thomas Akerman, East Orange, N. J., writes: "I would like to add my name to the list of survivors of the Crimean War. I was present at the fall of Sebastopol and the fall of Redan and Malakoff, and I have two silver medals. I am in my seventy-third year."

C. C. R., Melbourne, Mo. 1. No. There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body. The resurrection body, we are clearly told, is not susceptible to the weaknesses of the natural body. 2. The text says "many," but not all. It is held by some commentators that only those saints arose whose graves were opened by the earthquake.

O. M. H., Kalamazoo, Mich. 1. God in his own good time sets all things right, and the wicked and lawless will certainly be checked in due season. 2. Christians should forgive many, many times (see Matt. 18:22), and should remember that God forgives and Jesus saves even "to the uttermost." 3. The clause in the Lord's Prayer, "Thy will be done," etc., is meant to express the desire of the renewed soul to see the whole inhabited earth in harmony with God's will. This is the great hope of all believers, that the whole world will yet be won to Christ.

R. W., LeRoy, N. Y. 1. In the passage quoted the same word is used for "everlasting" and "eternal" in the original. The idea is to show that the decision is final and irrevocable. 2. Both Drs. Torrey and Chapman hold the orthodox view concerning future punishment, we believe, though in their sermons they dwell more on God's love than on the terrors of the law. 3. A considerable majority. 4. Jurymen may, in certain cases, be asked as to their church relationship, but it is not customary.

THE STORY OF MARCO

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco did not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder became more and more unbearable. The man grew ugly and the food was scaree. Marco ran away and played for a living but made little. Christmas Eve Marco began to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to his selling on a corner he called his own.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

MARCO'S mind was quite made up when Jimmy, during a lull in trade, strolled nearer and allowed himself to be accosted.

"Look a-here, you," began Marco, eagerly, "where can I get me one o' them badges, and how much do they cost? Oh, I won't take your corner, 'course," he hastened to add, as a quick challenge came into Jimmy's face.

Jimmy hesitated. A derisive answer was on the tip of his tongue when a sudden memory of a fight that was not fought to a finish sent a softer light to his eyes.

"Say, how old be ye, kid?" he asked not unkindly.

Marco had almost said "ten" when a wisdom born of his experience in buying a "paper off de squire" in Gaylordville taught him caution.

"I'm fourteen," he said promptly.

Jimmy was not the "squire," however, and Jimmy had the fearlessness of his convictions.

"G'wan! ye ain't neither!" he scoffed. "I'm 'most fourteen myself. What ye givin' us?"

"Fourteen—you?" There was unbelieving wonder in Marco's face.

Jimmy changed color, and shifted his position uneasily. Again had his hated infirmity come to the front, but this time he had only himself to blame.

"Well, I ain't—very tall, 'course," he stammered, "but I'm fourteen, 'most—an' you ain't!" he concluded with unreasoning fierceness. "Cut it out!"

Marco was silent for a moment before he asked a wary question:

"How old do ye have ter be, ter sell 'em,—papers, ye know?"

"Why?"

"'Cause; that's how old I am. I'm old enough ter sell 'em. See?" And he met Jimmy's eyes unfalteringly.

Jimmy stared. Then he grinned his admiration.

"Sure, you ain't no freshie, after all. I reckon mebbe I——"

"Paper!—Here, boy!"

Jimmy heard the words, and was off like a flash. From the doorway Marco watched him wistfully. He saw Jimmy dodge this way and that, and finally leap to the step of a moving car. He saw him slip, too, and lose his hold, and he saw the quick surging of the crowd toward the middle of the street. The next moment, with a frightened cry, he himself had dashed into the thickest of it.

CHAPTER XII

Finding a Home

THOSE who saw the little hunchback newsboy fall from a car that Christmas Eve, remembered that it was another boy, dark-haired and dark-eyed, who was almost the first to reach his side. He had dug his way to the centre of the crowd by a vigorous use of sharp little fists and elbows; and he dropped to the ground at the boy's side with a quick cry of sympathy.

"Say, be ye hurt?"

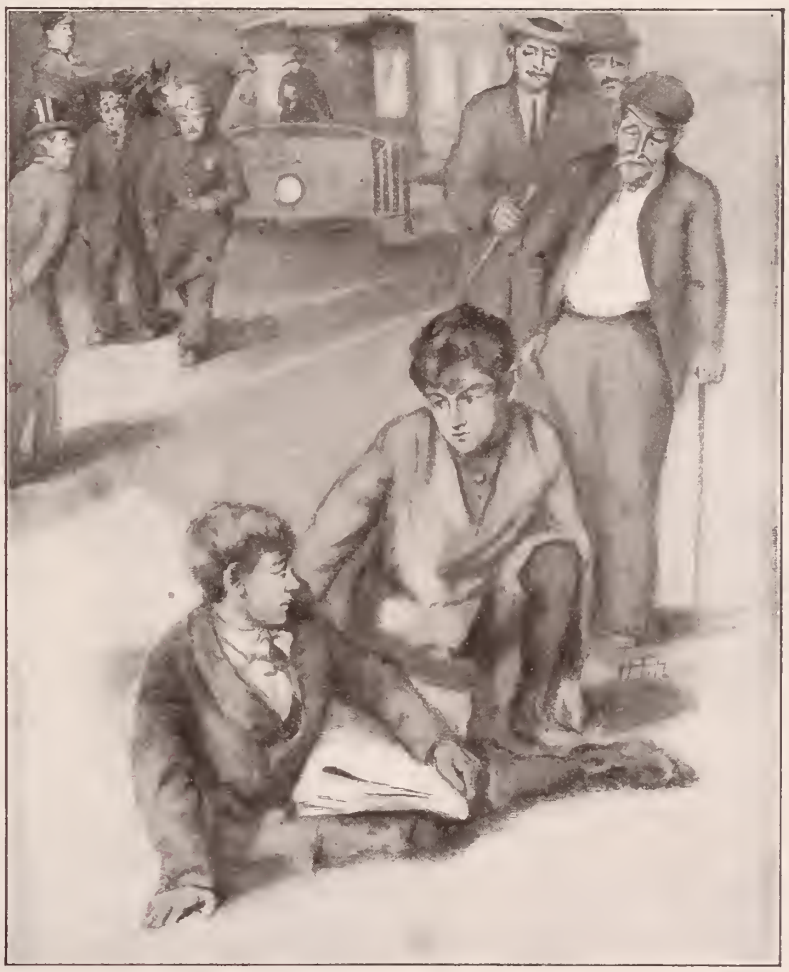
The hunchback raised his head, and pulled himself half-upright. He saw the crowd, the car conductor, and the two policemen hurrying toward him. Then with a grip on Marco's arm that hurt, he answered loudly, so that all might hear what he was saying:

"Naw! Furgit it! 'Course I ain't hurt!" And he dragged himself to his feet. In Marco's ear he muttered: "Quick, git me out o' dis 'fore de cop gits here—quick!"

So great was the urgency in Jimmy's voice that Marco lost no time. He was an adept at forcing a way through crowds, and five minutes after the accident he was hurrying Jimmy into the seclusion of one of the quieter cross streets.

It was Jimmy who spoke first.

"See here, you, kid—dis ain't no walkin' match," he panted, clutching at Marco's arm. "Go a little easy."



"He dropped to the ground at the boy's side with a quick cry of sympathy"

Marco turned sharply.

"Say, you are hurt," he cried.

"'Course I's hurt. It's my arm," moaned Jimmy. "My arm and—my back. Look a-here, I reckon I'll have ter stop—a minute," he faltered, his face growing suddenly white. "My legs don't seem—ter go."

Marco threw out a supporting arm, and led the way to a doorstep.

"But why didn't you tell 'em you was hurt?" he demanded.

In spite of his pain, Jimmy tossed him a scornful glance.

"Tell 'em! T'anks! I don't want no horspitul in mine."

Marco was silent. What a "horspitul" might be, he did not know, but that it was bad he did not doubt after Jimmy's words. Jimmy, too, was silent. He seemed to be debating something in his mind. At last he spoke, laboriously, painfully.

"See here, kid, what's yer name?" he asked.

"Marco Ferdinando Bonelli."

"Sho! that all?" A flash of the old spirit looked out of Jimmy's eyes, but it faded as quickly as it came. "Well, I reckon mebbe, Marco What-you-may-call-it, you'll have ter go home wid me. Can ye?"

"Sure."

"Where ye live?"

"Nowhere."

"Nowhere!" repeated Jimmy in surprise.

"Well, I don't now. You see, I was with the organ-grinder; but I didn't like it there, and I got away. I'm lookin' for my sister Flossie—but I've got plenty o' time to take you home. How far is it?"

"Oh, 'tain't fur," muttered Jimmy, setting his teeth to hide the pain as he stumbled to his feet.

In spite of Jimmy's assertion, however, it did seem far to the little back room that he called home, and more than once Marco thought he would have to call for stronger arms than his to get his companion under shelter. But Jimmy did not quite lose strength until the top of the last flight of stairs was reached; then, with a jerk of his head toward the closed door in front of him, he fell in a little heap to the floor.

Marco knocked at the door and waited. He knocked again and still received no answer. Then he turned the knob softly, and pushed open the door.

Across the room on a matress in the corner lay a man asleep or drunk, Marco could not tell which. There were a table, a broken chair, two boxes, an old cradle holding a sleeping baby, and a rusty stove—fireless. By the light of a smoky kerosene lamp Marco could make out another mattress in the corner near the door; and it was to this mattress that he decided he must try to get the hunchback. In the hall he stooped over the huddled little heap, and touched it gently.

"Can't ye walk—just a step? or can't ye just crawl?" he begged. "You hadn't ought to lie here on the floor."

There was no answer. Marco hesitated, then stooped and tried to lift the crooked little form. He had half dragged, half carried it inside the room when a thin, tired-looking woman carrying a bundle of kindling wood and a small bag of coal, appeared in the doorway. With a startled cry she dropped her bundles and took the boy from Marco's arms.

"Jimmy! Jimmy, darlin'—what's ailin' ye?"

"He got hurt, ma'am. He fell off the car," explained Marco. "But he wa'n't like this till just now. He could walk and talk."

"But he is hurted—he's hurted bad,"

Continued on next page

The Story of Marco

Continued from preceding page

moaned the woman, tenderly laying her burden on the old mattress in the corner. "Pat! Pat!" she called sharply; but the man in the other corner did not stir. With a look of disgust the woman turned back to Marco. "See here, b'y, you'll have ter do! Run down ter th' Sittlemunt House an' ask fur Miss Dole. Tell her Jimmy Nolan's that hurted she'll have ter come. Quick!—it's the Sittlemunt House two blocks down on the corner. Any wan will tell ye. Run, now!"

And Marco did run. More than that, he found Miss Dole and brought her back with him; and then he had more errands to run, for her this time, and for the doctor. Long afterward, when both Miss Dole and the doctor had gone, Mrs. Nolan suddenly awoke to a realization that he was still there, patiently awaiting orders.

"An' is it here ye air still?" she cried contritely. "I didn't mean ter be after kapin' ye so late; so I didn't. Run home, an'—thank ye." Then something in the boy's face as he turned away made her ask: "Will it be fur?—where ye're a-livin'?"

Marco shook his head. His eyes were on the rusty stove—fireless no longer. Outside it had begun to snow again—and he knew it. The stuffy, smoke-scented room, bare as it was, looked wonderfully inviting.

"'Tain't far—an' 'tain't near," he answered at last. "'Tain't—nowhere."

"'Tain't nowhere!"

From the corner where lay the hunchback in splints and bandages, came a sudden stir. A voice, feeble but authoritative, spoke.

"Say, ma, he's me friend, Marco What-you-may-call-it; an' he's goin' ter stay wid me ter-night."

CHAPTER XIII

A Lucky Christmas Day

MARCO was awake early Christmas morning. From his position behind the stove, where he had curled himself to sleep like a cat the night before, he watched Pat Nolan bestir himself and get to his feet, angrily demanding something to eat. Not until the man had devoured the scraps of bread and meat that his wife timidly placed before him, and not until he had stumbled out of the room and down the stairs, did Marco crawl from his hiding-place and wish his hostess a cheery Merry Christmas.

To his distress the woman burst into tears.

"Sure, an' it's no Christmas at all, at all," she moaned bitterly, "wid Jimmy lyin' there like that, wid his arm broke, an' his poor crooked back all hurted. Bad cess to 'em—the hull lot of 'em, that knocked me b'y off that car!"

"But he wa'n't killed, an' he's goin' to get better," comforted Marco. "The doctor said so."

"Yes; an' who'll be after bringin' in the money till he does, wid baby sick, an' me not workin'? Tell me that! An' there's the doctor wid his pills ter pay fur; an'—oh, Jimmy, an' be ye awake, darlin'?" she broke off, hurrying across the room in answer to a feeble call.

Five minutes later she had left the room, a bit of money from Jimmy's pockets clutched in her hand. She was scarcely out of sight when the hunchback turned his feverish gaze on Marco.

"Look a-here, kid, what did he say—dat doctor? When is I goin' ter git out o' dis?"

Marco shook his head.

"He didn't say; but he said you wa'n't—killed." Marco's voice was hopeful.

"Aw, did he now?" scoffed Jimmy, with an angry flounce that sent a spasm of pain across his face. "Well, anyhow, kid, I reckon I'm up against it sure dis time," he moaned, turning away his head.

"Up against what?"

"Everythin'. Who's goin' ter sell my papers? Who's goin' ter git de dough for de grub?"

"But, yer dad—"

"Dad!" It was a single word, but its intonation was unmistakable, and Marco said no more. Jimmy, however, did say more. "Dad? Why, dad's drunk when he ain't doin' time. It's 'cause o' him I'm worryin'. He licks ma an' me, too, when trade ain't good an' there's nothin' comin' his way. I bet ye two cents ma didn't tell him dis mornin' I was hurt. I knows her!"

Marco was silent. Then a sudden glow came to his face.

"Jimmy, I'll sell yer papers! Jest tell me how ter git 'em, an' give me yer badge," he cried excitedly, springing to his feet. "Quick, give it over! I'll be you!"

"G'wan! What ye givin' us?" scoffed Jimmy. "Jest as if ye could! Yer eyes ain't blue, an' yer hair ain't red; be they?"

"Why, n-no."

"Well, mine be; an' I signed a card what said they was, too. Do ye t'ink ye looks like me? 'Sides, de gang'd be on ter ye, in no time. I tell ye thar ain't no way out o' it. I jest got ter git well, an'—s-sh!" Mrs. Nolan had opened the door, and the baby had waked with a fretful cry.

Marco was very quiet during the next half hour. He accepted with thanks the frugal breakfast that Mrs. Nolan put before him; but at the first opportunity, when neither Jimmy nor his mother was looking at him, he picked up his cap and slipped out.

Very swiftly, but with a careful noting of streets and turns, Marco sped back to the great station where he had left his violin the night before. He found the window without difficulty; and the man was still behind it, taking in bags and bundles. But to obtain the violin was not so easy.

To Marco it was all a curious jumble of checks that he ought to have, and money that he could not pay. There were sharp words, and many admonitions as to what he must and must not do in the future; and there were two or three men who had to be listened to patiently before the precious violin was finally thrust into his hands, and he was free.

Never before had Marco played as he played that Christmas day. Behind every trill and run seemed to be Jimmy's wistful eyes urging him to do his best; and through every melody vibrated Jimmy's "Who's goin' ter git de dough fur de grub?" Whatever was the message that the violin carried to the listener's ears, it was an effectual one, for seldom had the coins clinked so merrily in Marco's cap, and never before had Marco's smile been so joyous as he gathered them in.

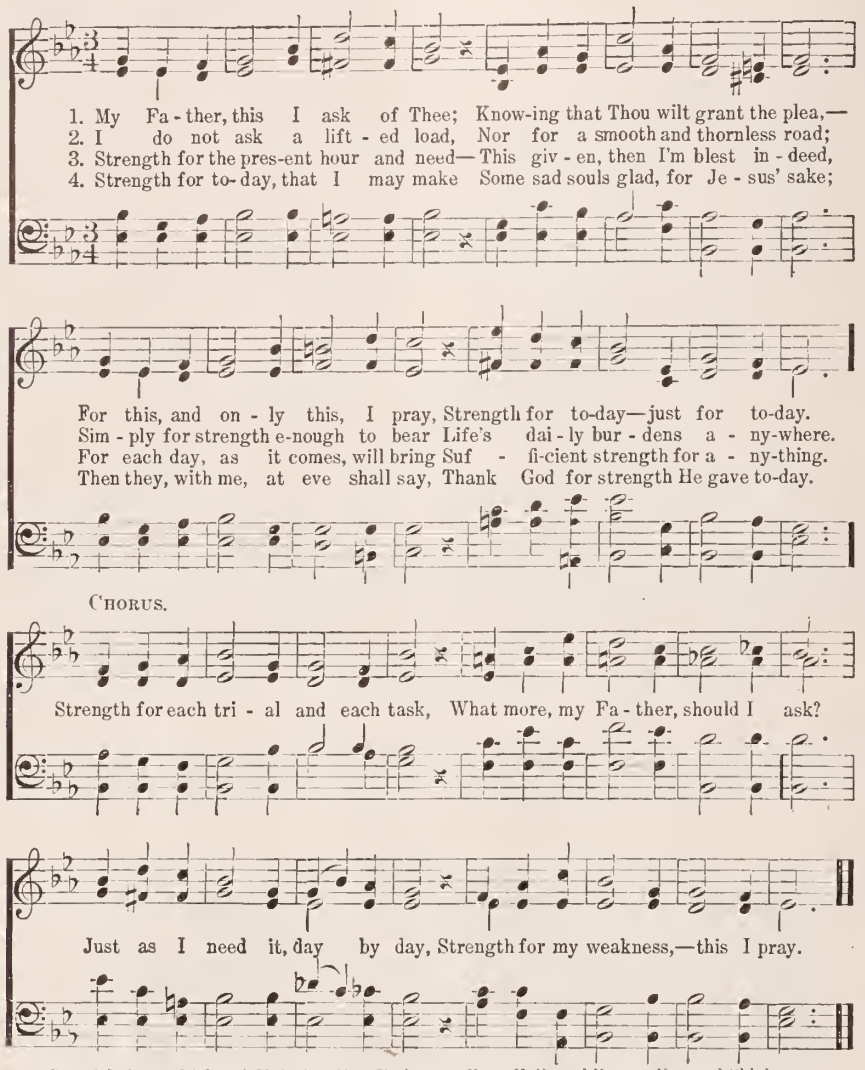
All day he tramped the streets, pausing only for a hasty luncheon at noon. At night he counted his earnings, finishing with a joyous shout as he picked up his violin and dashed down the street toward Jimmy's home. Some minutes later Mrs. Nolan, softly crying in the stuffy little smoke-scented room, found herself confronted by a wild-eyed boy who poured a jingling wealth of coins into her lap.

"I did it!" he cried. "I did it all to-day. And I'm goin' to do it to-morrow, an' to-morrow, an' to-morrow until Jimmy gets well. An' you needn't be licked, an' Jimmy needn't, neither, 'cause I'm goin' ter earn the grub!"

To be continued

"JUST FOR TO-DAY"

EBEN E. REXFORD — VICTOR H. BENKE



1. My Fa - ther, this I ask of Thee; Know-ing that Thou wilt grant the plea,—
2. I do not ask a lift - ed load, Nor for a smooth and thornless road;
3. Strength for the pres-ent hour and need— This giv - en, then I'm blest in - deed,
4. Strength for to-day, that I may make Some sad souls glad, for Je - sus' sake;
For this, and on - ly this, I pray, Strength for to-day—just for to-day.
Sim - ply for strength e-nough to bear Life's dai - ly bur - dens a - ny-where.
For each day, as it comes, will bring Suf - fi-cient strength for a - ny-thing.
Then they, with me, at eve shall say, Thank God for strength He gave to-day.
Chorus.
Strength for each tri - al and each task, What more, my Fa - ther, should I ask?
Just as I need it, day by day, Strength for my weakness,—this I pray.

Copyright by the Biglow & Main Co., New York From Hallowed Hymns, New and Old, by per.

NOTABLE S. S. CLASSES

—Apropos of the recent mention in this journal of a notable Sunday School class of 200 in Ashland, O., Rev. Thomas Broxholn, pastor of the First Summit Baptist Church, Charlottesville, N. Y., writes us that in the First Baptist Church of Rochester, N. Y., there is a class of 889 men members, of whom 875 are residents of the city. In the same city, the Central Presbyterian Church has a class of 400 men; the First M. E. Church has a class of 350 men, and the Lake Avenue Baptist Church has a class of 165 men. What other city can show a similar record?

The Primitive Church

By Mrs. M. Baxter

WITH great power the apostles gave witness of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all. Such was the result of the coming of the Holy Spirit. It was of such truly converted souls, new creatures in Christ Jesus (II. Cor. 5:17), that the Church (or congregation) of Christ was formed. Theirs was a vital union, created by the Holy Ghost. They were baptized, as the outward evidence of their willing, glad discipleship, but it was not their baptism which made them to be true Christians—that was only the outward seal—it was the life of God the Holy Ghost within them. It was this which made them "of one heart and of one soul," and their early zeal led them to have a community of goods, because they were so really one. It was a beautiful beginning, and there may have arisen in their hearts the sanguine anticipation that Isa. 2:2-4 was about to be accomplished, that those "last days" had come, when the mountain of the Lord's house should be established in the tops of the mountains, and should be exalted above the hills, and all nations should flow unto it.

But soon this primitive Church at Jerusalem had to learn that the disciple would have to go the way of the Master; for neither Jerusalem nor the people of Israel as a whole were ready to repent of their national sin in crucifying their Messiah.

God gave Peter and John a power of word and argument which were unanswerable. The elders were continually losing ground. The witnesses of Christ had the Word of God on their side, and the facts which proved their mission, as well as their Master, to be divine; and the authorities were put to it how to deal with them. To suppress them they were determined, even at the cost of fighting against God. The people believed they were true men, and the chief priests and scribes and elders saw that they had the worst of it, and they did not scruple to resort to violence. But even after imprisonment the baffled judges let them go with threatenings only, because "the people glorified God for that which was done."

When they had returned to their own company, there was no complaint among them for the way in which they had been treated. Not only were the disciples free from personal interest while they stood before the elders of the Jews with all eyes upon them, but also among their own company, they sought not their own, but were wholly at their Lord's disposal. Jesus' life was being lived again in these unconquerable disciples; and the multitude recognized the hand of God in them.

But the Jewish elders were hastening a judgment upon their people which had been foretold in Leviticus 26:27-29: the desolation of their land, the destruction of their sanctuaries, and the scattering of them as a people among the Gentiles; a judgment which has now been going on nearly nineteen centuries. God was not to be conquered. The priests were fighting against God, and his resources came to the aid of his true servants. "The angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life." And later on came the news that they were preaching in the temple. Not hidden away in some safe place, but braving the wrath of man, they fearlessly gave testimony to their Lord and to his salvation. "Cut to the heart," but still resisting, the priests took counsel to slay them, but Gamaliel, Paul's schoolmaster, hindered them by wise and friendly counsel, and their judgment was postponed. They had not yet filled up the measure of their iniquity in rejecting the Holy Ghost as they had done the Father and the Son, until these rulers of the people took the law into their own hands, and with those hands stoned Stephen to death.

Ecuador's Centennial Exposition

Continued from page 491

The Ecuador government has erected for the exposition a building nearly 300 feet long and 100 feet high, with an ornamental cupola. There is some fine decorative sculpture, the work of native artists. Statues typify the Republic, Agriculture and Industry, and there is a symbolic figure of Victory.

In the exhibit of the products and resources of the country much variety will be shown. Ecuador is one of the chief cacao or chocolate producing regions of the world, and it also has rubber, coffee and a variety of tropical products. One of the most interesting exhibits, without doubt, will be that of Panama hats, for the peculiar straw from which alone these hats can be made is grown chiefly in Ecuador and the industry is located in several towns along the coast and in the interior.

President Alfaro[x] and His Official Guests

* * *

The United States, following the policy which Secretary Root originated, will be worthily represented at the exposition. A special United States building has been erected, and Mr. Ernest H. Wands has been appointed Commissioner. Mr. Wands has spent much time in South America, and he was appointed as Commissioner from the St. Louis Exposition to Ecuador and other countries.

LIBERIA'S FATE IN THE BALANCE

Continued from page 495

people of all classes have been cheated by exorbitant prices and inferior goods. America must supply both honest trade goods and square dealing. Liberia must remain a republic, and not be taken over by any other country. But America, her mother country, must stand by her child and help her rise to better self-government and development. The four things needed are: First, agricultural development; second, industrial enterprises, stores, factories, mills, roads, railroads, etc.; third, practical education in agriculture, trades, mineralogy and botany; fourth, Christianity as a life as well as a creed.

The College of Liberia

If thirty-five young men and fifteen young women could go to Liberia, with expenses paid for two years, and begin teaching the "hinterland" people farming, sewing, weaving, pottery and sawmill work, and at each centre stock a small store and do honest trading, taking the native products to the coast for sale, at the same time co-operating with the government, educators and missionaries—all working to make themselves independent and self-supporting—the troubles of Liberia would soon be solved and the slavery question settled. Internecine wars would cease; barbaric customs, too, would cease; witchcraft's power would be broken, cannibalism buried, and the country would become peaceful and prosperous. Other nations would have confidence in her, and would trade with her. Exploitation would cease, and America's neglected child would become her sister republic and would be an object lesson to the nations.

America must hear Liberia's cry for help, and stand by to aid her. If one of the American colonization societies would select young men and women, and send them to Liberia, it might be the means of saving the republic. If the American societies organized for that work will not do it, the American government surely ought to. Otherwise, it may mean leaving our own child to perish, unheeding its cries for help and co-operation.

Fifty workers, with expenses paid for two years, at a salary of $400 per year, would be just equal to one-half the sum mulcted from Liberia for a poor little road eighteen miles in length. These fifty persons would be fifty pathways to development, progress, enterprise, thrift, a guardianship of the interests of Liberia—pathways to the kingdom of Christ and to the souls of men who are crying to us, as the man of Macedonia cried to Paul: "Come over and help us!"

A Scene Near Monrovia

To the Tips of His Pink Toes.

Because of its purity, Ivory Soap has a place of honor in every well regulated nursery.

It should be used for baby's bath as well as for cleansing every article he wears; his underclothes, his frocks, his stockings—everything about him from the top of his little bald head to the tips of his pink and white toes.

There is no "free" (uncombined) alkali in Ivory Soap. That is why it will not injure the finest fabric or the most delicate skin.

Ivory Soap
It Floats

40% Cheaper Than Lath and Plaster

BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD
Better Than Lath and Plaster

You Yourself Can Nail It To Studding

BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD (Pat'd), the wonder-worker in building construction is fast taking the place of lath and plaster. It is made of kiln-dried, dressed lath, embedded in Asphalt Mastic (99% pure), and surfaced with sized cardboard. It is constructed in the factory, cut into sheets, 4 x 4 feet, and shipped in crates—ready to be nailed to studding.

Bishopric Wall Board Sheets are of uniform, even thickness; are cut absolutely true, insuring neat, close, snug unions and smoother wall surfaces than lath and plaster. It may be sawed in any size without waste. Expert labor not required. Hammer and saw the only tools needed. Can be nailed to studding in less time than lath alone is put on for plastering; is ready for the immediate application of wall paper or paint. It is guaranteed not to crack, flake or blister; is proof against moisture, heat or cold. Being a non-conductor, it saves fuel in winter and keeps the house cool in summer.

Bishopric Wall Board is suitable for costly dwellings or modest cottages, summer homes, bungalows, health resorts, flats, offices or factory buildings. Nothing better for finishing your attic, because of its cleanliness and low cost of application. Ceil your cellar with it; besides keeping dirt out of the house, it will keep floors warmer in winter, promoting health. Illustration shows easy method of application.

Write to-day for FREE Sample, descriptive booklet and prices, freight paid. Can ship from Cincinnati or direct from our factories in New Orleans, La., and Alma, Mich.

The Mastic Wall Board & Roofing Mfg. Co., Ltd., 40 East Third St., Cincinnati, O.

DEALERS SHOULD WRITE FOR OUR ATTRACTIVE PROPOSITION

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc,
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

Stewart Hartshorn

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS
Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.
Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music. 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Madam, Be Careful

All Kayser silk gloves have "Kayser" in the hem, to protect you from imposition.

These are the gloves which, for 25 years, all satisfied women have worn.

Kaysers are the gloves with the patent tip—with the guarantee in every pair.

Kaysers contain that wonderful fabric—made in our factory from the very cocoon.

Their perfection in fit is the final result of 25 years of experience. Their finish is due to fifty operations, through which every Kayser glove goes.

"The Kayser"

Patent Finger-Tipped Silk Gloves

Be careful to get these perfect silk gloves—the gloves you have always worn.

They cost no more than the poorest gloves—gloves not half so good.

Kaysers come in every shade of spring fashion—in every style and length. All have equal fit and finish. All have the patent tip.

Every dealer gives a new pair free if Kaysers don't prove satisfactory.

You want these advantages, and they cannot be found in any imitation make. But you will get them—as always—if you ask for the Kayser, and look for the name in the hem.

Short Silk Gloves	Long Silk Gloves
50c.	75c.
75c.	$1.00
$1.00	$1.25
$1.25	$1.50

JULIUS KAYSER & CO., MAKERS
NEW YORK

Also makers of Italian Summer Underwear—the most luxurious lingerie in the world, yet the most economical. It outwears cotton ten to one, as thousands of women know. Made in every undergarment that a woman wears.

Send for booklet, "What Every Woman Know." Address Julius Kayser & Co., New York.

Witnessing for Christ*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE words of our Golden Text, "With great power gave the apostles their witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus," were written concerning not only the words spoken by the apostles, but the deeds which they performed in the name of the Lord Jesus after he had ascended up into heaven. With these words for a keynote we will review what we have been studying for the last three months concerning the acts of the apostles.

Let us complete the Golden Text by giving the clause not included, "and great grace was upon them all," upon the multitude of them that believed, and had all things in common, as one family.

No Distinction Between Saints and Sinners

Lesson I. Peter went to the house of the Roman centurion, Cornelius, and preached the Gospel to the Gentiles. In doing this he showed that the spirit which was in the Lord Jesus was also in him, for Jesus went to the home of Zaccheus, and the change wrought by that visit caused Jesus to say: "To-day is salvation come to this house." Jesus was constantly doing that sort of thing, and his critics often sneeringly spoke of him as the "friend of publicans and sinners," to which he replied that he had "come not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance." It has been said that "One who sees a smiling valley from the summit of a hill sees all its fields alike robed in verdure or waving with golden harvests," God making no distinction between saints and sinners, but distributing his treasures of shower and sunshine equally to both. And thus in the features of the landscape, not less than in the pages of the Bible, in the common providence as well as in the inspired precepts of God, we learn to embrace all men in the arms of Christian affection, and, without excluding even our bitterest enemies, to do them good as we have opportunity. This, the peculiar glory of Christianity and grand lesson of the Cross, shines bright in every sunbeam and sounds in every falling shower.

Lesson II. We see the poise of Peter's character, in which he was exemplifying that of his Master. Peter was lodged in prison by enemies of the truth, and yet he slept, chained to two soldiers. When he was miraculously released, he sought his own company: the Christians who were praying for him. So the Lord Jesus, when, as the prisoner of Pilate, he was mocked, and spit upon, and beaten, maintained silence and composure.

A Soldier's Generosity

Lesson III. Look at Stephen, how he died, praying for his enemies. It brought again before men the dying of the Lord Jesus, who prayed concerning those who had nailed him to the cross: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Dr. Guthrie, the Scotch preacher, said: "Would to God we were able to copy his pattern, to copy it as faithfully as did a warrior on a late battlefield. Going over the ground when the fight was done, he came, as he picked his steps among the dead, to a body which, stirring, showed some signs of life. The bleeding form wore the dress of a foe. Regardless of that, he said to his attendant, 'Give him a draft of wine,' and as the officer stooped down to do so the wounded soldier, through the mists that were gathering in his dying eye, saw in the good Samaritan the general of the troops against whom he had been fighting, raised himself on his elbow, drew a pistol and with deadly hate fired it at his benefactor's head. Happily the bullet missed its mark, and the general, as soon as he had recovered from his surprise, said, 'Give it to him all the same.'"

Lesson IV. After the death of Stephen, the followers of Jesus were scattered by persecution, some of them going as far as Phenicia, Cyprus and Antioch.

In Antioch they preached the Gospel of Jesus Christ, but to Jews only, and there were many converts, so many that when the apostles in Jerusalem heard of the great work going on there they sent Barnabas to look into the movement. And he found the opportunity so great that he went to Tarsus and induced Paul to return with him to Antioch to aid in preaching the Gospel. For one whole year Barnabas and Paul preached the Gospel in Antioch, and there were thousands of converts, who were first called Christians at Antioch. Again and again Jesus had sent his apostles out, two by two, to preach the Gospel. Barnabas and Paul exemplified the plan of Jesus, and in so doing they were the witnesses of his resurrection."

Paul and Barnabas

Deo Dante Dedi was the motto in the old Charter House, founded in 1609. One of the most famous men educated at the Charter House was John Wesley, and no one more truly carried out the motto of the school than he did. He gave back his life, his strength, his talents, his learning to Him from whom he had received them. "The world," he said, "is my parish," and up and down it unsparingly he devoted himself to the cause of God. "Leisure and I have taken leave of one another," he said at another time. "I propose to be busy as long as I live, if my health is so long indulged to me." And when he once saw an old man, feeble in body and mind, he prayed, "Lord, let me not live to be useless." To be active and useful, and ever pressing forward, was Wesley's constant aim. Is it ours?

Lesson V. Paul and Barnabas, when they were preaching the Gospel on the island of Cyprus, came in contact with a man who was a pretender, Elymas, the sorcerer. He was a hinderer of the Gospel, and as such he was rebuked by Paul. In this was the resurrection of Christ manifest, for when he was upon earth he rebuked the Pharisees, calling them "vipers," because they sought to pervert the truth and prevent others from laying hold on eternal life.

But for ordinary persons like ourselves it is a dangerous thing to become censors. Rev. Henry Martyn used to lay down this rule for himself, to know when to speak and when to abstain from speaking, in reproving sin: When he felt some love to the person and hatred to the sin.

Lesson VI. Paul and Barnabas, coming to Antioch of Pisidia, entered into a synagogue on the Sabbath day, just as Jesus did at Nazareth. They were invited to speak, just as Jesus was—he read the Scriptures and spoke—so did they. A great stir among the people and threats of violence resulted in Nazareth and at Antioch. Jesus left Nazareth, Paul and Barnabas left Antioch. But in each case, they left to return again; opposition did not break up their efforts to do good.

Healing of the Sick

Lesson VII. At Lystra, Paul healed a man who had been lame since his birth, so that the man was able to leap and to walk. Jesus had healed the impotent man who for thirty years had been unable to walk; he had healed

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for June 20, 1909. Quarterly review. GOLDEN TEXT: "With great power gave the apostles their witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus." Acts 4:33.

MAKING SUNSHINE

It Is Often Found in Pure Food.

The improper selection of food drives many a healthy person into the depths of despairing illness. Indeed, most sickness comes from wrong food, and just so surely as that is the case right food will make the sun shine once more.

An old veteran of Newburyport, Mass., says: "In October, I was taken sick and went to bed, losing 47 pounds in about 60 days. I had doctor after doctor, food hurt me and I had to live almost entirely on magnesia and soda. All solid food distressed me so that water would run out of my mouth in little streams.

"I had terrible night sweats and my doctor finally said I had consumption and must die. My good wife gave up all hope. We were at Old Orchard, Me., at that time and my wife saw Grape-Nuts in a grocery there. She bought some and persuaded me to try it.

"I had no faith in it but took it to please her. To my surprise it did not distress me as all other food had done and before I had taken the fifth package I was well on the mend. The pains left my head, my mind became clearer and I gained weight rapidly.

"I went back to my work again, and now after six weeks' use of the food I am better and stronger than ever before in my life. Grape-Nuts surely saved my life and made me a strong hearty man, 15 pounds heavier than before I was taken sick.

"Both my good wife and I are willing to make affidavit to the truth of this."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

HOW Your Savings are Protected

AND 5% ASSURED

WHEN you send us $25.00 or any sum up to $3,000 we do not give you an ordinary receipt for the money, but a certificate secured by the entire assets of the Company, now grown to almost $2,000,000 with surplus and profits of $138,000. The funds you invest through us are loaned principally to ambitious young men, who pay interest and part of principal monthly. They have secured us (and you) by first mortgages on the best residence property in the Union—best because in and near New York, where values never decline but steadily increase.

If uniform success for sixteen years, a high reputation for conservatism and integrity, and the favorable testimony of clients all over the country, are not convincing evidence of the Company's entire reliability, you have assurance in the fact that its verified reports are open to public inspection at the Banking Department. Its books and records are subject to regular examination by the Superintendent of Banks.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS and LOAN Co. NEW YORK CITY

We pay Five Per Cent Per Year

reckoned from the day we receive your remittance to the day of withdrawal. We return any part of the principal at your pleasure, on 30 days' notice.

Inquiries are invited from prudent, thoughtful investors.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

PILLOW OXFORDS

$3.00 Postpaid in U.S.A.

Ideal Summer Shoes for Women—Absolute Comfort for TIRED, TENDER FEET; no breaking-in required; relief from pet Corns and Bunions; soft, flexible, durable, dressy and stylish. Genuine Vici Kid, soft, pliable. RUBBER HEELS. No lining to wrinkle or chafe.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Write to-day for our Free Illustrated Catalogue and special self-measure blank and join our Grand Army of delighted customers. Address:

Suffolk Shoe Co., 184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

COMBINATION OFFER

10 Fine Birthday Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Beautiful Rose Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Brilliant Fourth-of-July Post Cards, 10 cts.
MADISON ART COMPANY, Madison, Conn.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for Inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps
R.S.& A.B.LACEY, Rooms 20-30 Pacific Bldg., Wash., D.C.

GRADUATE COURSES AT HOME. Terms easy. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

the paralytic brought to him on a bed. He had healed an innumerable number of lame people. There is no form of missionary work more Christlike than that of going forth to heal the sick in order to reach their souls. How forcibly one feels this who visits a Christian hospital in a heathen land!

"Po Ku Nyo Koan"

"Salvation for All Women Institution" is the meaning of the native name hanging over the entrance to the Women's Foreign Missionary Society's Hospital in Seoul, Korea. And the good which has been accomplished here for both souls and bodies is incalculable. A day's work: At 7 A.M. the night nurse hands in her written report, telling what of the night, and goes to her breakfast, while the day nurses proceed to duty. At 8 A.M. the ringing of a small bell calls nurses, patients and servants to prayers. When all are comfortably seated on the warm Korean floor (heated from the kitchen fire by an ingenious arrangement of flues) a number from the Korean hymnal is selected and sung most heartily, unless for special reasons it seems best to sing very softly. Our Bible class was persuaded to attempt memorizing the Gospel of St. John through the inspiring story of a Korean Christian who, though blind, has memorized the entire book. Our nurses and the Christian schoolgirls, who are temporarily here as patients, far surpass all others in memorizing, but every person (unless too ill) is expected to recite at least one verse. If she cannot read, the nurses or convalescing patients help her repeat the lines until the desired number of verses have been learned. Even our pet patient, backward little four-year-old Yar-poky, succeeded in reciting all of the first verse. Bible study over, some one is asked to lead in prayer. Down goes every head until it rests upon the upturned palms of two hands, which in turn rest upon the floor. Seldom is a sound heard save the prayer, and the fervent Amens of the worshipers. Then follow the classes in hospital work and the care of the sick.

The Church at Antioch

Lesson VIII. Dissension arose in the Church at Antioch, a veritable church quarrel, about a matter which was vital to the Jews, but of no concern to the Gentiles; it was the rite of circumcision. It was settled by Paul and Barnabas being appointed to lay the dispute before the Church at Jerusalem. Wise counsel was there given, which brought the quarrel to an end. In so doing the apostles showed the resurrection of Jesus, for that was Jesus' way of settling a quarrel. Jesus said, while on earth: "If thy brother sin against thee, go show him his fault between thee and him alone; if he hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he hear thee not, take with thee one or two more, that at the mouth of two witnesses or three every word may be established. And if he refuse to hear them, tell it unto the Church" (Matt. 17:15-17).

Lesson IX. James, the probable brother of our Lord, was pastor over the Church in Jerusalem. But he extended his influence still further by writing a letter to be read by all Christians—an epistle general. Very appropriately he wrote about the works which Christians should do, that faith should be accompanied by works, and that faith without works is dead. This was in the direct line of Jesus' teaching. Jesus had said: "We must work the works of him that sent me." We have been accustomed to read: "I must work the works," etc. The substitution of "we" for "I" (a change supported by the best evidence) lends peculiar force and beauty to the verse. Jesus associates himself with his disciples; like himself, they have a calling which must not be disobeyed, to "work the works of God" (International Revision Commentary). It has been said: "Supplied with every conceivable means of gratification, a human being soon exhausts the pleasure of having things; but given right avenues to employ his energies, he never exhausts the pleasure of doing things."

Lesson X. When James was writing his letter for all Christians he deemed it important to write concerning the sinful and offending tongue. He called it a fire, the world of iniquity, the worst of all members of the body.

Where did James get this doctrine about the tongue? It was a resurrection of the teachings of Jesus, who had said that "every idle word that men shall speak they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment, for by thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

Lesson XI. The apostle who wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews, in which he made that wonderful roll of those who showed by their deeds that they had great faith, did what Jesus had so often done in his teachings.

Only a Small Number of Encyclopedias Left

WE are rapidly nearing the end of our limited edition of the first lot of the World-Wide Encyclopedia. Therefore if YOU are contemplating the purchase of this famous Encyclopedia we urgently request that you favor us with your valued order at the earliest possible moment. In response to numerous inquiries received in the last few days we would say:

1. The key for study which accompanies every set of the World-Wide Encyclopedia FREE is a guide for any systematic course of reading, that enables the possessor to pursue at home whatever studies he may select. By looking up the subject of particular interest in this key you will be referred to numerous articles bearing directly or indirectly on the matter, which should give you the desired information.

2. Interesting and instructive BIOGRAPHIES of the great men in all branches of literature, art and science, as well as character studies of the famous statesmen, heroes, philosophers and discoverers of all nations and all ages will be found in the 9,807 Pages of this colossal library of world-wide knowledge.

3. The World-Wide Encyclopedia is an Indisputable Authority on all Subjects, great and small, within the range of human Knowledge; the best Compendium of History, Geography, Science, Biography, Art and Literature ever offered to the American people.

4. The World-Wide Encyclopedia sweeps every field of Human Enterprise, faithfully records all Recent Discoveries, and traces the Mental and Moral Development of the Race and the Gigantic Growth of Nations, their Governments, their Commerce and Manufactures, practically down to date.

5. The young man who desires to equip himself for one of the leading professions, or who wishes to gain the practical knowledge that will enable him to become a more successful business man, can not do better than to select an appropriate course of study in the World-Wide Encyclopedia, which puts a college education within reach of even the poorest, and is better, simpler and cheaper than the best correspondence school.

6. By purchasing the World-Wide Encyclopedia on the instalment plan, outlined below, you may enjoy the full benefits of the work while paying for it at the rate of LESS THAN FOUR CENTS A DAY.

TERMS OF OFFER: One Dollar Down Secures the Set

We have but one price: $15 on the instalment plan, or TEN PER CENT. DISCOUNT FOR CASH, making the terms as follows:

$13.50 if paid by cash accompanying order.

$14 if paid $2 down and $2 a month for 6 months.

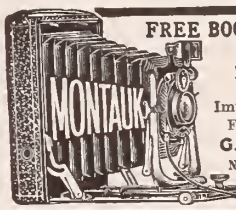
$15 if paid $1 down and $1 a month for 14 months.

Every Set is shipped neatly boxed, but we do not prepay freight or express charges.

Address: CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT., 92 Bible House, New York

DELICATE and DAINTY Summer Wash Fabrics must be handled carefully in the Wash.
¶ It's the Rubbing—not the Wearing—that shortens the Life of most Fabrics and the more Delicate the material—the greater the Harm that Rubbing does. The Wash-Board is the Summer Garment's worst enemy. Why use it?
¶ This Summer try washing those things you really care about in the "PEARLINE WAY"—Without Rubbing—hence without Wear and Tear to the Clothes. PEARLINE Loosens all the Dirt and Rinsing carries it away, leaving your Clothes Fresh—Clean and Sweet Smelling.

Pearline SAVES AT EVERY POINT MONEY-TIME-HEALTH-TOO



FREE BOOK ON DEVELOPERS
with every order of
ENSIGN FILMS
Hauff Developers,
Imperial Plates Sussex Paper
Free catalogue on request
G. GENNERT, Dept 20
NEW YORK, 24-26 E. 13th St.
CHICAGO, 20-24 State St.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

MAKES it possible for everyone to own their own light works. Better than electricity—less expensive. If you can afford kerosene lamps you can afford the "Best" light. Full guarantee. Over 200 styles. Catalog free. Agents wanted. Write.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

MAKES AND BURNS ITS OWN GAS

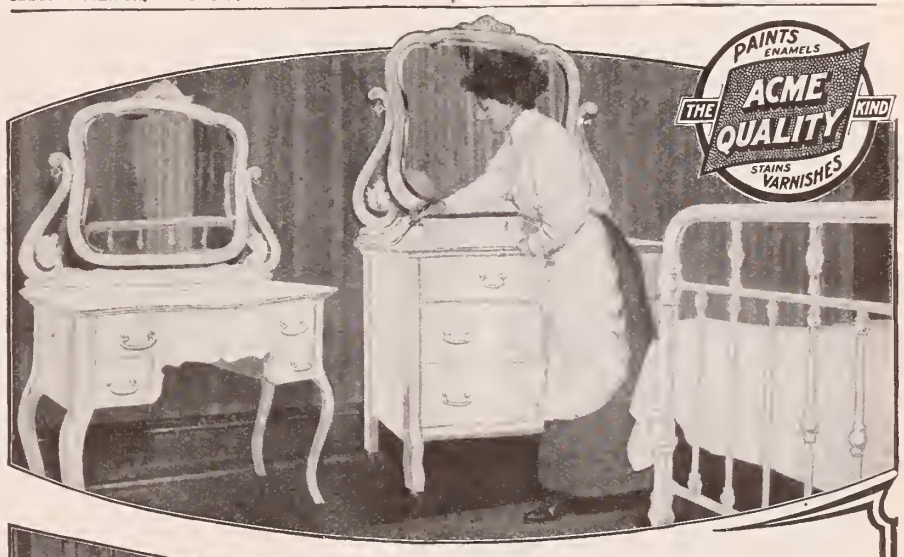
MONEY MAKING CONCRETE

The great durability and handsome appearance of concrete products is now recognized world wide. Big Money Making plants being established everywhere. It will pay you to investigate our proposition for a factory in your locality. We furnish machines, molds and everything needed. Write for particulars.
THE PETTYJOHN CO., 673 N. Sixth St., TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Don't Throw it Away

Does Your Granite Dish or Hot Water Bag Leak?
USE MENDETS
A PATENT PATCH

They mend all leaks in all utensils—tin, brass, copper, graniteware, hot water bags etc. No solder, cement or rivet. Any one can use them; fit any surface; two million in use. Send for sample pkg. 10c. Complete pkg. assorted sizes, 25c postpaid. Agents wanted.
Collette Mfg. Co., Box 622 Amsterdam, N. Y.



A Dainty Enameled Bedroom

WHAT could be prettier or more inviting than a dainty bedroom with walls, furniture and woodwork all enameled in white or some delicate tint to harmonize nicely with draperies and furnishings?

ACME QUALITY ENAMEL (Neal's)

gives that smooth, beautiful, genuine enamel surface so sanitary and easy to keep bright and attractive. Anyone can apply it by following the simple directions on the can.

ACME QUALITY VARNISH—Gives a durable, lustrous finish to door frames, window-sills, scuffed stairs, etc. Inexpensive and easily applied.
ACME QUALITY NEW LIFE—Cleans, polishes, and renews the finish of all kinds of wood, metal and polished surfaces.
ACME QUALITY FLOOR WAX—Ready for use. Gives a handsome, lustrous, satin-like surface easily cared for and very durable. Equally adapted for the wax finish so popular for furniture and woodwork.

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an ACME QUALITY Kind to fit the purpose.

The Acme Quality Textbook on Paints and Finishes tells you just what paint, enamel, stain or varnish to buy for any kind of work and the best way to apply it. Everyone should keep a copy handy. Gives you just the information you want, when you want it. Write for a complimentary copy.

ACME WHITE LEAD AND COLOR WORKS
Dept. O., Detroit, Mich.
IN DETROIT-Life is Worth Living

The Facts About 6% Irrigation Bonds

We are the largest sellers of Irrigation Bonds. And these bonds are, by far, our most popular securities with investors who know them.

Our experience with Reclamation Bonds covers 15 years. It covers the sale of many entire issues from 11 separate states. So we know the facts.

These bonds are farm liens of the most conservative class. Some are Municipal obligations. The interest rate — six per cent — is larger than one can now obtain on any large class of equal security. The bonds are issued in serial maturities, and in denominations as low as $100.

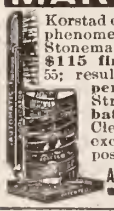
For the information of our customers — present and prospective — we have issued a book called "The World's Greatest Industry." It is interesting, unbiased, clear and illustrated. It tells the facts about this most attractive form of investment. Please write us a postal or send us this coupon for it.

Trowbridge & Niver Co.
(Established 1893)
Municipal and Corporation Bonds
First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO — 50 Congress Street BOSTON

Gentlemen:—Please send me your Bond Book, "The World's Greatest Industry."

Name _____
Town _____
State _____ 41

RISK 1 CENT MAKE $2200.00



Korstad did it in 2 weeks. Hundreds making phenomenal earnings the "Allen Way." Stoneman, $2,300 in 60 days---Langley, $115 first day.---Reese saw 60 people, sold 55; result, $320. WE START YOU---Experience don't matter---Credit given. Strange apparatus. Gives every home bathroom for $5. Energizes water. Cleanses almost automatically. New, exciting business. Risk 1 cent---a postal---for proof.

Allen Mfg. Co. 14 Allen Bld. Toledo, O.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC

A veritable edition de luxe among railroad pamphlets has been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System to proclaim amongst tourists the glories of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The brochure is beautifully printed and generally arranged in the artistic style of earlier days, when the ornamentation of a volume was regarded as an important incident to its presentation of reading matter. It is also very well written, and gives an interesting description of the two most interesting cities in Canada, with many illustrations from photographs. Sent free to any address. Apply to G. W. Vaux, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Picture-Puzzle Post Cards

Something Entirely New and very interesting. Assorted Designs. No. 1, Six mailed for 25 Cts. No. 2, each 10 Cts., or Three mailed for 25 Cts. MADISON ART COMPANY, Madison, Conn.

FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Rejected Opportunities*

"THERE is a tide," wrote our great poet, "which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

To find this flood-point—to seize the chance at the crucial moment—this is one of the great problems of life.

"I had stock in that company offered me for almost nothing ten years ago," says an unlucky man. "If I had bought it, I should now have been a millionaire; but I didn't see anything in it."

"I came near buying that farm for $2,000 a few years ago," said a teacher, who had saved her money to put into a farm. "I thought the price too high. Yesterday, that farm was sold for $8,000; but how was I to know that fashion was going to turn that way, and that many rich people would be seeking places near that farm?"

"Oh, if I had only gone to college when my father wished me to go!" groaned a man of fifty. "What a fool I was!"

"But you said you wouldn't study, and that you would run away," his sister reminded him.

"Oh, you all saw that I didn't understand. You ought to have made me go!"

But it was too late. The man's chance was long past before he awakened to his folly.

It is in youth that the opportunity for the formation of character comes. If the twig is not bent aright, the contingency is remote that the tree will incline as it should. William James has said that it is difficult to get a new idea into a man's mind after he is thirty years old.

"Youth," says Charles McKinley, "is the time when the great truths of the Christian religion are to be set before the growing mind in their most stimulating form. Thought is to be encouraged. The thinking of the fathers, however valid, will not answer for the youth; he must work out for himself his ideas and beliefs, and it should be real work." And again: "Here is the opportunity of the Christian teacher. Let the truths of the Gospel be actually taught, held in the focus of attention until they become an inalienable portion of the mental store, and their effect will duly appear in conduct and character."

Youth is the great opportunity. Seize it. Neglect no chance to mould yourself after the Christly model. You may not be called to give up your property, as was "the young man that went away sorrowful." It may not seem expedient to lay aside all your earthly wealth and become dependent upon the public; but you can dedicate it all to God's service, and use it to build up his kingdom.

One of our poets writes of the procession of the Days which "bring diadems and fagots in their hands," offering them to mortals. One had in the morning lofty hopes and great desires; but "I," he says,

> Forgot my morning wishes, hastily
> Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
> Turned and departed silent. I, too late,
> Under her solemn fillet saw the scorn.

To all of us comes "the Day," with its varied gifts. Let us choose wisely. That day will never visit us again.

Gipsy Smith, in his sermon on this great subject, speculates upon the final fate of the young ruler. "Did he go to heaven? Remember, Jesus Christ was there. This young man came to Jesus, but he went away when he was told what to do to get into the kingdom. He left heaven when he left Jesus. The man that refuses to take that course [obey the call of Jesus] goes out into the starless, hopeless, eternal night."

Is there some hard service, some surrender, which God is now requiring of you? If so, let not the sun go down until you have obeyed his call.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 20. TEXT: Mark 10 : 17-22.

The Hill Difficulty*

THE great Neo-Platonist Porphyry wrote, "Steep and craggy are the paths of the gods."

In Carl Hilty's beautiful book on "Happiness," he lays especial stress upon the value of work. It must be not only good hard work, but it must be for something worth while. A child may toil and sweat over a miniature canal, leading nowhere and for no purpose. A man should put his labor into something distinctly for the betterment of the world.

Professor Hilty calls attention to the strenuous nature of the fourth commandment, in a direction which is not always remembered. He says that thousands of pious people insist upon the observance of the clause, "on the seventh day thou shalt do no work," who never reflect that the first injunction of the commandment is: "Six days shalt thou labor."

The Hill Difficulty came to Pilgrim but once. To many of us it seems as though it occurred in most human experiences far oftener; and Pilgrim had the great advantage that he could see the "narrow way," and he had been told to keep to that. Alas, to us Pilgrims of the newer day the narrow way is not to be distinguished from many others, and often we scarcely know whither to turn our footsteps. He had a spring from which to refresh himself. Sometimes the hill rises suddenly before us, and, all unprepared, we are bidden to climb it.

But through all these trials we have a comfort in God's Book, as Christian had in his angel-given roll. One of the quaint old English writers once wrote, "Our troubles are but as the slivers and chips of the cross." Christ bore the full weight of the cross; we bear only trifles.

The poet writes:

> There is no gain except by loss,
> There is no life except by death.

Dr. Banks tells a touching story of a bright boy who was preparing for the ministry, and was half way through college when his hard-working father died, leaving the mother and three younger children unprovided for.

"I must go home," said the boy.

"No," said the president of the college, "we cannot let you. We will help you to pay your expenses."

"Ah," said the boy, "but there is my mother. There are the children. I must go home and run the farm for them."

"God says," the president reminded him, "that for his sake and the Gospel's a man must hate his father and his mother."

"Stop!" said the boy. "Did he not say to John when he was in agony on the cross, 'Behold thy mother'?"

He went back to the farm, worked hard and honestly, and helped his mother to rear the younger children.

Few of us have to climb such a Hill Difficulty as did that noble son, but God blessed him, and he ever felt that all was for the best.

When we climb this terrible hill, we need a word of cheer to speed us onward. Be sure to give it.

Charles Wagner tells of starting out in life with a heart swelling with homesickness, when he passed a poor Alsatian stone-breaker at work on the edge of a forest. He was humming a song, and, after a brief conversation with the sad-eyed young traveler, said: "Good-by, my boy; good courage and good luck." This simple word of a brave man raised the pilgrim's drooping spirits and he went forward with fresh courage.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 20. Pilgrim's Progress Series VI. The Hill Difficulty. TEXTS: Rom. 7 : 14-25; II. Cor. 6 :1-10.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 504, and write them for full information.

Armenia!

FROM far Armenia comes the cry:
"O send us succor or we die!"
Ye nations of the West, to-day
Who serve and love, who give and pray,
How long shall Moslem hate acclaim
Its records to the Christian name?
Shall women and small children lie
Wounded and slain, while all pass by?
And strong men bleed and vainly die
Beneath old Syria's blessed sky?

Accursed now of strife and slain,
How long, O God! can this remain?
Can nought be done and done at last
O'er all the horrors of the past
O'er all the bitterness to-day?
They burn and ravish, wound and slay.
The voices of the children cry
From reeking earth to shaming sky;
The puling infants, babes new-born,
The mothers stricken and forlorn,
The maid, the aged and the weak—
Can pen describe or language speak?

Woe, woe betide the Christian land
That dares to-day to stay its hand,
That stands aloof while thousands bleed—
How dread their terror, dire their need.

MARIE BATTERHAM LINDESAY.
Chattanooga, Tenn.

JUST ONE A DAY

How the Coffee Drinker Compromises His Health

Some people say: "Coffee don't hurt me," and then add: "Anyway, I only drink one cup a day."

If coffee really don't hurt why not drink more? There is but one answer and that is coffee does hurt them and they know it. When they drink it once a day they compromise with their enemy. There are people whom one cup of coffee a day will put in bed, if the habit be continued.

"Although warned by physicians to let coffee alone I have always been so fond of it that I continued to use it," confesses an Ohio lady. "I compromised with myself and drank just one cup every morning until about six weeks ago.

"All the time I was drinking coffee I had heart trouble that grew steadily worse and finally I had such alarming sensations in my head (sometimes causing me to fall down) that I at last took my doctor's advice and quit coffee and began to use Postum in its place.

"The results have been all that the doctor hoped, for I have not only lost my craving for coffee and enjoy my good Postum just as well, but my heart trouble has ceased and I have no more dizzy spells in my head. I feel better in every way and consider myself a very fortunate woman to have found the truth about Postum."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

6%

EVERY DOLLAR

deposited with this Company is amply secured by first mortgages on improved real estate. Our issued in amounts of $100 or more, run for two years and bear 6 per cent. interest. They are safe, convenient, profitable. On Savings Accounts, withdrawable on demand, we pay 5 per cent. interest.

Certificates of Deposit

Write to-day for the Booklet telling about this Company and its methods.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

DEAF 25 YEARS

CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

Something the World Greatly Needs

By John C. Havemeyer

A GREAT need of the world is simplicity. The modern tendency is away from it and toward complication. And it is manifested in every part of life and in every field of inquiry or study.

The dress of our first parents consisted of fig leaves. Compare this with modern apparel. It must be admitted that climate and other circumstances, especially if we make due allowance for healthy development and progress, require a change. But how far beyond our needs and good sense is the covering of our bodies to-day! Indeed, how absurd is a large part of modern dress, and when we think of this expenditure of time, money and thought, which is not to provide for our necessities, but is largely an ambition to outdo our neighbor and attract attention and commendation, how can any thoughtful, conscientious man or woman have other feeling than surprise and regret?

Our perverse nature leads us to practice the same folly in the character of the houses in which we live. There is so much unnecessary care and expenditure of money, to provide which there must be an appropriation of time and thought which diverts our minds and efforts from better things.

Our churches seem to be rapidly retrograding in the same direction. Are they not failing to adopt and illustrate the simplicity which was in Christ Jesus? God permitted, and even commanded, the building of the temple and the peculiar dress and ceremonies which accompanied and formed a part of the worship. These all pointed to and were emblematic of and prepared the way for the simple truth which Christ came to teach. He boasted no high lineage, wore no royal robes, did not live in a palace, had no uniformed attendants, instructed and associated with the poor and those who were supported by their daily labor. He practically abolished the priesthood, whom he characterized as hypocrites, who make clean the outside of the cup and the platter, but within are full of extortion and excess. Of the temple he made no account, but declared that one stone should not be left upon another. Neither he nor the apostles built fine churches. This was left to the Greeks and Romans and other idolaters. His fulfilment of the truths to which the Jewish types pointed was a heart-love and service of the God whom he declared to be a father, who had and manifested in his own coming into the world a father's love and interest. He required every disciple to be a light and to profess and proclaim the simple truth, of which he himself was the embodiment. But what are we doing in these times? Do we, like the Jews of old, lay stress upon the architecture and elaboration of our churches? One has only to look at the statistics of the different denominations, and among the signs of growth and prosperity we will find a report of the money value of the churches and other properties they own.

I am unable to understand why churches are consecrated any more than our houses in which we dwell. Our bodies are to be the temples of the living God, and our homes should be places of prayer, of worship and service. Paul's idea was quite different from that of modern times. He said: "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all (of everything) to the glory of God."

We send young men to colleges and theological seminaries to be prepared to preach. Christ required a different kind of preparation. He required a heart consecration; faith and love for God and man were the tests of fitness. He counted that a preparation of heart and not of intellect, and an experience of divine love, and not philosophy regarding it, were the great necessity. He did not put on a gown to address the multitude, nor did he suggest that the Lord's Prayer should be chanted. I think we err in assuming that a human ordination fits a young man for the ministry and carries with it a right of leadership and authority. For many years I have been pained to see the bad effects of this erroneous view. Rarely do we find a minister who realizes that men who have been studying the Bible and waiting upon God, perhaps before they were born, and who have an experience which can come only from long fighting the good fight of faith, should be constantly consulted and deferred to and their experience considered invaluable for their own successful work.

We often hear ministers spoken of, and hear them speak of each other, as eloquent, as though this were an important factor in Bible teaching. We never, however, hear Christ spoken of as eloquent, nor even Paul, with all his zeal and learning, in his preaching during missionary tours. It was the simple and satisfying truths they taught, joined to their love and interest, that attracted, convinced and converted, and not their elaborate thought and winsome expression.

Tolstoy is a remarkable illustration of the power of simplicity. While he may have gone beyond the limit of wise conservatism and may have approached fanaticism, he commands the respect of the world and is perhaps more widely known than any other man. May we not say that truth is always characterized by simplicity? When we wander from it we will most probably use language which will bear various interpretations.

God, Christ, sin, death, salvation, eternity and the Holy Spirit are, in a sense, simple facts, that no elaboration will make comprehensible, but will rather tend to obscurity. It is the repetition of these truths or facts that God makes the means of man's conviction and salvation.

Boys and Girls Wanted

DURING this month our Junior Department is offering Special Inducements to Beginners; that is, to every boy and girl who enrolls as one of our Junior Agents before the first of July. Is YOUR NAME already on our lists? If not, write us at once.

W. Cofer Light
Junior Agent at Pikeville, Ky.

School days are almost over for this season and during the summer vacation our Junior Agents will be given truly extraordinary opportunities to earn BIG REWARDS. This is the time to get a start. Don't let any other boy or girl in your town get ahead of you and secure all the best customers. Remember that "the early bird catches the worm." Don't hesitate to commence the work because you see stumbling-blocks ahead; every big success had a small beginning, and every one of our successful Junior Agents had to commence at the bottom rung of the ladder.

Make your plans now. You need no capital at the outset, for we furnish you with ten free copies as a starter. All that you need is a little Grit, with Energy and Perseverance; then, if you work in a whole-hearted way, you are bound to succeed. Write us to-day for details of our SPECIAL REWARDS FOR BEGINNERS. Address:

Christian Herald Junior Department,
92 Bible House, New York.

What Will You Give To Be Well

I CANNOT tell you how happy I am that I have been able to bring health and strength to 30,000 women in the past six years. Just think! this means a whole city. It is to my thorough study of anatomy, physiology and health principles, and to my 12 years' personal experience before I began my instructions by mail, that I attribute my marvelous success. It would do your heart good to read the reports from my pupils—and I have done all this by simply studying Nature's laws adapted to the correction of each individual difficulty. If vital organs or nerve centers are weak, I strengthen them so that each organ does its work.

To Have Good Figure, Vibrant Health, Rested Nerves?

I want to help every woman to be perfectly, gloriously well, with that sweet, personal loveliness which health and a wholesome, graceful body gives—a cultured, self-reliant woman with a definite purpose, full of the health and vivacity which makes you

A Better Wife
A Rested Mother
A Sweeter Sweetheart

Too Fleshy? You can easily remove the fat and it will stay removed. I have reduced 15,000 women.

One pupil writes me:

"Miss Cocroft, I have reduced 78 pounds and I look 15 years younger. I feel so well I want to shout! I never get out of breath now.

"When I began I was rheumatic and constipated, my heart was weak and my head dull, and oh dear, I am ashamed when I think how I used to look! I never dreamed it was all so easy. I thought I just had to be fat. I feel like stopping every fat woman I see and telling her of you."

Too Thin? I may need to strengthen your stomach, intestines and nerves first. A pupil who was thin, writes me:

"I just can't tell you how happy I am. I am so proud of my neck and arms! My busts are rounded out and I have gained 28 pounds; it has come just where I wanted it and I carry myself like another woman."

"My old dresses look stylish on me now. I have not been constipated since my second lesson and I had taken something for years. My liver seems to be all right and I haven't a bit of indigestion any more, for I sleep like a baby and my nerves are so rested. I feel so well all the time."

I bring each pupil to symmetrical proportions and I teach her to stand and to walk in an attitude which bespeaks culture and refinement. A good figure, gracefully carried, means more than a pretty face. Nature's rosy cheeks are more beautiful than paint or powder. I help you to

Arise to Your Best!

The day for drugging the system has passed. In the privacy of your own room, I strengthen the muscles and nerves of the vital organs, lungs and heart and start your blood to circulating as it did when you were a child. I teach you to breathe so that the blood is fully purified.

You Can Be Well Without Drugs

And the vital strength gained by a forceful circulation relieves you of such chronic ailments as

Constipation Dullness
Torpid Liver Irritability
Indigestion Nervousness
Rheumatism Sleeplessness
Weaknesses Weak Nerves
Catarrh

by strengthening whatever organs or nerves are weak.

I wish I could put sufficient emphasis into these words to make you realize that you do not need to be ill, but that you can be a buoyant, vivacious, attractive woman in return for just a few minutes' care each day in your own home.

Individual Instruction—I give each pupil the individual, confidential treatment which her case demands. My information and advice are entirely free.

A CORSET IS NOT NEEDED FOR A GOOD FIGURE

Write me today telling me your faults in health or figure, and I will cheerfully tell you whether I can help you. I never treat a patient I cannot help. If I cannot help you I will refer you to the help you need.

Send me 10 cents for instructive booklet showing how to stand and walk correctly.

SUSANNA COCROFT, Dept. 18, 57 Washington Street, CHICAGO

Author of "Growth in Silence," "Character as Expressed in the Body," Etc.

Miss Cocroft's name stands for progress in the scientific care of the health and figure of woman.

"3-in-One" is a household oil, lubricating, cleaning, polishing and preventing rust—

Try for oiling sewing machines, clocks, locks, guns, bicycles, etc. Try for cleaning and polishing any furniture; fine pianos, old tables, etc. Try for preventing rust on any metal surface. Trial bottle sent free.

3-in-One Oil Co., 54 Broadway, New York

FREE!

Two Sacred Resurrection Plants
(THE ROSE OF JERICHO.)

These rare and curious plants grow and stay green by placing them in water. When taken out of water they dry and curl up and go to sleep. They will keep in this state for years. Simply place the whole plant into water; it will open up and start to grow in about twenty minutes. We will send Farm News, the biggest little paper in the world for the farm home, on trial 3 months for 6 cents. Send 4 cents to prepay postage and expense on the plants, and 6 cents for trial subscription to Farm News, only 10 cents in all.

Either offer separately if desired.

FARM NEWS, 19 Washington St., Springfield, Ohio

14,000 CASES OF SPINAL CURVATURE

Helped and corrected by the Sheldon Spinal Appliance is the proof of the value of this marvelous invention. Comfortable to wear, can be taken off and put on like a coat, weighs only a few ounces; adapted for either sex and all ages from six months to eighty years and over. Permits of full respiration and muscular action. There is no case of spinal curvature or trouble this appliance and our treatment will not benefit.

30 days' Free Trial.

Write us a description of your trouble and we will tell you how to correct it. For catalog and full particulars address,

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
207-6th St., Jamestown, N.Y.

NEWTON'S Heave, Cough, Distemper and Indigestion Remedy. A veterinary Remedy for wind, throat and stomach troubles. $1.00 per can, of dealers, or expressprepaid. Send for booklet.

The Newton Remedy Co.
Toledo, Ohio

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

IT ONLY COSTS one cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1909 model bicycles.

FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Art Catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.

RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles.

We Sell cheaper than any other factory.

Tires, Coaster-Brakes, single wheels, parts, repairs and sundries at half usual prices.

Do Not Wait; write today for our special offer.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. W-71, CHICAGO

Occupations for Women

By FRANCES E. WILLARD

500 pages; illustrated. Regular Price, $3.75.

SPECIAL PRICE, $1.00, all Charges Prepaid.

P. B. Bromfield & Co., Bible House, New York

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid.

DR. LYONS, 180 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

"They Wanted Jell-O"

Do you remember the dreadful disappointment it used to be in the old days at home when mother brought on for dessert some baked apples or pie-plant pie, or something else that was "common," and you wanted shortcake or pudding?

Now the little folks want

JELL-O

It is not always best to give the children what they want, but no mistake can be made in giving them JELL-O for dessert. It is good for them.

Every child loves JELL-O, which is so delicious and refreshing, so full of nutriment, so pure and wholesome, so economical and so easily prepared, that there is no reason why the little tots or anybody else should be disappointed in dessert. The whole family like it just as well as the youngest member.

A JELL-O dessert costs ten cents and can be made in a minute. It sounds almost too good to be true, but it isn't.

All grocers sell it in seven flavors.

Illustrated Recipe Book free on request.

The Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N.Y., and Bridgeburg, Can.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

NEW YORK, June 16, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 24. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

From a Famous Painting by Gerome

See Page 523

Feeding the Sacred Ibis in an Egyptian Temple

The Prudential

Newest Monthly Income Policy

Provides a Cash Payment at Death of Insured and then

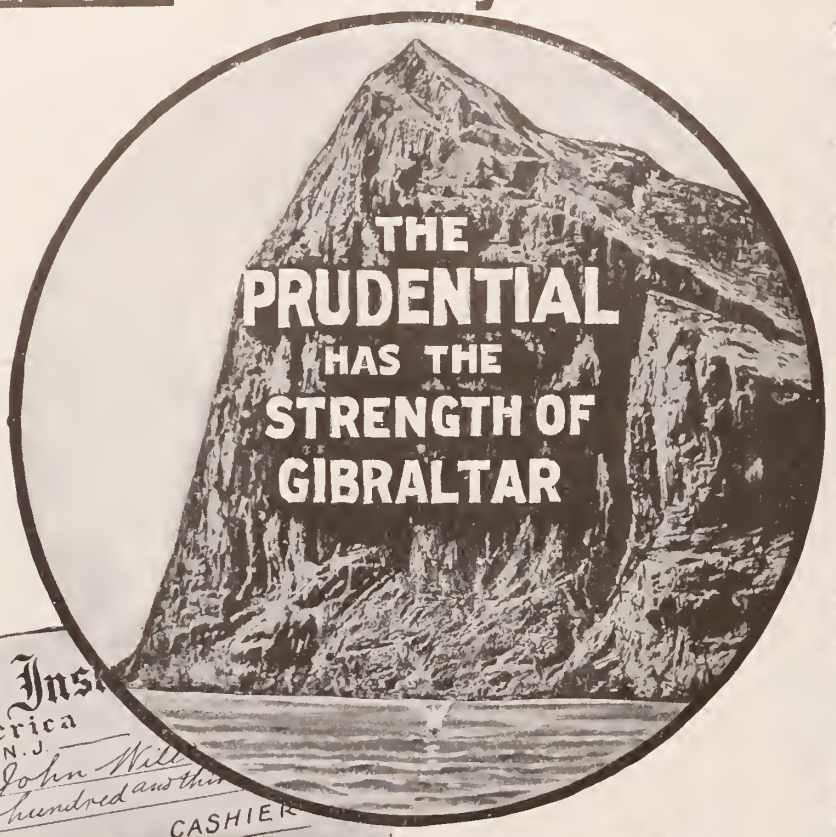
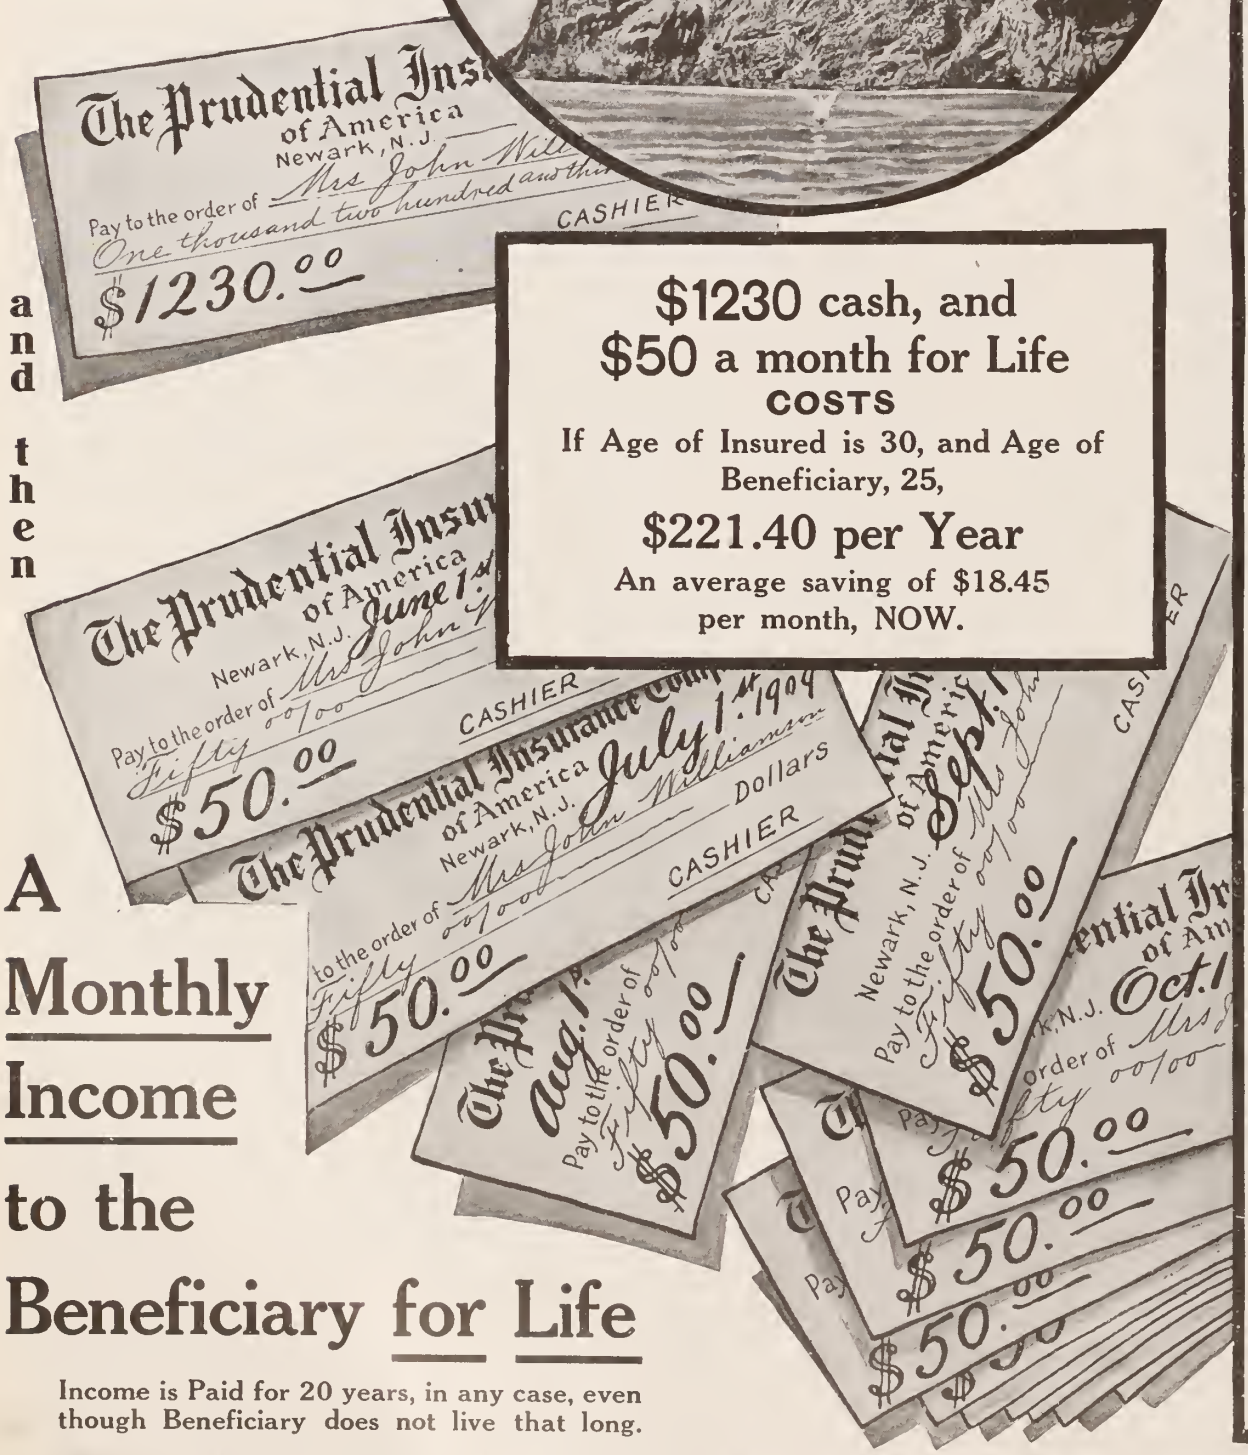
A Monthly Income to the Beneficiary for Life





$1230 cash, and $50 a month for Life COSTS

If Age of Insured is 30, and Age of Beneficiary, 25,

$221.40 per Year

An average saving of $18.45 per month, NOW.

Income is Paid for 20 years, in any case, even though Beneficiary does not live that long.

The Greatest Life Insurance Protection ever Offered to the Family.

The one kind of Life Insurance Policy of most practical value to women and Children.

It is the policy your wife would like, because it gives her a sure Monthly Income for Life.

This is the Safest Way to leave your life insurance. The Monthly Income cannot be encumbered or depreciated. The principal cannot be lost. All worry about safe investment is eliminated.

The Income can be arranged for in Multiples of $10 per month, up.

Write for Particulars and Cost for You.

Give both your age and age of beneficiary.

Address Dept. 70.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President

Incorporated as a Stock Company by the State of New Jersey

Home Office, NEWARK, N.J.

NEW YORK, JUNE 16, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Fanatical Moslem Pilgrims on the March

Missionary Stephen V. Trowbridge

Moslems of the Type Who Attacked the Armenians

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MASSACRES

UP to the present time, the real story of the awful massacres in Asiatic Turkey, which marked the close of the reign of that monster of misrule, Abdul Hamid, has not been told. To-day THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is privileged to be the first publication to lift the curtain on the tragedy and to reveal what has only been partially hinted at in letters and cable dispatches. In the letters which are printed below, from leading American missionaries in Tarsus, Adana and other cities, we have the simple truth, tersely told, about the great reactionary conspiracy which had its origin in Constantinople, in the privy council of the wicked old Sultan. Fifteen of the leaders of the massacres in Adana have already been executed by order of the new Turkish government, and others are now undergoing trial for participation in the same crimes. Order is gradually being restored; but the conditions described by the missionaries are such as to call for the sympathy and practical assistance of the civilized world for many months to come.

These letters were written by the missionaries, largely in diary form, during those terrible days of massacre and suffering. Missionary Stephen Van R. Trowbridge, writing from Adana, April 15, gives the accurate facts concerning the shooting of missionaries B. Miner Rogers and Henry Maurer. Fighting had begun the previous day between the Moslems and Armenians, with many casualties on both sides, and at night incendiaries began their work. During the long hours of darkness, there were frequent fusillades from roofs, parapets, minarets and windows. The sky was lighted up by the flames of burning houses, which were reflected far out into the country. At daylight, it became evident that the Girls' School of the Adana Mission was in danger from fire. Flames from other buildings began to lick the windows and doors, and the missionaries carried pails of water and splashed the walls. It was while they were at this work that Maurer and Rogers were shot down by Moslem looters. They only lived a few minutes after the shooting. The bodies of the slain missionaries lay where they fell in the street until the British Vice-Consul rode up, with a squad of Turkish soldiers, and brought them into the mission school building. "They died," Mr. Trowbridge adds, "at their post as good soldiers of Jesus Christ."

Next day, April 19, Mr. Trowbridge, still writing from Adana, says: "The Armenians fought desperately in self-defense. . . . The Adana government acquiesced, if not actually participated, in the cruel and indiscriminating assault by fire and rifle and sword upon the whole Armenian community, including our Protestant congregation, which as a body had been wholly loyal to the government. . . . Horsemen (Turkish troops) were coming in at intervals from the outlying towns and villages to report to the military authorities as follows: 'Hamidieh is finished,' 'Osmanieh is finished,' meaning that the Armenian population there had been put to the sword." The Moslem minarets in Adana were occupied early on the first day of the massacres by regular Turkish troops, who kept up a regular fusillade of the Armenian quarters with their death-dealing Mauser and Martini rifles. No protection was furnished to the mission from the Turkish mob, which was now parading the streets. When the fanatical crowd reached the Mission Girls' School the leaders were demanding the surrender of all Armenian men, promising safety to the women and children; but it was too evident that a general massacre was intended.

Meanwhile, all the shops in the market-place had been looted. The mob continued to grow, and its members were brandishing their weapons. A large wooden house adjoining the Girls' School was in flames, and the missionaries had to expose themselves to deadly peril to save the school. The butchery in other sections of the city went on for four days. One party of Armenians, men and women (Mr. Trowbridge writes), had been promised safe conduct to the railway station. On the way the Turks cried out, "Let the men stand apart from the women and children." They then shot down the men in cold blood. Other Armenians, begging refuge, were taken to the market-place and slain. Some Moslems brought in Christian prisoners from nearby villages, and were reprimanded sharply with the words: "Why did you not finish these giaours (unbelievers) in the villages? Why have you brought them here?" Fifty Christian villagers were thrown into the river above Adana and drowned. One thousand refugees were housed in the Protestant church. They had lost everything. Little babies were born in that helpless crowd, amid all the dirt and squalor and the suffering.

View of a Section of the Refugee Camp Outside of Adana

The massacres all began on the same day, Wednesday, April 14 (writes Rev. Dr. Christie, of Tarsus), showing, even were there no other proof, that they were inaugurated by telegraphic orders from Adana, probably from Constantinople. "The only places where the Christians took up arms for a short time to defend themselves were Adana, Hadjin, and near the battlefield of Issus. The statement by

Continued on next page

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MASSACRES

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

Turkish officials that there was an Armenian insurrection, that the Turks were massacred and houses burned by the Christians, are simply lies."

On April 21, Mr. Trowbridge wrote: "In a few days the primary need will be bread." He estimated the number of destitute at 15,000, "including practically the whole Armenian population of Adana and some Greeks and Syrians." In Missionary Chambers' house there were 700 refugees. News had come of the savage butchery of Christians in many of the outlying villages—the men shot down, the women and little children carried off.

Here the writer makes it very clear that at no time did the missionaries allow any armed Armenians within the mission buildings, the schools adjoining or the professors' houses. Every weapon was confiscated at the doorway. During the four days of carnage not a shot was fired from these buildings by an American or by an Armenian. The walls of the Girls' School were perforated by bullets in fourteen different places. "The vali (governor) pretends," Mr. Trowbridge writes, "that the Armenians revolted. But the Turks, even the soldiers and officers, did not discriminate, but cut down or drowned or burned, without mercy, all Armenians who fell into their pathway. The women in our emergency hospitals are wounded, 'as if they had been on a battlefield,' Miss Wallis (the nurse) says. Some screamed when their husbands were killed, and the Turks shot them for screaming. In many houses, the mutilated bodies of women and children are being found, and many Armenian girls have been carried off as booty." Some few good Turks were found, however, who openly disapproved of the slaughter. One of these, Osman Bey, humanely opened his house to the poor refugees.

ADANA, April 21. "Our hearts are sad indeed tonight! We have received news of the massacre of twenty preachers and pastors of our Cilicia Union, who were on their journey to annual meeting. Professor Levonian was also shot to death in Osmanieh, where, with eight of the pastors, he tried to escape from the burning church, which had been set on fire by the Turkish mob, and all those pastors—the chosen leaders of our field work and our dearest friends—perished! Twenty of our churches are now orphans! We must have good surgeons and trained nurses—not one or two, but a score. There are already over 300 wounded on our lists, and an average of four wounds to each sufferer. The best doctors here have lost all their instruments and supplies in the plundered homes and shops."

ADANA, April 22. "The awful extent of the destruction here in Adana, and in all this region, grows more apparent every day. One is almost stunned by the misery around us. One hundred and forty families are now living in the Chambers house, crowding the yard, the rooms, the balconies and stairways. Large crowds fill the two Gregorian churches, the Catholic church, the two Jesuit schools, a large Gregorian school building and two factories. Most of these are in utter desolation—homes, business, clothing, household furniture all gone. Many, I may say most, have only the clothes on their backs. Many with most horrible wounds, and not even a mat to lie on except as we find something for them. A woman came in this afternoon from a village ten miles distant, every member of whose family had been killed—husband, father-in-law, mother-in-law and three children, the youngest of these being a baby two days old. She herself was badly shot, and the wound had remained without care for five days. In Hamidieh, the women took refuge in the Gregorian church, which was set on fire, and they perished in the flames."

ADANA, April 23. "It is impossible to say how many have been killed, but I would think that 25,000 to 30,000 may be stated as a probability for the province. The authenticated stories that come in show that the tornado was fierce and bloody and fiery. There are a great many Armenians remaining, but they form a prostrate, penniless, perishing nation. I think that 15,000 hungry people in this city is not a large estimate, with numbers increasing day by day by refugees from the district. For these 15,000 people, if we issue 100 drams of flour a day, we will need $500 a day. Taking that as a basis of calculation, you will see that $1,000 a day is a small estimate. It is barley harvest, and the Christians can't reap their fields."

TARSUS, April 24. Dr. Christie, president of St. Paul's Institute, Tarsus, writes: "I doubt if ever a massacre equal in atrocities to this has been known in history. . . . Among the wounded there are multitudes of them (women and children); we hear of a pastor and his family, seven people, burned together in their house; hosts of younger women have been assaulted and carried away to harems, and their names changed to Moslem ones. Christian villages like Osmanieh, Baghche, Hamidieh, Kara Tash, Kristian Keoy, Kozolook have been literally wiped out; of five or six hundred people in each, only eighty or so are left, nearly all women and children. It is the same in the cliftliks (farms); there are hundreds of these on this wide and fertile plain; in every one that we have heard of in the neighborhood of Tarsus or Adana there has been unsparing slaughter of the Christian workers, even the Greeks and Syrians dying as martyrs with the Armenians.

Armenian Quarter, Adana, Wrecked by the Turks

"The annual meeting was to have been held in Adana, so the pastors and delegates of the churches were on the roads to the north and the east of that city when the trouble began. We have now the names of twenty-seven killed, with the particulars of their deaths. Twenty-two churches are left pastorless; it is a fearful blow! Our two missionaries, Maurer and Rogers, bring the number up to twenty-nine. Here are the names:

"Henry Maurer of Hadjin, Daniel M. Rogers of Tarsus and Hadjin, Professor Sarkis Levonian of Aintab, Rev. Hagop Sinijian of Aintab, Rev. Setrak Ekmekjian of Oorfa, Rev. George Shammas of Oorfa, Rev. Zechariah Bedrossian of Garmoosh, Rev. Giragos Jamgotchian of Severek, Rev. Nerses Kooyoomjian of Adiaman, Rev. Nazaret Heshenian of Marash; delegates Nooskhajian, Hagop Ashjian and Salatian of Marash; Rev. Hagop Koondakjian of Hasan Beyli, Rev. Sdepan Hohannesian of Kharné, Preacher Takvoor of Baghche; also the following acting pastors: Keupelian of Osmanieh, Boyajian of Shar, Seferian of Yeré Bakan, Topalian of Feké, Malian of Sis, Kayayan of Elbistan, Siyahian of Kars, Markar of Hamidieh, Albarian of Gehen, Kharsian of Cucucus (to which Chrysostom was banished), Soghemonian of Hadjin, Rev. Istilion of Hadjin, and Rev. Kevork Kassarjian of Fundajak. Thirteen ordained men, eleven preachers (acting pastors) not ordained, five delegates.

"Some of the soldiers afterward told us they had orders to kill the Armenians. We saw them firing from minarets and in the street at Christian houses. They persuaded nearly a hundred Armenians at one place to put themselves under their protection; they took them along the street to an open place, then ordered the women to stand apart from the men and shot down every one of the latter. Some of the women were killed, and many wounded, while trying to protect their loved ones.

"In the Keupeli Khan were gathered over sixty men from Hadjin. The soldiers made them come out one by one, and killed them, the bystanders clapping their hands as each one fell. In this way also our martyred pastors were slain at Osmanieh. If no retribution is dealt out for all this—if no sufficient security is given that things like these shall never again occur—then every Christian ought to get out of this country just as soon as possible. There will be many a death from famine unless my funds are increased. Our yard looks like the prison-pen at Andersonville. When the captain of the French ship came in with his officers and saw the crowd, he held up his hands and said, 'My God! This is terrible! Where do all these people sleep?' 'The men wander around all night, captain,' we replied, 'trying to keep warm, while the women and children sleep, many of them without beds, in the rooms belonging to the school. In the daytime the men have their turn, but most of them simply curl up somewhere in the sunshine, outside.' Five of our boys, home for the Easter vacation, have been killed. All the teachers and students have proved themselves capable Christian men during these troubles."

ADANA, April 24. "Word has come that the entire Armenian quarter of Tarsus has been burned. Eight hundred houses destroyed! Misses Elizabeth and Mary Webb have purchased cloth, so that all the schoolgirls and teachers are busy making up clothing and bandages for the sufferers. The calmness and faith of these two American women in the midst of threatening perils has had a wonderful effect upon the schoolgirls. There has been no screaming and no panic even when rifle bullets tore into the building and the glare of the conflagrations made the night lurid. Miss Wallis has charge of one of the emergency hospitals and Miss Elizabeth is superintending another. The Sisters of Charity are serving in the other two. Mr. W. Nesbitt Chambers is recognized by every one as the head of the relief work. The two gifts already received for relief have been exhausted and thousands of the poor are suffering from hunger. We earnestly pray that large funds may soon arrive."

A shocking incident of the persecution is related in a letter from Sis, dated April 28:

"Seven Protestant Armenian preachers, two delegates and three Armenian ladies, while on their way to the yearly Synodical meeting, coming from Hadjin for Adana, passed through Sis on the morning of April 15. Shortly after their departure, word reached Sis of the massacre at Adana the previous day, and a horseman was sent to call the party back, but he reached them only when they had arrived at the village called Sagh Gechid. Here they went to the house of the governor (Mudir) and of another principal man called Haji Bey, who promised to protect them. On the following day, however, these treacherous men and other Moslems fell upon the party from Hadjin and Sis, and upon seventy-eight other Armenians found in the place, in all ninety-two. Stripping them of all valuables, they led them out one by one and butchered them like sheep, adding abuse to death in the case of the poor women. The wife of the governor, looking from the balcony of her house, smiled upon those who perpetrated these dreadful deeds! The bodies of the victims were carted away and thrown over a precipice. The wife of the pastor of the Tekke church, however, and one of the travelers from Hadjin, in spite of wounds, recovered their senses in the night and, crawling through the fields and woods, reached Sis next day. Thus there are two living witnesses of the massacre. For treachery, savagery and bestiality this massacre passes belief."

Another missionary, writing under date of April 28, supplies some later details of the massacre of Armenian pastors. He says:

"The pastors and delegates, coming from Marash, reached Osmanieh, one day from Adana, on the evening of April 14. The next morning they went to the pastor's house, and soon soldiers came and took away the women and girls by force. The preachers and delegates, seeing that fire had been set to the parsonage, tried to flee, but were all shot dead. With one exception, all were married and had children. The destruction of life and property throughout that region is dreadful in the extreme. In Osmanieh, Baghche, Hasan Beyli, Kuruk Han, Antioch and other places, the Turks have killed all the Armenian men and boys they could catch, have divided up the women and girls among themselves and have burned their houses, gardens and vineyards. Had the mutiny in Constantinople succeeded, the wave of destruction might have swept all over Asia Minor. It seems like the last stroke of the dying monster."

In a letter from Adana, on May 1, Missionary Trowbridge reports that contagious disease has broken out in the refugee camp. Two hundred tents were made by the mission ladies and native girls, and the entire body of refugees was moved to the open country. Christian women and children still kept coming in from the villages where the men had all been killed. In one town—Kczolook—of 400 Christians only 86 escaped, all old women and children. The young women were seized by the Turks. In Missiz, twelve miles from Adana, only a few women were left alive.

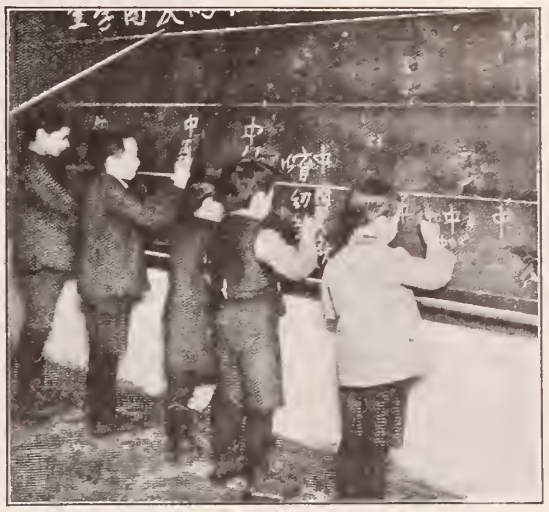
. . .

If any further plea in behalf of the wounded, destitute and starving people of Adana and Tarsus were needed, in confirmation of the foregoing from the missionaries, it is found in the message from our State Department in Washington, which appears on the editorial page of this issue. Readers are urged to send in their contributions to the Relief Fund as quickly as possible, that precious lives may be saved. Address THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Every contribution will be acknowledged in these pages.

A UNIQUE CHINESE SCHOOL

AMONG the hardest worked schoolboys in New York are the American-born Chinese lads who attend the Chinese school in Mott Street. The sight of them at work is also about as odd a scene as you will find in any New York school. This school is on the fourth floor of one of the largest buildings in Chinatown. The pupils are the small but aristocratic set of children belonging to the families of the leading Chinese residents, mostly merchants. The latter are almost all of them members of the Reform Society, and they send their boys to the school for instruction in their own language to prevent them from losing touch with Chinese affairs. The boys are hard worked, because they have to attend two schools instead of one, like the average American boy. They all go to the regular public schools, sit beside their Caucasian fellow-pupils, read, write, spell and cipher in English. Then, in addition, they attend their native Chinese school and are kept busy until 8 P.M. in raveling out their complicated language.

A Class in Writing



At Work on the Blackboard

A Chinese Cadet

At 4 P.M. the Chinese lads assemble in their classroom with their kits, books and writing materials. Each has half a dozen or more writing brushes a foot long and ink pads. In their books the boys trace and write with their broad ink brushes the Chinese characters and signs.

During a recess, lasting from 5:30 to 6:30, the boys living near by go to their homes for supper, while those living at a distance eat in the Chinese restaurant below. Starting again at 6:30 their teacher requires each of them to read his list of written characters and sees that they have been correctly written and that the character is also understood.

To write Chinese a boy is required to memorize 2,000 signs. Knowledge of at least 4,000 is necessary to read books understandingly. To memorize 1,000 characters is a hard task, to master 2,000 is considered drudgery, and to know the whole 4,000 is almost impossible to any except life-long students.

The number of characters in use in Chinese at the present day is said to be about 7,000 and there are 20,000 or 30,000 more obsolete words which are found in the Chinese encyclopedias.

In Chinese, the written signs do not usually represent the sound of the words. Furthermore, the pronunciation differs in different parts of China. A Chinese reading aloud a public notice or proclamation can be hardly understood by his hearers if they do not see the accompanying characters. It must be read by the eye to be sure of the meaning. Further, it is stated that a man from a different province would read it aloud quite differently, and even then none could be sure of the meaning by hearing alone unless it were couched in the idiom of the district. This is usually not done, as the common tongue of the people is not used for literary purposes. A Chinese student has stated that in Chinese the written signs do not usually represent the sounds, but each represents a rough drawing of the actual thing or idea spoken about. For instance, we say tree, and write the sound, t, r, ee, but with the Chinaman the sound for tree is, say, Shu (shoo), but he does not write any sounds to show how it is pronounced. He draws a picture of a tree, with root, stem and branches, which is pronounced Shu in some parts, though it may be quite different in another district. A man is indicated by drawing his two legs. A good working knowledge requires a study of from five to ten years. One becomes skilful in it only after twenty years of hard work. With a phonetic system and a good method of arranging the common idioms of daily life expert educators say that Americans should be able to speak Chinese fairly well in a year or less. The bright-eyed and alert Chinese boys keep abreast with and often surpass the American pupils in their lessons.

Chinese students are coming to this country in larger numbers than ever before, the act of exclusion, which is intended to apply to Chinese labor, being modified to a certain extent in their favor.

This year two Chinese cadets will be graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, on June 4. They will return to their own country and help to reorganize the Chinese army, which has been developing such surprising efficiency, but which feels the need of more trained officers.

The West Point course is a severe strain on our most intelligent and alert American young men, and these Chinese cadets deserve much credit for the record they have made, being handicapped by doing their work in what is to them a difficult foreign tongue. Although really the guests of the government, they received no favors and had to pass all examinations required of the others.

LILLIAN E. ZEH.

ENGLAND'S ECCLESIASTICAL STORM

*By WILLIAM DURBAN

BY far the most exciting religious incident of the year in England is the dispute between two of the leading popular dignitaries in the great State Church. Dr. Charles Gore, Bishop of Birmingham (the "capital of the Midlands"), is more constantly before the public than any other prelate, for his irrepressible interest in all matters of highest importance impels him constantly to deliver some impressive dictum from pulpit or platform. Canon Henson belongs to precisely the same ecclesiastical school—the Broad Church—but he is a much more pronounced Liberal. These two eminent clergymen are both loved by the common people, and are attentively listened to by all classes. Canon Henson is the rector of the famous St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, which is an annex of Westminster Abbey, and seems structurally to form a portion of that venerable pile.

The Rev. Herbert Hensley Henson, B.D., is one of London's favorite preachers, and he is listened to by a throng filling his great church twice each Sunday. His printed sermons are widely read, and he is more admired than any other clergyman of the Established Church because of his habit of affectionately fraternizing with Free Churchmen and on account of his frequently reiterated and enthusiastic pleas for reunion and co-operation with Nonconformists. He is strenuous in his opposition to the dreamers who advocate reunion with the Roman and Greek communions. He is a consistent Anglican, but holds out the right hand of fellowship to Nonconformists on every available opportunity. Thus he is the most active leader of the Liberal clergy. But these tendencies have brought him into violent collision with certain clerical sticklers for rigid Anglican exclusiveness.

As by the time these lines appear Canon Henson will have landed in America, where he is to deliver a course of lectures at Yale, it may interest American readers to review in brief the situation created. It is a situation which is likely to produce serious results in England. One of the most prominent leaders of the English Nonconformist ministry, the Rev. J. H. Jowett, has, for about fourteen years, been the minister of the chief Congregationalist church in Birmingham. He is in request all over the land as a preacher on special occasions. One of the agencies connected with his church is the Digbeth Institute, a very important social and evangelical mission centre. When this institute recently celebrated its anniversary, Mr. Jowett invited Canon Henson to come from London to conduct the service and to preach.

Rev. Canon Henson

Bishop Gore

Not long since they jointly issued a circular letter on spiritual matters, which met with wide approval in religious circles and was welcomed as indicating the decided growth of the spirit of Christian unity. But the Rev. W. H. Cariss, the vicar of the small parish of St. Gabriel, in a corner of Birmingham, within the limits of which the Digbeth Institute is situated, thought himself aggrieved by this "open pulpit" proposal and by what he termed the intrusion of another clergyman into his parish. Then followed a long correspondence in which participated Mr. Jowett, Mr. Cariss, Bishop Gore and Canon Henson, with the result that the Bishop, though he frankly wrote to Canon Henson that he felt the affair a "great bore," said he felt himself bound by ecclesiastical law to inhibit Canon Henson from accepting the invitation of Mr. Jowett.

The Canon rebelled against the Bishop's injunction, declaring that he should preach at Digbeth, for he did not agree that the law applied to such a case, and moreover he reminded the Bishop how he had himself addressed a great Wesleyan meeting. Canon Henson accordingly fulfilled his engagement, preaching to a large congregation at Digbeth on March 31, taking the "Christian Life" as his topic, but making no reference to the inhibition. On the same day the Bishop wrote to the Birmingham papers, saying that he did not wish to raise the question of the right of clergymen of the Church of England to preach at Nonconformist gatherings or in Nonconformist chapels under certain circumstances, as for instance in their own parishes or where the incumbent was agreeable. "But I do maintain," said the Bishop, "the principle that a clergyman of the Church of England must not preach publicly in any kind of building in another clergyman's parish against his protest."

Thus a storm has been raised in religious circles which may subside for a time, but is certain ere long to burst forth again with increasing violence. It is the opinion of very many thoughtful observers that the inevitable disestablishment struggle will, by such incidents, be precipitated.

* European editor of the Homiletic Review and of the Christian Monthly.

THE

American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. W. JASPER HOWELL*

The Power of an Endless Life

TEXT — Hebrews 7: 16

"The Power of an Endless Life"

THE word "life" occurs in the Bible more than four hundred times. The Bible is the message of life. Genesis speaks of the "tree of life" in the Garden of Eden. The psalmist David speaks of the "path of life." Salvation is spoken of as the "water of life," and the Gospel as the "word of life." Jesus the Lord was called the "Prince of Life." The Bible is the Book of Salvation. Thus the story continues until the writer of Revelation speaks of the "river of life," the "tree of life" and the "crown of life." Ere he ceases to write, the seer of Patmos turns the eye from earth, man's transitory abode, to heaven, his abiding home, still speaking concerning life—the life of the soul. Yonder in heaven is kept the "Lamb's Book of Life," in which, I trust, our names even now are recorded by Him who loved us and gave himself for us.

There is change and decay in the most enduring structures that men build. The cathedral in Cologne was 632 years in building. The great cathedral in Milan was 419 years in building. But we know that these are not permanent buildings. The architecture of man, at the touch of the tooth of time, shall crumble and fall. Hundred-gated Thebes is now marked by the lonely ruins of Karnak on the banks of the Nile. Scriptural instruction lifts our eyes towards celestial architecture—"A house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." That building of spiritual character and personality shall abide. Our home is not here, but there. How few of the productions of men abide! A noble life is man's only enduring building. This earthly life is brief and like an inn where passing travelers spend but a transient night. The pages of history tell of the passing of all material things. Forms of government change, but liberty survives. Material things and the institutions of men perish, but principles, the soul of institutions, never die. Carthage and ancient Rome lie in the speechless dust. Archæology is another voice, a voice from the tomb. We have uncovered the "buried cities" of the past which, bridging the chasm of the centuries, stand as mute monuments of ruin and decay. Fame is transient. Many struggled for the honor of becoming members of the Roman Senate, but the names of few senators found a place in history. Fame is only a finger mark in the sand. Geology proclaims the ceaseless transformation of the earth in surface and structure. The fleeting scenes of human life are like the dissolving and changing views of the kaleidoscope. Earthly forms do not endure.

The Wonder of Living

James Freeman Clark said: "What a wonderful thing it is that we should be alive! If we live millions of years, nothing could happen to us that would be more wonderful than this, that we have begun to be, that we are born into this great universe, limitless in extent and duration and filled with the presence of the divine power, wisdom and love. We have been created by a divine fore-knowledge and purpose, to be living souls, capable of knowledge, love, action, goodness and joy. We have been placed on this earth which is itself one of the many mansions of our Father's house, where we are permitted to grow up into that which He designs us to become. This entrance into the universe is such an amazing event, that it might easily overwhelm us with its joyous wonder. We are so softly cradled into being that we do not feel the enormous change. But, to make the most of life, we must see this wonder of existence. We must feel a great unspeakable gift was bestowed on each of us in that we are now alive." This earth is only a garden of growing plants. The resurrection will transplant living souls from this nursery into that vineyard.

The universal desire of man's heart is for immortality. Men have always hoped for, though dimly conceived, and believed in an after life. Immortality has been the hunger and the hope of all the ages. Socrates indulged this hope, yet he lived centuries before Jesus and the New Testament Gospels. The nations that have never known the Bible have nevertheless believed in a life beyond the grave. Such a belief is not created by the teachings of Scripture only, because this belief is as universal as humanity itself.

* Pastor First Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga.

Jesus in his high priestly prayer exclaimed this joyous discovery: "Father, this is life eternal, that men may know in a spiritual friendship thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Jesus defined eternal life as a knowledge concerning God through himself, and the quality of that life was a spiritual friendship with God. Humanity was ready to welcome this teaching. Jesus brought life and immortality to light in the Gospel. The New Testament glows with the thought of immortality. No discoverer ever announced such endless benefaction for his fellow men. The desire of every heart is for an endless life, a perennial springtime. Human nature recoils against annihilation. Youth rightfully loves and clings to this life, unwilling to surrender it; but age gladly relinquishes its grasp upon this life, as it no longer satisfies. When gates stand ajar and we have glimpses into that better country, we too will prefer to be absent from the body and present with the Lord.

Man's Aspirations

We are only tenting here at best. We are hungering and seeking for a life that endures. That hunger is "race-wide, life-deep and time-long." When a spiritual mood comes to the mind, there is a longing that it may become permanent in character. Men greatly err in striving in this fleeting world to find anything which endures. , Shakespeare said: "I have immortal longings within me." Aspirations are often intimations. If man aspires, God has inspired. The caged bird that constantly flutters and seeks the liberty of the outside world declares that it was made to soar in the lofty air. So these spirits of ours, caged and confined in earthly bodies, are also endowed with the knowledge that they too were made to soar in a spiritual atmosphere and in a heavenly environment.

Death does not reverse character. Eternity does not change what time hath made. What we are now, we shall be then. Jesus forgave the sins of the penitent thief, but the Saviour could do no more. A man's sins may be forgiven, while his personality is still left impaired. It is a wrong emphasis, that so long as a man is saved, it makes no difference what he has been nor what he has done. We enter yonder, where we end here. We begin there, where we end here. If we end here upon a high plane, we begin there upon a lofty plane. The more a man has to invest, the larger will be his income.

This "endless life" is the gift of Jesus. He said: "I am come that men may have life, and that they may have it abundantly." Jesus said this was his purpose in coming as the religious teacher and Saviour of men. Some theologians would say that He came to be lifted up and to die upon Calvary's cross.

Jesus himself said: "I am come that men may have life"—life abounding and overflowing. Its results are emancipation, growth, achievement, and attainment. Jesus was true to the great law that "except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." So in order to bestow that gift of life upon man, Jesus found that his death was necessary and inevitable; but his death was not his primary purpose. The spiritual life of mankind was his aim, and his sufferings were only a means to secure that glorious end by which hope is given to man both now and hereafter.

The Endless Life

This endless life is impossible to all except to the Christian. The regeneration of the Holy Spirit alone secures this life. There can be no Summer without the Springtime. In every Springtime, a world is being born anew. If out of yonder decayed trunk a new shoot can spring, then out of a man's life that has had moral failure, a new moral beginning and life may also start. Life in the New Testament means Salvation. The "endless life" or Salvation is harmony with the spiritual laws of God. This life can begin only when Jesus takes his control of the inner purpose and affections of one's heart. This endless life begins when a man becomes a penitent and inquires, "What must I do to be saved?" There cannot be an endless life of moral character where there has never been a beginning of spiritual struggle. None but those who are following Jesus by a moral and by a spiritual discipleship can ever know either here or hereafter the rapture, the joy, the fellowship, and the final triumph of this endless life. "Eternal life" becomes a present possession at the moment of conversion. Jesus says, "He that findeth me, findeth life." "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." This means that he has that life here and now. This endless life begins, therefore, when one begins to be a disciple of Jesus. The aim of Jesus as teacher and Saviour was to restore men into spiritual fellowship with the Father. If you have this fellowship now, you already have eternal life. So on this side of the resurrection, in this present life and in this present moment, the Christian has fellowship with his Father.

Jesus taught the necessity of the new birth, because he emphasized the quality of life rather than its duration. The emphasis even of the prophets was upon quality rather than duration. In the Gospels, Jesus makes his appeal and emphasis upon the quality of life, not its duration. The great sermon in the sixth chapter of John's Gospel emphasizes this idea. The thought of the kingdom of God in Jesus' mind is essentially qualitative.

Indeed the only argument for the endlessness of life is its quality. This is the argument in Jesus' answer to the Sadducees on the last Tuesday of his life. It is also Peter's argument for the resurrection of Jesus in his sermon on the day of Pentecost. It was not possible for death to hold a man who had so lived as to win the approval of God by the many evidences that Jesus had.

It is also the argument in Paul's letter to the Romans where he says that nothing can separate us from the love of God, not even death. It is also the argument of Paul to the Corinthians where he says: "All things are ours, even death, because we are Christ's, and Christ is God's."

The one sweeping conception in the Gospels and Epistles is that the believer realizes his highest development here in a life that is in fellowship with God, and because he is in fellowship with God, grace will not allow trials, or death, or anything else to break that fellowship. Therefore, death, which seems to put an end to all things, is powerless over the life that consists in fellowship with God. If man would achieve a blessed immortality and a happy endless life, he must begin by securing the right quality of life here. Jesus derived the quality of his life from God and says that we can receive the same quality from himself.

Growth of Spiritual Character

Spiritual life in that future world will be a continuation of the spiritual character achieved in this life.

Holiness is not a donation, but an achievement. Spiritual life must grow or it must die. This present earthly life must always be a growth, ever striving to attain an ideal as yet unreached. Life beyond the resurrection will be a growth of personality. There are different capacities here. Two men are differently affected by the same sight of sorrow, trial, and hardship in others. One is stirred to compassion, as the good Samaritan; the other is unmoved, as the Levite and priest. Men also differ in moral capacity. Heaven will not equalize them. But growth will prevail there, as here. Paul and the saints, that have lived by the sacrifice of all things for the Gospel's sake, can drink sweeter draughts from the River of Life than can those who fail to surrender all. As earthen vessels differ in their capacity, so persons differ in their spiritual capacities. But the joyous assurance is, that each who possesses this endless life shall grow here and in heaven, until he shall be filled and shall be satisfied. Ruskin says: "He only is advancing in life, whose heart is growing softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, and whose spirit is entering into living peace."

Since moral and spiritual perfection can never be attained in this life, we are girded with the great hope that it shall be attained in that life to come. Immortality, therefore, is a great and boundless hope. We do not obtain in this life that spiritual perfection that we started to seek. That perfection shall not be realized nor completed, until we stand in that resurrection country. Then shall the spirits of just and justified men be made perfect. Our Christian life in this present world can be at best only a beginning. Christlikeness shall never be fully realized, until we shall see him face to face.

Continued on next page

How "Jakey," the Janitor's Boy, Got His Shoes

THE living rooms of a janitor's family, in a crowded tenement house, are not to be judged by the standard of those in an uptown apartment house.

There are degrees of discomfort in the former, for while some may be called fairly comfortable many of them are dark, ill-ventilated and little better than partitioned cellars. Some of these rooms are so far underground that a ray of sunlight never penetrates their damp recesses and the daylight lingers long in coming, but makes up for the delay in the promptness with which it takes its departure early in the afternoon. The rooms are, in many instances, so very small that were the partitions removed the space where a whole family lives would be scarcely larger than the kitchen of an ordinary country home.

The bedrooms are absolutely dark, and sad indeed are the days when one of the family is sick. In winter it is not so bad, as the fire in the outer room helps to heat the others, but when the warm days of spring come the atmosphere becomes most unwholesome and almost unbearable. There are many such homes in New York, where the father has scanty, ill-paid employment and where the mother is thankful to pay the rent of two or three miserable rooms by sweeping, scrubbing and general cleaning of the dingy halls and the stairways.

"Tony Martine told him all the wonderful story"

In such a home lived Jakey, and now that his father had been out of work for weeks the boy had to give up a long-cherished dream, for Jakey had made up his mind to have a pair of shoes. The boy had been ill during the winter months, not able to go to school, but now that fine weather had come and he had been out in the sunshine a bit his pale cheeks began to plump out and his eyes grow brighter. Ever since early in the spring, when he first went out on the sidewalk to watch "de kids" at their play, and Tony Martine had told him that wonderful story of Mont-Lawn, he had been thinking and planning about going up to the Bible House to see what chance there might be for him. To tell the truth, Jakey did not quite believe all Tony had told him on that sunshiny spring day.

"All dat a feller wants ter eat—dat might be; but erbout dem games—de roller-skatin'—dat's what gits me. How kin a feller roller-skate what ain't got no shoes?"

A vigorous scratching of his curly head not assisting in the elucidation of this vexed, and to Jakey all-important, problem, he fell to pondering on ways and means whereby he might become the possessor of a pair of shoes.

"Tain't no matter erbout a feller round here, even Tony don't wear 'em in de summer time, but up at dat place he wuz a-tellin' erbout—well, I dunno. Me fadder's shoes is too big, me mudder's is all wored out, me sister Jennie works, 'n so does Anna, an' de udder kids is all too little, dem dat has any, 'n if dey wasn't maybe dey wouldn't len' 'em to me, so what is a feller a-goin' to do?"

Just then a bright idea struck the boy. "I'll jes' put it up to Tony, now if he was a kiddin' about dat place up de river, he won't do it; 'n if he wuz I shan't want 'em, but if he wuz on de level, 'n dey is a Bible House where kids gets bunched up to go to dat place 'n have such gran' times, w'y, wots de matter wit' his givin' me de lend of his shoes jes' fur dat roller-skatin'? I wouldn't wear 'em de rest of de time." This was the argument that Jakey, the janitor's boy, "put up" to Tony, the newsboy, and this was Tony's reply:

"Jake, if youse wuz a bigger kid, I wouldn't do a ting to youse fur tinkin' I wuz a kiddin' erbout de Home. Who? me kid erbout de place where dey wuz so good ter me an' me two little sisters, de same people wot gived me shoes 'n lots of udder tings, 'n where I had de time of me life for tree summers? Say, kid, I don't know whedder to lend ye de shoes er ter lick yer." Here, to relieve his feelings, Tony darted away, yelling as only a newsboy can, "Telegram, Woild, Joinel," at the same time dabbing at his eyes where a suspicious moisture had gathered as he blustered at poor Jakey for daring to doubt his word about the glories at Mont-Lawn. "'Course I give de kid de lend of my shoes, but won't he look de guy wit' such big feet?"

So this is why little Jakey appeared at the Bible House in a new pair of shoes several sizes too large for him, wearing a shirt and "knicks" much the worse for wear, and no coat. His joy knew no bounds when he found it was really true, the story Tony had told him, of all the lovely things the kind readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD made possible for the children at the Home. And when he found he could take two of de "little kids at home," that Sammy and Johnny could share in that wonderful journey up the river, his joy knew no bounds; and when he rushed down the steps at home, nearly upsetting his mother, who had come out to take a look up the street for some signs of the boy, he screamed in delight:

"It's all true! It's all true! 'n I'm a-goin' to de Home, wit' de first bunch, 'n dey is a-goin' to be a Fort o' July, 'n firecrackers, 'n lots ter eat, 'n roller-skatin' other days, 'n Tony give me his shoes," stopping for want of breath and nearly sobbing with delight, Jakey threw his arms around his mother's neck, who could only say:

"Vas dot poy gone crazy alretty yet?"

MARY SARGENT HOPKINS.

THE POWER OF AN ENDLESS LIFE — Sermon by Rev. W. Jasper Howell

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

"We know not what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him."

In heaven there will be no lonesomeness, no sickness, no hospitals, no sin there. Discouraged heart, prepare to sing the resurrection song. Columbus had great joy when he landed as a discoverer upon the shores of a new world. Survey all the joys of earth; the joy of work well done, the joy of the convert, the joy of the preacher stirring the souls and lives of men, the joy of the wedding-day, the joy of motherhood. The greatest joys of this earth pale when compared to that greater joy of the disciple of Jesus, when, for the first time, his feet shall touch resurrection ground. Let this glorious truth possess and thrill you now, that you have within you "the power of an endless life." It is wonderful that Jesus should hang upon the cross for me, but it is more wonderful still that Jesus is in my heart now, the hope and pledge of that future glory.

Fellowship with the Father will be the one characteristic of heaven, as it has also been the central fact of Christian experience on earth. In this respect, our spiritual life in heaven will be similar to our life on earth. Fellowship with God is already our possession here and now.

The growing Christian not only has spiritual life, but he has the abundant life. Jesus says, I am come that men may not only have life but that they may have it abundantly. Some springs are irregular, others flow perpetually. As one spring may be intermittent, unreliable and may give forth sparingly, so some Christians show only occasional signs of an inner spiritual life. They barely have this inner life. When from the outer world the thirsty and the needy come to some Christians as to a spiritual well to draw the water of inspiration, guidance, and sympathy, they soon exhaust their inner experiences because theirs is only a partial fountain. Some springs never fail and therefore always overflow. They are the type of that class of Christians who have the abundant and overflowing life. Only those that have the abundant life can stand in every emergency, because they alone have a limitless reserve of spiritual strength from which they may draw. F. B. Meyer says: "There are two kinds of Christians. One is carried like a rheumatic patient up the hill in a chair; the other is like the boy who leaps in the strength of an irrepressible life that is within him." One travels by the strength of another, the other by his own. This abundant life begins here and now. Its flow is instantaneous. Eternal life is a beginning, not a completion. It is a process and a growth. It is a summer of growing grain, but not an autumn with its ripened harvest. It is a life of conscious fellowship with God. I trust that we all have learned the peace of the flowing river.

Evolution says: Sacrifice the weak for the strong. But the Gospel says: Sacrifice the strong for the weak. Jesus went about doing good. He lived not for himself but for others. "He that is greatest, let him be servant of all." The abundant life must always share itself with the needy. Service was the keynote in the life of Jesus. Without this, no man can be a disciple. Service is to be the chief occupation of heaven, for we are told that they are to serve him day and night in his temple. Service is the only unfailing proof of an inner and an abundant life.

In one of Southey's poems, he tells of a lonely woman journeying through a forest with her little daughter. Her strength exhausted, she felt that she was dying by the roadside. She asked her daughter to go in search of a minister. The weeping child met a stranger riding on horseback. When the kindly man asked why she was sad, she said, "Are you God's minister?" He replied, "I am." This kindly-hearted man followed the child and dismounting knelt in prayer by the dying woman. When his escort arrived and saw their chieftain kneeling on the ground by the side of a dying peasant, they lifted their hats in a silent tribute to England's king. The great stooped from a throne to serve the weak and the helpless.

A friend recently told me of an incident of his return voyage from Germany. The first day at sea after leaving Hamburg some of the passengers were told by the German-speaking captain about a lad of fourteen years who was in the steerage without ticket and without money. The boy could not speak English. His story touched the hearts of all. He had walked a two days' journey to reach the steamer. His mother was no longer able to provide for all her children. She said to this oldest boy, "You must try to find your father in America." He fell into the hands of very kind people as he journeyed. The immigration laws of the United States will not permit any steamship company to give free transportation to any immigrant. The law also provides that no one shall land as a pauper, but shall give evidence that he is able to sustain himself for the time being. At the dinner table a passenger arose and told this story to the company. He said: "I am disposed to help him to America and to his father. If there are others so disposed, we will unite our gifts." A generous purse supplied both of those requirements. They had forgotten the incident and the seven days' voyage had passed and they were in New York harbor. Each heart had its own anticipations. This boy in the steerage said to the officer, "Will you permit me to go upon the main deck and thank those who have been kind to me?" But he could not speak a word of English, so he went from room to room tapping at the door. When it was opened, he knelt instantly and affectionately seized every hand and covered it with kisses; then he went out on the deck in the same manner. The company was stirred and moved to tears at the gratitude of this boy, who could not speak his thanks, but only sobbed it out in love. So if we lend a helping hand while the days are going by, there will be many also to kneel at our feet and there to break their alabaster boxes of grateful love and thankful joy. Thus we may strew the pathway towards Heaven with many kindly deeds of service to others.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Let Help Be Sent Quickly

REPLYING to an inquiry by the proprietor of this journal as to existing conditions in Asiatic Turkey, and the need of further relief for the destitute survivors of the recent massacres, our State Department in Washington has sent the following message:

STATE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D.C., June 3.

DR. LOUIS KLOPSCH,
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

Answering your telegram yesterday, Department has just received following cablegram from Ambassador at Constantinople, dated 2d:

"Mr. Peet makes following statement: 'Relief work prosecuted in nine centres, where 30,000 people are now supported. Present endeavor to rehabilitate refugees, thus making possible to earn livelihood and reduce list. Permanent provision for orphans also required. Generous help now will be equivalent to thousands dollars relief later, and will put thousands people on feet again.'

"I have great confidence in Mr. Peet's judgment, as he is eminently qualified by his long experience to speak authoritatively of such matters. The Relief Committee at Adana, although international in character, is largely composed of resident American missionaries, headed by the British and United States Consuls, which furnishes unquestionable guaranty that relief funds will be fairly and judiciously expended. So far, subscriptions from England and America have been comparatively small, considering the enormous number of widows and orphans who for the moment are entirely dependent on charity; and I am sure that if the generous American public more fully realized the great distress prevailing in the Adana and Aleppo districts, it would respond more liberally to the appeals which are being made. [Signed] LEISHMAN."

HUNTINGTON WILSON,
Acting Secretary of State.

The Missionaries' Own Story

IN giving to the world to-day the first authentic narrative of the April massacres in Asiatic Turkey, written by missionaries who were eye-witnesses of the horrors they describe, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD does so from a sense of imperative duty alone. It is not pleasant reading; indeed, we know of few darker or sadder pages of history than this, which floods the heart with sorrow for the thousands of Christians butchered like sheep in the shambles, and with sympathy for the multitudes of destitute survivors, while it thrills every right-thinking mind with indignation that such unheard-of barbarities should be possible and go unavenged.

No words of ours could add to the vivid yet simple story told by the missionaries. Towns and villages set aflame simultaneously throughout a large and populous province; missionaries basely murdered while engaged in an act of mercy; thousands of defenseless Armenians riddled with bullets, hacked or bayoneted, and their wives and sisters shot "as if they had been on a battlefield," many bearing eight and others even ten wounds; young children slaughtered; sick and wounded refugees penned in churches and roasted to death or mowed down by a cruel fusillade, while struggling to escape; a group of peaceful Christian pastors trapped and cut down to the last man, while a Turkish Governor's wife looked on and smiled approval to the assassins, who were "doing the will of Allah"; other victims thrown over precipices or into the rivers; Christian women and girls subjected to indescribable treatment, and either killed or abducted to Turkish harems—these are some of the many tragedies of which the missionaries write. It would be hard to find a parallel for them, even among the lowest savages we have ever heard of.

Turkey's new government has begun the official investigation of these infamies. Meanwhile, the devoted missionaries continue to appeal to us for aid. They are spending their strength and risking their lives daily in their humane and Christlike work among the destitute and wounded survivors. We should hold up their hands and give them all the assistance they need, promptly and freely.

Seattle's Fair Opens on Time

SEATTLE'S great fair, the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, opened promptly on June 1, with everything in place and ready for the throngs of visitors who will journey to our Northwest during the coming summer. It was really opened officially in two places. President Taft was unable to go on to Seattle, but in his office in Washington he touched a gold button which started the machinery of the exposition, several thousand miles away. The diplomatic corps, with Ambassador Bryce, were present about the keyboard, and President Taft made a brief speech on the exposition, to which a reply was made by Senator Piles, of the State of Washington.

Doubtless Mr. Taft will go on to the exposition later, and his example should be followed by every patriotic American who can spare the time and afford the money. The exposition presents many features wanting in previous "world's fairs," besides having those which travelers always expect to see when nations come together to exhibit what they consider most distinctive in their own arts and products.

Perfect preparation, an ideal climate and American push assure the success of the exposition. One of the most interesting sights to the visitor will be Seattle itself, a city grown in a generation to be one of the great commercial centres of the West. As it has increased in a commercial way its people have taken care that its parks, streets and buildings should be a credit to the municipality of which they are so justly proud.

Naval Chaplains Needed

WE need more chaplains in the Navy. It has been said in some quarters that there is a prejudice among naval officers against the chaplains; but this, if it exists at all, is not a valid reason why hundreds of blue-jackets on our great warships should be deprived for months at a time of the right of religious service. That this is true, of some of our ships at least, is beyond question. The statement has been published, and stands uncontradicted, that during the recent globe-circling voyage of the fleet some of the ships had no religious services during a whole year.

It has been suggested that the Y. M. C. A. work, which has been so successful at many Army posts, be extended to the Navy, and the proposition seems reasonable and proper. It is the duty of Congress to make provision for the spiritual needs of our sailors, many of whom are quite as neglected as the unevangelized heathen.

The Beer Thermometer

OUR friends the brewers are unhappy. At their annual convention at Atlantic City, N. J., a few days ago, the time was largely devoted to lamenting the decline in beer manufacture and finding an explanation of the cause of that decline. Some alleged the panic of last year; others pointed gloomily to the prohibition wave, which had swamped the beer vats in many States, and still others railed at the tariff. A few lifted the finger of accusation at "hard liquors," which they blamed as the chief cause of drunkenness, and through which the whole trade was brought into disrepute, especially innocent beer.

Quite a novel theory was suggested in the address of the president of the convention. Although the figures of production last year showed a slight nominal increase, he regarded them as disheartening and the indication of "a tremendous downward trend, an astonishing fall from preceding annual increases." The decrease the previous year had been 1,500,000 barrels, only a fraction of which had been recovered. He attributed the decline altogether to the panic, apparently forgetting the old argument that "hard times cause drunkenness," and told his hearers that beer was the thermometer of popular prosperity and that the "ups and downs of the beer column" told the story of the nation's business success or failure quite as reliably as the rise and fall of the mercury foretold the weather. This, though new, did not seem to be refreshing to the convention. But the speaker consoled the delegates with the assurance that the prohibition agitation had reached its height and that the reaction had already set in.

Some of the features of this convention strongly recall the old Biblical proverb of "a house divided against itself." When beer repudiates its old-time political allies; when it rails at alcohol and when the brewer holds his twin brother—the whisky distiller—as a disgrace to the ancient guild for the propagation of drunkenness, the interested public may learn something from the spectacle. Meanwhile, the friends of temperance, having forced the enemy into confusion, should vigorously press their advantage and keep up their campaign for State and national sobriety with redoubled energy.

Twenty Thousand Missionaries

SOME time ago, in discussing the encouraging growth of the foreign missionary movement, we called attention to the fact that the number of workers in the field has been increasing in a steady ratio for several years. Referring to this subject, the Homiletic Review in its current issue gives some interesting figures. During the past five years the increase of missionaries sent out by the Protestant churches of this country has been fifteen per cent.; by the British churches, thirty per cent., and by the Protestant churches of Continental Europe, twenty-five per cent. Here are the present figures:

Great Britain supported in 1908	8,000	Missionaries.
United States " "	6,500	"
Continental Europe " "	3,100	"
Grand total in 1895	11,765	"
" " " 1900	16,218	"
" " " 1905	17,839	"
" " " 1907	18,499	"
" " " 1909	19,855	"
Ordained native preachers, 1909	4,999
Native helpers, 1909	98,955
Total men in the field, both white and native	118,901

This is an increase of 52,018 since 1895. Last year was a phenomenal one in missionary advance; 164,674 native church members were added to the fold, an average of 500 per day. This represents approximately eight converts for each white missionary on the field.

In contemplating these figures one may well afford to smile at the puny attacks that are leveled at foreign missions, chiefly by those who do not know or understand them. These reliable statistics furnish the most convincing evidence that the religion of Jesus Christ is marching triumphantly forward to that blessed time when all the world will know his voice and will welcome the message of salvation.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 16, 1909

	PAGE
Feeding the Sacred Ibis	Cover
The Truth About the Massacres (Illustrated)	511, 512
A Unique Chinese School (Illustrated)	513
England's Ecclesiastical Storm (Portraits) By William Durbau	513
The Power of an Endless Life. Sermon By Rev. W. Jasper Howell	514, 515
How Jakey Got His Shoes (Illustrated)	515
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	516
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	517
New York's Pioneer Mission (Illustrated)	518
Spoke to Over Three Million Souls (Portrait)	518
In Flowery Spring Days (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	519
OUR MAIL-BAG	520
The Memorial to Longfellow (Illustrated)	520
Polish Women in Germany (Illustrated)	521
Young People's Societies	522
Fulfilling the Law. By Mrs. M. Baxter	523
The Sacred Ibis. Poem	523
The Story of Marco Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter	524, 525
Temperance in the Commandments Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	526, 527

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Airship's Triumph and Mishap

COUNT ZEPPELIN started from the floating shed on Lake Constance a little after nine o'clock Saturday night, May 29, having Berlin as the objective point, where Emperor William and others were awaiting his arrival to mark it with a great demonstration. The dirigible got only as far as Bitterfeld, 465 miles from the starting place, and the Count there decided to return. There were on board, beside himself, two engineers and a crew of seven men. After covering a distance of 850 miles, and having remained in the air thirty-seven consecutive hours, the new airship on its return from Bitterfeld to Friedrichshafen came to grief in an open field near Goeppongen. In maneuvring for a landing, the airship came into contact with a tree and was seriously injured. At first it seemed that the envelope had been torn and that the injury could be easily repaired. A more careful examination, however, disclosed the fact that the prow was broken. It was soon repaired and the journey was safely concluded.

There is a mysterious airship which has been sailing through the eastern skies of England, and has been seen by numbers of people between points as far north as King's Lynn and as far south as the Shoeburyness Forts and Chatham. The mysterious ship made its excursions by night. Mr. A. J. Smith, a well-known authority on farming, gives the following description of what he saw:

"I was in the garden in front of the house," he explained, "when my daughter, who saw it first, called to me that a strange object was in the northwestern sky. It was not actually dark at the time, but late twilight and approaching dusk. There was a slight moon and a few fleeting clouds as the object of our interest rose higher into the heavens above that belt of trees bordering the railway line. It came steadily on towards our left front, well above the light clouds which occasionally blurred its outline. I got hold of my glasses just as the postman and a constable came up, and what we seemed to see were two distant objects, the upper like a huge grub, while the other, much lower down, was distinguishable by an exceptionally bright gleam of the searchlight description. This was, no doubt, the position of the crew. Its course seemed to be a sweep round from the northeast to the southwest, and from the fact that it traversed so wide an extent of sky and passed out of sight in a quarter of an hour, its pace and engine-power must have been extraordinary, especially as the wind, at our level at any rate, was against it."

There is great discussion and not a little concern as to who is responsible for this visitor. Some think it is a friend who is trying some new machine; others fear it is a foe from some unfriendly nation. Count Zeppelin could go to England in ten hours, remain there fifteen hours, and return home again in the space of time he remained in the air during his last trip. The flights are, no doubt, the experiment of some new inventor.

The mastery of the dominion of the air gets nearer and nearer. It looks now as though aerial navigation would become commercially successful, and it is likely to become an important factor in the science of modern warfare. Most nations are busy experimenting with these flying machines, but it is to be hoped that uses will be found for them mainly for communication and transportation.

Behold, he shall fly as an eagle, and shall spread his wings over Moab. (Jer. 48 : 40.)

Religious Liberty Granted

A bill was lately introduced into the Duma, in Russia, which provides for an enlarged religious liberty in the empire. The Emperor put into effect the principles of religious liberty in his manifesto of May 13, 1905, and the Parliament has now set itself to work to put them into operation. The bill grants the Old Believers the free practice of their religion, but it denies them the privilege of proselyting among the members of the Orthodox Church, or preaching in public, or using the title of priest for their clergymen.

The measure will be a great advance on the present conditions of religious despotism in the country. The sect of the Old Believers embraces 15,000,000 members, and is the largest dissenting body in Russia. And so it goes; wherever the despotisms are limited by parliaments and wherever monarchies are turned into republics, the civil liberty is followed immediately by that religious liberty which has been granted to man in his instincts, and in the Holy Scriptures.

This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, after that the King Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim liberty unto them. (Jer. 34:8.)

A Great Painter at Twelve

Maurice Lavallard, the twelve-year-old prodigy, known as "the Benjamin of the Salon," is sharing honors with Harpignies, the ninety-year-old veteran of the Société des Artistes Français. Last year the lad sent to the Salon a picture which was not received, but which drew from the jury a letter of praise and encouragement. This year he sent a picture, in subdued tones, of a boy seated at a piano in a music-room, the model being that of his elder brother Rene. This study of an interior reveals remarkable technical skill, and leading critics compare Maurice to those other infant prodigies, Giotto and Correggio. This painting, which is called the "Study Hour," was accepted and attracts a crowd daily in Room 32. The boy's father is a haberdasher in the Rue des Petits Champs. His first efforts were with a toy box of water colors, with which he amused himself making sketches; then, making headway with oils, his parents, realizing his genuine genius as an artist, placed him in the hands of Carolus Lemeunier, the well-known Parisian painter. The admission of this picture to the Paris Salon is an event in the annals of French art. The only painter who really runs the French boy a close race was Sir Edwin Landseer, whose first picture was accepted when he was only thirteen.

The Great Zeppelin Dreadnought in Flight

We see here illustrated the inequality of native endowment, which is the law of God's creation. We have only here and there a prodigy of this kind—most children have only ordinary endowments, and are destined to be the plodders in society. Some have souls capable of the highest inspirations and the greatest creations, while others have only ordinary talent and opportunities for service. What is required of boys, girls, men and women, is that they improve whatever talent they may have—physical, intellectual and spiritual—thus fulfilling the law of God and securing, through grace divine, whatever rewards either world may have to bestow.

And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one. (Matt. 25 : 15.)

From the Graphic

The Mysterious Airship Seen in England

Street Car Strike in Philadelphia

Staid and conservative Philadelphia is at the present time in the grip of the street car strike, with many riots and numbers injured. The first day of the Philadelphia rapid transit strike ended with only four car lines making anything like their regular schedules. Of all the other lines in the city, two-thirds went out of business. The elevated trains were running on full schedule, unmolested by the strikers and their friends. Two thousand five hundred men walked out, leaving one thousand cars idle. All the saloons of the city were closed instantly to prevent fiercer riots and bloodshed. The bars at the fine hotels were closed as well as those in the filthy saloons. The demands of the men were: recognition by the company of the union's grievance committee; privilege of purchasing uniforms in the open market; not less than nine hours or more than ten to constitute a day's work; time and a half to be paid for extra work; arbitration of all future disagreements, the men to select one arbitrator, the company to select one, and those two to select a third; fair hearing for men suspended or discharged and reinstatement with pay for employees found to be unjustly dropped; motormen and conductors to be paid twenty-five cents an hour. The present rate is twenty-two cents. The Mayor and police force have taken hold of the situation with vigor and it is to be hoped that an amicable settlement of the difficulty will be made, which will be satisfactory to all parties concerned.

For I have seen violence and strife in the city. (Ps. 55 : 9.)

Earthquake in the Middle West

On May 26 Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa were shaken by an earthquake. Although a few buildings were thrown down, there was no loss of life, only the frightening of hundreds of thousands of people. Scientists at the University of Chicago say that the shock was caused by a slipping of the crust of the earth, beneath the bed of Lake Michigan, or that it had its origin in the non-glacial fields of northern Illinois. There are about ten thousand acres of land in this region which was not compressed by the tremendous weight of glaciers during the glacial period, and for this reason the crust of the earth had not been "ironed" down and is more likely to contain a crack.

There is mildness and severity in nature—in the sunshine and the shadow, in the gentle zephyr and the terrible tornado, in the majestic mountains and sequestered vales, in the smiling landscape, the beauteous gardens and the fruit fields, and in the volcano's fires and earthquake's shock. These two phases of truth are revealed in the Scriptures, the Divine anger and love, and the daily experiences of the individual heart.

Behold, therefore, the goodness and severity of God. (Rom. 11 : 22.)

NEW YORK'S PIONEER MISSION

A Class in Chair-Making

Potatoes for the Poor

Girls' Sewing Class

"IF this work be of men, it will come to naught," was a divinely sanctioned statement, made nineteen hundred years ago, and which still marks the difference between the schemes of men and the purposes of God. It has a signal illustration also, in the history and work of the Five Points Mission (Old Brewery), 63 Park Street, New York.

Rev. F. J. Belcher

Sixty years ago, when the law had failed to make the Five Points safe to life and property, a few Christian women determined to work for its reform through the agency of the school and the Church. The Old Brewery, a rookery where the vicious and criminal congregated and in which many a robbery and murder had been committed, was purchased; a school with Christian teachers, where one meal a day was provided, and clothing and shoes furnished when needed, was established and missionaries were employed to visit and pray with the people. The leaven thus injected has wrought marvelously. During half a century, the Mission has kept to the Christlike work of feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and ministering to the poor and penitent, with the result that a vast transformation has taken place. The streets are no longer unsafe to the passerby and vice and crime no longer flaunt themselves in the face of innocence and decency. This fruitage has demonstrated that the work is of God and its continued support, in the midst of many more recently established institutions, has revealed his fostering care.

During this period, there has been no diminution in the beneficent features of the work. In the past winter especially, the calls have been heart-breaking. Scores of mothers have begged that their children might be received in the school, where they would be furnished with one meal a day. One mother brought three little ones, stating that they had had nothing to eat for two days; nor would she take anything herself until the children's hunger was satisfied. Another brought her baby and, when given a small sum of money, it was found, two days later, that she had literally starved herself to buy milk for the child. Strong men, not professional beggars or "rounders," often come with thanks for the assistance wives and little ones have received. As the years have gone by, the missionary features of the work have been enlarging. The vast influx of foreigners, who have colonized in the downtown section of New York, has presented problems which only the school and the Church can satisfactorily solve. In this field the largest hope lies in reaching the children.

Changes in the neighborhood have been followed by changes in the Mission building and its appointments. After a few years, the old Brewery was replaced by an edifice better adapted to the needs of the work, and in 1894 the present structure was erected, at a cost of $130,000. The good women who still have the work in charge have reduced the indebtedness until it now totals $19,000. Not a large amount, some say; but it means that nearly a thousand dollars, which might go into the work, must be used for annual interest. But the good providence which has always provided for the Mission's need still waits on the faith of the managers. Only a few weeks ago, a gentleman offered the superintendent, Rev. F. J. Belcher, $5,000 cash in case the debt should be raised in three months. Three days later, a legacy of $5,000, available for the same purpose, came to the treasurer, and many kind friends have subscribed several thousands more. The last $5,000 are still needed to make available the first conditional gift. Through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD the management appeals to all "friends of the poor" for help to cancel this burdensome indebtedness on New York's oldest mission.

SPOKE TO OVER THREE MILLION SOULS

GIPSY SMITH has just concluded a 10 or 11 months' tour, in which he has traveled many thousands of miles and spoken to 3,250,000 people. No one who has not taken part in similar work can at all appreciate what this means. He arrived in America July 25, 1908, and after delivering his lecture, "From Gipsy Tent to Pulpit," at twenty Chautauqua gatherings, undertook the prolonged series of missions now drawing to a close. Beginning in October, he has conducted these in ten of the largest cities of the United States, spending eighteen days at each place, and ending at Toronto, his first mission in Canada.

Gipsy Smith will take a well-earned holiday for several months in England. He was almost exhausted on his arrival in Toronto, from the arduous work in Minneapolis, and will need a long rest before he begins in Chicago, next October, a month's work under the auspices of the Chicago Laymen's Evangelical Association. Thence he goes to Cincinnati for three weeks, before once more returning to England to keep some pressing engagements there. He is being urged to accept an invitation to spend the whole of the season of 1910-11 on the Pacific coast.

The stirring scenes witnessed at every point on his tour, and the great numbers that have been influenced to turn their hearts to righteousness, testify to the wonderful success of the tour. Comparisons are freely made with the great "times of refreshing" in the past under Wesley and Whitefield. Midnight marches through the slum districts of Baltimore, Washington, Cleveland and Pittsburg have been features of Gipsy Smith's work. As many as 40,000 people have taken part at one time in one of these processions. Phenomenal attendance at all of the meetings, at which he has spoken 600 times to millions of people, has been emphasized by such experiences as in St. Louis, where the hall seating 12,000 was packed full and 40,000 were turned away at one meeting. During the progress of a blizzard, one of the severest snowstorms of the winter, 5,000 people came out to the meeting, which is obviously a record for a religious gathering under such circumstances. Another record was made at Kansas City, where a noonday meeting attended by 9,000 was declared by Gipsy Smith to be the greatest midday meeting he had ever seen.

"Gipsy" Smith, from a Recent Photograph

Nor was the attendance the only thing to be noted. During his tour in the West the converts numbered from 250 to 500 every night. In every city, those who are associated with him are loath to let him go, like the Christians at Ephesus when they had to part with Paul. In one city, three gentlemen offered to present him with the title deeds of a beautiful villa if he would take up his residence there. An offer of $20,000 for a three months' lecture tour from an entertainment bureau was declined by the Gipsy. Speaking on this question in Toronto, he said: "Nobody will ever say of me, 'How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom!' Don't be afraid. If I wanted riches I'd go on the lecture platform, but I'd rather be saving souls."

Chief among the elements, perhaps, which contribute to his successes is the universal character of his appeal. Moreover, he reaches the common sense of his hearers. His suppression of hysterical outbursts has appealed to those who have been accustomed to associate revival missions with sensation and emotionalism. A screaming woman led to some remarks on this point at a Toronto meeting.

"I never believe the Spirit leads anyone to make a row like that, when you are trying to get the Word of God preached," said the revivalist. "I don't believe the Holy Spirit has anything to do with what makes for confusion. If I am sure of anything, it is that the Holy Ghost means intelligence and sanity and reason. I wouldn't be loyal to my Lord if I did not say so."

A. SHELDRICK.

IN FLOWERY SPRING DAYS

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Enjoying the Present

A MOTHER wrote the other day, saying that she had four little children under eight, and that she was so busy taking care of them that she had no time for enjoyment. "I look forward," she said, "to the days when my children shall be older and I know that I will be happier then. At present there is so much to do, there are so many stitches to take and so many steps, and I am so tired most of the time that I cannot enjoy the children at all."

Probably this mood of yearning for the future comes over young mothers naturally when the incessant demands of the babies make them tired and worn out. Yet a mother whose little people range from a boy of eight to a little girl of two has much to be thankful for. She could not spare one of those little ones. Let any one come along and offer to adopt a child or two and she would turn indignantly on such an audacious invader and declare that her children were not thus to be sent out into another home. Should sickness cross the threshold, and a little child toss in fever or be racked with pain, the mother's heart would be full of apprehension and her hands and feet constant in tender ministration and in errands of love. Should death cross the threshold—but here we pause, for no mother can bear the thought that any one of her darlings may be torn from her arms and placed in the cold grave. No, not one of the little ones can be spared. The truth is that, though the mother's days are very busy when the children are little, she will never have happier ones than these. Every hour is full of blessedness and sweetness. Day by day the little lives are unfolding. The habits that are now in process of formation will, by and by, be the habits of life. By example and precept and, most of all, by the sweet unfolding atmosphere of love, the mother can shape her darlings as she chooses. Little people of eight and six, and even of four, may learn to put away their own clothes, to pick up their toys, to perform little offices that help the mother. Although the help may sometimes be a hindrance, yet if the mother is patient the little hindering hands soon learn to be actually of value in assisting in the day's task.

Life glides swiftly and imperceptibly in the home. There is a little verse in the Bible that often comes when one is speaking of child growth: "While thy servant was busy here and there he was gone." It seems only yesterday that your own little boy had dimpled hands and ringlets, of which you were proud. To-day he has the close-cropped head and the hard little hands that bespeak the boy and the future man. To-morrow, the girl who is trotting about the floor playing with her dolls will be in school, and by and by she will be in college, and almost before you are aware of it somebody will be coming to court her, while the lad who stands beside your knee will shoot up into manhood and presently tell you that he has found some one to love. Your least anxious days, though you may not believe it, are when your children are little and you can tuck them up at night and feel that they are all safe under the home roof. Try to believe in the present. Try to enjoy it to the full. Be happy as the birds are when the fledglings are under the mother's wing in the nest.

Concerning Surprise

One of our friends is surprised to learn that anybody has ever condemned surprise as not precisely in accordance with good manners. To be accurate, we should say that the emotion of surprise is perfectly natural and justifiable, but that the expression of it in certain circumstances should be guarded. Pleasurable surprise is usually in order, but astonishment at an unexpected assertion or an unlooked-for incident should often be repressed, because its manifestation may cause embarrassment. The distinguished teacher who insisted that his pupils should not display surprise in any contingency probably wished them to have complete self-restraint, control of their features and of their words being a part of this admirable training. No matter how surprised a soldier on parade may be, he must refrain from showing the feeling by movement or look. Perhaps it is as well to admit that every direction given in the schoolroom cannot be literally carried out in home life.

THE YOUNG MOTHER

Ah, my baby, how I love you!
Here your mother bends above you.
Every blessing on you, Sweet!
Beautiful from head to feet.
Who can tell or understand
How the baby's dimpled hand
Holds the heart-strings in a grasp
Life or death cannot unclasp.

MY LITTLE SWEETHEART

I'VE a loyal little sweetheart; though the world should turn from me,
She would only cling the closer, and my happy comrade be.
When I face the world's rough weather, I am sure of a retreat
By my own bright chimney-corner, with my darling at my feet.
Lifting up her pure white blossom of a child's unclouded face,
Lighting, with her blue eyes shining, every hard and lonely place.
I've a loyal little sweetheart, and her years that count but three
Are worth more than gems and gold, for this true heart believes in me.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Winsome Wee Ones

HOW much people miss if in their homes there are no winsome wee ones! There is a radiant moment in infantile life akin to the moment of rapture that thrills us when spring awakens from the wintry sleep and turns upon her pillow, all the little rills laughing and dimpling as they hasten to the sea, and the air thrilling with the first low notes of a wonderful orchestra. Homes in which there are no little voices to prattle in sweet baby talk, no little feet to patter over the floor, no little lads and lasses to tug at the mother's skirt and be lifted to the father's shoulder, may be happy homes, but there is in them a vital lack. If God deny the parents the gift of children they must acquiesce in his will, and in that case they may remember that all children are his, and may adopt a little homeless one to be their own. Married folk who are deliberately childless, preferring ease and freedom to the responsibility of bringing up another generation, may in time to come face loneliness and be aware of a deep regret. The winsome wee ones are never sweeter than when first they begin to walk and talk, and if the mother has time to watch them she cannot but be amazed at the rapidity with which their vocabulary increases and at the speed of their development. A little child learns so fast and acquires so much, and imitates everything seen and heard so perfectly, that the pace seems beyond belief.

Those who have the charge of little men and women in babyhood should not forget that every hour now is telling on the future. Just as the whole apple tree is enfolded in the little seed, the whole man and the whole woman of coming days is wrapped up in the small being who trots about on tiny feet, builds towers with blocks and nurses a doll.

If you would have the winsome wee ones good-tempered and docile, you must have yourself well in hand. Fathers and mothers who are self-controlled, affectionate and serene, who are not fault-finding and fretful, give the wee ones the advantage of a sunny atmosphere in which they thrive. A mother wrote the other day that she had no way of controlling a little child of five except by harsh punishment. That mother convicted herself of being habitually in a wrong state of mind. No child of five or six, for that matter no child of any age, is improved by continual harshness. Discipline there must be, but discipline is not the same thing with severity. It is "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," and breathing through everything love and tenderness. Make the winsome wee ones happy. See that they have an abundance of sleep, long naps in the daytime when they are under three, and even after that if they are nervous and high-strung, as American children are apt to be. Let them have simple food, and not very much meat. Too much animal food is not good for little children. Let them play out of doors and have sun baths sometimes when the days are warm, and baths from head to foot in cool water every day. Children who are well, and who live under the gentle control of affectionate parents, are sweet and happy and winsome to all whom they meet.

Questions and Answers

R. P., Webster, N. Dak. 1. Where does the Dead Sea get its name? 2. What became of the cross after the crucifixion?

1. From the fact that there is no living thing found in its waters, or along its shores. It is so salt that salt-water fish from the ocean, when put into its waters, perish at once. The water is 26 per cent. salt. 2. There are several accounts given as to the fate of the cross. The one accepted by the Church of Rome is that it was buried on the spot and dug up several centuries later.

W. H., Putnam. 1. What was the treaty of Utrecht, and when made? 2. Who gave utterance to the words, "United we stand but divided we fall?" 3. When and where did Ethan Allen die?

1. The treaty of Utrecht was signed at Utrecht, Holland, in 1713. It ended the war of the Spanish succession. 2. The words were spoken by John Dickenson. He said: "By uniting we stand, by dividing we fall." The quotation you gave is the popular form. 3. Ethan Allen died in Vermont, in 1789.

J. T. McF., Ayers Cliff, Quebec, Canada. 1. Will any be saved if they are sprinkled and not baptized? 2. Are there any Christians who are not baptized? 3. Is a man a Christian that denies the Holy Bible? 4 Were the heaven and earth made in six days? Some of our ministers say they do not believe it; they say it was six thousand years.

1. No special formula, or manner, of baptism is prescribed in Scripture. 2. Yes; there are no doubt many Christians who have never been baptized. But baptism is one of the sacraments of the Christian religion, and should not be omitted. 3. No man who disbelieves the Bible can logically claim to be a Christian. 4. The Bible period of Creation is a subject on which hundreds of books have been written. The controversy is as old as the human race. Whether the "six days" are to be interpreted as literal days, or as ages, is not a vital question. To God, a thousand years are as one day.

A. C. R., Minden, Neb. Give some information in regard to Luther Burbank, originator of new plants and flowers. What is his latest creation?

Luther Burbank was born in Lancaster, Mass., March 7, 1849, the son of Samuel Walton and Olive (Ross) Burbank. He passed his boyhood on a farm; moved to Santa Rosa, Calif., in 1875, and conducts Burbank's Experimental Farms. He is the originator of the Burbank potato, gold muckson apple, four kinds of plums, the new fruit plumcot, and many other kinds of fruits and flowers. We do not know what one is last on his list. Write him at Santa Rosa, Calif., for information.

D. M. M., New Ross, Ind. 1. What is King Edward's surname? 2. Where is Dr. Frank Talmage?

1. King Edward, in the ordinary sense of the term, has no surname. Surnames did not come into use until the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and the nobles used a given name, followed by the name of their estate or the principality over which they ruled. If they gained a larger principality, they changed their title to the recent acquisition. King Edward is descended from a long line of titled ancestors, dating back before the use of surnames. Remotely he is descended from the Guelfs, but that would not be used correctly as a surname like Smith or Jones. Some reigning houses, which have come into power in recent times, have surnames to which their titles are added, such as the Kings of Servia, but in the older houses they do not exist. 2. He is pastor of a church in Philadelphia.

J. S. McM., Cambridge, O. 1. What names are in the Hall of Fame, and what are the laws governing the jury voting? 2. Also, the names of the persons in the English Hall of Fame, and when was this begun?

1. Washington, Lincoln, Daniel Webster, Franklin, Grant, John Marshall, Jefferson, Emerson, Longfellow, Fulton, Irving, Jonathan Edwards, Samuel F. B. Morse, Farragut, Clay, Hawthorne, George Peabody, Lee, Peter Cooper, Eli Whitney, Audubon, Horace Mann, Beecher, James Kent, Joseph Story, John Adams, Channing, Gilbert Stuart, Asa Gray, John Q. Adams, Lowell, General Sherman, Madison, Whittier, Hamilton, Agassiz, Paul Jones, Mary Lyon, Emma Willard, Maria Mitchell. Only persons who have been dead ten years are eligible to be chosen. Fifty names were to be inscribed at the beginning, and five additional every fifth year thereafter, until 2000 A.D., when the 150 panels will be filled. The council invites, as the time for election approaches, nominations from the public. Every nomination must be seconded by a member of the University Senate of New York University, and submitted to an electorate of one hundred prominent citizens, selected by the council. 2. There is no English Hall of Fame, so-called.

M. D. M., Louisville, Canada. 1. Was the elder brother a Christian, born again? Or was he never a Christian? 2. If a brother or sister told a lie about you, is it well to tell them the wrong they have done you and then forgive them, or to ignore the offense altogether?

1. He did not show a Christlike spirit. He was a type of the cold, self-sufficient, selfish sort of people who, while leading correct moral lives, are more Pharisee than Christian, and whose hearts have never been touched with the real spirit of the Master. Envy and jealousy made him regard his brother as a rival in his father's affections. 2. There might be circumstances which would make it wiser and more generous to ignore the fault; but ordinarily the better way would be to speak to the offender gently, words of forgiveness, and lead him to repent his sin and to ask the Divine forgiveness.

A. J. S., Minerva, O. In the notes on the Sunday School lesson for March 31 we are instructed that it is a Christian duty "to cast out all fear." Can one who is naturally afraid of everything cast out all fear? If so, how?

Abnormal timidity is often a constitutional defect, and may be due to various causes, which may be remediable. The "fear" referred to in the passage in question, however, is not physical, but mental or rather moral. If we trust in God, live close to him and try to follow in Jesus' footsteps, there can be no such fear. Besides, the confidence that is inspired by the knowledge that we are his and in his care at all times will enable us to face physical discomforts and even dangers with new courage. This is "casting out fear." God careth for his own.

W. L. L., Dardanelle, Ark. 1. Was George Washington ever baptized by immersion, and did he ever affiliate with any church other than the Episcopalian? 2. What was the origin of bestowing flowers upon the grave of our departed, known as Decoration Day? 3. How can professed Christians harmonize the Darwinian theory of evolution with orthodox Christian religion?

1. Washington's parents were both Episcopalians, and he was baptized in accordance with the customs of the church by sprinkling. Washington remained a loyal member of the Episcopal Church until his death, and served at times as vestryman. It is claimed (although not historically substantiated) that he received baptism later at the hands of a Baptist army chaplain. 2. In 1868 and 1869 General John A. Logan, as commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, appointed May 30 for the decoration of the graves of the soldier dead with flowers. 3. The Darwinian idea of man's descent from the lower orders of creation is being abandoned by some of our greatest scientists. The question was discussed in full in a recent MAIL-BAG.

B. E., Cresco, Ia. Who wrote the Passion Play of Oberammergau, and what was the date?

The first Passion Play at Oberammergau, in Bavaria, was performed in 1633. The people had made a sacred promise to God that if a pestilence, which was ravaging the district, should cease they would perform the passion of our Lord once every ten years. No one knows who wrote the play. Very likely the first play may have been the work of the village pastor.

Miss Emma Vick, Chicago, sends us some spirited verses on the saloon, the closing lines of which read:

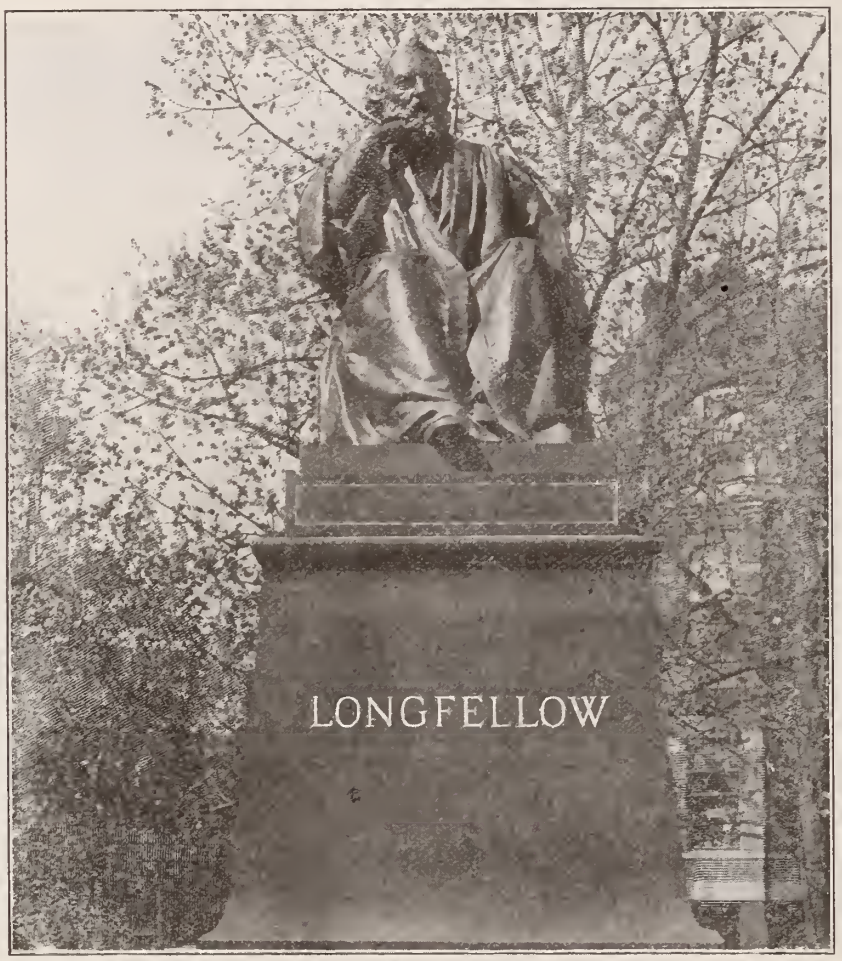
"No, the saloon must go, my friend,
And will be fought to the very end,
Because we cannot let it stay
Doing its deadly work each day
Among the youth throughout our land,
Whose lives should be both good and grand."

M. A., Ackerman, Miss. 1. Will publishers accept stories not typewritten, and is correct punctuation essential in disposing of stories? 2. When and where was the first telephone line put up? 3. Where do the Roosevelts live now?

1. A few publishers may accept stories that are not typewritten, but in most cases those that are not typewritten stand a small chance of receiving consideration. It is a good plan not to over-punctuate, but the marks that are used should be used correctly. Get some good rhetoric and study the chapters on punctuation. A little practice in the rules will make the subject clear. 2. Philip Reis was probably the true inventor of the telephone. In 1861 he showed that variations in an electric current, caused by a vibrating membrane, would reproduce sound. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the Bell Telephone, was the first scientist to construct one which worked perfectly. In 1892 a long-distance telephone was built between Chicago and New York, and the service extended to other cities. 3. The home of the Roosevelts is at Oyster Bay, Long Island, N. Y.

W. J. S., Childersburg, Ala. What is considered the best protection for buildings against lightning, or is there any?

Lightning-rods are the only things yet invented to protect buildings from lightning, but some scientific men are inclined to think that their value is over-rated. Tall trees, especially oaks, afford good protection.



Copyright by Harris & Ewing

The Memorial to Longfellow Unveiled in Washington

Washington will soon be known as a city of beautiful monuments and statues, so rapidly are they being erected at every point of vantage. Heretofore it has been mostly famous soldiers and statesmen that have been thus honored, but a fine statue of the famous American poet Longfellow was unveiled lately. The quiet thoughtfulness of the face is most impressive.

Miscellaneous

Mrs. Marie B., Waymart, Pa. A "perfect human hook" is a totally wrong expression, when applied to the Bible, which is a "divinely inspired Book."

Victor B., Villisca, Ia. 1. Unusual, but not inappropriate. 2. Answered lately in MAIL-BAG. 3. No.

F. E. M., Wichita, Kan. He is ready to forgive "to the uttermost," but it is our part to repent and resolve anew, with His help, to do better.

A letter will reach ex-Governor Magoon if sent care of the War Department. Write to superintendent of schools, Chicago, in regard to kindergarten training.

M. F., Germantown, Pa. 1. Yes, "Dear Friend" is a familiar beginning, quite proper under the circumstances. 2. You can join the Shorthand Correspondence Course Classes by sending enrolment fee ($2) to this journal.

A Graceful Acknowledgment

WITHIN a few days after Dr. Klopsch returned home, after his brief holiday, during which he was received in special audience by King Victor Emmanuel, he was notified by the Italian Ambassador in Washington that two signed photographs of the King and Queen of Italy had been sent him as a token of their appreciation of what had been done to aid the earthquake sufferers.

The photographs are unusually large and are fine likenesses. Below are the personal signatures of the King and Queen. This, the Ambassador stated, was an unusual honor, as the signed photographs are seldom presented to any but visiting royalties. Both King and Queen express the greatest gratitude to the American people, and especially to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, for the prompt contributions which relieved so much suffering after the disaster.

Polish Women in Germany

Polish Women Going Out to Their Daily Work in the Fields

THEY do not go there to attend college, nor even to become clerks in tores. They go to work on the great Prussian farms.

They work just as men do—planting, hoeing, reaping—strong, muscular, humble creatures, ready to take up whatever task may be set them. They work better than men, their employers say, and more cheaply. In fact, their pay is a little less than twenty-five cents per day, with rough shelter and one good meal per day included. They buy their bread independently and also their liquor. With men's work, they have taken up some of the more distinctive habits of men, and are said to drink much cheap liquor during their long laboring hours.

A Woman Town Crier

A Woman Station Master

Every spring large numbers of these Polish girls are engaged by the agents of German farm-owners. The government transports them for nothing, recognizing the necessity of workers, and the scarcity of men.

A good many of these girls marry Germans, but the husbands do not Germanize their wives. Instead, the wives turn their husbands into Poles. Poland retains her identity and her character in spite of all the efforts which are made to sink her individuality in that of her different conquerors; and the Polanders themselves partake of the national peculiarity.

The masculinizing of this large body of young women shocks the American sense of sex-propriety. We urge our women to undertake a certain amount of outdoor work. They may cultivate a garden, or even rake after the haymakers; but the rough toil of the great fields, in which hands, feet and body enlarge and harden, and the skin becomes like leather, does not seem to us suited to develop the womanly woman. And yet beneath the indurated exterior of these Polish girls, many of whom are said to be intelligent and handsome, may beat hearts as true and gentle and loving as those of their more tenderly nurtured sisters. In those Indian tribes in which the women do all the heavy labor, mother-love and home-love are as strong as in others. The work which women do seems to be a matter of custom.

KATE UPSON CLARK.

"FOURTH OF JULY" OPPORTUNITY

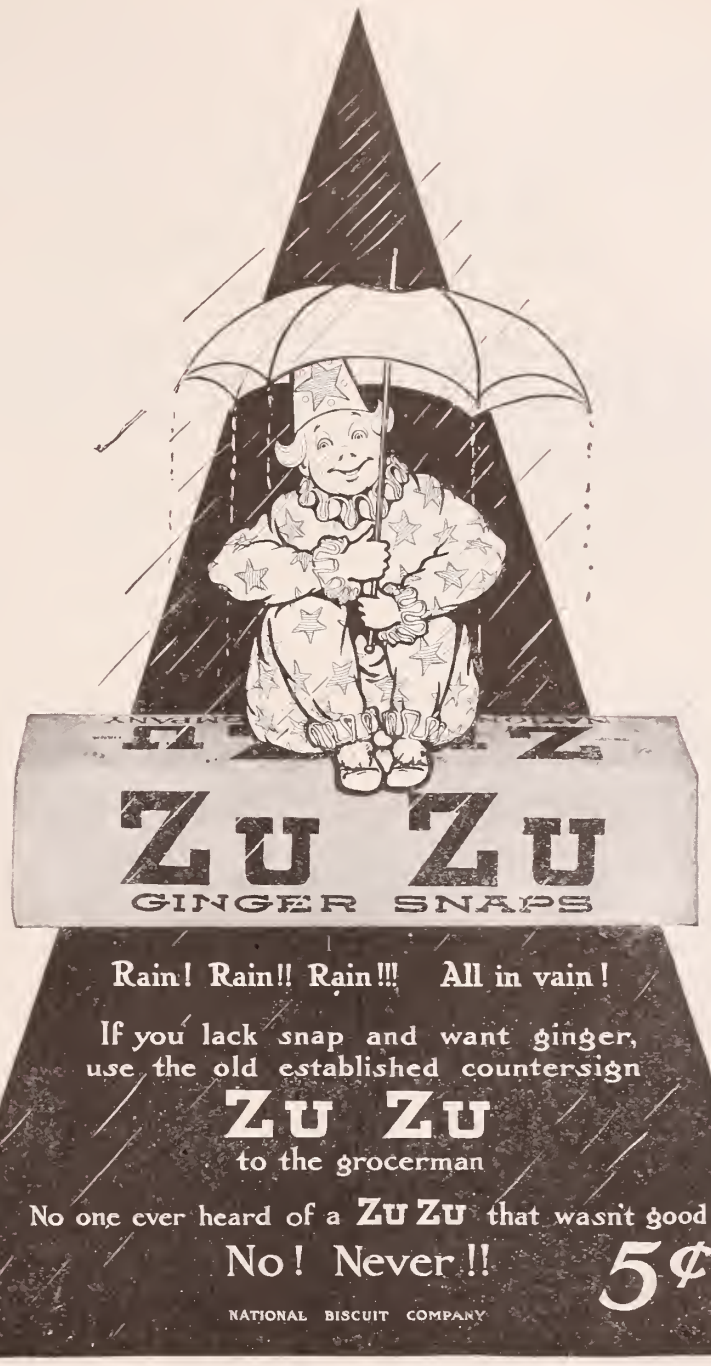
oldiers' Monument, Moundsville, W. Va.

THOUSANDS of Brand New, Spick and Span, Large, Brilliant and Beautiful American Flags will float from Patriotic American Homes on JULY THE FOURTH that have cost their owners not one cent---the splendid flags procured by subscribers to The Christian Herald under the terms of our Great Patriotic Offer, previously announced.

One of these flags was used on Memorial Day at the unveiling of the Beautiful Soldiers' Monument, shown in this picture. Many more have been used in handsomely decorating schools and Sunday Schools on holiday occasions, and hundreds will be used for this purpose in celebrating Independence Day.

On the "Glorious Fourth" every American home, in every part and corner of this broad land, should fly the ever glorious Stars and Stripes. Let "Old Glory" adorn and beautify YOUR HOME on our Great Patriotic Holiday. Pay the tribute of respect due to your country's flag on our National Birthday---but let the flag that you fly be one that will do credit to your home and your country; a flag worthy to float from public building or private mansion; a flag of which your children may be proud in years to come.

Such is the Superb American Flag that every member of The Christian Herald family has now the opportunity to secure, ABSOLUTELY FREE, in addition to the two other Superb Premiums included in our Patriotic Offer mentioned on page 527.



ZU ZU
GINGER SNAPS
Rain! Rain!! Rain!!! All in vain!
If you lack snap and want ginger, use the old established countersign
ZU ZU
to the grocerman
No one ever heard of a ZU ZU that wasn't good
No! Never!!
5¢
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

OSTERMOOR
Mattress $15.
To get the genuine that is "built—not stuffed"
See that this trade mark is sewn on the end
Don't You Find Hot Weather Sleeping is most difficult, but most necessary? The long days of wakefulness and work require absolute rest at night. Summer heat weakens and irritates the nerves of sensation, so that the slightest uncomfortable touch or pressure of the bed produces restlessness. The Ostermoor Mattress is ideal in Summer. It is perfectly sanitary, refreshingly cool and absolutely comfortable. It rests the muscles and soothes the nerves and gives the "balmy sleep" which is "tired nature's sweet restorer."
Our 144-Page Booklet, "The Test of Time" and Samples of Ticking Sent Free
With them we send the name of your Ostermoor dealer. When you buy, be sure that the name "Ostermoor" and our trade-mark label is sewed on end of mattress. Then, and then only, will you have a genuine mattress. If your dealer has none in stock, we will ship direct, express prepaid, same day check is received, 30 Nights' Free Trial granted, money returned, if dissatisfied. Send for our free book, "The Test of Time."
OSTERMOOR & COMPANY, 115 Elizabeth St., New York
Canada: Alaska Feather & Down Co., Ltd., Montreal.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Bear in mind that "The Gods help those who help themselves." Self help should help you to use SAPOLIO

"Porosknit"
Summer Underwear
FOR MEN FOR BOYS
Boys don't like underwear in summer. That's why they all like "Porosknit," the summer underwear that feels least like underwear, and most like nothing at all.
This Label

Makes You Sure
of fit and wearing quality—and of clean, cool, well-ventilated Summer Comfort for the boy.
BOYS' Shirts and Drawers, each 25c
Men's Shirts and Drawers, each 50c
Union Suits, Boys' 50c; Men's $1.00.
In all standard styles. Send for new booklet on "Coolness, Comfort and Economy."
CHALMERS KNITTING CO.
30 Washington St.
Amsterdam, N. Y.

REVERSIBLE
Linene
COLLARS CUFFS AND BOSOMS
TRADE MARK
VAN DYCK
TASSO
ANGELO
RUBENS
RAPHAEL
The Greatest Comfort at the least expense
Made in 10 styles
10 for 25 cents at stores
By mail 30 cents, or Sample 6 cents in U. S. stamps
Give size and style
REVERSIBLE COLLAR COMPANY,
Dept. T. Boston, Mass.

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief For PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all afflictions of the skin.
Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free.
GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

Young People's Societies

Missionary Pocketbooks*

ONE sad result of the constantly increasing cost of living in America is the reduction of gifts to good causes. Perhaps the missionary cause suffers most, in the general economy.

This reduction of gifts is often unwilling; but with the cost of meat, flour, sugar and most articles of clothing constantly rising, many worthy families are unable to do more than provide for themselves the necessaries of life. Some maintain that the high tariff causes these increased expenses. Others insist that the advance necessitated by the tariff is unimportant, but that the greed of the merchants has raised the prices. Combinations of merchants have made the increase so widespread that the stories which they circulate become plausible; these are usually to the effect that the high price is required by the scarcity of the article.

It is plain that we cannot give to the Lord, when, even with careful management, all our earnings must go for merely decent food, shelter and clothing. It is estimated by many profound students that we are paying more than twice as much as we should for most of our staples, even allowing a good profit to manufacturer and middleman. The sight of the luxury in which many of these two classes live, confirms this opinion; and they are too often indifferent to the call of the missionary, while those who have been cruelly taxed to provide the automobiles and yachts and European trips of the rich would gladly give, but for the fact that all they could earn has been too often snatched from them by the "captains of industry."

Beecher spoke of this class more than twenty years ago in these words: "The man that stands to-day upon a pedestal simply because he is rich, will in another fifty years stand in the pillory if he does not make his riches serve mankind." Then he named Peter Cooper, that benevolent saint, of whose memory New York is so proud, and closed with, "May God increase the procession of such men!" It was in April, and he used the figure of springtime to illustrate his point: "To-day only here and there shall you see a crocus peeping out, or the buds on the willow giving token of the coming summer; but by this promise you know that ere long the whole air will be perfumed with bloom. So when you see these men here and there use their wealth for the benefit of their fellowmen, you may know that summer is advancing and is not far away."

Yes, but we want men who have made their money honestly. We have too many already who have amassed fortunes in dubious ways, yet give generously of their wealth.

Lately, in New York, a small syndicate of capitalists bought a surface railroad for several million dollars. Then they sold it to a large corporation, of which they were members, for nearly double what they paid for it. The profits they divided among themselves. Each received several hundred thousand dollars.

Their crookedness was discovered, and they were compelled to disgorge their ill-gotten gains, but they had violated no statute, and could not be imprisoned. It is by means like this that the enormous wealth of our country is too often diverted into the hands of unscrupulous men—and the missionary is the first man to suffer.

Nothing can spur our missionary enthusiasm like the study of missionary literature. Read the life of Paton—read the life of Brainard. Your heart will melt with love and pity, and you will long to help their noble successors. Your prayer will be like Brainard's: "Oh that I could be a flame of fire in the service of my God!"

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 27. TEXT: II. Cor. 9:6-15.

Sleeping Disciples*

THERE are few of us who can remain for long at a time in a white heat of enthusiasm. The flames die down, the warmth disappears, only cold, gray ashes are left. But it is something if we can be enthusiastic for even a part of the time. Some cannot. There are certain cold and inert natures which never kindle, and it is the enkindled, ardent souls that achieve. Intense feeling is all that conquers.

Think of Savonarola attacking with lofty fanaticism the corruption of the Italian court. He knew that it meant death to him, but the divine fire would not down. He did the work, but he lost his life.

Marcus Whitman would never have saved Oregon to the Union, but for his God-given enthusiasm. Palissy, the potter, had a soul of flame. John Wesley cherished within his heart a consuming passion for England's rescue from the spiritual torpor into which she had fallen. The great know, as it were, no sleep. Some deep purpose ensnares their minds in early life and it never sinks below their vision until death overtakes them.

There is no doubt that the great mass of us, however alert we may be about our secular business, are shamefully delinquent in our spiritual life. The time-old superstition that if we fling our coin and go through certain forms of church attendance and fraternal visiting, we have discharged our religious duty, still keeps a hold upon the modern mind, and yet we can do all those things while we are virtually in a spiritual sleep.

We say that we need "a revival." Very true. But this revival does not need to come to us from the outside. We can summon it from our own souls, by prayer and will.

Macaulay accuses the English people of this same habitual stupidity and unconcern. They woke up to morality when the excesses of Byron were bruited about. He says:

"We reflect complacently on our own severity, and compare with pride the high standard of morals established in England, with Parisian laxity. At length our anger is satiated, and our virtue goes to sleep for seven years more."

All communities are thus subject, like men, to lapses from activity. We not only sleep to our own personal harm, but we sleep to the harm of the public. Why are our streets so unclean? Why are so many of our towns saloon-ridden? Why are corruption and "graft" flourishing in every State? Simply because we, the citizens and sovereign rulers of our republic, are sleeping, unmindful of our responsibilities. If the good citizens of our country could but rouse themselves and stay roused, for even a few years, these wrongs would be righted, but we are too selfish—too lazy.

One of our poets has written of the ballot, that it is

> A weapon that descends as still
> As snowflakes fall upon the sod;
> Yet executes a freeman's will
> As lightning does the will of God."

Still, a large proportion of our voters will not even take the trouble to see that the laws are administered properly.

We are all too prone to fall asleep at our posts. Yet the cause of Christ needs us every moment, in our own hearts, in our homes, in our beloved country. Let every patriot say to himself:

> I will not cease from mental fight,
> Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand.
> Till we have built Jerusalem
> In America's great and pleasant land.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 27. TEXT: Matt. 26: 36-46.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 524, and write them for full information.

Vudor

A Cool, Shady Porch
at any hour of the hottest day is made possible by Vudor Porch Shades. While keeping out the heat and glare of the sun, they admit every breeze and permit free circulation of air. They can be seen through from the inside but not from the outside, giving seclusion and privacy.
Vudor Porch Shades
are substantially made of wide linden wood slats bound together with strong seine twine; and they last for years. They are stained in artistic weather-proof colors, green or brown, and come in various widths.
Do not confuse Vudor Porch Shades with the flimsy bamboo or imported screens, but ask for Vudor Porch Shades, and look for the Vudor aluminum name-plate. Prices from $2.25 up, according to width.
Interesting Booklet Free
Write for our booklet illustrating in colors and fully describing Vudor Porch Shades and Vudor Re-enforced Hammocks. With the booklet we will send the name of dealer in your town.
HOUGH SHADE CORPORATION
242 Mill Street, Janesville, Wis.

IGNORANCE of the laws of self and sex will not excuse infraction of Nature's decree. The knowledge vital to a happy, successful life has been collected in "SEXOLOGY."
A BOOK FOR EVERY HOME
(Illustrated)
By William H. Walling, A.M., M.D.
It contains in one volume:
Knowledge a Young Man Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Husband Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Have.
Knowledge a Father Should Impart to His Son.
Medical Knowledge a Husband Should Have
Knowledge a Young Woman Should Have.
Knowledge a Young Wife Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Have.
Knowledge a Mother Should Impart to Her Daughter.
Medical Knowledge a Wife Should Have.
"Sexology" is endorsed, and is in the libraries of the heads of our government, and the most eminent physicians, preachers, professors and lawyers throughout the country.
Rich Cloth Binding, Full Gold Stamp, Illustrated, $2.00
Write for "Other People's Opinions" and Table of Contents.
PURITAN PUB. CO., Dept. 167, PHILA., PA.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

WHEEL CHAIRS
A Wheel Chair is often an invalids's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalid's Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on 30 Days' Trial.

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free catalogue NOW.
GORDON MFG. CO.
432 Madison Ave., Toledo, O.

FULFILLING THE LAW

By Mrs. M. Baxter

THE apostle Paul (in Rom. 6:7) is writing, not to a general public—to people saved and unsaved—but to those whom he could designate as "the called of Jesus Christ . . . beloved of God, called to be saints"; and in Rom. 12:5 he calls them "one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." It is on this ground that he writes them to be subject to the authorities, not from fear of punishment, but "because there is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God." Whatever rulers may be in themselves, to the c' ild of God who is subject to them they are "the ministers of God." For this cause pay ye tribute) also, not because you fear the consequences, but because they (who gather it) "are God's ministers." As though to say, you who have a high and heavenly calling, see that you look on all things from God's point of view; not as to how things touch you, but as to how they may honor him. Let the world act from low and selfish motives, but don't you do so, since you are citizens of heaven.

On the same principle, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another," not because of all the trouble and disappointment, the tangle, apprehension and confusion which debt brings with it, but because it is contrary to love. Be indebted to no man except for love, we can never be out of debt in this respect. We owe to others the love which God has shown to us sinners; none are quit of this debt; for the more we do love others, the more we see how much we owe them for Christ's sake. "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law," "God is love." It is a large order when God commands us to love the Lord with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our mind. But we see how this is possible from the words of the apostle John: "He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." Only God dwelling in us can love with divine love; and all other love is false. The apostle shows how all the commandments of God are included in "Thou shalt love." There is no lower standard than God's own for our love to him, and it is all inclusive. And there is no lower standard for our love to man than, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"; this leads us, by love, to "serve one another." If we have really entered into the wondrous truth of "the body of Christ," and look on our fellow-members not only as being, in common with us, "members of Christ," but also, and just as truly, "members one of another," our love becomes spontaneous; it is as present, but as unconscious, as the interdependence of the members of our earthly bodies.

When there is anything of strain in the love which one member bears to another, it is evident that something has come between. The same state of things in our human body speaks disease. "By love serve one another"; not by duty or by constraint. If all we have to do one with the other is prepared by prayer and faith, i.e., by letting everything pass to the other member through the Head, all works in perfect harmony. We can never regulate things which jar between member and member. All must be taken to the Head, who alone is in close touch with every other member, and who alone can discover and judge between member and member. How many harsh judgments, unwise and unloving words, how many actions which are disastrous between members of Christ, would never have been spoken or done if all had passed through the Head in prayer, and in submission, and in confidence toward Him!

THE SACRED IBIS

(See illustration on cover page of this issue.)

THE Ibis, which is still plentiful on the Upper Nile, is of the stork species and is venerated as the sacred bird of Egypt. Mummies of this bird are often found in the ancient Egyptian temples and pictured on the monuments. It was called in the olden times Hab or Bib, and by modern Egyptians it is spoken of reverently as Abu-Hannes ("Father John"). It was held to be the avatar, or incarnation, of the Egyptian god Thoth or Hermes, who, when fleeing from the wrath of Typhon, assumed its present bird shape. There are many fanciful legends concerning it: one, that its feathers could frighten and even kill the crocodile; another, that it appeared at the rise of the Nile and disappeared at the height of the inundation. It was believed to have come originally from Arabia, to deliver Egypt from winged serpents. It drank only the purest water, and the priests, following its example, would drink only from the pools it frequented. Such was its intense love of Egypt that it would pine and die of voluntary starvation if taken elsewhere. Finally, its body was believed to be incorruptible, and to kill an Ibis was punishable with death.

Ibises were kept in Egyptian temples and worshiped there, being tended with the greatest care, and having beautiful youths and maidens as its servitors. This is the theme chosen by Gerome for his celebrated painting. Ibis worship is no longer known, although the "sacred bird" is still held in deep veneration by the people, who regard it as the perfection of bird beauty and grace. It is one of the few living links of those remote days when the land of the Pharaohs was the centre of power and heathen idol worship.

O STAINLESS ibis, with thy flashing plumes,
Adored by sages in the days of old;
Wandering amid the milk-white lotus-blooms,
And held above all price of gems or gold!
What sweeter task for dark Egyptian maid,
Than offering thee thy dainty mollusc food;
And underneath the grateful palm-tree shade,
To place the water for thy cherished brood!

We speak thy name, and at the simple word
Back roll the ages, and we stand beside
Great, carven palaces, the while is heard
The Nile's majestic and wide-sweeping tide.
Around thee, priests and stately monarchs bow,
And incense burn before thy snowy breast;
They little dream that we, irreverent now,
Call thee a common bird, like all the rest.

Thus pass the idols of the elder time.
Beneath the feet of generations new
Are trampled forms that in another clime
Once claimed the praise of Gentile or of Jew.
The sacred ibis still the mystic Nile
Frequents, and gently rears her long-billed young;
But, ah! no more in temple peristyle
Her name is worshiped and her praise is sung.

Kate Upson Clark.

The kind with the natural flavor of the tomato—"Keeps" after it is opened.

Blue Label Ketchup

Pure and Unadulterated, containing only those ingredients

Recognized and Endorsed by the U. S. Government

Made only from red-ripe tomatoes—fresh from the field—(skins, cores and seeds removed), cooked ever so lightly, delicately spiced, and prepared in cleanly kitchens by experienced chefs.

Formula and label unchanged:—the Food Law now conforms to our high standard of excellence.

Our aim has always been Quality and our many products—including our Ketchup—Canned Fruits, Vegetables, Meats, Soups, Jams, Jellies, Preserves, etc., are the acknowledged standards of Purity and all that is Best.

Insist upon goods bearing our name. Do not accept substitutes.

Write to-day for our Booklet, "Original Menus," telling what to have for breakfast, luncheon or dinner.

Our kitchens, in fact all portions of our factory, are always open and visitors are made welcome.

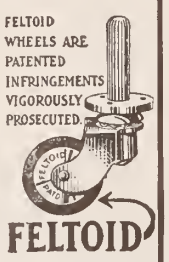
CURTICE BROTHERS CO.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Ordinary Casters Ruin!

YOU know the cost of refinishing floors and renewing their coverings. Every time your furniture is moved about on ordinary casters, the loss to you can be figured in actual dollars and cents.

Prove this yourself! Examine the surface of your hardwood floors and look closely at your rugs and matting after metal caster wheels have passed over them.

Such damage is unnecessary. To realize a loss and not prevent it is extravagance in its worst form. It is practical economy to



Use Feltoid Casters and Furniture Tips

Feltoid Wheels are strong and durable and their velvety surface obviates further damage.

Feltoid Casters and Tips are guaranteed to wear—are economical—will save many times their cost in a single season. You know the effects of metal wheels—that rubber disintegrates—wooden wheels split—wheels of leather become hard and develop sharp edges.

Feltoid Wheels and Tips mean real economy of wear.

By immediately substituting "Feltoid" for your old casters, you will have given an extension of life to your floors and their coverings.

In future orders to your dealer, insist that each piece of furniture be equipped with Feltoid Casters.

Write immediately for Booklet giving styles, prices, etc.

The BURNS & BASSICK COMPANY
Department M, Bridgeport, Conn.

NOW IN AN ORCHESTRA

How Music Lessons FREE Started Him

"I could not play a note when I received the first lesson from you, and now I am playing in a good orchestra of ten pieces, and can read music and play as well as any of them. I shall always recommend your home study school of music." That is what Eli Smith, Jr., R. R. No. 2, Marietta, Ill., writes after a one-year course on the Violin.

Eli Smith's only expense under our free tuition plan was for postage and music. That cost him less than Two Cents a day, and he was under no further obligation whatever.

If you wish to learn to play the Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, Cornet or learn to Sing, our teachers will come to you by mail once a week with a lesson until you can read music and play your instrument to your own satisfaction.

Over ten thousand weekly lessons are now being sent to homes all over the world to pupils in all walks of life, from seven years of age to seventy.

Our free tuition plan will enable you to get weekly lessons costing You less than two cents a day. It will be your only expense and places you under no further obligation whatever.

Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our booklet and free tuition offer. It will be sent by return mail free. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7, 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

CORNISH FROM FACTORY TO HOME
On a Year's Free Trial

Easy Terms

Why Shouldn't You Buy As Low As Any Dealer?

Buy on the Cornish Plan

which, in brief, places a strictly high grade piano or organ in your home, freight paid if you wish, at rock-bottom factory price, upon terms of your own choice, giving you 1 year to test the instrument before you need decide to keep it, and we give you an ironclad Bond of Indemnity which holds us to this offer and also insures instrument against defect for 25 years.

Send for the New Cornish Book

The most beautiful piano and organ catalogue issued; it shows the choicest of our 50 latest styles and explains things you ought to know whether you buy from us or elsewhere. The book is yours for the asking. Write for it now.

Save One-third. Buy on the Cornish Plan.

CORNISH CO. Washington, N.J.
Established Over 56 Years

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for Inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps
R.S. & A.B. LACEY, Rooms 20-30 Pacific Bldg., Wash., D.C.

The Story of Marco

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco did not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder became more and more unbearable. The man grew ugly and the food was scarce. Marco ran away and played for a living but made little. Christmas Eve Marco began to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to his selling on a corner he called his own. He rescues Jimmy from under a moving car, takes him home, and remains with him.

CHAPTER XIV

"A Place up de River"

MARCO had been with the Nolans four months. He was in school now, a part of the time—Miss Dole had seen to that. He was a newsboy, too, and Miss Dole had helped him to that. He had a badge all his own, and he, like Jimmy, had signed a card whereon were stated the color of his hair and eyes, his name, his weight, his height, and various other items of information, all of which were quite unnecessary, in Marco's opinion. He was a member of the "gang," too. Jimmy—long since recovered from his injury—had seen to that. And, on the whole, in Marco's estimation of himself, he was eminently prosperous. Only one cloud showed above his horizon—but that cloud was growing larger every day. Flossie was not yet found.

Money matters at the Nolans were very simple. While Jimmy, the chief breadwinner, was incapacitated, Marco turned over all that he earned to Mrs. Nolan. After Jimmy's recovery, Marco kept half for himself. Pat Nolan, for some days after Marco's arrival, had been a terror and a troublesome expense; but he disappeared after a time, and Jimmy came home one day with the cheering announcement that his father was "jugged," and would not be out for six months. After that the little family in the back room up three flights breathed more easily, and ceased to shudder at every shuffling step on the stairs.

April passed and May came. In the little oases of green where two streets crossed, Spring awoke and touched everything with her magic hand. There was the smell of green things growing, and the sound of birds twittering in the tree branches. Along the window-ledges of the tenements, the pindling geraniums lifted their heads and blossomed into flecks of red and pink and white; and even in the refuse-strewn back yards patches of courageous green appeared. Out on the sidewalks the children swarmed with their hoops and balls and roller skates; and on the steps and curbstones the women tended their babies and called to each other joyously. Unmistakably Spring had come.

It was then that Mrs. Nolan noticed a change in Marco. The boy had grown even thinner and paler, and his eyes looked out wistfully from cavernous depths. His step lagged, and he ate almost nothing. His earnings, too, grew scantier day by day, though there was every evidence that he tried valiantly to keep up with Jimmy and the other boys in his paper-selling. He seldom touched the violin now, and he often perched himself in the window only to sit there motionless with his eyes on the broken line of roofs outside.

Twice Mrs. Nolan questioned him, but she got no answer that was satisfactory. He was well, and there was not anything the matter, he said.

June came; but matters grew only worse. Marco was almost ill now. He still sold papers—or tried to—but his thin little voice could not rise above the roar of the streets, and his stumbling feet failed half the time to reach the prospective customer until it was too late. Even Jimmy eyed him sharply, and jeered good-naturedly at his ill-success. At last he questioned him, peremptorily, but not unkindly.

"Look a-here, kid, what's up?" he demanded. "Ye've been off yer feed fur a month. Thar ain't a guy on de street what can't beat ye out in no time—walkin' back'ards, too. What's up?"

"Nothin'."

"Cut it out! Thar is, too, an' you knows it."

Marco shook his head and stumbled off to catch a passing car, and Jimmy had no choice but to turn to his own affairs. An hour later, however, business was over for the day, and then Jimmy probed the boy again. This time he was more successful; he found out what was the matter.

Until noon the next day — which happened to be Sunday—he pondered what Marco had said to him; then he sought out Miss Dole at the Settlement House.

"Well, Jimmy," she smiled, "what can I do for you?"

Jimmy choked and cleared his throat.

"Well, ye see, ma'am," he stammered, "I come ter see if ye'd let me off from goin' ter that 'ere place this summer where I been two years."

"Let you off! Why, Jimmy, you can't mean Mont-Lawn!"

"Yes'm, that's it; Mont-Lawn."

"But, Jimmy, I thought you—liked to—to go there," remonstrated Miss Dole, faintly.

Jimmy's chin quivered, but his head came up with a defiant jerk.

"Sure; but I been thar twice, an' Marco, he hain't never. I thought mebbe you'd let him go—in my place." In spite of the air of defiant nonchalance, Miss Dole caught the break in Jimmy's voice, and understood.

"Yes, I see," she said gently, after a moment. "You want Marco to go in your place."

"Well, Marco, he's sick," explained Jimmy, gaining new courage, now that the plunge had been taken. "An' last night he let on a lot how he's feelin'. He ain't used ter cities like I be; he run on somethin' awful 'bout trees an' grass an' red sunsets an' big clouds, an' a sky what didn't stop till it hit the ground. An' he wants 'em. He wants 'em somethin' awful; an' I remembered that Mont-Lawn's got all them things, an' I don't need 'em, 'course, bein' well an' strong, so I thought mebbe you'd let him go in my place. Say, will ye?"

For a moment Miss Dole did not answer. She was looking at the little twisted form before her that was so "well and strong," and she was thinking of the stories that had come to

Continued on next page

PRESSED HARD
Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in one of the southern states says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it that after the meal was over I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

5% The Envied INVESTORS

EVERYWHERE the envied persons are those who have profitable investments in good real estate mortgages. You would emulate them, but perhaps your capital is too small to make a beginning.

The "INDUSTRIAL" loans the AGGREGATE capital of numerous investors in sums to suit borrowers. Located in the greatest industrial city of the Union, where property values steadily increase, loaning on real estate security to borrowers who pay interest and part of principal monthly, the profits are absolutely assured.

5 Per Cent. a Year

We reckon earnings from the day we receive the money and up to the day it is withdrawn. On thirty days' notice any part or all of the principal is returned if desired.

Supervision by the New York Banking Department

Assets Over $1,900,000.00. Surplus and Profits of $138,000.00, a record of 16 years of faithful and exact dealing certified to by small investments throughout the Union, are the features that justify confidence in our institutions.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Correspondence Invited

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.,
2 Times Building,
Broadway & 42d St., New York City

GENUINE BARGAINS IN HIGH-GRADE UPRIGHT Pianos.. Slightly used instruments: 12 Steinways from $350 up; 6 Webers from $250 up; 9 Krakauers from $250 up; 7 Knabes from $250 up; 3 Chickerings from $250 up; also ordinary second-hand Uprights $75 up; also 10 very fine Parlor Grand pianos at about half. Write for full particulars. Cash or easy monthly payments. Lyon & Healy, 62 Adams St., Chicago. We ship everywhere on approval.

PULPITS, Platform Chairs, Sunday School Seats, Collection Plates, Church Pews, School Desks, Opera Chairs, Lodge and Bank Furniture, Office Desks. Ask for Catalog by number only

C112 Church Furniture | School Desks S112
L112 Lodge Furniture | Opera Chairs O112
B112 Bank Furniture | Office Desks D112

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO

COMBINATION OFFER

10 Fine Birthday Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Beautiful Rose Post Cards mailed for 10 cts.
10 Brilliant Fourth-of-July Post Cards, 10 cts.
MADISON ART COMPANY, Madison, Conn.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business.

Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO.,
290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

WEDDING INVITATIONS
100 for $3.50

Announcements, etc., engraved and printed. Latest styles, best quality, sent prepaid anywhere. Visiting Cards, 100 50c; with case 75c. Write for samples.
The Estabrook Press, 27 Head Bldg., Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

"ASTRONOMY AND BIBLE CLASS"; 1400 enrolled. Write Pres., C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

her of how this same little lad had reveled in the fun and frolic and sunshine and good food of the Children's Vacation Home during the two visits he had made there.

"Very well, Jimmy," she said at last slowly, "I'll see what I can do. Perhaps I'll look up Marco myself some day."

"Thank ye," mumbled Jimmy, rising precipitately to his feet, and stumbling out of the room. It had come to him just then with an overwhelming force, what a dreary thing life was going to be, after all, with no ten-days' visit to Mont-Lawn to look forward to—the object of his dreams all winter.

Yet to Marco, an hour later, he said:

"I reckon mebbe I've got some o' dem 'ere trees an' sunsets fur ye, kid. Thar's a place up de river, where folks takes kids like you, an' gives 'em ten days in de country. An' thar's girls thar, too. Mebbe dat yaller-haired sister o' your'n what's lost'll be one of 'em; who knows?"

CHAPTER XV

At Mont-Lawn

PERHAPS among all the seventy children that met at the Bible House that June afternoon at one o'clock, there was none quite so happy as the dark-eyed, white-faced boy with the violin-case clutched tightly in his hand. Beside him, to be sure, there was another little lad, a hunchback, whose face was scarcely less eager. Just how Miss Dole had managed to procure permission for both to go to Mont-Lawn, Jimmy did not know; but somebody had made it possible, and the two boys agreed that whoever it was must be very kind indeed.

To Jimmy this medical examination in the little room at the top of the Bible House was an old story, but to Marco it was all new and interesting. It was a little fearsome, too; for behind the screen in the corner was a doctor before whom each child must pass. Twice Marco had seen a boy come away with red eyes and quivering lips—something was the matter, and he could not go. What if he, too, could not go? What if he, too, must go back to the hated bricks and alleyways? Where then would be his ten beautiful days of grass and trees and sky that reached as far as the eye could see? Marco grew faint with the horror of the thought—then his name was called, and he found himself dizzily crossing the room to that fateful screen in the corner.

He smiled, afterward, to think how soon it was all over. A quick, but a very keen, glance at his eye, his ear, and his throat, with something thrust for a moment into his mouth; then a gentle turn toward the other room, which meant that he might go; and that was all. Jimmy, too, came almost at once, and together they joined the chattering, laughing swarms of boys and girls, waiting for the order to start.

Marco took time then to look about him. He was thinking of Flossie. There were girls, plenty of them: big, little, tall, short, blue-eyed, black-eyed, light-haired and dark-haired; but nowhere was the one he sought, and he said as much to Jimmy.

"Pooh! Jest hold yer horses," retorted Jimmy, airily. "These ain't de only pebbles on de beach—thar's heaps more already up thar. You jest wait an' see!"

The ride to Tarrytown in the special car, the trip across the Hudson to Nyack, and the scramble for places in the big four-seated carriages that were to take them to Mont-Lawn—it was all very wonderful to Marco. Already now he could see trees and grass and far-reaching blue sky. Already his dream was coming true.

He was on the front seat of the first carriage with the driver. For long minutes they had been climbing up, up, up. On each side of them were the cool green woods, and above their heads were the birds singing. On the seat behind a boy crowed, "Jest look at the black-eyed Susies!" And the cry was taken up with a shout, and echoed from half a dozen lusty throats.

To Marco it was almost too good to be true—and he was to have ten whole days of it! He was quite hugging himself with joy when suddenly the carriage swung around the last curve, and he saw the strangest sight he had ever seen in his life: three hundred children lined up along the fence on one side and the wall on the other, joyously shouting at the top of their voices. Just what they were shouting Marco could not make out until he had almost reached the lodge gates; then he caught the words:

"Spring chicken to-day! Spring chicken to-day!"

There was no time to answer. The carriage rolled through the gates and up the driveway. Marco's dazed eyes swept across the sloping green lawns, the pretty cottages, the fields, and the woods beyond, and rested finally on the shimmering silver of the Hudson far to the east, where the sky came down to meet the earth.

To the homesick little lad, so long hungering for the blessed out-of-doors, it was overwhelming. With a quick-drawn, sobbing breath he began to cry.

The carriage stopped before the door of the Homestead, and a sweet-faced woman with anxious eyes hurried down the steps.

"Why, my dear! My dear child, what is it?" she cried. "Are you hurt—or ill?"

Marco shook his head. He was ashamed and distressed, but the tears still flowed.

"But what is it? What is the matter?" she urged.

"It—it ain't nothin'," sobbed Marco. "It's only 'cause it's all so b-beautiful—an' it seems as if it just couldn't be true!"

The woman looked away suddenly, with moist eyes. Then she turned to Marco and held out her hand.

"But it is true," she said brightly; "just get down and see if it isn't. Oh, and you've brought your violin, too! Can you play?"

"You jest bet he can, Miss Denny," cried Jimmy, who had already jumped to the ground. "I'm Jimmy; don't you remember? An' dis is Marco, me friend. He's jest dyin' fur trees an' grass an' red sunsets, an' I told him you had 'em up here ter beat the band. An' ye do, don't ye, Miss Denny?"

"We certainly do, Jimmy," laughed Miss Denny, a little unsteadily. "And we hope you'll both be very, very happy. And here is Miss Bird looking for you. You're to be her boys this time, and she'll tell you where to put your things."

Marco turned and found a pair of merry brown eyes smiling down at him. They belonged to a pretty young woman in a white dress, who already had gathered around her a dozen other boys of about Marco's size.

"Come," she said, "and I'll show you your locker, and where you are to sleep. Then Jimmy shall show you the rest of Mont-Lawn."

To be continued

Mothers, Be Cautious

In selecting a food for the baby don't experiment. Baby can't stand much experimenting. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is acted upon by the infant stomach substantially the same as mother's milk. For 50 years it has made glad mothers and started thousands of babies on life's journey with health and happiness.

CREAMY Cup Custards that melt in your mouth. How cool and good they taste on a sweltering day. It's easier than you think to make them just right.

¶ Ask any good cook, she'll tell you: Simply milk, eggs and so forth—and for the sake of the right consistency and smoothness you must use

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

¶ Do you know that the finest shortcake ever baked is made with part Kingsford's? The cake itself, mind you. One-fourth corn starch and three-fourths flour give a wonderful lightness and delicacy of texture. The Book tells.

¶ Send a post card today, and we will mail without charge our remarkable little Cook Book "O"—with One Hundred Cool Desserts for Hot Weather.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, OSWEGO, N. Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

A Time-Saving Stove

The New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-stove, thirty seconds after the touch of the match, will deliver at the stove top a strong, clean heat of great working power.

More than that, you may run it for hours continuously; bake bread and cake; prepare a meal or do the weekly ironing; and for the whole time never be conscious of undue heat because of the stove. In this respect the is the only sensible stove for summer. Differs from other oil stoves in its strong, handsome, useful CABINET TOP which can be used for holding dishes and for keeping meals hot. Also equipped with drop shelves on which may be placed small cooking utensils after they are removed from the blaze. Has every improvement—even to racks for towels. All told, it is a stove of convenience, comfort, safety and economy. Three sizes. Can be had either with or without Cabinet Top. If not at your dealer's, write our nearest agency.

NEW PERFECTION

Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove

The Rayo LAMP gives a light more agreeable than the distressing flicker of gas or the blinding glare of electric bulbs. One's eyes never tire reading by the Rayo. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

Particularly Desirable after Dinner

BETTER—STRONGER

More lasting in flavor than any other. A try—a test—Goodbye to the rest!

Sold in 5¢ 10¢ and 25¢ packets
Frank H. Fleer & Company Inc.
Philadelphia, U.S.A. and Toronto, Can.

SEND NO MONEY

THIS PLUME SENT TO YOUR HOME FOR FREE EXAMINATION

This magnificent French curl genuine ostrich plume is full 17 inches in length and made of the highest grade of hard fine ostrich selected from the male bird. Has a very glossy fibre and is extra wide, with heavy dropping head.

OUR LIBERAL OFFER. Let us send you this magnificent plume in black, white or colors prepaid for free examination. So confident are we of pleasing you that we will send you this plume for examination without one cent of cost to you. Examine carefully. If you find it the most marvelous value you ever saw and worth double, send us the $1.95 and recommend us to your friends. If after received you are not entirely satisfied, return the plume at once to us. Our illustrated catalogue describing complete line of ostrich plumes and willows sent free on request.

SOUTH AFRICAN IMPORTING CO.
Dept. 61, 1841-43 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Allen's Foot-Ease

Shake Into Your Shoes

Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder for the feet. It relieves painful, swollen, smarting, nervous feet, and instantly takes the sting out of corns and bunions. It's the greatest comfort discovery of the age. Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight fitting or new shoes feel easy. It is a certain relief for ingrowing nails, perspiring, callous and hot, tired, aching feet. We have over 30,000 testimonials. TRY IT TO-DAY. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25 cents. Do not accept any substitute. Sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps.

"In a Pinch, use Allen's Foot-Ease"

FREE Trial Package sent by mail.

ALLEN S. OLMSTED, LeRoy, N.Y.

DEAF 25 YEARS

CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

Corns A-Corn Salve is sure death to corns. It removes them quickly, painlessly, and without risk of blood-poisoning. 15c. at all druggist's or by mail
GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia

FENCE STRONGEST MADE, but strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We Pay Freight. Catalogue free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

Strainer Spoon. Rapid Seller Large catalog free. $3 to $5 a day.
RICHARDSON MFG. CO.
Dept. 6 BATH, N. Y.

Temperance in the Commandments*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

OWE no man anything, but to love one another. One debt we owe, even to unworthy neighbors, the debt of brotherly love, which we must pay in daily instalments, and can never settle up. Love must continue to help even those whose poverty is due to vice. But in charity, as elsewhere, prevention is better than cure, and preventive charity is reform, which cuts the roots of poverty, the vices that make men poor. More than half the dependency is due to drink, gambling and other bad habits. That man loves the drunkard wisely who removes the temptations he is too weak to withstand. And he loves best of all who saves him when a boy, before he begins to drink, by total abstinence and prohibition. Drink is offered in the name of friendship, but no man truly loves his neighbor who helps to put on him the drink habit and its consequences. "Owe no man anything" reminds us of drink as the prolific mother of debt and poverty. Charitable people must pay the rent bill, because the drunken father put the money he owed his landlord into the rumseller's till. On the other hand, after five months of "no license" in Worcester, Mass., a city of 140,000 inhabitants, the largest city that ever voted itself "dry," a bill collector told an official in 1908 he would have to move to some other city to make a living because the number of bills given him to collect were so rapidly diminishing under prohibition. The city tax collector also reported that, in spite of the hard times, he had collected more of the tax bills that year than in the preceding prosperous year under license.

"He that loveth his neighbor hath fulfilled the law." Here, again, we find the love basis of all law, including temperance laws. Children of all ages think of law as wilful restraint of liberty. But all true laws, divine and human, are love's warnings "for our good always." Law is the red lantern to keep us out of danger, and show the only safe way. Law is the lighthouse to keep us off the perilous rocks. And this is pre-eminently true of all temperance laws.

The broad pedestal of total abstinence is shown all through this lesson to be the second table of the law, which Moses and Jesus both condensed into the great command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." One church wisely gathers its members for moral studies under the name of "The Right Relationship League." The saloon breaks up every right relation, honesty, industry, kindliness, alike in the home and on the street, in business and politics and pleasure.

Drink the Mother of Crime

"Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Thou shalt not covet." There is a legend that the devil, having a man in his power, offered him his choice whether he would be a drunkard or break all of the commandments. He chose to be a drunkard, but the result was that he soon broke all of the commandments also. Drink makes men atheists and anarchists. And whoever heard of a drunkard who was not profane and a Sabbath breaker? Or of one who did not dishonor his parents? Few murders are done by sober men.

There are countless declarations of judges, sheriffs and prison officers as to the proportion of crime due to intoxicating beverages. These estimates run from three-fourths to nine-tenths, and are all confirmed by the official statistics gathered in 1880 from nine criminal courts of Suffolk County, Massachusetts, and again by the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor in 1905, for the whole State. The result varied only one per cent., and may be considered the most reliable statistics ever gathered on the subject and fairly representative of American communities where the sale of intoxicants is licensed. We use the first and lowest figures. There were 16,897 court sentences, of which 12,221 were for drunkenness and 68 for illegal liquor selling, together making 73 per cent. of the whole. Further investigation showed that 2,097 of the other offenders in the 27 per cent. were under the influence of intoxicants when the crime was committed, carrying the proportion of crimes traceable directly or indirectly to drink above 85 per cent. The other investigation, including the whole State, showed that 84.41 per cent. of the 26,672 crimes were due to intemperate habits, and 82 per cent. were committed while the criminal was under the influence of intoxicants.

Comparative arrests for drunkenness—the same Massachusetts cities under license and no-license:

Brockton, 1898, license, 1,627; 1899, no-license, 455. Waltham, 1900, license, 634; 1901, no-license, 179. Taunton, 1900, no-license, 482; 1901, license, 1,202. Chelsea, 1901, no-license, 398; 1902, license, 1,246. Newburyport, 1901, license, 673; 1902, no-license, 150. Lowell, 1902, license, 4,077; 1903, no-license, 2,304. Salem, 1903, license, 1,432; 1904, no-license, 503. Woburn, 1903, license, 842; 1904, no-license, 204. Fitchburg, 1905, license, 1,160; 1906, no-license, 359.

With license the arrests for drunkenness in the same cities are from two to nearly five times as great as with no-license. (From Anti-Saloon League Year Book, 1908.)

Love Worketh No Ill to His Neighbor

A prominent preacher in one of the evangelical denominations that allows whisky distillers to be church members, and even elects them to trusteeships, on being reminded that his church courts were more ready to resolve in behalf of the Sabbath than of temperance, replied, "Oh, yes; Sabbath observance is in the Commandments!" It reminded us of the rural justice of the peace who dismissed a man accused of stealing gooseberries because he could not find anything about gooseberries in his law book.

This temperance lesson finds the law against drink where the Christian world has found that against slavery,

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for June 27, 1909. GOLDEN TEXT: Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. 13:14.

BRAIN BUILDING

How to Feed Nervous Cases

Hysteria sometimes leads to insanity and should be treated through feeding the brain and nerves upon scientifically selected food that restores the lost delicate gray matter. Proof of the power of the brain food, Grape-Nuts, is remarkably strong.

"About eight years ago when working very hard as a court stenographer I collapsed physically, then nervously, and was taken to the State Hospital for the insane at Lincoln, Neb., a raving maniac.

"They had to keep me in a straight-jacket and I was kept in the worst ward for three months. I was finally dismissed in the following May but did no brain work for years, until last fall when I was persuaded to take the testimony in two cases.

"One of these was a murder case and the strain upon my nervous system was so great that I would have broken down again except for the strength I had built up by the use of Grape-Nuts. When I began to feel the pressure of the work on my brain and nerves I simply increased the amount of Grape-Nuts and used the food more regularly.

"I now feel like my old self again and am healthy and happy. I am sure that if I had known of Grape-Nuts when I had my trouble 8 years ago I would never have collapsed, and this dark experience in my life would never have happened.

The power of Grape-Nuts as a brain food is simply wonderful and I do not believe any stomach is so weak that it cannot digest this wonderful food."

"There's a Reason." Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville, in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Gives a Fine Finish to Starched Things

Here is a way of giving better finish to starched clothes and linens. Melt a little Pure Refined Paraffine, add it to hot starch, and when the ironing is done you'll be delighted with the firm, lustrous surface on every piece.

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

applied hot is the surest way to seal fruit jars and jelly glasses.

Nothing makes a better floor finish than Pure Refined Paraffine.

A little of it added to wash water helps loosen dirt from soiled clothes.

Write for a Paraffine Paper Pad to keep your sad-irons from sticking—we send it free.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY,
(Incorporated).

Only with an oil lamp is it possible to obtain just the strength and quality of light adapted to most requirements.

MACBETH lamp-chimneys have the qualities of perfect transparency, correct design, and resistance to heat.

They make the lamp give the best light, without smoke or smell, and they do not break until you break them.

My name is on my lamp-chimneys.

My Lamp-Chimney Book insures getting the right chimney for any burner, and gives suggestions about lamps, chimneys, wicks, oils, and tells how to keep lamps in order. I gladly mail it, free, to anyone who writes for it. Address in the second table of the Decalogue, whose essence is love to man. Temperance is a part of this law of right human relations, not a solitary virtue, but one apartment in the happy palace of brotherly virtues that is built on the second table of the law.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Continued from preceding page

One of the eight commandments of Buddha forbids the use of intoxicants. This and like commandments of Hinduism and Mohammedanism have protected half of the human race against the drink curse, and furnished to heathen religions their one conspicuous virtue. These religions enforce prohibition better than it is enforced in some prohibitory parts of Christian nations, and they observe their total abstinence rule better than the ethical rules of our own churches are observed by some Christians. Imagine Paul's summary of the Decalogue put up as the sign over a saloon door:

LOVE WORKETH NO ILL TO HIS NEIGHBOR

In the jeers such a sight would arouse he will find how generally the people recognize that the saloon breaks not one commandment, but all.

Imagine that hung as a motto over a private sideboard. Let it be written at the top of the petition for license which professing Christians are about to sign. Put it over the ballot-box, where thoughtless good men are about to license saloons by their votes.

Here is what is said of prohibition in Maine by one of its British critics, E. N. Bennett, in the Nineteenth Century Magazine, January, 1907: "The prohibition law in Maine has certain distinct advantages, which cannot be lightly disregarded. To a very large extent it prevents the drink habit being formed among the young men who have been decently brought up. It is no longer respectable to drink in public. . . . The fact that the law is frequently violated is not an absolutely convincing argument against its wisdom. Were this the case, there would be a good deal to say against the validity of almost every law, from the Decalogue to bicycle regulations."

It is high time to awake out of sleep. For the most part, men only awake when the saloon has kidnapped some member of the household. They are not aroused when the father or son or daughter of a neighbor goes over the rapids of drink. It is proverbial that many, if not most, of the temperance leaders have been awakened by the invasion of their own homes by the drink evil. What folly is this to leave the door unlocked until, not "the horse," but the hope of the household has been stolen! When some unknown man or woman is reported murdered, hundreds of telegrams and letters from broken hearts pour in on the police, saying: "Send description; perhaps it is our long lost one."

"Let us put off the work of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." The figure suggests that, though revelry assumes to be joy and counts goodness as tame, wickedness is really "darkness," not alone in that it is wickedness, but also in that it is really unhappiness; while goodness is "light" in the sense of joy, as well as of right. At a time when a massacre was feared in Beirut, Syria, American vessels stood guard in the harbor for the protection of American citizens. The admiral in charge did not shell the city, but simply turned his search lights on it, and at once the forces of evil were scattered, driven into dark corners, from which they feared to emerge. Let us turn the light of temperance teaching upon the drink evil.

"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ." In the spring of the year 372, a young man, in the thirty-first year of his age, in evident distress of mind, entered his garden near Milan. The sins of his youth weighed heavily on his soul. Lying under a fig tree, moaning and pouring out abundant tears, he heard from a neighboring house a young voice repeating in rapid succession, "Take and read! Take and read!" Receiving this as a divine admonition, he procured the roll of Paul's epistles. Describing the scene, he says: "I opened it, and read in silence the chapter on which my eyes first lighted (it was the thirteenth of Romans). 'Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.'" He obeyed at once the divine command. His mother's prayers were answered. He came to be known as the great Augustine.

Our Patriotic Offer

For Full Particulars See Last Week's Issue

OFFER No. 1 — We will send you FREE FOR ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER: (1) An American Flag, Best Quality, size Four by Six Feet; (2) A Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, 26 x 31 Inches; (3) A Large Double-Tone Picture, 18x21 Inches, of All the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to Taft.

OFFER No. 2 — We will send you FREE FOR TWO SUBSCRIBERS, ONE NEW and ONE of which may be a RENEWAL, the same Life-Size Facsimile of the Declaration of Independence and the same Large Picture of the Presidents, but a much larger Flag, Five by Eight Feet. No matter when your subscription expires, you may renew now.

Our Wonderful Art Gallery De Luxe goes Free with every Subscription, New or Renewed.

OUR PATRIOTIC OUTFITS SENT FREE, CHARGES PREPAID BY US

To make sure of receiving Patriotic Premiums by the FOURTH OF JULY let us have your order at the earliest possible moment. Act To-day. Address

Christian Herald Flag Offer
Bible House, New York City

Called Higher

Mrs. Nettie M. Parkhurst, of Pulaski, N. Y., fell asleep January 31, 1909.

Mrs. Annette M. Swigert, of Lexington, Ky., passed away a few weeks ago. She was an earnest Christian woman, and had been a reader of this paper for thirty years.

Mrs. Julia Hall died at Port Chester, N. Y., August 5, 1908, at the age of ninety-three years, a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for seventy-seven years.

Mrs. Drusilla Blakeslee, of Bristol, Conn., passed away January 18 of this year. She was eighty-five years of age. She was a diligent reader of THE HERALD, and a sincere and faithful Christian.

Mrs. Harriet Perkins Phelps died at Omaha, Neb, March 16, aged eighty-two years. For more than sixty years she had been a member of the Presbyterian Church, and was always active in church and Sunday School work.

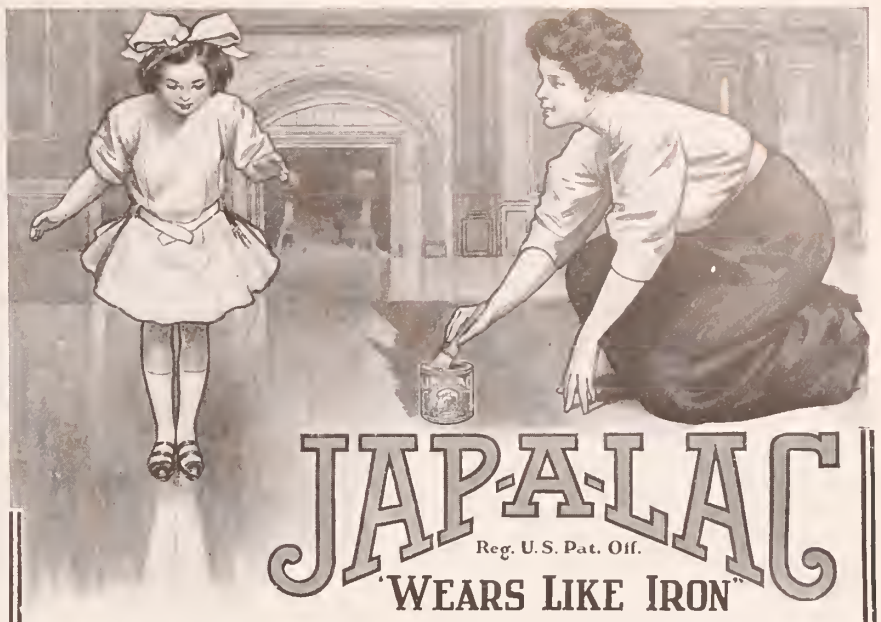
Mary J. Lynde, of Spencer, Mass., who had been a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for over forty years, passed away recently. She was eighty-six years of age and was one of the oldest members of the First Congregational Church.

Laura N. Pritchard, who was a most devoted Christian and a lover of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, died December 14, 1908, at Alluwee, Okla. She was a faithful follower of the cross, and a blessing to all her friends; a most devoted wife and mother.

THE "LAKE OF BAYS" COUNTRY

A handsome brochure, artistically illustrated, has been issued by the passenger department of the Grand Trunk Railway System, telling of the beauties of the Lake and Bays district, in the "Highlands of Ontario." A new feature of this district is the new hotel—the Wawa—at Norway Point. The hotel itself has a page illustration reflecting the summer glories of woodland and water, with a brood of seven wild geese soaring skyward beyond the tower. The concise description embodies the story of a charming resort.

A copy can be obtained free on application to W. S. Cookson, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.



JAP-A-LAC
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.
"WEARS LIKE IRON"

"Isn't Everything Pretty Now?" SANITARY FLOORS

but recently were considered luxuries which only the well-to-do could afford. In the light of our growing knowledge of what sanitation prevents, they have become a necessary safeguard and by virtue of JAP-A-LAC, possible in every home.

A floor covered with JAP-A-LAC sets hard as adamant over night. No need to make special preparations. Apply to-night and to-morrow have a floor with a beautiful glossy surface, in any shade or color you can think of, that has all the virtues of parquetry work---Dustless---No Cracks---Easy to keep Clean. JAP-A-LAC renews everything from cellar to garret, and "Wears Like Iron."

JAP-A-LAC is made in sixteen beautiful colors for refinishing every kind of Woodwork, Bric-a-brac, Chandeliers, Radiators, Furniture, and every painted or varnished surface throughout the entire house.

JAP-A-LAC has no substitute.

For Sale by Paint, Hardware, and Drug Dealers

If your dealer does not keep JAP-A-LAC, send us his name, with 10 cents to cover cost of mailing and we will send a free sample quarter pint can of any color (except gold, which is 25 cents) to any point in the United States.

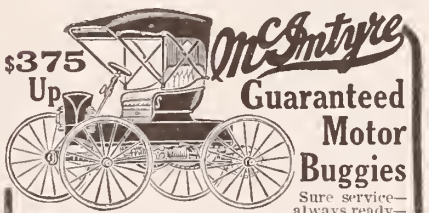
Write for illustrated booklet containing interesting information and beautiful color card. FREE on request.

JAP-A-LAC Model Floor Graining Process solves the problem of "What shall I do with my old carpeted floor to make it sanitary and refined?" Your painter can do it at a little expense or you can do it yourself. Insist on JAP-A-LAC.

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.,
2606 Rockefeller Bldg., Cleveland, O., U. S. A.

Our Green Label Line of clear varnishes is the highest quality manufactured. Its use insures perfect results. Ask your paint dealer.



$375 Up McIntyre Guaranteed Motor Buggies

Sure service—always ready—never fail—never get tired—cost no more than a good horse and buggy—cost far less to keep—sure goers over Any Kind of Roads

Speed up to 30 miles an hour. Simple, durable, guaranteed mechanical construction. Solid tires—no tire troubles or repair expense. A woman or child can drive them. Farmers of high standing may secure appointment as agents. Twenty models to choose from. Complete line. Write for free catalog No. 92, illustrated and descriptive.

W. H. McINTYRE COMPANY, Auburn, Indiana
256 Broadway, New York; 1730 Grand Ave., Kansas City; 418 Third Ave., S., Minneapolis; Canadian Factory, Tudhope-McIntyre Co., Orillia, Ont.

Texas Fruit Farms

Will make you a big steady income of $1,000 to $5,000 a year. Wonderful opportunities here. Fine homes, schools and churches. Best water on earth. Climate is superior to Southern California. Farms here now worth $1,000 an acre.

AND $10 A MONTH TILL PAID.

Get This Catalog

showing farms improved and unimproved. If you want a home all your own here is your chance at a bargain. Pear trees produce over $100 a tree annually. Peaches raised here over 13 inches in circumference. Grapes ripen here 6 weeks earlier than in California. Fruit and vegetable raising pay big profits. Write us today, right now, for catalog, prices and terms.

Security Land Co., Dept. B, Del Rio, Tex

Deafness
"The Morley 'Phone"

A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.

Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO.,
Dept. F., Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

Rider Agents Wanted

in each town to ride and exhibit sample 1909 model. Write for Special Offer.

Finest Guaranteed 1909 Models $10 to $27
with Coaster-Brakes and Puncture-Proof tires.
1907 & 1908 Models $7 to $12
all of best makes
500 Second-Hand Wheels All makes and models, $3 to $8 good as new.....

Great Factory Clearing Sale.
We Ship On Approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow
TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL.
Tires, coaster-brakes, parts, repairs and sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalogs and offer. Write now.
MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. W-71 Chicago

Auto Masseur REDUCES
40 DAY FREE TRIAL FOR BOTH SEXES

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh that I mail it free, without deposit.

When you see your shapeliness speedily returning I know you will buy it.

Try it at my expense. Write to-day.
PROF. BURNS, 1298 Q, BROADWAY, N. Y.

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.
Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

JUST OUT Low-priced, 3-lb. Mop; turn crank to wring; hands keep clean. Women all buy; 150 per cent. to Agents; exclusive territory given; catalog free.
U. S. MOP CO., 634 Main St., Leipsic, O.

ARE YOU DEAF?
We have 25 INSTRUMENTS TO ASSIST HEARING.
On approval Send for Catalogue
WM. C. WILLIS & CO., 134 So. 11th St., Phila.

Shopping

Rushed --- tired --- nervous --- thirsty. Buying desperately and with less care the wearier you become. Pause in your mad career--find a soda fountain. Sit down and drink a glass of cooling, refreshing

Coca-Cola

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Now go back to your shopping with your thirst quenched---your fatigue relieved and your nerves calmer. So that you won't forget, put Coca-Cola on your shopping list.

Refreshing --- Wholesome
Thirst-Quenching

5c Everywhere

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca - Cola

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, June 23, 1909

VOLUME 32 — NUMBER 25
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Painted by W. C. Rice

A LESSON IN KINDNESS

Questions and Answers

H. H., Fort Pierce, Fla. Do colored people continue to celebrate their emancipation day on the 1st of January, as they did immediately after the Civil War, or has the day become obsolescent, or do they celebrate some other day?

The colored people in a number of States still celebrate January 1 as emancipation date. It is the correct date for such a celebration. President Lincoln, in a preliminary proclamation, announced that on January 1, 1862, all persons held in slavery by men in arms against the United States should be declared free. The final proclamation was issued January 1, 1863.

G. E. D. G., California. 1. Is the White House at Washington the original building? 2. Is it true that a coat of paint has been added each year, until the building is fireproof?

1. It is the original structure, so far as the walls are concerned. The White House cornerstone was laid in 1792. It was first occupied in 1800, by President Adams. The British set fire to it in 1814. 2. The white stone walls were blackened by the smoke, so it was given a coat of white paint. It has been kept painted ever since, but with no idea of making it fireproof. We are unable to answer the other questions sent.

Mrs. E. V. C., Denver, Col. Was Jesus a Jew? A noted scholar declares Jesus was not a Jew, and believes that Jesus was born at Nazareth and not at Bethlehem.

He was a Jew, a descendant of the royal house of David, born in Bethlehem of Judea, according to prophecy. All sacred historians agree on these facts.

N. N. H., Mt. Lake, Minn. I sometimes read of the "seven wonders of the world," speaking of the Temple of Diana, at Ephesus, and others. What were these seven wonders, and why so called?

The seven wonders of the world were the Pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging Gardens of Semiramis at Babylon, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Statue of Jupiter by Phidias at Athens, the Mausoleum, the Colossus of Rhodes and the Pharos at Alexandria. These, to the ancients, were the greatest things conceived and built by man.

Mr. Benjamin Greene, South Amboy, N. J., apostrophizes this journal in rhymes that are so appreciative that editorial modesty forbids the reproduction of more than a single stanza. He writes:

"Dear CHRISTIAN HERALD, may you ever
Continue fallen man to raise;
And in this God-inspired endeavor
Countless hosts shall sound thy praise."

Mrs. E. R., Lowell, Ind. If we pray for recovery during sickness and receive healing, is it not our duty to give God the credit for it, regardless of the jeers of Christians, who say it "just happened so," etc.?

No true Christian would laugh or mock at such an act. "In all thy ways acknowledge Him," in your blessings as well as your trials. Give God the glory. Those who criticise such an experience as you describe, do so because they do not understand it. They may never have tested the power of believing prayer.

J. L. H., Concord, Tenn. 1. Is the postal service self-supporting? 2. Who were Lincoln's Vice-Presidents?

1. No; Congress has to appropriate a certain amount each session to make up the deficiency. 2. Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine; Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee. We are unable to answer the last query sent.

S. M., Palmyra. What is the character and object of the "understanding" between Russia and Great Britain, with respect to Persia?

According to the Berlin Vossische Zeitung, the two nations, with Persia's consent, have agreed upon these points: 1. The Shah to restore the constitution and proclaim general amnesty; 2. The financial affairs of Persia to be controlled by Britain and Russia; 3. All ministerial nominations shall be subject to their approval; 4. No concession to be granted without their approval; 5. Persia to contract no loan without their approval; 6. Britain and Russia to protect the Shah and maintain his authority; 7. They guarantee the safety of life and property and of the Persian throne; 8. They guarantee a large loan to Persia.

Mrs. L. N. Kline, Colo. 1. Please explain Matt. 24:20; 2. John 20:17; 3. and I. Cor. 6:19.

1. Flight in the winter would be slow and perilous, and on the Sabbath it would be a breach of the sacred rest. 2. This passage has been much discussed, with little result. He has not come for the purpose of renewing the former human associations with his followers, between whom and himself there is now a new and, if possible, still more sacred relationship than before. 3. It was to show that the whole man is the temple, the soul the innermost shrine, the heart and mind the holy place, and the body the porch and exterior. One and all should be kept clean and pure, as the Holy Spirit will not dwell in an unclean temple. Verse 20 gives the explanation briefly and very clearly.

M. B., Ohio. 1. Is it right or wrong to go visiting with friends on Sunday; that is, to go home with them from church for the rest of the day? 2. Where can I send a piece of ore to have it examined?

1. There might be circumstances which would justify it, and even make it spiritually profitable. We are not shut out from showing kindness or consideration for others, but from needless labor, pleasure-hunting and selfish indulgence. Certainly, to devote it to ordinary visiting and gossip would be wrong. Such matters must be decided by the individual conscience. 2. Write to the assay office, Carson City, Nev.

O. D. C., Lowell, Mass. When Solomon built the temple, why did he command not to have the hammer heard?

Explorations in the subterranean quarries near Jerusalem disclose the fact that the hammer and chisel work of the temple was doubtless all done beneath the surface, where it could not be heard by any in the sacred city. Further, no doubt a considerable portion of the artificers' work was done probably in Tyre and elsewhere, and sent forward to its destination, completed and ready to set up. The object in avoiding all hammering and confusion was a reverent one. It was to be the Lord's house, on a consecrated site, and it would have been unseemly to have the work go on amid clatter and din, when it could be done with quietness and dignity.

A. Von M., San Diego, Calif. Have the Jewish colonies now in Palestine been a success, or otherwise? How many colonists are there?

The management of these colonies in Palestine is in the hands of French officials. The colonies are: Kastinie, 135 inhabitants, 600 hectometres of rich soil; Artuf, 70 residents, 500 hectometres, indifferent soil; Katra, 113 colonists, 500 hectometres, fertile garden ground; Rechowath, 400 inhabitants, 1,065 hectometres, fine productive soil; Wady Chanin, 150 inhabitants, 300 hectometres, soil fair; Ekron, 300 colonists, 900 hectometres, fine farming and garden land; Rischon, 818 colonists, 720 hectometres, chiefly vines and fruits; Petach-Tikwah (near Jaffa), 1,000 colonists, 1,500 hectometres, a flourishing village; Kolonia, 70 residents, 60 hectometres, fruit trees and vegetables. Nearly 10,000,000 francs have been expended upon these colonies. It is not quite clear that they are yet self-supporting.

Inquirer, Massachusetts. 1. Where is it written that God killed a lamb and took the skin to clothe Adam and Eve? 2. Had there been no rain from the creation until the time of the Flood? 3. Did the two thieves, who were crucified with Christ, live for three days after the crucifixion? 4. Does Mal. 4:1-3 make it plain that there is no everlasting punishment for the wicked? 5. What does the parable of "the rich man and Lazarus" teach regarding a future state? 6. Who was the first Christian martyr? 7. When was the Advent Christian Church founded, and in what points of doctrine do they differ from other Protestant denominations?

1. You probably refer to the passage in Gen. 3:21. This passage is usually associated with the institution of sacrifice, typifying the propitiatory sacrifice of the Redeemer. 2. Some scientists hold that there was no rain until the Flood. See Gen. 2:5, 6. 3. See John 19:31-33. 4. This prophecy by Malachi referred primarily to the judgment coming on Jerusalem and also to the day of general judgment. It does not raise the question of everlasting punishment one way or the other, but simply indicates the extreme severity of the punishment awaiting them. 5. This question has been answered over and over again in OUR MAIL-BAG. 6. St. Stephen. 7. William Miller originated the sect called Adventists, about 1833. They differ from the Evangelical churches generally only in their peculiar belief in the personal coming of Christ and his bodily reign with the saints on earth.

C. F. W., Hamilton, N. Y. Is Professor Henry Drummond, the Scotch author, living?

No; Professor Drummond died in 1897.

Photo by Paul Thompson

One of the Contestants Starting in the Balloon Race from Indianapolis

THOUGH the aeroplane has been foremost in the public mind since the success of the Wright Brothers, the old-fashioned balloon, which goes where the wind listeth, is still popular with those who are studying aeronautics. One of the greatest balloon races in history has just been held with Indianapolis as its starting point. Some of the contestants were in the air for the greater part of two days, and some landed at points hundreds of miles apart. The balloons drifted in a southerly direction. The prize for distance was won by the "University City" of St. Louis, piloted by James Berry. It landed on Freestone Peak, on Lookout Mountain. The duration trophy went to the "New York." It was up continuously for thirty-five hours and ten minutes. The record made in 1907 of forty-four hours is still unbroken.

Miscellaneous

F. M. L., Londonderry, Vt. Not that we know of.

M. J. C., Coatsville, Pa. We are unable to answer your question.

F. E. S., Springville, Ia. We are unable to answer the question in regard to the poem.

J. S., Oakfield, Wis. It would be a kindly and Christian act to invite your help to unite with your family in worship. This, we believe, is done in a great majority of our Christian homes.

A. McC., Lumsden Mills, Canada. No general statistics on the subject. It may be true of one locality or country and yet untrue of another.

G. W. D., Owatonna, Minn.. No, to both questions. We are not justified in employing or approving Sunday desecration, as a means of winning people to church membership.

Mrs. J. M., Cincinnati, O. 1. See answer to Reader, Mexico, Mo., in the issue of June 9. 2. Prayer should be addressed to the Father, in Jesus' name. 3. "Selah" indicates a pause in music and a change in the theme.

S. F. A., Vineland, N. J. 1. Non-resistance, as taught by Christ, is absolutely at variance with the world's ways. He taught that there should be no violence, no fighting, no lawsuits, no brawling on the part of his followers, and that even borrowers or thieves were not to be resisted physically. 2. Write to Water Street Mission, New York, for life of Jerry McAuley.

E. W. K., Egypt, Pa. 1. One may be a Christian without being a church member, but the Church is the appointed means of grace and it is a very strange sort of a Christian who does not appreciate its privileges. Besides, there is the explicit injunction not to neglect "the assembling of yourselves together" for worship and praise and the promise of the blessing that follows the confessing of Christ before men. 2. Nothing beyond what is contained in the Scripture record.

Illustrated Red Line Edition
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

WE have on hand a limited number of copies of our superb Illustrated Red Line Edition of Pilgrim's Progress, by John Bunyan, which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD issued as a special De Luxe Edition some time ago, and which is unquestionably one of the finest and most attractive presentations of this beautiful allegory of human life ever published.

These books are not shelf-worn, and are guaranteed not to be damaged in any way, but to make room for other publications we now offer them to our readers, at a decided financial sacrifice, for 60 cents per volume.

Here, then, is a big opportunity for any of our readers who will write us at once to secure, at practically half price, a volume that cheers the heart and elevates the mind; a truly immortal book, of imperishable beauty and power and a noble masterpiece, treasured alike for generation after generation by the most intellectual as well as the plain people.

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS is of special interest and value at this particular time to members of the Christian Endeavor Society, on account of the "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS TOPICS" included in the series for this year.

This edition is superb in its pictorial features, containing in all 102 fine illustrations—many of them full pages. The volume is handsomely bound in Red Vellum De Luxe, with an emblematic cover design and lettering in gold—428 pages. The book measures, when open, 9 x 15 inches, weighs nearly three pounds, and will be sent, all charges prepaid, upon receipt of 60 cents. Address

The Christian Herald Book Department
92 Bible House, New York City

NEW YORK, JUNE 23, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Pottery Class at Newcomb College

Botany Class, Mount Holyoke

English Class at Women's College, Maryland

THE LIFE OF THE COLLEGE GIRL

By KATE UPSON CLARK

"IF I only had known!" sighed a young married woman the other day. "But I didn't know. I thought college girls were stiff and poky and always trying to show off how much they know. Now that I have become acquainted with them, I see that they are charming—and, oh! they do have such beautiful times at college!"

It is asserted by the critical that, as in so many of our great universities for men, the "good time" idea has almost overmastered that of intellectual work in our girls' colleges; but most of us have been so overjoyed that the freedom of "the higher education" has been given to young women, that we have not been inclined to carp at the occasional abuse of privilege which has inevitably crept in. Such irregularities will surely correct themselves in due time.

It is only the uninformed who object any longer to the college education of women. In these days, when the populations are crowding closer and closer, and the struggle for existence becomes daily fiercer, woman almost as necessarily as man must take up the weapons of combat. She must hold within her grasp, even though she may now possess some means of support, that by which she can at need wrest from the hands of Fortune an honest livelihood.

If she proposes to teach, a college diploma is a necessity in order to obtain the best positions. In writing, editing, lecturing—any department of purely intellectual endeavor—that diploma is almost as desirable. A college may not bestow thorough culture, but it is the best instrument for acquiring such culture that our civilization has so far given us. That a good education renders our girls cold and unlovable, mars their beauty, lessens their gentleness and womanliness, or spoils them in any degree for marriage is recognized as absurd by any one who visits Vassar, Smith, Wellesley or Bryn Mawr.

It has been affirmed that the health of girls suffers from the steady grind of college life. At least one whole book and hundreds of briefer essays have been written to show that the constitution of woman is utterly unfitted to bear the intellectual strain of college life. One eloquent doctor declared that the mothers of the race must not be subjected to such an awful ordeal; that the health of future generations would surely suffer from such folly. Yet even as he wrote, for twenty years or more, brave girls, thirsting for knowledge, had passed safely through the test, and had reared large families of children; and the industrious statistician had already learned that the children of the college women survived by a large majority the children of less cultivated mothers, up to the age of ten years.

On the Way to Class, Tulane University

Since that time, it has been conclusively proved that such children outlive others up to manhood and womanhood.

Singularly enough, these doctors who are so solicitous for the health of the race do not write books deploring the effects of incessant laundry labor or house-cleaning upon the feminine constitution; yet those causes have probably killed more women and injured more children than have all the colleges of all creation, or than they ever will. Neither do they often deprecate the confining and unhealthful costume of women, though it, too, has killed and weakened more than, perhaps, all other causes put together, and has been especially inimical to motherhood. It is true that a college education renders a woman independent of marriage. So does the mastery of any good trade. She does not have to marry unless she so desires. But the typical American girl has long ago passed the period when she marries just for the sake of getting married, or in order to shift upon another the burden of her support. She marries the man she loves, and him only; and when she gets married, the records show that she stays married in far greater numbers than her less highly educated sisters. Common sense is the exclusive possession of no class; but the college girl has perhaps more of it than has any other.

Much concern has been manifested because the proportion of college women that marry is no larger. Their mere independence does not wholly account for the fact that they do not marry quite so numerously as do their less highly educated sisters; but their main occupation does.

This is generally teaching. It has been computed that, in most colleges, half the girl graduates become teachers. The proportion is certainly large. It is undoubtedly a fact that hard working women, in their workrooms five or six days of every week, have fewer social opportunities than those of more leisure, especially in the higher fields of service. Teaching is wearing work. At night the teacher is tired. She must retire early in order to be fresh for the next morning. Her evenings for pleasure are rare. Among teachers, the proportion of marriage is lower than among other young women. Counting them out, college women are said to marry more freely than their sisters. When a bright college girl fixes her eye

Continued on page 534

THE
American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Wallace MacMullen*

Christians Who Walk in "The Way"

TEXTS—Acts 9:2; 19:9, 23

WE sometimes get illumination by the change of a letter in the record of a truth. These verses are instances. The word "way," describing the life of the early Christians, is to be spelled with a capital letter. It is so printed in the Revised Version. And we at once see that the Christian life had about it something distinguishing. It was quite unique. Those who lived it were labeled. It awakened opposition and probably scorn. "The Way" as a phrase was doubtless a sneer in its original use. It created disturbances; some commercial enterprises were damaged by it, and a vigorous persecution was organized. The important fact is that the life of those who traveled "the Way" was striking, appealing, also beautiful and compelling, for one with a splendid intellectual equipment and high ecclesiastical distinction—even Paul—ceased to rave against "the Way" and became its champion and defender.

The use of this phrase as descriptive of the religion of Christ suggests that we regard that religion as a method of life. This view of it disposes of some mistakes. How constantly the emphasis has been put upon matters of belief, with a purely intellectual meaning given to "belief" as an act of assent to creed. Perhaps that exaggerated emphasis was natural. In the early Christian ages, and often since, truth was threatened—important truth—and needed defense. Great battles were fought and creeds were made. In the struggle for truth, life was not sufficiently exalted. Supreme value was given to accurate statement. The relation of truth to conduct was not always made clear. Defective opinions were more to be dreaded than defective character. All of which mistaken emphasis can be avoided by simply remembering that "lief" and "life" are related to each other and seem to have a common origin. "Belief" is what one lives by. And this quite agrees with the Scripture idea. John said: "These things are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye may have life in his name." Belief to be genuine must have vital results. Truth needs clear statement, but the formula in which it is stated is of value, not in itself, but as a servant of life. All of which has become so commonplace in these modern days that in our reaction from the old intellectual emphasis we go to the other extreme. We are so sure that religion is a way of life that we overestimate conduct and depreciate faith. We even hear it said that religion may be possessed and practiced with God omitted. It is purely a matter of duty, and duty deals only with men. Now we may be perfectly sure that with those first Christians "the Way" was a way of thought and feeling, and will and worship, as well as of conduct.

False Conceptions of "The Way"

And the ecclesiastical as well as the intellectual emphasis is ruled out by this phrase "the Way." To make religion consist in ecclesiastical exercises is a world-old mistake, repeated by some in every generation. It was in the grip of that false conception that Christ found his countrymen. In ritual righteousness they were expert, and with it they were content. And the Lord declared that, however sensitive their ecclesiastical conscience and however exact their ecclesiastical habits, they were hollow shams, actors playing a part, parading a goodness which was a mere surface veneer. If disciples of his had any wish to "see" the kingdom they must have a righteousness exceeding that of Scribe and Pharisee. "The Way" is more than a ritual as certainly as it is more than a creed. Neither correct opinions nor sacred ceremonies can meet its demands. It is a method of life.

This does not make Christianity easier, but more difficult. If it were a way of thinking, or a way of worshiping, it would be simple for most people. To sign one's name to a proposed creed or to be faithful to certain religious forms is comparatively easy. Of course there would be some students who would find it hard to believe certain truths which did not commend themselves to the intellect, and certain sticklers for simplicity who would stumble over formal religious exercises; but for the most part people find that the endorsement of a truth or the adoption of a form is very much simpler than having Christ-like tempers and motives and words and habits. When you make religion practical you don't cheapen it and you don't make it easy, but you do make it secure. Religion as a series of propositions, or as a form of worship, is open to debate, but religion as an experience of the heart and a method of life is invulnerable to the assaults of logic.

What It Means to Be in "The Way"

It is clear that those who observed this "Way" of living did not invent it. Bystanders, looking upon Peter and John and noting the new spirit in them, the boldness which enabled them to defy the priesthood, marveled at them until they remembered that these men had been with Jesus. "The Way" was Jesus' way. Those who had it were related to him. A soul is made Christian, not by its connection with a creed or with a church, but by its connection with Christ. Genuine adherents of "the Way" have lives with his saving power in them, his authority over them, his method distinguishing them, his beauty and social value gracing them.

But besides suggesting a method of life, this phrase "the Way" hints at religion as a journey. Its lovers are travelers in a definite path, moving on to a definite goal. And for a journey let us remind ourselves that we first need an impulse. The spirit of the traveler is a matter of fundamental importance. Jesus was the path's beginning; he had pointed it out, had walked it, ordered it, led them in it in the journey's early stages, giving them the joy of his company, and then gone out of their sight. But the Spirit had come, promise of the Master, power of life. "The Way" proved stony, dangerous, wearisome, deadly. High priests issued edicts against the pilgrims of the blessed "Way," religious zealots like Saul hunted them from house to house, bound them with cords, stripped them of their goods, scattered their leaders. Their assemblies became secret, their employment ceased, their poverty crippled them, they were hungry and needed alms from distant friends. Later they were lied about, sneered at, charged with monstrous crimes, scourged, flayed, banished, butchered while holiday crowds feasted their eyes upon their dying agonies. Their own deluded countrymen joined with heartless pagans to drive them out of "the Way." But they trudged on and sang and loved God and man, and died with a cheer. It needed a mighty impulse to bring such patience and such power.

Blessings Found in "The Way"

The Spirit did it. He came to them—to all of them. There were no favorites of the Spirit. The kingdom through the territories of which "the Way" runs is not an aristocracy, but a democracy. To all of them the Spirit came. To some he brought vision and prophecy, gifts of speech and teaching and administration, and government and healing. But to those not called to leadership, to posts of authority, to exalted service, the Spirit came also and gave light to the face and vigor to the step and courage to the heart. An impulse persistent, perennial, mighty, which helped them smile at the dangers of "the Way"—this the Spirit brought them. And the same inspiration is for us all who love the "Way" and walk in it. For all alike. Those who have been degraded and enslaved in sin, redeemed Bowery drunkards, may have the Spirit's power; so that when flaring saloons call to them, and old companions jeer, and all the senses are assaulted by familiar sounds and sights and odors, when the nerves are scourges of fire or dead with a horrible torpor, when all the system makes a deafening clamor as it calls for drink, they may be kept straight by the indomitable impulse which is the Spirit's gift. There are some who face poverty and pain every day and neither whine nor whimper, nor bear themselves grimly, stoic fashion; and some who live amid the comforts of life and its luxuries, but who see material things threatening the souls of loved ones and friends, and some are stabbed by the wandering of children they have lived for and their hearts ache, and some have parted with those they lived for and are lonely, and yet all alike walk on with quiet bravery and the sun is on their faces and they bless other lives. The Spirit's impulse is needed for that. The Spirit has always been with the lovers of "the Way." To think that he has deserted the Church, or will desert her, is to be false to the facts of history and guilty of heresy against the truth of the covenant of the Lord. There are diversities of gifts from the same Spirit. Varieties of emphasis are to be found all through history. Illuminating study of the Book, humanitarian passion, missionary zeal are all stirrings of the same Spirit. And if we think that the old spiritual glow and flame are lacking in the church life of to-day we will be thankful for all the forms of beautiful ministry which the Spirit inspires, and will believe that spiritual dulness and apathy, so far as they exist, will lift, and that soon again, as so often before,

> God will glow above with scarce an intervention,
> Pressing close and palpitatingly, his soul o'er ours.

The Peace Found in "The Way"

And besides an impulse, a journey suggests movement. Not restlessness. The disciples of "the Way" were characterized by settled peace. No anxiety wrinkled their faces or made their movements nervous. No fear set their hearts fluttering; threats did not disturb them; persecution did not break their everlasting calm. Peace was the immediate gift of their Lord and the perpetual discovery of their days. But this did not mean that they were at ease. They were active always, and their activity was blessed with the calm of power. Movement is quite in accord with our modern temper, but peace, which should serve as the guardian of energy, is too often lacking. These travelers in the Way, then, who found their strength in quietness and confidence, were not idle. And their movements were not mere automatic motions, without meaning, neither were they forms of personal gymnastics, undertaken in behalf of health. They were not fussy and not selfish in their exercises. They did not walk the shining "Way" alone. They called others to it, and walked with them and steadied them when they trembled and lifted them when they fell. Some of the churches Paul went to were not founded by him. Busy disciples had tilled hard fields before he arrived. And in other cases materials were ready for his organizing touch.

Disciples of Jesus should be busy. He "went about doing good"—not occasionally, but always. Splendid saving activity was not a spasm with him—it was a law. Christianity doesn't put a man asleep. It has no alliance with laziness and no affinity for it. The nobleman who went into a far country and gave the pounds to his servants said, "Trade till I come." He didn't say, "Sleep till I get back." The Master in the Garden said to his intimates, "Watch ye here," and they fell asleep. The King in the judgment threw open the gates of life and joy divine to those who had been giving personal service, who rose eagerly to admit the stranger and carried clothing to shivering bodies and food to those who were hungry and medicine to those who were sick, and went with their gracious delivering friendship to poor captives. Do something in "the Way." For those who walk it with you, for those who are on its edges, and need your invitation to enter it, for those who are wandering and stumbling in trackless fields and do not even know of "the Way's" safety and glory.

The Goal at "The Way's" End

Then, too, "the Way" suggests direction. The Way is straight. There is nothing aimless in the movements of those who walk it. They have a settled purpose, a definite aim, a certain goal. The glory of "the Way" is progressive. Its meaning and prospects are not to be looked for all at once. The Christian life isn't a treasure weighed and measured and done up into portable packages. It is a growth. And while flowers spring all along "the Way" its most glorious bloom awaits us further on. The important question is not, do we know all the secrets of "the Way," but, are we on it? Our direction, if we hold it, will determine our goal. Professor Peabody calls attention to two dramatic instances of the Master's faith in the growth of the best in a soul if the soul be but yielded to its best. Peter was more like sand than like rock, yet Jesus saw in the deep-lying, rugged purpose of the man the promise of leadership and called him "Rock," and at last the Master's faith was justified, his prophecy fulfilled and the sand of Peter's character "was hardened by the friction of experience into sandstone." On the other hand, Judas, too, was trusted. The better nature in the traitor was seen and appealed to. By friendship and confidence the

Continued on page 543

* Pastor, Madison Ave. Methodist Episcopal Church, New York.

Life Among the South Sea Cannibals

A "Devil-Devil" House, Solomon Islands

Rev. Geo. Brown, D.D.

A House in New Britain, South Sea Islands

By WILLIAM DURBAN

IN the famous "May Meetings" in London, this year, a notable feature was the speech of Dr. George Brown to a gathering of five thousand Methodists in Albert Hall. I enjoyed a long conversation with this veteran missionary.

"I have been fifty-four years in my field in the South Seas," said Dr. Brown, "among the lovely islands of Polynesia and Micronesia, where, when I went forth as a young man, in the atolls, coral islands and glorious Pacific archipelagos, cannibalism, idolatry, massacre, polygamy, infanticide, and every conceivable form of cruelty prevailed. Before my conversion and my call, my life was adventurous indeed, for at the age of fourteen I ran away from my home in the little town of Castle Barnard, in the north of England, and went off to sea from the port of Hartlepool. I had a long and very stormy passage in a troop ship bound for the East Indies, but was transshipped to another craft at Gibraltar and taken to Quebec. On the day when we reached there I fell down a hatchway and broke my leg in two places, and so was left in Canada. God was working in my destiny. When I got well I took to work on cargo ships in the Great Lakes. Then I sailed for England, but was wrecked on the coast at Lundy Island.

"Soon I went off again, this time for New Zealand. Among the passengers were the sainted Bishop Selwyn, whose jubilee has just been celebrated, and also the Rev. J. C. Patteson, afterward the martyred Bishop of Melanesia. During the voyage, I joined a Bible class conducted by him, and also a class formed on the ship by Bishop Selwyn for studying Maori. On arriving I took up my abode in the house of my uncle and aunt, the Rev. T. and Mrs. Buddle, who had gone to New Zealand and were living in Onehunga. Their beautiful Christian life led to my decision for Christ. After a time I offered myself for missionary work, and was accepted for Samoa."

Young Christian Native Girls of the Tonga Islands

Dr. Brown had some graphic incidents to relate to me concerning his early missionary experiences. Said he: "My circuit consisted of the whole of the large and lovely island of Savaii, which has a coast line of nearly 300 miles. Methodist missions had already taken root there. I had married in New Zealand, and I and my wife were joyfully welcomed by those of the Samoans who were already Christians. Though so many of the islanders had nominally become Christians, in many parts of Savaii this was merely a profession; for heathen dances and many shocking practices were still carried on, and an old chief at Salelavalu called himself 'the king of hell,' and was determined to die as he had lived. I and my wife gained the good will of the Samoans by our industry in studying the language and by the quickness with which we acquired it. I was amazed, and have always been astonished, at the rich vocabulary of Samoan and other Oceanic languages and at the numberless niceties of expression they contain.

"Those were dreadful days in the Samoan group, for the people on the various islands were given to fearful fighting. The Samoans were always a kind and lovable people; but they were and are fickle and passionate, and in those days were quick to resent an insult or injury and ready to fight with their neighbors for the most trivial causes. When I had been six years on Savaii a man was killed, and fighting of the fiercest character began at once. My district was attacked, though our teachers and church members sought to make peace. Sad events took place. Men were shot down and mutilated whom we had intimately known and well liked. Many who did not want to fight, but prayed for peace, were slain in the bush. When some of the bodies of the heathen fighters were brought to their village after the war was over, their weeping friends would spread a piece of cloth over them. Then they offered prayers to their gods that the spirits would have love and come to them. They then waited till some lizard, ant or bettle crawled up to the cloth. This they at once covered up and brought down to the beach and buried it. They thought that the animal was the embodiment of the spirit of the dead, and when it was dead the spirit found rest.

"During the fourteen years of our residence in the Samoan group we witnessed wonderful progress. The people took earnestly to the study of the Bible, and I know no people in the world who now know the Word of God better, or who love it more truly. And that splendid island of Savaii is now dotted over with churches and is an absolutely Christian land."

Then he proceeded to speak of his second mission, in the large Southern Pacific islands of New Britain and New Ireland. "I arrived in New Britain," said he, "in August, 1875. It was an absolutely heathen land, but we took with us some of the Fijian and Samoan converts as teachers and preachers. The New Britain group is now named by Germany the Bismarck Archipelago. Here I had to explore and pioneer, for very little was known of this fine cluster of islands, lying near New Guinea, before 1875. The people were almost unclothed, and the houses were adorned with human skulls. We located native teachers from Fiji and Samoa among these wild Polynesians. The people were simple, curious and intensely interested. They crowded round us with delight, to look at photographs. In various islands I preached on the beach and in the villages. On March 18, 1876, we opened the first church in New Ireland. It was ghastly in various islands to see hung along the eaves of houses the bones of men who had been eaten. Indeed, all the people were cannibals, and were continually at war with each other; yet, strange to say, they were not fierce, and showed no hostility to white men. One vicious old chief, with seven wives, was jealous of his favorite among them all, a girl of seventeen, because he saw her speaking, quite innocently, to a young man. He speared her and meant to kill her and cook her; but we rescued her and nursed her back to life, in spite of his rage; then we managed to bribe him and appease him, and in the end he took her back and lived kindly with her for years. Our kindness to her won to our mission the hearts of the women, and then of the men."

The last term of the fifty-four years of his wonderful life Dr. Brown devoted to the Solomon Islands. There the chiefs would not allow a mission to be started till Dr. Brown bought a little island from a white man and built a house and began work. As it was now his own property, and as the British flag had already been hoisted in the group, they dared not expel him. So Christian work began there also, and there also it took root. All through these long years the veteran missionary has only twice taken a holiday to visit England. In July he sails once more for the Antipodes.

PROMINENT PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

HON. ROBERT BACON, of New York, is to be the American Ambassador to France when Mr. White, the present incumbent, gives up his post. Mr. Bacon served several years in the important position of Assistant Secretary of State, at Washington, and during that time had charge of the transmission of CHRISTIAN HERALD funds, sent through the State Department to famine sufferers in China. He expressed his willingness at that time to do all possible officially to aid the work of this paper in its international charities. His appointment will give great pleasure to his many friends in America, as they realize that the dignity of this country will be well and worthily represented in the world's metropolis, the French capital. His experience in the State Department will be invaluable to him in his new post.

Before entering the public service, Mr. Bacon was the partner in a large banking firm in New York City. He had been acquainted with President Roosevelt since his student days at Harvard, and it was the latter who influenced him to relinquish his important position in the business world to enter the State Department during the Secretaryship of Mr. Root, now Senator from New York. Mr. Bacon is a member of the central committee of the American Red Cross.

Mr. Edward Durand

Countess of Aberdeen

Hon. Robert Bacon

. . .

For the next year or two the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor will be one of the busiest places in busy America, for the taking of the great census of 1910 will be started in a few months, and, after the reports are all in from the thousands who have gone from house to house for the information, there will be the laborious work of tabulating the results. Mr. Edward Durand has recently been appointed as head of the bureau by President Taft, in place of S. N. D. North, who was appointed as head of the bureau in 1903. This census will see the employment of many labor-saving devices in recording the facts obtained. One of these is the new tabulating machine, where the data are recorded by a series of punches. Mr. Durand has a good knowledge of the work in hand, and the affairs of the department are already showing the results of his methods of administration.

Mr. Durand was born in Romeo, Mich., in 1871. He studied both at Oberlin and Cornell, and then went into library work in Albany, N. Y. Then he went to Stanford University in 1898, to be assistant professor of administration and finance. Then, in turn, he was secretary to the United States Industrial Commission, an instructor at Harvard, and in 1902 special expert agent of the United States census office on street railways and electric light plants. All these things were excellent preparation for the exacting duties he is now called upon to perform. He was promoted to be special examiner of the Bureau of Corporations in 1903, and three years ago was made commissioner of corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor. Mr. Durand has found time to write various magazine articles on economic subjects. He is the author of The Finances of New York City.

. . .

One of the most active workers in the world-wide campaign against tuberculosis is the Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. She has recently come to America and has delivered a number of notable addresses. She is an eloquent speaker and has a most charming personality, which much impressed those who have been fortunate to hear her. She has long been identified with movements to benefit the conditions of the poor, and since she and her husband have been the heads of the vice-regal court in Dublin she has done much to advance the cause of local Irish industries, a movement which has already increased the prosperity of certain districts in the Emerald Isle.

The Countess delivered her first address in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. She said that for a number of years 11,000 to 12,000 of Ireland's sons and daughters have been carried off by the dread disease, but just before she left for America she had received a report from the registrar general that there were indications of a slight decrease. The Irish doctors had had great difficulty in arousing the national conscience, but now one national sanitarium had been established. She spoke also of the difficulty in arousing the people to fight the disease, as they had got the idea that it was always fatal. Two years ago a more active campaign was inaugurated and the Woman's National Health Organization formed. Literature is spread broadcast and lecturers are sent out. Two exhibitions have been sent over the country, with great success, and the clergy of all denominations and local committees are aiding the work. The Countess will deliver several important addresses in other parts of the country before returning to Ireland.

THE LIFE OF THE COLLEGE GIRL

Continued from page 531

upon an eligible young man, she has a thousand devices to attract him to one of those whose resources and ingenuity have been less carefully developed.

The college girl edits periodicals, and they compare favorably with those of her college brethren. In the co-educational institutions, she shares editorial honors, as all others, equally with them. She plays all of the college games, except baseball and football, and even dabbles a little in them. She hunts flowers by the brookside, and combines chemicals according to all sorts of uncanny formulas. She revels in the freedom of the great libraries, and presents the best plays of the best dramatists in the most artistic manner. She solves mathematical problems which have puzzled wiseacres for generations, and she writes poetry which compares not unfavorably with Praed's and Matthew Arnold's in their college days—in short, she is, as the poet says, "A miracle of noble womanhood," well bearing out the saying that

> With equal husbandry,
> The woman were an equal to the man.

Study Hours in the Library at Swarthmore College

The "six thousand years of fear," of which Tennyson writes, are evidently concluded. Our bright and lovely girls have come into their own at last, and their freedom will "broaden more and more," until shall dawn that grand day foretold by the poet, when woman

> Shall set herself to man,
> Like perfect music unto noble words.
> Then comes the statelier Eden back to men;
> Then springs the crowning race of human kind.

. . .

Keir Hardie, the distinguished labor leader and member of the British House of Commons, says: "Woman pays taxes under the laws; she suffers penalties; she should have a voice in the making of the laws." "Will it not tend to draw women from the home?" In substance, Mr. Hardie replied: "I hope so. Unless she is drawn from her home, she will have an undeveloped brain, and will be too narrow and restricted in her views to rear children properly. As for the time taken to vote, it will take her no longer than it would to buy a pound of butter."

AMONG THE WORKERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

—PASTOR COSTABEL, of the Waldensian Evangelical Church in Italy, writes us, thanking the donors of various contributions for the Waldensian sufferers by the recent earthquakes. He is deeply grateful for the kindness and sympathy shown to his people.

—REV. CHARLES E. BALLOU, well known and greatly loved in New York as the superintendent of the Cremorne Mission, passed away recently, after a brief illness. He had been the means, under God, of leading a great number of men and women from ways of sin into the better life.

—THE EIGHTH SEASON of summer evangelistic services at Lemon Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., has begun, under the management of Rev. James B. Ely, D.D., who successfully conducted the outdoor summer evangelistic campaign in New York for several years. He has a strong force of personal workers. The meetings are attended by large crowds.

—A NOTABLE DEBATE on prohibition and the liquor traffic took place lately, the disputants being Mayor David S. Rose of Milwaukee, Wis., anti-prohibition, and Professor Samuel Dickie, president of Albion College, Mich., for prohibition. The latter easily won the palm for superior and more convincing presentation.

—DR. WILLIAM S. DODD, medical missionary at Cæsarea, Asia Minor, writes that the Turkish governor of the place showed himself the friend of the Armenians. He acted contrary to the edict of Abdul Hamid, thus preventing a massacre. Dr. Dodd declares that there was a well-laid plot for the extermination of the Armenians.

—NEW BEDFORD, MASS., has been stirred by a four weeks' evangelistic campaign, conducted by Rev. Henry W. Stough, D.D., of Wheaton, Ill. Over twenty churches united to support the movement. Over 1,300 cards were signed, and a good proportion will be taken into the membership of various churches. Mr. D. Lansing Spooner was director of the chorus and Mr. Arthur L. Herring soloist.

—THE UTAH GOSPEL MISSION, of Cleveland, O., has vacancies for several men, for its wagon missionary work among the Mormon people. Men of at least fair education, knowledge of the great truths of the Bible, of adaptable disposition, reasonable health and thorough piety, who can volunteer for at least one year without salary beyond expenses, are invited to write to the Mission, at 1854 East Eighty-first Street, Cleveland, O.

—DURING THE REVIVAL just closed in Pittsburg, Kas., under Evangelist W. E. Biederwolf, over one thousand people made public decision for Christ. Extensive preparations were made for the revival. Committees were appointed and union prayer meetings held in the churches and homes. A large tabernacle was erected, and telephones installed, that carried the sermons and music to hundreds of shut-ins and people in the rural districts. Some of the most prominent business men of the city were converted, and many coal miners and railroad men. About the middle of the campaign, a monster demonstration and parade was held. The campaign has had an effect on the city which will never be effaced. Close to three hundred homes took the covenant to establish family prayer, and registered themselves in the Family Altar League.

Views of Seattle's Successful Exposition

VISITORS from all over the country are already flocking to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle, and the general verdict seems to be that it is one of the most satisfactory "fairs" ever held in America. The beauty of its architecture and the magnificence of its natural setting are the admiration of Eastern visitors. Other fairs, in the desire to appear large, placed their buildings at such distances from one another that visitors were tired by the long walks. Here the buildings are compact, easily reached, and yet with no sense of crowding. The views given above were taken since the auspicious opening of the Exposition. Number One gives a view across one corner of the lagoon, showing the highly ornate character of the Exposition Hall. Number Two shows a corner of the Geyser Basin, and one of the instructive pieces of animal sculpture which decorate the grounds. Number Three shows the beautiful Court of Honor. Number Four. Looking down Pacific Avenue from the Nome Circle, Machinery Hall is on the left; King County Building on right. Number Five. The Government Building with the Exposition Monument; the wonderful Cascades in the foreground. Number Six. The Great Entrance Arch. To the right twenty-six ticket takers obviate any necessity of crowding, one of the many sensible plans for handling large crowds quickly and safely. It is arranged that the rates for tourists in the city will be kept at a reasonable figure, enabling those without plethoric purses to come and enjoy the beauties of the Exposition without fear of paying extortionate prices. The general supervising committee seems to have done all possible to look out for the welfare of the strangers who will be the city's guests during the coming summer.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

"Under Which Flag?"

TO wide-visioned minds, the occasional quasi-scientific assaults on the Christian religion, which usually find their way into the columns of the daily press, possess very little significance. They are merely spurts, indicative of the continued activity of the irrepressible conflict. Yet, sometimes the smallest thrust will rankle; hence we were not surprised to receive several inquiries from readers who have been observant of the renewed attacks on the Christian faith by a Chicago professor, who made himself conspicuous a year ago by performances of the same sort. We do not propose to discuss his foolish and impious utterances. They will soon be forgotten—and, let us hope, regretted. Nor do we agree with those indignant Western pastors who seem to hold that modern offenses against orthodoxy call for the hateful expedients resorted to in the old days of religious bigotry and narrow ecclesiasticism. We live in a more liberal age, which recognizes that even in the honest search for light and truth, men may sometimes err deeply. In such case, they are to be pitied for their lack of spiritual vision.

We believe, however, that there is limit to toleration where false teaching is concerned. The soldier who has ceased to believe in the old flag under which he has fought, or in the cause it represents, is forbidden by all the principles of honor to remain longer in a false and disloyal position. So, when a preacher or professor discovers that he has wandered far afield, and no longer shares the common faith to which he was solemnly pledged, self-respect and a sense of the justice due to others should urge him to transfer his activities elsewhere. Such a course may be delayed, but we believe it to be logical and inevitable. All past experience has shown that the theological free lance who derides the old faith, and tries to read God out of the universe, not only fails to convince anybody, but he must ultimately leave the pulpit or the classroom to take his proper stand outside of all religious denominational connections and fight his battle the best he may.

Edward Everett Hale

EARLY in the morning of the 10th of June the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale died at his home in Boston. He had reached the ripe age of eighty-seven, continuing in harness, with no eclipse of his splendid intellect, until the end. Dr. Hale came of a line distinguished on both sides of his ancestry for patriotism, culture and piety. He was a nephew of Nathan Hale, the Revolutionary hero, who at nineteen was hanged as a spy by the British, his last words being, "I regret that I have only one life to give to my country." On his mother's side Dr. Hale was a nephew of Edward Everett, the orator and historian.

Born in Boston, educated at Harvard University and for nearly a half century the pastor of a church in his native city, Dr. Hale's latest work as a minister was concluded as Chaplain of Congress. He said some years ago that his vocation had always been the ministry of the Gospel, while his avocation had been literature. As a man of letters, his work had a peculiar charm and was never without a message. He belonged to a brilliant group of Americans, almost all of whom have now passed away. Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Wendell Phillips, Phillips Brooks, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and others whose names and fame are enduring, were his friends and associates.

If Dr. Hale had written nothing except his little unpretentious story, entitled Ten Times One Is Ten, he would have laid the men and women of his time under a deep obligation. In that little story he made evident, in a lucid and practical way, the fact that the first duty of a Christian is to live the Christ life among his fellows. In creed a Unitarian, Edward Everett Hale was in life a follower and disciple of the Man of Galilee, the Son of God.

In Ten Times One Is Ten, Dr. Hale gave four simple rules of conduct, which were his own guide:

> Look up, and not down;
> Look out, and not in:
> Look forward, not back;
> And lend a hand.

Well might Governor Draper say, on hearing of his death, that Massachusetts and the nation are united in lamenting their loss.

President Taft sent from the White House an earnest message of condolence to Mrs. Hale, in which he paid a high tribute to the commanding character and magnificent manhood of one who had preached the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God through all the years of a long and blameless life.

No special church and no particular group of men can wholly claim one who was in every sense of the word a big, brotherly, great-hearted man. His little tract, If Jesus Came To Boston, published several years ago, had in it the essence of many a sermon.

Personally, Dr. Hale was always easily approached by old and young. His manners were cordial, his greeting unaffected and sincere and his smile was a benediction. No matter how busy he might be, Dr. Hale met those who sought him with an air of leisure and he was always ready to give counsel and encouragement to strangers or to young men or women away from home, while he had a marvelous secret of comforting those who were in sorrow. It is hard for us to realize in these June days, thinking of him, that

> His part in all the pomp that fills
> The circuit of the summer hills
> Is that his grave is green.

Yet he belongs to the immortals, and his influence will remain flowering out in other lives. The preacher, the friend, the author and the reformer were combined in his life, and in none of these capacities did he labor and live in vain.

The Suffragist Mother

A GREAT deal has been said regarding the suffragist mother, by those who oppose the granting of the vote to women. It has been insisted that she is opposed to motherhood; and that if she does happen to become a mother, she proves an inefficient and neglectful one.

No doubt there are some incapable mothers among suffragists; but most of us who have known suffragist mothers have found them not inferior to the ordinary sort.

In an interesting letter to the New York Times, Alice Stone Blackwell cites many among the leading suffragists as examples of model mothers, such as her own beautiful mother, Lucy Stone, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Julia Ward Howe, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Emily P. Collins, the wife of Governor Wallace, of Indiana, and others. From among the comparatively small personal acquaintance of almost any of us, can be drawn many similar examples. Mrs. Mary H. Loines, of Brooklyn, Mrs. Crossett, of Swarthmore, Pa., Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson, of Malden, Mass., Mrs. Henry Villard, of New York, are only a few prominent ones among a vast army of devoted mothers who long ardently for the freedom of the ballot.

It is no wonder that the idea of helping to frame our laws should appeal especially to mothers. They can guard their young sons through their early childhood; but the time comes when they are set free in our streets, our terrible streets, thickly dotted in many cities with haunts of vice, brilliant and tempting. Only laws can shut up these places, and the mothers have no voice in the making of the laws, while the fathers are too often indifferent, or too much absorbed in business to study deeply into outside matters. It is in order to protect the weaklings of her own and other homes, to cleanse and purify the streets through which her children must pass, and to uplift and ennoble the community in which she lives that most mothers desire the ballot.

Religious Liberty in Russia

THAT the path of Russian progress is becoming broader and more definite is evident from the passage of the bill granting freedom of worship to the religious sect known as "Old Believers." There are some fifteen millions of these dissenters in the Czar's empire, being numerically the most important body outside of the orthodox Russo-Greek Church. For a long period they have been persecuted harshly, and to be a "Raskolnik" (Dissenter) was to be an object of suspicion by the authorities. The sect is divided into many branches. In their eyes, the Russian Church is not a true church, and they believe that they alone hold to the old faith. It is a very significant indication of the growing spirit of tolerance when we find these stern, old-fashioned sectarians no longer under the ban and free to worship God and serve him in their own way.

A Beautiful Work of Charity

LETTERS from our missionaries in Asiatic Turkey, just received, convey the assurance that the remittances sent by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are being used to excellent advantage in the relief work. This week we have sent a third remittance, through our State Department, to be apportioned as follows: Adana Relief Committee, $2,000; Tarsus Relief Committee, $2,000; Beirut Committee, for work in Kessab, Deurtyol, and other nearby places, $1,000. These committees are thoroughly organized, each with a strong missionary representation, and all three are doing systematic work, not only in the more populous places, but in out-of-the-way villages, where the murderous bands of Turks and Kurds have killed the Armenians almost to a man and left groups of fatherless children and helpless widows, shuddering over the ashes of their desolate homes. More than 22,000 survivors are now being cared for by the various committees in relief camps and hospitals. We would ask our readers to bear in mind the fact that four cents a day will keep one of these refugees alive, and a dollar will support a family of a mother and three little ones a whole week. It is a work of charity in which every one can afford to have a share.

A Flurry in Christian Science

OUR Christian Science friends seem to have been unduly troubled by the suggestion, made by one of their own number, that the founder of their cult was no longer existent—that she had departed this life and that, for some reason known only to the inner circle, her demise was being kept a secret. While the story was not credited, since all the evidence pointed to the conclusion that Mrs. Eddy was still in the flesh, it might have been the policy of wisdom on the part of her advisers to have given such indisputable proof of that fact to the world as would have admitted of no further doubt. "Why should not the venerable founder show herself to the public?" was asked. "What possible reason could there be for concealment?" In olden times it was customary to keep the mortal exit of king or pontiff hidden until his successor was chosen. Surely, however, there can be no rivalry or disagreement concerning the successorship to the founder of Christian Science.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 23, 1909

	PAGE
A Lesson in Kindness	Cover
OUR MAIL-BAG	530
Starting in the Balloon Race (Illustrated)	530
The Life of the College Girl (Illustrated)	531, 534
By Kate Upson Clark
Christians Who Walk in "The Way." Sermon	532, 543
By Rev. Wallace MacMullen
Life Among the South Sea Cannibals (Illustrated)	533
By William Durban
Prominent People Talked About (Portraits)	534
Seattle's Successful Exposition (Illustrated)	535
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	536
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	537
How We Found Water at Mont-Lawn (Illustrated)	538
Church Built in Two Days (Illustrated)	538
Rushing Help to the Refugees (Illustrated)	539
Great Awakening in Melbourne (Illustrated)	540
Talks on the Cool Veranda (Illustrated)	541
By Margaret E. Sangster
First Christian Home in Europe (Illustrated)	542
Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
Dr. Hale Passes Away (Portrait)	543
The Story of Marco	544, 545
Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter
Young People's Societies	546
The First European Convert. By Mrs. M. Baxter	547
Smallest Newsboy in the World (Portrait)	547

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

China's Emperor Buried

THE customs of the Far East and West are so different that most people of this country will be surprised when they hear that the Emperor of China, who died last autumn, has just been carried, amidst the most imposing pomp imaginable, to his final resting place. The late Emperor Kwang-Hsu, who had reigned in China, much of the time only nominally, since January 22, 1875, was given the little poison pellets with the command that he swallow them, which he did on November 14, 1908, and then sank down into his long sleep. On May 1, the royal funeral procession left Peking on its four days' journey to the western tombs, eighty miles distant, for the final burial. The ceremony was one of unusual splendor and dignity, and it took the pageant, which was two miles long, two hours and a half to get outside the "Forbidden City." The coffin was lined with cypress wood and was covered on the outside with catalpa wood, which was incased in rhinoceros' hide, the whole being covered with a stout shield of hides of the water buffalo. It had a yellow silk shroud, with dragons embroidered upon it, and was carried by 128 bearers, who wore crimson coats and had yellow plumes in their hats. In the front of the coffin went the Prince Regent, Prince Chun, a grandson of the Emperor Tao-Kuang, the courtiers wearing black silk robes, and the eunuchs white, the lamas wearing yellow. Behind the catafalque came the representatives of foreign nations. And thus in pomp and silence the dead was taken to his tomb.

The Emperor, who was only thirty-six years of age, was counted rather a weakling by the civilized world, but he never had much of an opportunity. The Empress Dowager kept one hand on the empire and the other on the throne of the monarch. She was so large a tree that he had no opportunity to grow under her shadow. Whatever China may or may not have thought of the late Emperor, however they may have treated or mistreated him, true to their ancient customs they accorded him the royal burial that was becoming their monarch.

And they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings. (II. Chron. 26 : 23.)

Funeral Ceremonies of the Late Emperor Kwang-Hsu, at Peking, Held Many Months After His Death

Needed : A Hen

The papers make mention of a gentleman in New Jersey who undertook the task of manufacturing eggs. He is something of a chemist and, having discovered by analysis the various elements which compose an egg, he went to the drug store, bought those ingredients and went home to perform the experiment which he expected would astonish the civilized world. He made a hot fire, put his chemicals in a vessel, and soon they began to boil. He took a blowpipe, and concluded to fluff off a few dozen fresh eggs as samples for the scientists. He had scarcely placed the end of his blowpipe in the kettle when there was an awful explosion, and when the inventor had picked himself out of the debris he looked at his wife, who was attracted from the garden by the noise, and said: "I guess I used the wrong sort of vessel." "Yes," she said, "you did." "What do you think it should have been?" he inquired. "It's out there in the yard," she replied; "it's a hen."

The woman was right. All that the man lacked to make the experiment successful was the hen. This disappointed chemist is the symbol of the wise men of to-day, who are striving by their alchemy to make life out of material atoms alone, and of the theologians who are spending much time attempting to account for physical, intellectual and spiritual life on the hypothesis of the combination of material forces alone. The best scholarship and science of to-day confirm this great truth: that life, in the vegetable, animal and spiritual kingdoms, can only come from life.

I am come that they might have life. (John 10 : 10.)

Crossed the Polar Sea

The Norwegian steamship Cymbria brought to Philadelphia, the other day, a cask of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia, which had been set afloat nine years ago, and had made a journey of more than 2,400 miles over the Arctic Ocean. The cask, according to Henry G. Bryant, the president of the Geographical Society, was set adrift July 24, 1900, by the whaler Norwhale, off the coast of Cape Bathurst, British America. After being tossed by the icy seas and carried up the Behring Sea to the Arctic Ocean, across the polar regions and probably across the North Pole, it was picked up on the shore of Soro Island, Norway, November 3 last. The discovery of the cask, it is believed, proves the contention of Admiral Melville, who devised the floating cask scheme, and of other members of the society, that the polar sea is open and that the discovery of the North Pole may be accomplished by putting a vessel in the northern ice-pack and allowing it to drift over the open sea. The casks were originally designed by Admiral Melville to test his theory of the arctic drift, which he observed when his ship, the Jeanette, on a voyage of arctic exploration, was caught in the ice north of the Siberian coast in 1881. Every inch of land and water on the face of the earth will yet be discovered and claimed as the possession of our Lord Jesus Christ.

He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. (Psa. 72 : 8.)

Fish Saved a Ship

Captain Young and crew and about sixty-five passengers, on the steamship Concho, of the Mallory Line, reached Galveston, Texas, the other day, very happy at their escape from a watery grave. They attributed their escape to a large fish, which in some manner was sucked into a bad leak in the vessel's bottom and stopped the hole which was filling the vessel with water. The ship is believed to have struck a submerged derelict, which cut a hole about fourteen inches in circumference in her bottom. All night the pumps were kept going, but the next morning the water in the hold was about five feet deep and increasing. A wireless message from the captain to the agent at Galveston told the story, and arrangements were made to send another ship to the rescue, when another wireless was sent from the Concho, saying the pumps were rapidly gaining and the vessel would be able to make the port. The leak stopped, but the captain could not solve the problem. It was not until the divers were called that even the captain learned the extent of the damage and the thing that had saved them. They found a big fish wedged tight in the hole, so effectively as to prevent the inflow of water, which defied the pumps when the ship was a hundred miles from land. There are perils on the sea and on the land. Danger makes this world a bigger and better one, and men wiser and stronger than they would be without it. There is room for divine providence, for human caution, courage, enterprise, art, faith in principles and in the everlasting.

The ship was like to be broken. (Jonah 1 : 4.)

The Lost Ring

Twenty years ago Miss Molly Lienhart prosecuted Elijah Fielding, her lover, for stealing her ring. He protested his innocence, but she prosecuted him mercilessly and sent him to prison. Having served out his term he returned to a town in Indiana, his home and hers, but neither spoke to the other. Early on the morning of May 15 last the ring was found in an old spring, where Miss Lienhart had dropped it. She remembered having been at the identical place the day she missed it. As soon as the ring was found she went to Fielding and begged his forgiveness, and the neighbors were invited in and introduced to Miss Lienhart as Mrs. Fielding. This is a most unromantic story, contrary to the ordinary stories of human affection. If the woman had loved the man truly, she would never have suspected him of having stolen her ring.

There are few persons who have not, by oversuspicion, done some deep injury to a fellow mortal. The injunction of the Bible, to criticise self rather than condemn our fellow-men, is very clearly laid down.

Judge not, that ye be not judged. (Matt. 7 : 1.)

Four Hundred Miles of Bread

A flour mill has been recently erected in New York on the East River, directly opposite the Brooklyn Navy Yard, at a cost of $3,000,000, which occupies an entire city block. The building is ten stories high, and has a capacity of 11,000 barrels a day. This day's product would make 3,500,000 full pound loaves of bread, which, placed end to end, would make an unbroken line 400 miles in length. It is such an unusual plant that the Board of Education has made arrangements for the public school children of the city to visit and inspect it. This mammoth mill is a type of the complete provision our heavenly Father has made for feeding the millions of his children in our own and in other lands.

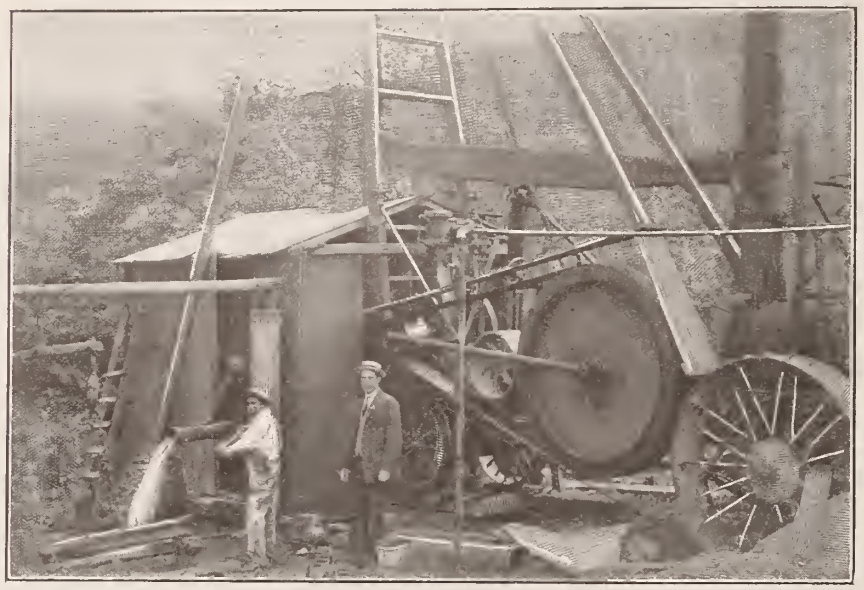
Give us this day our daily bread. (Matt. 6 : 11.)

How We Found Water at Mont-Lawn

SINCE THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home enlarged its capacity for entertaining the little ones, the great need has been felt of a more abundant supply of water. Especially was this the case toward the end of a dry season. At such times the various wells and reservoirs have been taxed to their utmost. To supply the needs of three hundred or more children, and the staff of workers needful to care for the Home and its ever-changing company of tiny guests, required large quantities of water, and to this necessity must be added that needed for sprinkling purposes on roads and walks, when showers were short and infrequent. For drinking and cooking the wells gave a good supply; but one of the greatest delights in this whole delightful place to the boys and girls is the "swimming pool." Naturally this would be the first to suffer when any dearth of water was in prospect. And great would be the lamentations when the children were told that the pool could not be opened until the next day, when perhaps only half the number of little ones had had their plunge into its cool, shaded depths.

So it came to be conceded by all that there was but one lack at Mont-Lawn—that of water.

For a long time Dr. Klopsch had given serious thought to this problem and had consulted with this and that expert upon the subject, with most unsatisfactory results. Finally, after hope long deferred, Rev. Ezra Sanford, a good friend of the Home and a lover of children, said he felt sure he could find water, and that in abundance—at least he knew a man who could. The writer has a vivid recollection of one hot summer day last season, when, in company with Mr. Sanford, many seemingly very long miles were tramped over, looking for certain signs which the gentleman was in search of and which, to his mind, would be a sure indication of the presence of water, if a well were sunk. On returning to the house he said he felt as certain that water could be "struck" at Mont-Lawn as the experts had been that the case was hopeless. On Mr. Sanford's recommendation, H. E. Estes, of Ridgewood, N. J., was engaged to drill an artesian well. After careful survey, he located his big drilling machine and set to work. When steam was up the big wheels were put in motion, and what the well-drillers call a "hole" was started. Pound—pound—all day long, and sometimes far into the night, went the drill; down—down—inch by inch, or, where the earth's formation would allow it, several feet in a day.



Testing Out the New Artesian Well at Our "Children's Home"

Swing—swing—went the huge walking-beam, every swing meaning a stroke, until one day the drill encountered something away down, over 100 feet below—something which would have discouraged a less enthusiastic man than Mr. Estes; for, in the nature of mechanics, the drill could not go around, neither could it go through it. A rounding boulder had been encountered, impregnable and impassable, breaking the drill, as it glanced sideways without making any impression.

There was nothing to be done but to pull out and start another hole. Faint-heart would have said, "What's the use? Didn't Expert So-and-So say that you couldn't get any water there?" Another would say, "Didn't I tell you so? A sheer waste of time and money." Old residenters shook their heads and looked wise and most solemn. But Estes went right on. Swing, swing, went the beam; pound, pound, went the drill, day and night now; for the season was fast approaching when the work must be finished. Late passersby over the road saw the glowing furnace fire, and the merry "anvil chorus" might have been sung to the strokes at the forge, where the driller and his fireman sharpened the big drills which grew dull through their encounter with stubborn stone and adamantine "trap-rock."

By and by there came a day with the cheering report, "We have struck water." But it was only a small quantity. Deeper and deeper must they drill, until the output would be satisfactory. It was calculated that the minimum must be not less than thirty gallons per minute. Day after day passed and the patient men, grimy and sweaty, toiled on. Three hundred, four hundred, five hundred feet, down in the bowels of the earth, the drill was working away, far out of sight, but pounding away, inch by inch, now through trap-rock, now granite, now sandstone; crumbling and pulverizing each in turn and little by little making its way down toward the spot where waited the water, sparkling and cool. At last came the cheering news, "We have enough! Time now to measure the depth, and then to test capacity of output."

The method of measuring depth was most interesting and accurate, a steel cable, incapable of stretching, being used and showing a depth of 602 feet, or 300 feet below the bed of the glorious Hudson.

A temporary pumping apparatus was put in motion and the measuring began. Stop-watches were brought into requisition, and an anxious group gathered in the field. The machinery being set in motion, a big stream of crystal-clear water issued from the well at the rate of more than sixty gallons per minute. For seventy-two hours this test continued without cessation, when the well was pronounced all that could be desired.

Then there was great rejoicing at Mont-Lawn. The much-desired well was at last an accomplished fact!

"The man is not born to-day who will live to see that well run dry," said Burns, the driller, to which sentiment the fireman nodded approval, his dark face aglow as he piled more coal into the red mouth of the furnace, while the walking-beam went swing, swing, no longer in time to the patient drill down in the dark recesses underground, but to the music of a gushing stream of pure, sparkling water, which will yield joy and health to thousands of little ones during the coming season at Mont-Lawn—an added blessing, straight from God's hands, through the hearts of the good people who make this beneficence possible.

MARY SARGENT HOPKINS.

A CHURCH THAT WAS BUILT IN TWO DAYS

ST. ANDREW'S M. E. congregation is one of the oldest in Chicago, and had a good church edifice at the corner of Wabash and Fiftieth Street. Gradually the city has encroached on the sacred precincts until they were no longer tenable for so large a congregation and more room must be had. Meantime, there was nearby a struggling little (colored) Methodist congregation, the St. Mark's, needing a church. At the same time, another little congregation, the Calvary M. E. Church, was holding services in a vacant storeroom on Sixty-first Street. Recently Mrs. Catherine Wooley, a wealthy member of St. Andrew's, donated a large amount of money toward a new church building. Others added their mites, the St. Andrew's and Calvary congregations united, purchased a lot at the corner of Fifty-sixth and Indiana streets, and plans were adopted for a beautiful modern church, of Gothic design, to cost $50,000. The building committee consisted of the Rev. A. H. Gibson and Messrs. William B. VanSant, Albert Dulin, R. C. Elder, George T. Moore, W. J. Putnam, D. R. Ellis, E. A. Rice and W. Brownell. Ground was broken, and the new church, to be known as Wooley Memorial M. E. Church, will be dedicated on November 14.

A Temporary Church That Was Built in Two Days

The old St. Andrew's Church was sold to the St. Mark's congregation, who were impatient to occupy their newly-acquired place of worship. The sellers, wishing to give them possession as soon as possible, leased a lot at the corner of Michigan Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street for six months and decided to put up a temporary frame church upon it. The building was started, and work so pushed that the united congregations were enabled to occupy it very quickly; indeed, two days built the church. It will be made a little more comfortable and occupied until the handsome new church is ready.

The photograph on this page was taken as the congregation, numbering 250 people, were leaving at the close of the dedication service.

ISAAC KLINE.

REVIVAL IN WESTERN CANADA

TEN of the Chapman band of evangelists, assisted by fifteen of the most prominent Presbyterian preachers in Canada, recently spent six weeks in the Kootenay district of British Columbia. The campaign began on April 4, in fourteen towns at once, extending from Nelson east to Pincher Creek in Alberta, and continued until April 25, when another simultaneous campaign was begun in Rossland, the famous mining city of the boom of '96, and towns farther west.

The campaign was conducted with absolute lack of anything sensational. It is a mining territory and although the abandon of the wide-open town of the early days is gone the work of the Church presents unusual difficulties.

The meetings were very well attended at all points, and at Nelson, the largest town in the district, where the meetings were conducted by Dr. Frank Granstaff, assisted by Owen F. Pugh, singer, and John A. Thomson, the "workingman evangelist," the attendance was the largest recorded at meetings of any character ever held in the town.

Perhaps the greatest definite results were witnessed at Fernie, the great coal centre and the scene of the terrible scourge by fire last fall, where almost two hundred conversions are reported.

RUSHING HELP TO THE REFUGEES

WITH unwonted energy the new Turkish government is urging forward the official investigation into the Adana massacres. Four hundred and forty-five Moslems and 117 non-Moslems have been arrested in Adana, and still further arrests are daily looked for. Whether the investigation is to be conducted with a sincere desire to learn the truth and punish the instigators of the massacres, or merely as a trick to mollify public clamor, will soon become apparent.

Rev. Dr. Christie, Tarsus

Relief work at the various centres makes slow progress, owing to the lack of sufficient means to supply the needs of the great army of destitute at Adana, Tarsus and Beirut. There are still some 12,000 to 14,000 being cared for at Adana and some 4,000 at Tarsus. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Relief Fund has been the means of doing incalculable good. Beneficiaries receive at the rate of four cents' worth of bread per day, which will keep them alive for the present at least. There is great mortality among the children.

Particulars are now being received of the events of "massacre week" in distant towns not heretofore reported. From Marash comes the story of atrocities perpetrated upon the helpless Christian people of Kharnu and Baghche. One woman tells of a man's mouth having been filled with gunpowder and then a lighted match applied. There are still about six hundred women and children in Kharnu alone, either captives in Moslem homes or scattered among the ruins. The Turk who directed the massacres is an aged, palsied man. He sat on the edge of the village and ordered fires lighted and other atrocities, such as the pouring of kerosene on the beards of priests and setting them on fire.

Another place just heard from is Geoksun, fifty miles northwest of Marash. A whole week it was surrounded by hordes, but men from two neighboring villages saved the place. The Moslem assailants had the younger women they expected to seize all divided among themselves beforehand. It is estimated that in Marash and the nearby villages there are not less than 14,000 destitute.

The siege and relief of Durtyol is a thrilling story. For upward of twelve days 10,000 Christians were besieged there by over 7,000 Moslem fanatics. More than 400 men of the besiegers were armed, it is said, with government rifles and supplied with government stores and ammunition. On the third day of the siege the water supply was cut off by the Moslems. On the 21st of April the captain of H.M.S. Triumph took on his ship across the bay some fifty Turkish troops, officers and men, and the chief in command for the district, and a commission of notables from Alexandretta. The assailants swore to observe a truce for two days and to turn on the water to the village, and the captain and his men returned to Alexandretta. The Moslem hordes at once renewed the attack and kept it up until a strong relieving force arrived, a few days later. Some ten of the besieged were killed and about thirty wounded. The loss on the other side was perhaps three times as heavy.

Villages and towns round about Marash have been looted and burned and the men almost exterminated. Kishifli, twelve miles distant, was burned, twelve men killed and 400 people left homeless, naked and hungry. In Orchan, seven men were killed and their bodies burned. Forty men from Harpoot, on their way to work, were butchered near El Oghloo, eighteen miles from Marash. Within sixty miles of Marash sixteen towns and villages, having a total population of 8,000, have been destroyed.

The wife of the pastor in one of the villages writes: "No men are left alive here. There are only women and girls, and boys under ten. We women and children are seeking shelter in the stables, in caves or among the ruins of our burned homes. We have neither food, clothing nor beds. If any one by begging can get a handful of grain from a Moslem, she has no dish to put it in nor place to cook it. We are living on roots and grass, like animals. Our tears have been our food and our cry has reached to heaven. The worst is that they are continually coming upon us and trying to carry off girls and young women. Several have been carried off. Oh save us! We have none but you to look to!"

Mule trains with food and supplies were sent to these villages. The first caravan returned May 6, bringing about 156 women and children. Many followed on foot, and the muleteers brought them over tortuous mountain paths, as the regular road was almost impassable in places, because of the stench of decaying bodies. The widow of the slain Baghche pastor, his mother and his four little children were among those who came. Little children even have an old and worn look, and are cowed and quiet. Word comes from some of the small villages of deaths from hunger.

A shipment of 500 blankets and 100 quilts was given to the missionaries' charge, at the Adana relief camp, for distribution. The clamoring and begging of the great crowd were incessant. The distributers found mothers trying to shield their little ones with pads of dry grass, shavings and old tattered sacking. Some women were cramped into the most unnatural positions from the cold of the night, their arms drawn closely around their children. In one place an old charred timber was used as a pillow. There was not enough wood to make camp-fires. In another place a man was found covering up four orphans with a scanty piece of sacking. The saddest sight of all was when, in the early morning, a mother drew back a little carpet which had served as a quilt, and found that her baby had died during the night. In one day in that camp of 14,000 souls fifteen persons died of measles, and two babies were found dying of hunger.

It was refreshing to see the looks of gratitude which lighted up the faces of those people who had been helped. They went off blessing the givers and hugging their newly-found treasures.

Our State Department in Washington has received from United States Consul-General Ravondal, at Beirut, a letter written by Missionary Trowbridge at Adana and dated May 1. The writer reviews the recent massacres and tells of the progress of the relief work. The new Vali of Adana has arrived and seems to be an able man. All are hopeful that he may prove equal to the situation. The letter concludes:

"Flour is needed rather than wheat, most of the bakeries and mills having been burned. Rice, tent-cloth, cooking utensils and medical supplies are urgently needed. We feel profoundly grateful for indications of generous gifts from abroad. . . . Before writing you, we have commended all our needs to God in prayer. It is of great refreshment to remember his mercy and justice."

Relief work is now under way at Adana, Alexandretta, Marash, Tarsus, Latakieh, Kessab and other points, the distributing centres being Adana and Beirut. The officers and crews of the foreign warships have greatly helped the missionaries in this humane, life-saving work. Some of these warships have sheltered large numbers of refugees during the days of greatest peril. They have not stinted their gifts of supplies of bread, biscuit, soups, etc., and these, added to the limited supplies in the missionaries' hands, have been of the greatest service. Another remittance of $5,000 has been cabled by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, through our State Department, to the Relief Committees at Adana, Tarsus and Beirut. Contributions for the Armenian Relief Fund should be addressed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Every contribution will be acknowledged in these columns.

Armenian Refugees in a Relief Camp Near Latakieh

The following Additional Contributions have been received in aid of the Survivors of the Massacres:

Ackerman, Mrs H.. 1 00
Adams, Mrs J..... 2 00
Ambrose, Mrs E J. 2 00
Ames, Mrs P D... 1 00
Anderson, E S 1 00
Anderson, J E 5 00
Anderson, Mrs J.. 1 00
Aska, J M 1 00
Atherton, Wm E... 3 00
Atwood, Miss L... 1 00
Ayres, Mrs S E.... 1 00
Ballie, H M 1 00
Bailey, Mrs N 1 00
Bailey, Mrs N A.. 50
Baker, John 1 00
Baker, S R 1 00
Banwell, H 10 00
Barbur, Mr & Mrs A H 1 00
Barksdale, B E... 1 00
Barnes, Ellen 2 00
Barrett, N E 2 50
Beadle, John 5 00
Beatty, Miss M.... 1 00
Beers, Mrs D 1 50
Bell, Mrs A W..... 1 00
Benton, L B 2 00
Bills, A E 5 00
Bixel, Elias 2 50
Blee, Mrs Ida 3 00
Blomberg, M E.... 3 50
Bollinger, Jas 10 00
Bothrock, Mrs C.. 3 00
Boyd, Mrs F V.... 1 00
Bramley, Miss H.. 1 00
Brandt, Minnie E.. 5 00
Bratton, S H 2 00
Briscoe, Martha J. 1 00
Brock, W M 5 00
Browitt, Harry ... 1 00
Brown, Tillie 50
Bruval, Nels 5 00
Burns, Mrs J T... 1 00
Butman, R T 2 00
Byers, Mrs W E.. 1 00
Cameron, J M & Wife 1 00
Campbell, Neil.... 1 00
Carter, Alice 1 00
Carter, L H 2 00
Cathcart, Elizabeth E 1 00
Caywood, Mrs C... 1 00
Chamberlain, F ... 5 00
Chamberlin, Mrs V G 25
Chambers, Mrs M D 2 00
Chapman, Mrs F S. 2 00
Child, James J....100 00
Christoph, Mrs J C 1 00
Clapp, Mrs A R.. 3 00
Clare, Mrs M L... 1 50
Clark, Mr & Mrs J. 1 00
Climents, Rev P H. 50
Codding, E E 1 00
Corfman, Irene S.. 5 00
Corkhill, C S & Wife 100 00
Cory, Sarah C 5 00
Coudry, David W.. 5 75
Cox, Mrs C 5 00
Cox, Mrs 2 00
Crain, O L & Wife.10 00
Crosby, Susan 1 00
Crowell, W N.... 1 00
Cunningham, Mrs A 2 00
Currens, Miss M E 1 00
Daniel, M J 1 00
Dankel, R R 1 00
Davenport, S 1 00
Davidson, Carrie.. 5 00
Davis, Mrs A T... 1 00
Davis, Henry L... 1 00
Davis, Miss J A... 2 00
Davis, E Eliza....10 00
Dawson, Mrs W J G 1 00
Day, Mrs S P..... 1 00
Dean, G L 5 00
Dempsey, Mrs M B 1 00
Denton, Mrs A.... 1 00
De Parm, F M....20 00
Diel, Mrs C J.... 2 00
Dinius, Mrs F.... 2 00
Dinnick, S R 10 00
Dorr, Mrs S E.... 2 00
Dosher, Mrs S F.. 1 00
Doty, Amanda 1 00
Doty, Frank L....10 00
Downing, Hugh W. 1 00
Drumond, Mrs J, Jr 1 00
Dunlap, Mrs W P. 1 00
Duval, E A 2 00
Earsley, Theresa... 1 00
Eckert, C R 50
Eckert, Jacob 5 00
Erratt, Henry N... 1 00
Espenhain, C F... 2 00
Evans, Mrs E B.. 2 00
Everest, M T 10 00
Ewing, Mrs W K.. 2 55
Eyeleshimer, P D. 2 00
Fadden, Mrs M.... 1 00
Faulkner, Mrs S P 2 00
Fisher, Mrs A 30 00
Fisher, Emma C... 2 00
Fleming, F M 2 00
Fleming, Mrs J.... 1 00
Fogg, Anna W.... 1 00
Forbes, Jas H.... 5 00
Forsberg, Mrs J... 2 00
Foster, D E 2 00
Franklin, Mrs E... 1 00
Frazer, Robert 5 00
Gable, Mrs E A.... 5 00
Gallup, M E 2 00
Gardiner, E B 1 00
Gass, Mrs A J... 1 00
Gillespie, Miss N M 2 00
Goldspohn, W F.. 1 00
Gore, F S 1 00
Graham, Mrs V L. 2 00
Grant, Hattie E.. 1 00
Graves, Mrs W.... 5 00
Graw, Mrs J 1 00
Guagg, Miss E..... 1 00
Gunn, Mrs D B... 1 00
Hadley, Mrs E.... 1 00
Hagaman, C A.... 5 02
Hall, Mrs A 1 00
Hall, Miss G M... 1 00
Hall, Mrs J T..... 5 00
Hallman, Geo J... 1 50
Halstead, Mr & Mrs D W 3 60
Hamilton, Mrs M E M 1 00
Hampton, Mrs D C. 1 00
Harris, David 5 00
Harris, Mrs E J... 5 00
Harris, J N 2 00
Hartzell, Mrs E E 1 00
Hastings, T J 1 00
Hedman, Olof 1 00
Heiskell, Mrs F... 2 00
Henderson, Mrs C S 2 00
Henderson, F G... 1 00
Henley, Wm 1 00
Hensel, Mrs G A.. 2 00
Herron, Miss W.... 3 00
Hill, Mrs H S..... 2 00
Hill, Susan A 2 00
Himcky, John M S. 50
Herdenreich, J H.. 2 00
Hirst, Mrs A..... 2 00
Hoffman, Otto & Maggie 5 00
Holme, Eleanor.... 1 00
Holmes, J D 3 00
Holton, Mrs W.... 1 00
Hood, Wm 1 00
Hopfinger, Jas A... 2 00
Howe, Mrs H W... 2 00
Howell, Mrs S C.. 1 00
Hudelson, Fanny.. 1 00
Hungerford, Helen 1 00
Hunt, M K 2 00
Huntington, Nan K & Family 1 00
Irey, W T 2 00
Jackson, G G 1 00
Jeffery, H 2 00
Jewett, Dr O W.. 2 50
Johnsen, Mrs H J & Daughter 2 00
Johnson, Geo B & Family 5 00
Johnson, Mrs H C & Daughter 6 00
Jones, Mrs F L.... 6 00
Judd, Mrs F E.... 5 00
Judy, J K 5 00
Keen, D J 5 00
Keller, J D 1 00
Keller, Mrs J A... 1 00
Kennedy, Ira S.... 5 00
Kerr, Worth 2 00
Kimomms, W G.... 1 00
King, Mrs E H C.. 5 00
Kirkland, Mrs W.. 5 00
Kirkpatrick, Lydia E 1 00
Klasgge, Mrs W E.10 00
Kline, D S 5 00
Knapp, Mrs W F.. 2 00
Koll, E M 1 00
Kruse, Henry F.... 1 00
Kuhn, Geo J & Wife 25 00
Laidlaw, Mrs S H 1 50
Lamb, F 2 00
Landis, Mrs A S.. 1 50
Lane, Lucie V 50
Larson, Oscar 4 00
Leach, Mrs J 50
Leach, Lillian C.. 25
Lee, Mr & Mrs G.. 5 00
Lee, John C 2 00
Le Harr, S 1 00
Lehman, Mr & Mrs H B 10 00
Lewellin, Mary J.. 1 00
Little, Robert 5 00
Logan, Mrs M E... 1 00
Long, R J 5 00
Ludwick, J 5 00
Lundy, Mrs E..... 1 00
Lundy, Mrs L A... 1 00
Lynch, R C..... 1 00
Lyon, S D 1 00
Lyon, Wm F 5 00
McCartney, Mrs H. 1 00
McClung, Agnes.... 5 00
McFaden, Mrs V 2 00
McIntire, J C.... 75
McNaughton, John. 2 00
McShaw, J E 2 50
Macklody, J K.... 1 00
Major, Mrs M J.. 1 00
Mapes, Mrs E J... 1 00
Marden, John 5 00
Martenson, Mrs N. 2 00
Masters, Mrs L.... 1 00
Mather, Frank & Lillian 4 00
Matthes, Chas G... 1 00
Maxon, Mrs D J.. 1 00
Mayhew, Frank ... 1 00
Mears, Mrs N J.. 5 00
Menibee, J N..... 5 00
Menzies, Mrs W.... 1 00
Merkley, Mrs J H. 2 00
Messenger, E 2 00
Miller, Mr & Mrs P E 5 00
Miller, Mr & Mrs R 1 00
Mitchell, Mary R.. 1 00
Mahr, Mrs C 10 00
Morrill, Mrs M B. 3 00
Moseley, Lizzie.... 3 00
Moses, I Q 1 00
Moss, Virgie B.... 1 00
Mower, A J 1 00
Nairn, Mrs M 1 00
Neiman, Mrs M.... 1 00
Nelson, A 10 00
Nelson, Mrs C A... 2 25
Nelson, F N 1 00
Nesbit, J J 2 00
Nyhart, Mrs J G... 1 00
Olson, Olof 2 00
Orne, John H 1 00
Otto, Mrs M E.... 1 00
Overholt, M C.... 1 00
Owens, A H 2 00
Paine, T W 10
Parsons, Mrs W J. 3 00
Patterson, Elia'th.. 1 00
Patterson, T G & Wife 5 00
Peck, Mrs E E... 2 00
Peck, Mrs J A.... 1 00
Peebles, V F.....10 00
Pentico, Mrs A C.. 3 00
Perkins, Mrs E.... 50
Perrin, Mrs E M.. 1 00
Person, Hans 5 00
Phillips, Mrs H.... 1 00
Pickering, E W.... 1 00
Polk, Miss S 2 00
Pallen, Lucy 1 00
Porter, Mrs G 4 00
Porter, Mary E.... 2 00
Potter, Mrs G 2 00
Potts, A H 2 00
Powell, Mrs L R.. 2 00
Radcliffe, W S.... 5 00
Ralph, Mrs A..... 50
Ramsburg, J M 5 00
Ramsburg, Miss L C 5 00

And several hundred others to be acknowledged next week.

GREAT AWAKENING IN MELBOURNE

DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN and Mr. Charles M. Alexander and their party reached Australia safely, after an interesting trip from Vancouver to Sydney on the steamship Makura. During the voyage they held stirring meetings in the Hawaiian and the Fijian Islands. They also published on the steamer six issues of a little four-page paper, each issue containing a sermon by Dr. Chapman and a song by Mr. Alexander, and in this way the entire ship was permeated with a religious spirit. On reaching Australian shores they were given enthusiastic welcomes at Brisbane, Sydney and Melbourne.

The Mission in Melbourne is proving a great success. The city is being shaken by the power of God in answer to prayer. For two weeks simultaneous meetings have been held in about thirty centres, as was the case in Boston, and great numbers have already confessed Christ.

Each day except Saturday, noon meetings have been conducted by Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander in the Town Hall, holding about 2,500 people, and it has proved entirely too small to accommodate the throngs which flock to hear them. For the last two days the meetings have been divided, the men gathering in the Town Hall and the women in a large church near by. In spite of this division each place has been filled with crowds of eager, enthusiastic listeners.

Evangelistic Meeting for Men Only, in Melbourne Town Hall

At the beginning of the meeting in the Town Hall, on Thursday, great applause was elicited by the sight of several Bishops of the Anglican Church marching upon the platform to hear the evangelists, garbed in their long coats and gaiters. One of them led in prayer, praying earnestly for the success of the revival. The men drink in Dr. Chapman's messages with wonderful eagerness and enthusiasm. The singing is marvelous. I have rarely, if ever, heard such singing from an equal number of persons as arises from the throngs in the Town Hall meetings. An indication of the manner in which God is moving mightily throughout the city was given at a recent noon meeting, when, in response to Dr. Chapman's appeal at the close of a brief address, twenty or thirty men stood up to confess Christ as their personal Saviour.

All the meetings held thus far have been preparatory to a great two weeks' series of gatherings, to be held in the Exhibition Building, accommodating 5,000 to 10,000 people. The meetings there begin to-morrow, and it is expected that marvelous scenes will be witnessed night after night as men and women flock to the front to confess Christ.

The whole city is being deeply moved. Two religious weeklies are devoting eight or more pages of each issue to the awakening, while one of them expects shortly to issue a great illustrated souvenir of 160 pages, fully describing the movement. Will not the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD continue to pray earnestly for such a mighty out-pouring of God's Spirit upon Australia that the commonwealth shall be stirred as never before in its history and that the entire Christian world shall be inspired by the great work of grace.

GEORGE T. B. DAVIS.

* * *

Laymen's Missionary Movement

FIFTY Men's Missionary Conventions in six months, culminating in a National Missionary Congress in April, 1910, is the programme now being arranged by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. It is the most extensive educational effort undertaken in modern times.

Canada has already adopted a National Missionary programme, looking toward the adequate extension of her aggressive efforts at home, and to the fourfold multiplication of her missionary forces and offerings in behalf of the non-Christian world. A number of the largest denominations in the United States have adopted policies during the past two years, calling for the doubling, trebling or quadrupling of their entire foreign missionary operations.

Among the special objects of prayer in connection with this campaign, perhaps the following are the most important: 1. That the Missionary Boards and their Secretary be directed to the best use of this unprecedented opportunity. 2. For the Laymen's Missionary Movements, both interdenominational and denominational, and their secretaries, that they may be led in giving general direction to the united campaign. 3. For the six Summer Conferences, where many hundreds of laymen, missionaries, pastors and others will confer together concerning their personal preparation as missionary advocates.

4. For the City Co-operating Committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, who will have the responsibility of arranging for the fifty or more Men's Missionary Conventions to be held in the leading centres of the United States. 5. That suitable laborers for the fields may be raised up as rapidly as the various Missionary Boards are able to send them out.

J. CAMPBELL WHITE,
General Secretary.

OF INTEREST TO BOOK-LOVERS AND BARGAIN-LOVERS

BOOK-LOVERS and bargain-lovers cannot afford to miss, in an early issue, the large double-page announcement which we shall then publish concerning our Unprecedented History Offer. This will show the exact size of each of the Fifteen Superb Volumes comprising THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ALL NATIONS, which we now offer to readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD at EXACTLY HALF the PUBLISHERS' PRICE.

* * *

Practically every member of the great CHRISTIAN HERALD Family reads, or has occasion to refer to, some history, and we believe that only the BEST is good enough for our people. Consequently we determined to put within reach of our subscribers, even those of very limited means, the finest history that the world affords. This, of course, meant long and diligent research, and, in our determination to have the Best, and Nothing but the Best, we were obliged to review many historical works and likewise to refuse many offers from various publishers before our efforts were finally rewarded—and rewarded tenfold—in finding that indisputable authority on all historical matters great and small, THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ALL NATIONS.

Even then it was months before we succeeded in making the special arrangements with the publishers of the work that have enabled us to put before our readers the greatest, grandest and most beautiful history to be found anywhere at any price, at the wonderfully low figure quoted below.

Here, then, is a bargain the like of which our Book Department has never before offered. Approximately, $250,000 were expended on the production of these magnificent books, and the De Luxe Edition, which is now yours for Less Than a Dollar and a Half per Volume, is enriched by three hundred and thirty-eight exquisite full-page illustrations, many in color, and sixty-four colored maps. The contents of the work, reviewed and endorsed by fifteen professors of history in American universities and colleges and other prominent educators, and brought right down to date, is unquestionably the Greatest Achievement in the Whole Range of Historical Literature. Paper, binding, typography—every feature of this Special Edition represents the acme of perfection in the bookmaker's art.

* * *

We wish that we might put this library of world-wide history in the hands of every ambitious boy and girl and every young man and woman who has not had the advantages of a college education. Here, too, is pre-eminently the history of all others for busy people, as the wonderful system of indexing and topical arrangement of the text enables the reader to find at a glance the exact information desired.

* * *

As our arrangement with the publishers allows us only a limited number of sets, we cannot too strongly urge upon all who are interested in the matter the advisability of sending us their orders as soon as possible, for such a genuine book bargain is not likely to remain long on our hands.

* * *

Price $20, on easy instalments, or ten per cent. discount if paid by cash accompanying order, making the net price only $18 for Fifteen Magnificent Volumes, aggregating over Five Thousand Large Pages.

ADDRESS
CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT.,
92 Bible House, New York

GOSPEL NOTES FROM VARIOUS FIELDS

—REV. WALTER B. WILLIAMS, of the Grand Cess Mission, Cape Palmas, Liberia, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, asking Christians in America to pray for the mission. "There is trouble with the Liberian government, which may end in bloodshed," he writes. "Pray that this may be averted and that a mighty revival may take place here."

—CAPTAIN BENN, of the Gospel yacht Messenger, is carrying on active work among the sailors of the ships which crowd the anchorages of New York Harbor these bright June days. A record of one day shows the amount of work accomplished in a few hours by the captain and a crew of one. He visited seven steamships which ply to Australia and China, twenty-three coastwise sailing ships and seven canal boats. He distributed 980 magazines, 2,800 religious papers and 720 tracts. He put two traveling libraries of twenty-five volumes each on board of ships bound for distant ports. In all 6,209 periodicals were given away. The seamen on the ships he boarded numbered 678.

—A NOTABLE evangelistic movement is under way in the Kootenay district, British Columbia. Fourteen Canadians and a party of ten Chapman-Alexander evangelists from Minneapolis and Boston will be engaged. The Canadian contingent, under Rev. Dr. Shearer, is composed of Professor Kilpatrick, Rev. W. D. Reed, of Montreal; Rev. F. A. Robinson, of Stirling, Ontario; Rev. A. E. Mitchell, of Hamilton; Rev. G. A. Woodside, of Owen Sound; William McBretney and H. A. Berlis, of Toronto; Principal Patrick and Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg; Rev. Thurlow Fraser and Mr. Lowrey, of Portage la Prairie; Rev. W. G. Brown, of Red Deer, Alberta, and Rev. J. M. Miller, of Nanaimo, B. C. The campaign will continue for three weeks.

TALKS ON THE COOL VERANDA

Mistaken Martyrs

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

I AM going to tell my readers one or two stories from life. I was thinking the other day of a girl I knew when she was sweet and twenty, with a face like a flower and a voice like a thrush. This girl was the eldest of her family, and her father was dead. She lived without a thought of saving her health and strength, entirely for her mother and her younger brothers. The mother was an invalid, worn out by hard work and sorrow. Every morning, before the daughter left her home for the department store in which she was a clerk, she prepared breakfast, put the house in order and started her brothers on their day, two of them going to work and one to school. Each evening, on her return, she again took up the domestic load.

She did this year in and year out until she was thirty. The older brothers, who might have been expected to relieve her as they were promoted in business, married and went to homes of their own. The mother finally died, and the youngest of the boys, who was a bright student and ambitious, worked his way through college and at last achieved a remarkable degree of success. The strange thing was that none of the brothers imagined that they had any duty to their sister, that they owed her any gratitude, or that she had the slightest need of a respite from her labors. She lost her health and her good looks; she kept on toiling as she always had, without any special break, and in an increasing loneliness. It was impossible for her not to reflect that she had given all to her brothers, and had received little in return. Her sisters-in-law were not congenial and really regarded her as an interloper when she came into their households. Her unmarried brother forged ahead, became popular and courted, was quoted for his bright speeches and admired as a rising man. Never unkind to his sister, he was indifferent to her, and sometimes showed impatience at her plainness, her mistakes in grammar and her ignorance of society ways. The end came when one day the girl, who had for some time suffered in silence from an obscure malady, went to a hospital where after an operation she died. No one called her a martyr, yet she was as much a martyr to her love and her sacrifice of herself as if she had been burned at the stake.

I have often advised women not to think too much about number one. I have counseled them to forget themselves and live for others, to lend a hand, to see what they could do in the way of cheering and brightening lives that were dark and desolate. That was one side of the shield. Here is another.

Years ago, a man who had been successful in whatever he undertook and had been widely respected in the community, lost his fortune in a day. Every dollar he had was swept away, and he came home heart-broken and weary. He had lost more than his fortune. He had lost his grip; he had no more confidence in himself, and as he could not regain his former position he hid himself from the eyes of every one and refused to do any work of any kind. His daughters stepped to the front and did what they could, each devoting all her time and talents to the support of the home, and of the father. These poor girls, too, were modern martyrs, and in their martyrdom they never had a chance to take an outing, spend a few days away from home or know the refreshment of a change or a vacation. Their father was always courteous, gentle and polite; always spoke to them endearingly and always allowed them to go on with their sacrifice as if nothing else were possible. These girls did not die, but they were not able to keep up with the procession. When at last their father died they were left prematurely old, with little hope of relief from dire poverty.

Girls often delight in resigning their own chances for the sake of younger brothers and sisters, and sometimes they ought to do it. Often they ought not. What do you think of this incident, a true one and not altogether uncommon? The elder sister in a large family was engaged to be married. Having no mother, she took the mother's office upon her and brought up the younger children, foregoing almost every pleasure suitable to her years. Her lover begged her from year to year to marry him, but she always said, "Wait until Jenny is grown. I cannot marry you until Jenny is eighteen." Nearly eight years passed away, and one morning Jenny and the discouraged lover went to the house of a minister and were married. In the same year the father of the family married again, and the elder daughter and sister found herself pushed into the background. Here, too, was an instance of mistaken martyrdom.

THE FLOWER MARKET, PARIS

WHETHER in a foreign city or in our own land the flower market is a place of marvelous bloom and fragrance. Flowers have their message to the wayfarer, the toiler, the lover, the business man and the little child. Who can resist a flower? The man who leaves home in the morning with a flower in his buttonhole, the gift of a loving wife, is safer and happier all day because of that sweet link with his home. At the cost of a few sous the people who are watching the stalls and wagons in this Parisian market may carry home great handfuls of beauty.

Has Romance an Age Limit?

A VERY sweet story in one of the monthly magazines has for its motive a romance in which the actors are a spinster of forty-seven and a widower of fifty-four. The two have known one another all their lives. They have been neighbors and good friends for years. The woman loved the man in her girlhood, but unselfishly gave him up that her dearest friend, who loved him too, might become his wife. At the critical moment, when the young man of twenty-four would have discovered that he loved the maiden of seventeen, the latter went away on a long visit, so that the field might be free for her friend. Thirty years later circumstances bring the two together. Each has been long alone. The woman has never unveiled the secret of her heart. The man has not found out that he could love again, yet their autumn wooing is almost as sweet, as tender and delicate as if it had been the earlier wooing of the springtime. Is there an age limit in romance? Undoubtedly yes, but it does not reveal itself until people are really old and are tottering along on the verge of life. Shall we say that after ninety, for example, the period of sentiment is passed? We shall be safe in naming that mature age as a definite limit. Fifty and sixty are at present milestones much nearer youth than they once were.

School-Girl Fads

The pupils in a New York public school recently annoyed their principal by a lavish use of the powder-puff, and disfigured their pretty faces with tiny bits of court-plaster. A stern decree from the platform compelled them to abandon the silly practice. Probably they had been reading in French or English history about the days when court beauties heightened their charms in this way, and could the teacher have persuaded herself to ignore their folly it would soon have worn itself out. The exquisite loveliness of girlhood, on the threshold of maturer years, needs no outward aid or embellishment. Cosmetics never do much good, even when applied to worn and elderly faces. The springs of beauty lie deeper than the surface of the skin. Whoever would have a smooth complexion, bright eyes and an attractive countenance must have physical and spiritual health. To be well mentally and physically is almost always to be beautiful.

Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

LAURA R. When the bride wears white the bridesmaids may dress in delicate pink, blue, or any color they prefer. You ask if a widow wears white at her second marriage. It is not usual for her to do so. Lavendar or pearl-gray would be her better choice.

WILLIS D. A good complexion does not depend upon creams, powder or any variety of cosmetic. Exercise, bathing and sleep will help you to a clear skin and healthful color. Avoid too many sweets and rich pastry, if you would get rid of pimples and blotches.

FIRST CHRISTIAN HOME IN EUROPE*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

NOTE it, and do not forget it, that the Gospel was first preached in Europe to women. And Lydia, a woman of Thyatira, was the first Christian convert in Europe. Lydia and her household were the first Christians in Europe to be baptized.

This is how it all came about: In the year A.D. 51 there departed from the city of Antioch, in Syria, two men; one, Paul, the great missionary to the Gentiles, and Silas, one of the chief men, elder in the Christian Church in Antioch. It was their purpose, first, to visit the churches in Asia, established on Paul's first missionary journey, when he had been accompanied by Barnabas, and, second, to form other churches in different parts of Asia, particularly in the regions bordering on the Ægean Sea. It was altogether an overland journey. Possibly they may have gone afoot, or they may have ridden on mules. We can easily imagine the "God speed" that was given them by the Christians at Antioch. Probably they passed through Adana, the region where so many Christians have been massacred recently. Between Syria and Asia Minor were the Taurus Mountains, and through the Syrian Gates, now known as the Beilan Pass, the two missionary travelers passed from one land to the other.

Then they came to Tarsus, the birthplace of Paul; and, on resuming their journey, they came to the Cilician Gates, another pass in the Taurus Mountains, and then they were in Derbe, where the last church in Paul's first missionary journey had been established. After strengthening the Christians there, they passed on to Lystra, and thereafter there were three who journeyed together, for at Lystra there was added Timothy—Timotheus—whom Paul was wont to call "my true child (son) in the faith," for Timothy had been converted when Paul first visited Lystra. Quite a little farther on in our story is Lydia, the first Christian convert in Europe. It was the expectation of Paul and Silas to confine their missionary labors to Asia, but that was not God's plan for them. Whichever way they turned, to Phrygia and Galatia and Bithynia on the north, to Mysia on the northwest, the Spirit of Jesus suffered them not to speak, and they were forbidden of the Holy Spirit to speak the Word in Asia. Just how they were constrained we are not told; perhaps God's Spirit bore witness with their spirit; there may have been an angel sent with a message from the Court of Heaven; there may have been the flame of a sword which turned every way. Whatever it was, Paul and Silas perfectly understood that God, at that time, did not wish them to continue preaching in Asia.

Led by the Spirit of God, they came down to Troas, by the sea, and as Paul was sleeping in the night, not knowing whither he should go on the morrow, God sent a vision to him, to show him what he should do. A kind of a man that Paul was not accustomed to see appeared before his soul's vision. It was a man of Macedonia, a Roman province, over sea from Troas, a five days' journey distant. And the vision had a voice, and uttered these words: "Come over into Macedonia and help us." So sure was Paul that the message was from God, he "straightway," with Barnabas and Timothy, with a fourth person added to their company—Luke, the beloved physician—set sail for Macedonia. (It is plain from the use of "we" in Acts 5:10 that Luke joined Paul at Troas, presumably to care for Paul's health.) Now we are getting nearer to Lydia, the first Christian convert in Europe.

Paul Preaches to the Women

Paul and his company entered Europe at Neapolis, which was the seaport of Philippi, the chief city of Macedonia. They did not find a throng waiting to receive them; even the vision had faded. They were strangers in a strange land, and, until the Sabbath came, they simply tarried. There was no synagogue in Philippi, but upon inquiry they were told that outside of the city gate, down by the river side, was a place where "prayer was wont to be made." Thither they went, and found a few women gathered. Now we are getting very near to Lydia, the first Christian convert in Europe.

Paul, believing that a door was opened to him of the Lord, as he afterward wrote in a letter to the Corinthians (II. Cor. 2:12), began to preach the Gospel to the women. The name of only one woman who was there is given, and that was "Lydia." It is said of her that she was "a seller of purple." She was a business woman, probably a widow. She was at the head of a dyeing establishment; rather a select one, because she sold "purple," and only the wealthy were her patrons. We are interested to know that Lydia was rather an uncommon woman, but what concerns us more is the statement that she gave heed to the things spoken by Paul, and the Spirit of God opened her understanding, so that she at once became a Christian and was baptized by Paul, and also those of her household who were with her. How quickly Christian hospitality followed on, for she not only invited but constrained Paul and his co-workers to come to her house, basing her invitation on their belief in her conversion: "If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord." With this argument they could not do otherwise than become her guests. Lydia's home city was Thyatira, but she had a temporary business residence in Philippi.

If there were other converts that day we are not told about them. But the first Gospel sermon in Europe had been preached, and a Jewish woman had become the first convert.

Beilan Pass, Through Which Paul and Silas Journeyed

We do not forget that it was a man who, in the vision, had said: "Come over into Macedonia and help us." To know that Paul did afterward win men converts we have only to read his letter to the Philippians, and to look into the history of the Philippian church, which Paul and Silas were able to organize. How generous they were in their gifts, four times sending contributions for Paul's support! And their history did not end with Paul's ministrations, for we read of their co-operation with Ignatius and Polycarp. And not only this, but the great Gospel work that has been going on all of the centuries since in Europe is traceable to the beginning at Philippi!

But let us return to the fact that the Gospel was first preached to women in Europe, and that a woman was the first Christian convert in Europe! How great is the company of women who have since followed Lydia, not only in Europe, but in all lands!

Especially in this twentieth century has woman come to her own in Christ.

In darkest China, there is what the wife of Bishop Bashford has called "a wonderful new national movement for the uplift of woman." She also says: "Seven years ago there were no schools for girls in China, save those established by Christian missions. Now there are a dozen in Shanghai, twenty in Peking, twenty-five in Canton and others in various parts, all under native direction. They teach modern branches in the modern way. There is no heathen worship, and Sunday is observed as a day of rest.

Now is the time when Christian women in England and America can do much for their sisters in China, for with unbound feet (according to the edict of the late Empress) and unbound minds there are no intellectual or spiritual heights which the Chinese women may not hope to ascend. As we saw them in medical schools and hospital work, and in Bible work, we were compelled to acknowledge their ability.

A book has recently been written by Kasem Ameen, a learned Mussulman jurist, in which he makes a strong and unprecedented plea for the emancipation of the Mohammedan woman. The book is described as nothing less than "epoch-making." But the author denies that the Bible has been the cause of the Christian woman's social and mental development. His panacea for the Mohammedan woman's condition is education. He says: "We have such a low opinion of woman that when we want to denounce a man for his rascality we say, 'He is brought up by a woman.'" He wisely adds: "The girl must attend school if we are to have capable, conscientious and enlightened mothers." It is just possible that Mohammedans may yet come to realize that it is a right understanding of woman's relation to God as his child, his daughter, that determines she shall be a blessing as a mother.

There is "a white woman's burden," and it is to make the whole world better for having lived in it, and only the Christian woman can do that in fullest measure.

"Come over into Macedonia and help us" has been the slogan of the missionary movement since its inception. "Macedonia" has become the synonym of every land where the preaching of the Gospel is needed, whether pagan or heathen. And the "Macedonian cry" is used to express the attitude of those who desire the Gospel.

* International Sunday School Lesson for July 4, 1909. Paul's Second Missionary Journey. Antioch to Philippi. Acts 16:6-15. GOLDEN TEXT: "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Acts 16:9.

"Where There's a Will, There's a Way"

William Vansant, Junior Agent

Dear Christian Herald:—I live in the country, and to sell my papers I have to travel far; too far for me to walk, as I am only eight years old, so dear old Fanny carries me on her back. We enjoy our travels together and the people whom we visit enjoy their CHRISTIAN HERALD. I think the premiums you sent me are splendid and mean to increase my sales. Yours truly,

Chester Co., Pa. WILLIAM VANSANT.

Here is a little lad, who we prophesy will some day be a successful business man. Why? Because he has already proved that he knows how to succeed in the face of difficulties, and the good things of life are pretty certain to fall to the lot of the boy or girl who'll TRY.

Of course, many of our boys and girls who live in the country, like "William," have no good horse to carry them over long distances. Still there's a wealth of truth in the old saying, "Where there's a will there's a way." If other Junior Agents earn money and fine premiums by selling THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, you can do the same if you make up your mind to. The point is, don't waste valuable time now in thinking over possible difficulties that may obstruct your way to success. Order your first ten FREE copies TODAY—then try to sell to every one who you think might buy. Don't walk around the block to find a man, but ask the very first likely customer you meet. Special Rewards to Beginners.

Christian Herald Junior Department, Bible House, New York

Christians Who Walk in "The Way"

Sermon continued from page 532

Lord would hold him from his shame. The better nature was there, as the final remorse testified, but was not yielded to and was listened to too late. Our direction, have we decided it? Have we given ourselves in irreversible purpose to "The Way" of the Lord? Charles Kingsley, on his twenty-second birthday, wrote: "I have been for the last hour on the seashore, not dreaming, but thinking deeply and strongly, and forming determinations which are to affect my destiny through time and eternity. Before the sleeping earth, and the sleeping sea and stars, I have devoted myself to God—a vow never (if he gives the faith I pray for) to be recalled." Have we made that kind of vow?

The nature of "the Way" determines its goal. It is a "living way." Not a dark, cheerless, perplexing road, but easily found, with approaches from every moment of life, rich with companionship, bright with the presence of Him who said, "I am the Way." Such a "Way" can have but one goal. It must issue in God and heaven. Those Roman roads, some of which are still in use, remnants of which are to be found in modern Europe, climbing the mountains, dipping into the valleys, straight, smooth, solid—they were not aimless, did not lose themselves in deserts. The dweller in any little hamlet, stepping upon one of those splendid roads, and faced aright, had no doubt about its terminal point. Straight to the heart of the Eternal City it ran. The goal was guaranteed by the nature of the road. If Jesus is our "Way" the goal is sure. To think that such a way loses itself in the mists of the future or drops into nothingness is to forget its nature, the material of its construction, the reason for its making. Be sure of this, ye pilgrims of "the Way"—it leads to Father, home, heaven.

Dr. Hale Passes Away

DR. EDWARD EVERETT HALE was, indeed, a good man, but he was much more than that. He came near being a great one. It is asserted by some critics that, though his facile pen has been idle for scarcely a day during the past half century and more, he has written nothing that will live, unless it may be The Man Without a Country.

This is a presumptuous assertion, in view of the past generations that undervalued for scores and even hundreds of years their foremost writers. Who ever thought in the seventeenth century that the Pilgrim's Progress would outlive nearly all its contemporaries? Who in their time thought that The Imitation of Christ, the Saints' Rest, Holy Living and Dying, and others of the so-called religious classics, would live for hundreds of years and minister to the deepest needs of humanity as fitly then as when they were written?

The Late Edward Everett Hale

It seems to some of us not unlikely that the beautiful story, In His Name, may live as long as anything dating from our time. Full of life, and thrilling in its romantic descriptions, it holds below the surface the noblest of motives and must appeal to the human heart, especially to that of ardent youth, as long as the Christian religion lives.

Ten Times One, with its wonderful motto, has in it also the seeds of long life. My Double and How He Undid Me is constantly alluded to in current literature. Some of the characters and sayings in Dr. Hale's books, especially in his short stories and travel sketches, have become proverbs in many family circles. The simplicity of his style, with its strong vein of humor, appeals to every honest reader. He is a bold critic who dares to predict concerning the estimate in which Dr. Hale will be held by our children and grandchildren.

Dr. Hale was an admirable preacher as well as writer. He was fond of saying that preaching was his vocation, first, last and all the time, and that writing was his avocation. In his prime, he had a voice of remarkable flexibility and carrying power, while his ready brain and rich vocabulary helped to give him a place among our foremost public speakers, where it was only natural that a nephew of Edward Everett should stand.

He was especially fortunate as an after-dinner speaker. Like Yorick, he was wont to keep the table in a roar, yet his wit was ever of the kindliest. Even for a joke, he could not hurt the feelings of the humblest.

His democracy and patriotism, shown in his war record, and in all the years since the great civil conflict, have been especially demonstrated in his attitude toward the black man. One of the first among the abolitionists of his time, he has given freely of his voice and pen for the betterment of the African race.

The love of freedom was a part of his creed. It was almost inevitable, therefore, that he should be a warm advocate of woman suffrage and of every other good cause, no matter how unpopular.

Dr. Hale was a journalist, a poet, an orator—a typical man of letters of the older generation. But perhaps his love of his kind was, after all, his crowning characteristic. He desired ardently the union of all the religious sects. His faith was so broad and so fervent that it was peculiarly appropriate that he should hold a non-sectarian position like that of Chaplain of the Senate. No matter what any Senator might think of Dr. Hale's creed, he could not help loving and respecting the man.

He was old and he had to go, but he was one of those to whom we would all have pleaded that the gift of immortal youth might be given. He made us laugh and cry and thrill with feeling; and, above all, he made us wish to be better—and he showed us the way.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 546, and write them for full information.

Ivory Soap is the purest soap there is; and the most economical.

Because of its purity, it is the only soap that should be allowed to come in contact with the face and body. For the selfsame reason, it is the only soap which the housewife should use for cleansing table-linen, laces, curtains, colored goods, cut glass, and a hundred other articles for which ordinary soaps are unsafe and unsatisfactory.

There is no "free" (uncombined) alkali in Ivory Soap. That is why it will not injure the finest fabric or the most delicate skin.

IVORY DESIGN PATD AUG. 26, 79

Ivory Soap

99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure

CLEAN-POLISH

3-IN-ONE oil immediately removes stains, spots and scars from piano cases and all fine furniture. It restores the original lustre and a bright lasting finish. Just a gentle rub with a rag moistened with 3-IN-ONE and any varnished or veneered surface will shine like new. Contains no grease or acid to soil or injure; has no disagreeable varnish odor. Try it at our expense.

FREE Write at once. Give name of your dealer. Get a sample bottle and "the new way" to polish pianos absolutely free. Library Slip packed with every bottle.

3 IN ONE

3-IN-ONE OIL CO., 54 Broadway New York City

SEND NO MONEY

THIS PLUME SENT TO YOUR HOME FOR FREE EXAMINATION

This magnificent French curl genuine ostrich plume is full 17 inches in length and made of the highest grade of hard fine ostrich selected from the male bird. Has a very glossy fibre and is extra wide, with heavy drooping head.

OUR LIBERAL OFFER. Let us send you this magnificent plume in black, white or colors prepaid for free examination. So confident are we of pleasing you that we will send you this plume for examination without one cent or cost to you. Examine carefully. If you find it the most marvelous value you ever saw and worth double, send us the $1.95 and recommend us to your friends. If after received you are not entirely satisfied, return the plume at once to us. Our illustrated catalogue describing complete line of ostrich plumes and willows sent free on request.

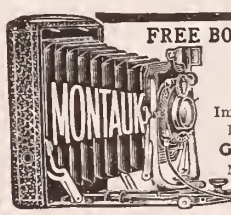
SOUTH AFRICAN IMPORTING CO.
Dept. 61, 1811-43 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

CONCRETE HOUSES
Cost Less Than Wood.
More handsome than Brick. Durable as granite. A Pettyjohn $35.00 concrete block machine, sand, gravel and cement are all that is needed. Simple, easy and quick. We furnish full instructions. Save money for yourself or make money by selling blks. Write for catalog and suggestions.
THE PETTYJOHN CO., 673 N. Sixth St., TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Infinitely better than electricity, gas, acetylene or kerosene and the most economical of all. Each lamp is a self contained miniature light works.

MAKES AND BURNS ITS OWN GAS
OVER 200 STYLES 2 CENTS A WEEK
THE BEST LIGHT
100 CANDLE POWER

Fully guaranteed. Over 200 styles. Agents wanted. Catalog Free. Write to-day.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.



FREE BOOK ON DEVELOPERS
with every order of
ENSIGN FILMS
Hauff Developers, Imperial Plates Sussex Paper
Free catalogue on request
G. GENNERT, Dept. 20
NEW YORK, 24-26 E. 13th St.
CHICAGO, 20-24 State St.

MY BOOK FREE

Memory the Basis of All Knowledge
Stop Forgetting
THE KEY TO SUCCESS
You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Easy, increases income; gives ready memory for faces, names, business, studies, conversation; develops will, public speaking.
"HOW TO REMEMBER" Write to-day
DICKSON MEMORY SCHOOL, 701 Auditorium Bldg., Chicago

The Story of Marco

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco did not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder became more and more unbearable. The man grew ugly and the food was scarce. Marco ran away and played for a living but made little. Christmas Eve Marco began to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to his selling on a corner he called his own. He rescues Jimmy from under a moving car, takes him home, and remains with him. Both go to Mont-Lawn.

CHAPTER XVI

A Long-Lost Friend

WONDERS for Marco began at once. First there were the beautiful grounds themselves, to say nothing of the swings, the seesaws, the sand pile, and the swimming-pool. Then at supper time came the signal from the great bell on the Homestead veranda. Marco was a little awkward about falling into line. He did not know just what was expected of him; but Jimmy and the teachers helped, and at last he stood, cap in hand, with the other boys forming a long double line extending far down the driveway in front of the Homestead. At still another stroke of the bell, the lines separated, leaving a space between, through which the girls were to march to the great pavilion where supper was waiting. Marco was excited indeed now, for Jimmy had whispered in his ear:

"Now's yer time ter watch. It's the girls; an' mebbe one of 'em'll be the one you're a-huntin' for!"

Flossie!

Marco's heart leaped at the thought. Away at the rear where the girls, too, were in line, he could catch tantalizing glimpses of short gingham skirts and flaxen pigtails; and those skirts and pigtails were to come marching two by two past the spot where he stood. What if——

The teacher in the lead had started, and Marco held his breath. Now was the time!

Right, left; right, left; two, four, six, eight, ten had passed. Right, left; right, left; Marco's eyes were wide and anxious. Right, left; right, left; on and on they came, chuckling, laughing, merry-faced. Right, left; right, left; the boys were falling in now. The girls had passed — and Flossie was not there.

It was a bitter disappointment to Marco, but Jimmy, as usual, had his word of comfort.

"Furgit it. Thar's odders comin'. Dey brings new kids up here t'ree times a week, an' she'll be one of 'em, sure!"

The long tables in the big pavilion had their comfort to offer Marco, too; for surely it was not in the nature of a hungry small boy to be quite downhearted in the face of all the good things to eat that those delightful tables held.

Later, in the beautiful Children's Temple came the song service, with the words of praise and prayer; and to Marco this was the most wonderful experience yet. The songs, the quiet hush, and the purple-and-gold and ruby light falling through the great stained glass windows filled him with awed rapture. He knew the name, God. He had heard it on the streets every day. But here it was different. It was not spoken in anger or with jeering laughter, but with gentleness and reverence. He remembered now that long ago, before his mother had been so ill, she had told him of this Being; and she, too, had spoken this way. It appeared that he was really good and kind, and that he loved boys and girls, and cared whether they were bad or not. Marco remembered now that his mother had said that, too; but he had forgotten it of late. . . . There was the song, also, that they had just sung at the supper table, before eating:

> God is great and God is good,
> And we thank him for this food.
> By his hand must all be fed;
> Give us, Lord, our daily bread.

That, too, was about God. As he thought of it, Marco wondered if it could be the same God whose name he heard used in anger every day on the streets. He decided that it was not; it could not be the same one. Yet some time he would ask; perhaps the next time he heard it.

The short vesper service was soon over, and Marco and his companions were out for another half hour of play before the great bell summoned them all to the little white beds in the cottages.

In Marco's room, the tired bodies were soon between the sheets, and every ear was eager for the story that Miss Bird had all ready to tell. Then there was the good-night song followed by the prayer with Miss Bird's own sweet voice in the lead. After that, in the quiet hush, Marco watched the darkness deepen and deepen until his weary eyelids blinked and blinked again only to close in sleep.

The sun was shining brightly when he awoke next morning. He rubbed his eyes, and opened them suddenly. Then he sat up and looked all about him. Had it been a dream, after all? No; it was true. Through the window he could see the blue sky and the green trees. And with a whoop of glee he caught up his pillow and aimed straight for Jimmy's small round head six feet away.

Mont-Lawn and all its people had a great surprise that morning. Marco took out his violin and began to play soon after breakfast, and it was not five minutes before he had an admiring group about him that grew moment by moment larger and more enthusiastic. Even the teachers stopped to listen, and to marvel at the runs and trills and tripping melodies; and a score of boys and girls were dancing before he had played half as many minutes. He had stopped, and they were begging for more, when at last he raised his violin and began to play "Lost on the Ocean Wave."

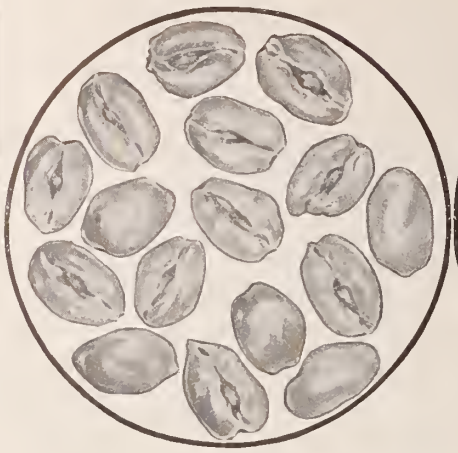
It was then that there came from one of the cottages a small girl on the run.

"See here, you—boy," she panted. "Is your name 'Marco'? There's a girl in there what says she knows you. She says she knows that tune you're a-playin'. She wants you to come. She hurted her foot yest'day mornin', an' she can't come out here. Teacher says you're ter go in there an' see her."

Marco almost dropped his violin for joy. At last it had come—this thing

Continued on next page

Puffed Wheat



Puffed Rice

Exact size of grains, with the coats unbroken, after they are puffed to eight times their natural size.

The Food That's Shot From Guns

Surprise your folks tomorrow morning with a dish of Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice.

Show them these grains, with the oats unbroken, puffed to eight times their natural size.

Serve them this crisp and delicious food—four times as porous as bread. It will melt in the mouth.

Your folks will say, "Why, this is great. Let us have it every morning."

Exploded by Steam

This is the way we make it:

The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into steel guns. Then those guns are revolved, for sixty minutes, in a heat of 550 degrees.

That heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes terriffic.

Then the guns are fired. Instantly every stanch granule is blasted into a myriad particles. Thus the kernel of grain is expanded eight times. Yet it remains unbroken—shaped as before.

Quaker Puffed Wheat, 10c
Quaker Puffed Rice, 13c

You owe these most delightful foods to Prof. A. P. Anderson. We gladly give him the credit. But the discovery—like most great inventions—was accidental.

Prof. Anderson was seeking a way to break up stareh granules, as no other process does.

Starch that is unbroken will not digest. And cooking breaks up only part of it.

So he sought a way to blast every granule to pieces by exploding the moisture in it.

When he did this, he found that he had created the most enticing cereal foods in existence.

Serve it Tomorrow

You are missing a new delight—something you won't go without when you know it.

Get both the Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice. Some like one the better—some the other.

But your folks will like either of them better than any other cereal food in existence.

Begin tomorrow morning.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

All Patents controlled by The Quaker Oats Company

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

he had dreamed of. Flossie had heard, and had known him. He had found Flossie! With a glad little cry he sprang forward, and ran for the steps of the cottage. His limbs shook, and his head swam dizzily; but he plunged blindly on and into the small room by the door where the teacher stood waiting for him.

"I've found you—oh, I've found you!" he called rapturously.

"Marco! Say, it is youse!" cried a joyful voice.

Marco stopped short. All the light and joy fled from his face and left it blank with dismay. Before him was a dark-eyed, dark-haired, dark-skinned little maid who was clapping her hands in gleeful welcome.

"Annetta!" he choked. "And I thought—you—was—Flossie!"

Annetta sobered instantly.

"Say, youse didn't now! That was tough luck! But ain't youse a little mite glad—ter see—me?"

"Why, yes, of course. I'm awful glad," returned Marco, dully; "but I thought you was—Flossie."

It required all the tact and skill of the teacher, and all the merriest wiles of Annetta to bring back the smiles to Marco's face; and even then he did not quite forget that woeful moment when he saw the dusky curls of Annetta where he had thought to find the golden locks of the long-lost Flossie.

CHAPTER XVII

The Red, White and Blue

ONE by one the days passed. Long as they were from dawn until dark, they were not long enough for the wonderful walks and games and frolics that filled them to the brim.

Marco's face was not now so white and wan, and his cheeks were not so hollow. His eyes, too, no longer looked out wistfully from cavernous depths. In spite of his disappointment at not finding Flossie, he was wonderfully happy, and many a time, through his violin, he told of what a beautiful world he had found.

The teachers wondered sometimes, just what they would do when Marco went away. They told each other that there was not a quarrel among the children that his music would not silence, nor an angry temper anywhere that would not yield to the magic of his playing. Even they themselves, they said, were conscious of a nobler, happier outlook, when Marco lifted his violin and drew from it one of his curiously heart-touching melodies. Indeed, there was no one at Mont-Lawn who did not at one time or another fall captive to the witchery of Marco's music, from the chef in the kitchen to the Italian laborers that kept the paths and driveways so beautifully swept and clean.

Four days before Marco was to go home came the glorious Fourth, and a glorious Fourth it was indeed at Mont-Lawn, from the pop of the first firecracker in the morning to the swish of the last rocket at night.

By noon guests had come from far and near, until the audience on the lawn was a thousand strong; and both there and at the exercises in the Temple hundreds of sturdy throats rent the air with cheers.

Marco knew the songs now, and could sing with a will. He knew the "Allegiance to the Flag," too, and with the best of them he could stretch his hand toward the flag above the platform, and chant the salutation.

It always stirred him—the sight of those hundreds of outstretched arms, and the sound of those hundreds of ringing voices chanting in unison; but never had it swept over him with quite the force that it carried to-day. Perhaps it was because that on the platform was Admiral Sigsbee, the hero of a score of battles, who had come to speak to the children; and perhaps it was because of what he had just said about the flag.

"It is not the flag of a king, or an emperor, or a president. It is the flag of the people. It is your flag, and its very colors mean something. Red stands for valor—and the blood that's been shed. Blue stands for justice—it's the true blue of our hearts; and white stands for purity and loyalty—the purity and loyalty of a brave boy's soul when he does what he knows is right!"

All this the great man had said, and much more. And to it all Marco had listened intently. It had stirred him strangely. Marco had known little about bravery and justice and loyalty. They had been unknown words to him. But now they suddenly became alive with warmth and meaning, and they burned their message deep into his soul. The whole day became a glorious red, white and blue. The whole day became a flag. The red of the firecrackers, the blue of the sky, and the white of the holiday dresses were, to his imaginative mind, but so many flags waving a joyous salute to their country. Even as he fell asleep that night, Marco was still humming the last strains of "The Red, White and Blue."

It was the next morning that Marco first noticed a man who stopped to listen to his playing. He was one of the Italian laborers that kept the paths in order; and Marco noticed that after that first time the man loitered several times near the music, and that he looked at him with peculiar intentness. The next day Marco was walking alone along the path, when he saw the man again. This time he stopped his work and spoke to the boy.

"You play well, boy. Who taught you?" The words came distinctly, with no trace of an accent, which vaguely surprised Marco. From the man's looks he would have expected something quite different.

"My mother."

The man lifted his head with a peculiar gesture, and came nearer.

"Boy, what is your name?" he asked.

Marco hesitated. Instinctively he backed nearer to the iron railing. There was something about this questioning that he did not like.

"Marco," he answered shortly.

"I thought so," muttered the man: "Marco Ferdinando Bonelli, eh?"

Marco stared blankly.

"Why, how did you—oh, somebody must have told you, of course," he finished, with some doubt.

"Yes, somebody told me," nodded the man, slowly. Then he stopped talking and went to raking vigorously—Miss Denny was coming along the path.

To be continued

Answered Prayers

W. B., Texas. "Some time ago my baby was very ill, and my prayers for its recovery were answered."

R. R. H., Pennsylvania. "God has answered my prayer. God is an ever-present Friend in time of trouble."

A. S., Massachusetts. "The Lord has answered my prayers, and restored two of my loved ones to health."

E. W. K., Michigan. "I am thanking the Lord for answered prayers, in helping me out of a great difficulty."

L. M. W., Napanee, Ontario, Canada. "I thank God he is answering a prayer of mine now. I can testify to many answered prayers."

M. H., West Virginia. "I promised God that if he would answer a prayer of mine I would acknowledge it to the world. The prayer was answered."

Mrs. M. E. M., Pennsylvania. "I promised to acknowledge to the world God's answer to our prayer for the conversion of a dear relative. He has answered our prayer."

G. H., New York. "I was in deep trouble. I asked God to guide me, and I see hope for relief ahead. I take this means to proclaim to the world that God does hear and answer prayer."

The Sign Board of Civilization
AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO.
LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE
BELL SYSTEM
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

Wherever you see this sign, it stands for civilization. It is the sign of one of the most powerful influences for broadening human intelligence.

The universal service of the Bell companies has provided it—has spread an even, highly developed civilization through the land. It has carried the newest impulses of development from town to town and from community to community.

Bell telephone service has brought the entire country up to the same instant of progress.

It has unified the Nation.

As soon as a new town springs up in the woods, on the plains, at the cross-roads, or walled in by mountains, the signpost of civilization is erected—the sign of the Bell. Telephone service puts the people of that town into communication with one another and with the outside world.

It puts the town on the map.

You can see this march of progress right in your own neighborhood. Every little while some neighbor has a Bell telephone put in. If you have one, every new subscriber enlarges the scope of your personal contact. If you have not, every new telephone makes you the more isolated—the more cut off from the activities about you.

Just as individuals in your locality use the telephone for mutual convenience, so towns and cities in different localities are served and advanced by the long distance telephone.

Each contributes to, and benefits by, the broad universal service of the Bell.

The busy man who wants to accomplish more than he is now doing can well afford to make use of the Bell Long Distance service. It is the most efficient office assistant imaginable. Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance station.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company
And Associated Companies

One Policy, One System, Universal Service

DOCTOR KNEW
Had Tried It Himself.

The doctor who has tried Postum knows that it is an easy, certain, and pleasant way out of the coffee habit and all of the ails following, and he prescribes it for his patients as did a physician of Prospertown, N. J.

One of his patients says:

"During the summer just past I suffered terribly with a heavy feeling at the pit of my stomach and dizzy feelings in my head, and then a blindness would come over my eyes so I would have to sit down. I would get so nervous I could hardly control my feelings.

"Finally I spoke to our family physician about it and he asked if I drank much coffee and mother told him that I did. He told me to immediately stop drinking coffee and drink Postum in its place, as he and his family had used Postum and found it a powerful rebuilder and delicious food drink.

"I hesitated for a time, disliking the idea of having to give up my coffee, but finally I got a package and found it to be all the doctor said.

"Since drinking Postum in place of coffee my dizziness, blindness and nervousness are all gone, my bowels are regular and I am again well and strong. That is a short statement of what Postum has done for me."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Rest This Vacation

Come home thoroughly benefited—yet having all the fun and frolics of a delightful summer outing. Arrange now to spend a week or two at

French Lick
West Baden Springs

Enjoy your favorite outdoor pastime—and drink the famous waters—noted the world over for their curative powers. It's really a vacation worth while. Situated in Southern Indiana—among the picturesque Cumberland Hills on the

MONON ROUTE

For booklets and other information address
FRANK J. REED, Gen. Pass. Agt., or
E. P. COCKRELL, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt.
198 Custom House Place, Chicago.

FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We pay freight. Catalogue free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO.,
Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

Guaranteed BONDS

No. 7
Safety and Liberal Yield

ANY Bond guaranteed by the American Water Works and Guarantee Company is a good bond There need never be any doubt as to that.

The American Water Works and Guarantee Company controls and operates 40 successful water companies, supplying 90,000,000 gallons of water a day to some 57 prosperous communities.

It also owns two of the most successful irrigation projects ever undertaken in this or any other country --- the Twin Falls North Side Land and Water Company and the Twin Falls Salmon River Land and Water Company, both located in Southern Idaho. It guarantees the bonds of these various corporations --- and does not guarantee the securities of any corporation not controlled and operated by it.

Its capital and surplus of $4,000,000 and the many valuable properties it controls are back of its guarantee.

We do not know of any other securities so thoroughly safeguarded in every way and yet so liberal in interest return.

Some especially attractive issues that we can offer now are:

5% GUARANTEED BONDS

of the Huntington (W. Va.) Water Company.

Portsmouth, Berkley and Suffolk Water Company, Portsmouth, Va.
City Water Company of East St. Louis and Granite City, (Ill.)
St. Joseph (Mo.) Water Company.

All these are guaranteed as to both principal and interest, and are issued in denominations of $500 and $1,000.

Write to-day for Illustrated Book and Descriptive Circulars. Address Department V.

J. S. & W. S. KUHN, Inc.
INVESTMENT BANKERS
Bank for Savings Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Chicago Philadelphia St. Louis

The COLLAR THAT SAVES THE DOLLAR

Think of it—at least two cents a day for your collar wash bill! That's $7.30 a year—and $3.00 for the collars. That's $10.30. You didn't know it cost so much? Well—four LITHOLIN Waterproofed Linen Collars cost $1.00 and will last you a year. When soiled just wipe them white as new with a damp cloth. The same collar you have always worn, only waterproofed. Always keep in shape, never wilt or fray, and are made in every fashionable style. All sizes. Then there's "cuff" money,—figure that out and you'll investigate. If so, you'll buy.

COLLARS, 25c. CUFFS, 50c.

Always sold from a RED box. Avoid substitution.

If not at your dealer's send, giving styles, size, how many, with remittance, and we will mail, postpaid. Booklet Free.

THE FIBERLOID COMPANY,
Dept. 2 7 Waverly Place, New York.

STYLE ECONOMY WATERPROOFED LINEN LITHOLIN COLLARS & CUFFS FIT COMFORT

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid.
DR. LYONS, 180 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.
CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO., 290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for Inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps
R.S. & A.B. LACEY, Rooms 20-30 Pacific Bldg., Wash., D.C.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Godless Commercialism*

THE miracle of the swine is the only one in which Christ destroyed property of value. His whole career furnishes no other instance of inconsiderateness in regard to worldly affairs. And doubtless reasons were not wanting in this case. "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's" was his instruction to his followers. The rights of property were not disregarded by him, though he bade his own followers to take no thought for the morrow, and to sell what they had and give it to the poor.

The terrible doctrine that the ten commandments have no place in commerce; that every man can infringe upon the rights of others in trade, so long as he keeps within the letter of the law, is far too commonly held in our commercial circles. The taxes upon imported articles have been kept at a prohibitively high figure in many cases, in order that an undue profit should be made by our own manufacturers. So flagrant has this tariff abuse become that every European traveler can tell tales of the purchase of many American-made commodities in foreign countries, at lower prices than are charged for them here at home. They can actually be made, transported to Europe and sold there, with allowance for the dealers' profits, for less money than they can be bought for here. This has long been said to be the case with steel rails, and other equally important products. It is iniquitous, and many very able statesmen have labored to get justice done; but so far the trusts are too powerful for them and no way to deal with them seems as yet to open.

Laws for compelling the great corporations to open their books for government inspection should help the situation; but there are so many ways of juggling figures in these days, and of having one set of books to show and another set to hide, that it may be impossible to probe the cancer to the roots. Men need in these days to have not only the honest and light-loving soul, but they need the quick sense and the trained mind, in order to cope with the gigantic commercial evils which threaten the very life of our republic.

A great difference of opinion seems to prevail regarding the rate of profit to which a dealer is entitled. When Bessemer made his great invention, he charged 800 per cent. profit, and it was thought to be not too much. A dealer in books used to feel that he must make 33 1-3 per cent. profit. Few can do that to-day. Certain lines of goods command 50 to 100 per cent. profit. In the same store, dozens of different rates of profit are realized upon different sorts of goods. The rate of profit upon money is pretty definitely fixed. There is everywhere set some limit to the charge for money lending beyond which a man enters the criminal realm of usury. Whether this can be done with other things than money-loans is a doubtful matter; but there would seem to be no reason why there should not be usury penalties in other departments than that of money, especially for merchants who traffic in the necessaries of life. The luxuries are less important.

The recent experiments in many churches, in "trying to live like Jesus," have brought forth complaints from some of the experimenters that it is impossible to work in certain lines of business and be honest. The same thing is often heard in our churches and prayer meetings. This is a shame and disgrace to our nation. No patriot should rest until the evil is checked and business is purified.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 4. TEXT: Mark 5 : 1-20.

Patriotism That Counts*

IT has been said by a statesman that, though good citizens are an important asset in any country, they are not half so important anywhere else as in America, because every one here counts so much. Nowhere else is the individual man so mighty a sovereign.

This fact is readily conceded by every proud patriot among us, and yet the responsibility implied is not half realized. Men do not seem to understand that "he that feareth God and worketh righteousness" is the only true patriot. It is easy to talk impressively of those who have died for the flag, and of "the glorious heritage which our heroes have left us"; or to fire off crackers, and let loose rockets to celebrate a national holiday.

It is quite another thing to patiently study out the rights and wrongs of public questions; to attend primaries and caucuses; to live a pure and upright life every day; and to preserve a clear conscience amid the temptations of business. Yet this hard path is the only one for the true patriot to travel. He is not only injuring his private character and wronging his family when he drinks or gambles or pursues any other vice; he is also giving a stab to his country.

We have been wont to consider patriotism as a virtue to be shown chiefly in war. It is sweet to die for one's country, is a classic saying. Nobody has talked much of the far higher sort of patriotism which impels a man to live for his country. There is nothing dramatic or spectacular in the grind of daily industry and self-denial. No bands play, no crowds shout when a man in the obscurity of his home or his shop fights a battle with his lower nature, for business honesty, or personal purity, or temperance. He is more apt than not to receive scorn and abuse, if he bravely speaks out against the high who use their places for selfish ends, or the rich who grind the faces of the poor. But the noble nation must be composed of noble men, and the victor patriot who purifies himself for love of his country is greater than he that taketh a city in one of its campaigns of conquest.

And not only must the soul stand guard against the subtle foes that would undermine and weaken it, but the skilled, industrious hand must do its part. As Nehemiah strongly puts it, the people must "have a mind to work." The self-supporting man is the good citizen; the man who earns his living, pays his debts, lays up for his old age, supports and educates his children—he is the true patriot. To no class does the message more keenly apply, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

Our most patriotic poet has given us many thrilling descriptions of our duty to our country, in which he nobly includes our women. He says:

Fresh and strong the world we seize, world of labor and the march,
Conquering, holding, daring, venturing as we go the unknown ways.
All the pulses of the world,
Falling in they beat for us, with the Western movement beat,
We to-day's procession heading, we the route for travel clearing.
O you young and older daughters! O you mothers and you wives!
Never must you be divided, in our ranks you move united.
Till with sound of trumpet,
Far, far off the daybreak call—hark! how loud and clear I hear it wind.
Swift! to the head of the army! Swift! Spring to your places!

The trumpet calls not to-day to the musket and the camp. God grant that our people may never hear that call again. Instead, the call is to a grander conflict, the moral struggle from which alone can be evolved the true patriot.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 4. TEXT: Neh. 4 : 6, 12-18.

WON'T MIX

Bad Food and Good Health Won't Mix.

The human stomach stands much abuse but it won't return good health if you give it bad food.

If you feed right you will feel right, for proper food and a good mind is the sure road to health.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health, for I began to suffer after each meal, no matter how little I ate," says a Denver woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful, with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.

"My home cares were very heavy, for beside a large family of my own I have also to look out for an aged mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that my health was breaking down.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble just like mine being relieved on Grape-Nuts food, and acting on this suggestion I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach and brain disappeared as if by magic, and in an incredibly short space of time I was again myself. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason." Trial will prove. Read the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Where Savings are Safe and Yield 5%

THE LOCATION and the prestige of the Industrial are the factors that insure liberal earnings on real estate mortgage loans, and the regular payment of 5% dividends to every investor, small or large.

The full records of our operations are open to inspection by the New York Banking Department. This is compulsory. Without compulsion, they are open to examination by any client at any time, both at our place of business and in the public files of the Banking Department. The more our methods are studied and understood by investors the stronger we stand with them.

In sixteen years we have accumulated Assets of over $1,900,000 and Surplus and Profits of $138,000; have never omitted or deferred payment of full dividends; have never failed to return the principal promptly and courteously, on request.

There are probably men in your own locality who have dealt with us and whose names we can give you (with their permission) if you write us for information.

We invite correspondence.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

YOU have a Right to INDEPENDENCE

If you have an honest desire to escape salaried drudgery, I can instruct you how to gain financial independence—how to secure a business of your own. Over 800 others have succeeded and are ready to help—for you will help them.

Let Me Send You, NOW, the story of this new business, with convincing FACTS and FIGURES.

Write to-day for Pointers on the Collection Business.
American Collection Service, 63 State Street Detroit, Mich.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH
Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS
NEW AND OLD
By I. ALLAN SANKEY
35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100
Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc,
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO.,
CHICAGO NEW YORK

Occupations for Women
By FRANCES E. WILLARD

500 pages; illustrated. Regular Price, $3.75.
SPECIAL PRICE, $1.00, all Charges Prepaid.
P. B. Bromfield & Co., Bible House, New York

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

BIBLE COLLEGE AT HOME. Graduate Course. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa

THE FIRST EUROPEAN CONVERT

By MRS. M. BAXTER

PAUL always kept his eye on God; no new revelation was needed in order to assure him that his call was to the foreign field; this had long been settled. His mission to Judea had been blessedly accomplished, and, by the voice of God's Spirit through the Church, liberty of conscience regarding Jewish ceremonial had been established, and a pressure seems to have come upon him, doubtless from God, to resume his old labors abroad.

"Let us go again," he said to Barnabas, "and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the Word, and see how they do." These men of God differed as to who should accompany them. Barnabas leaned to the evangelist Mark, who left the work from Pamphylia; Paul inclined to Silas, who had just proved himself a true teacher. Neither Paul's choice, nor that of Barnabas, was necessarily the right one.

The first Synod of the primitive Church had been held in Jerusalem, to consider the vexed question whether it was obligatory in the converted Gentiles to keep the Jewish law. Paul's presence there was of the utmost importance, he being "the apostle of the Gentiles," and being therefore their representative among the Jewish brethren. This Synod ended, Paul and Barnabas returned again to Antioch, "teaching and preaching the Word." But the call to which they had already responded in their first missionary journey had never been withdrawn; they had no liberty to spend all their time in Antioch. Accompanied by Silas, he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches. Paul was never independent of his praying brethren. Arriving at Derbe and Lystra, where Paul had been stoned, and so miraculously restored, Paul found there a disciple to whom he was closely drawn. It was Timothy, of whom he said: "I have no man likeminded"; whom he calls "my own son in the faith" and "my dearly beloved son." This young man was partly of Jewish and partly of Gentile extraction, but his mother was a godly woman, who had grounded him well in the Scriptures. Paul joined this young man to their little company.

For a time all went well, and nothing transpired to make them doubt they were in the will of God. Paul and his two followers had gone through Phrygia and Galatia (both provinces of Asia Minor), when a sudden and unexpected stop was put to a course which, up till now, had been fully marked by the blessing of God; they "were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the Word in Asia"! What could this mean? Paul did not argue, did not reason, as to the guidance of God. He knew his place and obeyed. Arrived at Mysia, another province of Asia Minor, they arranged to go into Bithynia, a province lying to the north, but again the same prohibition was upon them.

"Oh, if I only knew what I had to do; I can bear anything better than suspense; it is such a waste of time; while I am uncertain, I don't know what to begin," said a Christian worker. But suppose this very uncertainty is just the Lord's provision to make real to you as never before how every moment of your time is God's property, and how he has a perfect right to keep you waiting, if he will.

Thus hemmed in on the north and south, Paul went straight forward toward the west, until he arrived at Troas, the ancient Troy. Now light broke upon his path. In a night vission, "a man of Macedonia stood and prayed him, saying: Come over into Macedonia and help us." "After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them."

THE SMALLEST NEWSBOY IN THE WORLD

The Little Swiss Newsboy

SOME time ago, the writer was in Toblach, in the Austrian Tyrol, when he saw a dwarf of whom the accompanying is a picture. He first saw him from behind and noticed his exceedingly diminutive size, together with the fact that he was walking with two crutches. His first thought was that the little man was a cretin, or half-wit, such as are often seen in mountain districts in Switzerland. On coming around to face the newsboy, he saw at once that he was mistaken and that the little fellow was "all there." He asked him how old he was, and he said he was nineteen. He said that he had been through the schools of the town. The young lad seemed thoroughly intelligent, though awfully crippled. One could not help admiring his pluck in making his living by selling newspapers to the guests of the large hotels in the place, as well as his own postal-card photograph.

I do not suppose that in all the world there is a smaller newsboy than this one, and it certainly speaks well for him that he is doing such brave battle for his support. A. F. SCHAUFFLER.

CALLED HIGHER

Mrs. C. B. White, of Titusville, Pa., passed recently to her reward.

Departed to be with Christ April 15, 1909, Rev. J. Addison Whitaker, D.D., honorary pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church, of Tacoma, Wash. "He is not, for the Lord has taken him."

Mrs. Adaline Gray, of Wilton Junction, Ia., passed away, at the age of seventy-six, at her home, where she had lived for forty years. Though she has gone, her memory lives with those who came in contact with her beautiful influence.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thima Laury, of Middleboro, Mass., passed to her heavenly home November 5, 1908, aged eighty-three years.

Mrs. Priscilla Irvin entered into rest on the 10th of October, 1908, at her home in Springfield, O. She was in her eighty-fifth year. She had been a constant reader of this paper for twenty years.

Miss S. E. Adams, of Marquette, Mich., who has been a subscriber to this paper, died January 27. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Her last gift was to the Italian earthquake sufferers.

ACME QUALITY

Paints and Finishes
For the Home

At this time of the year there are many little jobs of painting and finishing about the home that anyone can accomplish successfully by following the Acme Quality plan.

Now is a good time to repaint the floors, to refinish the woodwork, to brighten up the furniture, to redecorate the walls, or to enamel the bathroom.

Acme Quality Paints and Finishes are put up in convenient form for ready use and easy application—just tell your dealer what you want to do and insist on goods bearing the Acme Quality trade-marked label, for—if it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

Acme Quality Enamel (Neal's)
Gives that smooth, beautiful, sanitary enamel surface so easy to keep bright and clean. In white or dainty tints.

Acme Quality Kalsomine
For walls and ceilings. Mixes with either hot or cold water. Flows freely, covers with one coat and does not show laps.

Acme Quality Porch Furniture Enamel
For finishing porch and lawn chairs, settees, swings, flowerstands, railings, etc. Imparts a tough, durable finish and prevents rust and decay.

For example, a treasured old chair or other piece of furniture that is badly marred and scratched can be made as good as new. Simply refinish it with Acme Quality Varno-Lac—a stain and varnish combined that imparts the elegant effect and durable, lustrous surface of beautifully finished oak, mahogany or other expensive woods.

Acme Quality Text Book

The Acme Quality Text Book tells just how to get best results. It is an encyclopedia of paints and finishes, covering every phase of home painting. Tells what to use and how to use it. Free to any address on request.

ACME WHITE LEAD & COLOR WORKS
Dept. O, Detroit, Mich.
IN DETROIT—Life is Worth Living.

6%
AND SAFETY

Because---we have been in business over 14 years
Because --- under the laws we must deposit first mortgages equal to at least 75% of our assets with a strong trust company as a protection for our depositors.
Because --- we never loan a dollar, except on improved real estate worth at least twice as much as the loan.
Because --- of a most careful, conservative and efficient management.

Because of these and other reasons, savings deposited with this Company are absolutely safe. They are exceptionally profitable in interest return.

On Time Deposits we pay 6% On savings, payable on demand, 5%

Interest checks mailed every 6 months. Write today for the book

CALVERT MORTGAGE & DEPOSIT CO.,
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval, without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our latest art catalogs illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free postpaid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now.

TIRES, Coaster-Brakes, Built-up-Wheels and all sundries at half usual prices.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. W-71 CHICAGO

Build Your Own Fireless Cooker
and save money. Anyone can do it. No mechanical ability or experience required. I supply all material and teach you how to do the work.

Make Fireless Cookers for sale. Good profits, big demand, easily sold. I give exclusive territory and assist you in selling the goods. Full particulars free. Write today.

THREE SIZES. The Acme Automatic Cooker boils stews, roasts and bakes. Does better cooking and saves 80 per cent fuel and kitchen drudgery. It cooks the food, not the cook.

H. M. SHEER, Box 16 QUINCY, ILL.

YOUR SUMMER OUTING

If you are fond of fishing, canoeing, camping or the study of wild animals look up the Algonquin National Park of Ontario for your summer outing. A fish and game preserve of 2,000,000 acres interspersed with 1,200 lakes and rivers is awaiting you, offering all the attractions that Nature can bestow. Magnificent canoe trips. Altitude 2,000 feet above sea level. Pure and exhilarating atmosphere. Just the place for a young man to put in his summer holidays. Hotel accommodation. An interesting and profusely illustrated descriptive publication telling you all about it sent free on application to W. S. Cookson, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

DEAF 25 YEARS
CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Yellow Metal and Welcome Wealth come with common sense and Robust Health. There are little golden granules of ready to eat from the package with a little cream.

Grape-Nuts

The food helps supply a clear brain, steady nerves and the endurance that makes winners.

"There's a Reason"

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., U.S.A.

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

New York, June 30, 1909
COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH
VOL. 32—NO. 26. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

CHRISTIAN HERALD

Practising for the Fourth of July "Flag Parade," at Our Children's Home, Mont-Lawn

Questions and Answers

Reader, California. Please explain the meaning of Rom. 14:5, 6.

The passage has no special reference to the Sabbath, but to "fast," or holy days. Paul says that in such matters we must be guided by conscientious conviction. He wished to make it clear that acceptance with God and living the true Christian life (and not formal observance) was the only proper test of Christian fellowship. He who fasts does so because he believes he is doing God's service; and he who does not fast, but eats, also believes he is doing right in the Lord's eyes, since he thanks him for his food. This difference of opinion and act the apostle believes to be not essential, from a Christian standpoint.

M. A. Y., Lone Grove, Okla. Please tell me, through THE MAIL-BAG, what will kill the large red ants that live in mounds in this western country.

Perhaps some reader may be able to furnish the desired information.

B. F., Binghamton, N. Y. A friend assures me that spiritualism has succeeded in demonstrating intelligent existence in another world. Is his statement correct?

It has not been left to spiritualism to convince man of the reality of the future life: otherwise he would remain unconvinced. As a matter of actual record, spiritualism has broken down at every real test, and the officers of the Psychical Research Society recognize this. The conclusion has been reached, as far at least as modern experience is concerned, that "not the slightest reliable communication has been established with any departed spirit." This is apparently the view now held by Mrs. Sedgewick, Professor James, Dr. Forbes Winslow and other eminent investigators. Besides, Dr. Winslow wrote, only a few years ago, that "as many as 10,000 persons were confined in lunatic asylums, their reason having been unhinged through tampering with the supernatural."

J. M. K., Landisburg, Penn. In this town of about 50 voters, 170 persons in all, there are four churches. One church has two men members, three widows and one maiden lady. Two of the others have about the same, and the fourth has a few more. It seems illogical to have so many churches in so small a place. How is this state of things to be remedied?

Where all four churches are of the Christian faith and Protestant (as we gather from your letter) there is no reason why they should not unite. Write to Rev. Dr. Sanford, secretary, National Federation of Churches, Bible House, New York, for information as to practical steps toward forming a Union Evangelical Church. Hundreds of churches have united with the Federation within the last few years.

F. B., Nyack, N. Y. In answering a correspondent, you stated the numbers of Protestants and Roman Catholics rightly, but did not mention the Eastern churches, who are not under the Roman Pope. According to The Church Almanac, they number 102,976,000. A Protestant missionary to Turkey told me that he once made a list of the differences between us and Rome, and that, in the greater part, the Eastern churches were with us and against Rome. Adding these to the Protestants leaves the Roman Church in a minority.

We are glad to have this information, and thank our correspondent. Certainly, a factor so important as the Eastern Church should not be omitted.

D. McK., Scranton, Pa. Where is New Ireland?

It is an island in the Pacific Ocean. It is 200 miles long and 25 wide. The French have tried twice within thirty years to colonize it.

J. J., Grand Rapids, Mich. Please explain the following Scripture passages: Matt. 11:3; I. Sam. 15:11-29; Prov. 26:4, 5; Gal. 6:2-5.

1. It was probaly a message of impatience, or even of desperation, upon John's part. He had lain long in prison, useless to the cause, after having been honored in introducing Jesus to the people. It was clearly a message from one who had lost heart through persecution and incarceration. 2. In every instance where repentance is mentioned in connection with the divine purpose, it is to be interpreted not as mutability of sentiment in the human sense, but rather a condition founded on a change in his creatures and which results in the withholding of good or the permitting of evil. 3. Verse 4 means that we must be silent rather than reply to taunt with taunt, sneer with sneer, vilification with vilification, as by so answering we place ourselves on the level of our enemy. Verse 5 means that to convince a foolish person of his folly it may sometimes be well to give him such an answer as he requires lest he have an exalted opinion of his own wisdom (see Luke 23:9; Matt. 26:62, 64; John 19:9-11). 4. Verse 2: Christ's law is the law of love and this was a stimulus to loving kindness, sympathy and helpfulness toward others. He bore the burdens of the world. Verse 5 means that each has his own load of infirmities or weaknesses, contemplating which, he will not be vain or boastful, comparing himself with his neighbor. For the full connection read the preceding verses.

J. A. C., Kendall, Mont. Does science differ with the Bible in regard to the Creation? Does ancient history contradict the Bible in any way?

While science interprets Creation in its own way, especially with regard to the period of time occupied in the creative work, it differs in no essential feature. The six days, scientists hold, may each represent an age. With regard to the order of Creation, science is coming more and more into agreement with the Scriptural account. As to ancient history, far from contradicting the Bible, it affirms it in many important particulars. Discoveries of ancient tablets and monuments (Babylonian, Egyptian, etc.) have thrown unexpected light on many points in Bible history.

Cora E. W., Florence, Ore. In THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of April 7 is an article entitled "Mothers and Sons," by Emily J. Graham. I would like to ask any of those who are clamoring for the ballot for women, that they may thus do away with the liquor traffic, How much of the great temperance wave which is creeping over our land is due to the votes of women? Has it made the clean sweep claimed in the States where women have suffrage? When a woman accepts the continued company of a man addicted to the use of liquor and tobacco, without protest, and later goes to the altar with him, how can she expect to reform him by the ballot? We do not show consistency or reason when we expect to raise our children to be pure, noble men and women, after accepting as husbands men whose bodies are saturated with liquor and nicotine. United efforts along this line will tell in the future, but not by weakening the home, as will the ballot.

There is a good deal to be said on both sides of this question. Is Cora E. W. right? What do the mothers and daughters who read this journal think of it?

A. R., Hempstead, L. I. What is the Bargello of Florence, Italy, so frequently referred to in stories of Italy?

The Bargello was, in the Middle Ages, the residence of the Podestas, or criminal magistrates of the city of Florence. These judges were always foreigners, as they were believed to be more impartial than citizens. It is now a great national museum and armory. It is in perfect preservation.

W. S. R., Montour, Ia. In Genesis, ninth chapter, we learn that the whole earth was overspread, or populated, by the descendants of the three sons of Noah. From which of these three sons is the negro descended?

Genesis, tenth chapter, gives the genealogy of their descendants. See verses 6 to 20 for the descendants of Ham. See also I. Chron. 1:8-16; Ps. 78:51 and 105:23. Josephus, the great Jewish historian, identifies the children of Ham in Cush (Ethiopia); Phut (Libya); Seba (Nubia); Mizraim (Egypt); Canaan (Palestine); Heth (land of the Hittites). Read Josephus' Antiquities, Book 1, Chapter 6. There are great differences of opinion among modern scholars regarding the lines that divide the descent of Noah's three sons. Some authorities hold that the progeny of Ham or Cush spread widely over a large part of Asia, as well as Africa and Arabia, and that the Hindu-Kush tribes are among their descendants.

R. D., Boston. Tell something about the ship, George Washington, which has been received with such ceremony recently at the Port of New York?

The George Washington is the largest German transatlantic liner afloat, and the third largest steamship in the world, being exceeded only in size by the Lusitania and Mauretania. The ship belongs to the North German Lloyd line. To make it worthy of its name, one of the greatest decorative artists came to America and studied all the famous spots connected with the life of Washington as a groundwork for the great mural paintings which adorn the assembly rooms of the steamer. The ship was christened by Hon. David Jayne Hill, American Ambassador to Germany. When the steamer reached New York patriotic exercises were held, and the Daughters of the American Revolution unveiled a bronze tablet to Washington on the steamer. The Daughters invited several other patriotic societies to join with them.

C. W., Lay, Colo. Explain the meaning of John 20:23. Is this the passage on which the Roman Church bases its claim of the authority of priests as mediators?

This power or authority is held by commentators to be exercised in a declarative or ministerial sense only, and not as though the disciples themselves had the power to forgive sins, which power is God's alone. They were simply to declare God's Word, as his authorized interpreters. There is no ground upon which this ministerial right of declaration can be claimed exclusively by any one church. Moreover, it was never exereised in an authoritative, personal sense, even by the disciples themselves.

A Zionist Mass Meeting in New York. The New Flag of Zion

THAT the Zionist movement is not without critics among the Jewish people themselves, has been shown by the proceedings of the Twelfth Congress of American Zionists recently held in New York. Reports were presented censuring the inadequate organization of the movement, and demanding more activity on the part of the Education Committee, and a resolution was adopted declaring that the Zionist organization should not be made responsible for various Palestinian enterprises not specially national in scope, and that it should devote itself to the upbuilding of the national fund. Some of the speeches expressed gratification over the new régime in Turkey. The Mesopotamian scheme awoke no enthusiasm, and the general tone of the speeches inclined to favor Palestine exclusively as the land of hope, to be settled anew some day by the sons and daughters of Israel. The new Zion Flag was used for the first time in this country during the Convention.

Miscellaneous

M. D. K., Indiana. See answer at foot of column 4, page 470.

A. S., Ransomville, N. Y. Write to the secretary of the Bible Teachers' Training School, Lexington Avenue, New York City.

G. P., Valencia, Kan. We know of no such book. The expression from Walpole is, of course, an exaggeration, used for oratorical effect.

Mrs. B. G., Alabama. Send your name and address and we will send the information. We have already printed a sketch of the life of Elizabeth of Roumania.

F. G. M., Corvallis, Ore., writes: "The sin against the Holy Spirit is charging him with being an unclean spirit. For proof that this is correct, see Mark 3:30, and also the whole tenor of the Scripture narratives of this charge, as given by the other evangelists."

P. P. M., Warren, Pa. The husband may use the farm as long as he lives, under the right of "curtesy." Consult a Virginia lawyer. This right of curtesy does not exist unless the husband had a child by his deceased wife.

R. F. F., East Springfield, N. Y. The letter "f" or "ff" after the reference in the Bible means "read the following verse or verses as well as the verse given in the margin," in order to get the full meaning and connection of the reference.

D. A. T., Mankato, Minn. We know of no reason why a business man cannot be a Christian. There are thousands upon thousands who carry their religion into their business and give evidence of sincerity by their upright, honorable Christian character and conduct.

In Honor of the Flag

THE Rev. Dr. Henry N. Couden, the blind chaplain of the House of Representatives, briefly referred to the celebration of Flag Day in the opening prayer in the House. Many members wore small American flags in their coats. Chaplain Couden said, in part:

Our Father in heaven, we bless thy Holy Name for the spirit that moved our fathers, in Congress assembled, to that high and patriotic resolve which gave to us our national ensign, the Star-Spangled Banner, which for a hundred and thirty-two years, in peace and war, has floated in triumph o'er land and o'er sea, the emblem of liberty and union.

God grant that it may continue to wave, that its history and triumphs may be told in song and in story till all the ends of the earth shall know liberty, justice, truth, righteousness.

• • •

It is indeed gratifying to us to know that through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD thousands of patriotic citizens were enabled to observe Flag Day by letting Old Glory float from their homes. Even more gratifying is it to know that on our approaching and greatest Patriotic Holiday many thousands of CHRISTIAN HERALD subscribers will fitly celebrate the "Glorious Fourth," and honor their country's day of days, by letting wave from their homes one of the large, brilliant and beautiful American Flags, secured absolutely free under the terms of our great Patriotic Offer. Is there any occasion in the near future on which you would be proud of a 4x6 or 5x8 Flag? If so, write us to-day for further particulars or see issue of June 9.

Address: Christian Herald Flag Offer, Bible House, New York.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Helen Herron in Her Early "'Teens"

Judge J. W. Herron, Mrs. Taft's Father

Mrs. Taft's Mother, Formerly Harriet Collens

Nellie Herron at Eighteen

THE GIRLHOOD OF MRS. TAFT

By RUTH T. NEELY

(Photos by the Author and Felix J. Koch)

IN hearing her old friends and childhood playmates tell of the girlhood of Mrs. William H. Taft, one is sure to receive two strong impressions. First, that the Nellie Herron of former days had as happy a girlhood as could well be imagined, and the other, a conviction that she herself was the largest factor in producing her own happiness.

To be sure, an enviable heredity and environment had much to do with the matter. From the ideally American point of view, it would be hard to find a better ancestry than that of the Herrons. The American branch of the family dates back to the early New England settlements in this country. The men have all been of an admirable type, most of them following professions, few rich, but all college educated.

Then the Herron home offered exceptional opportunities for a happy childhood. All the children were bright and intelligent, eager fun-makers, with a great idea of fair play. In the whole group of children there was no one who could not take a joke, no mollycoddle in the family.

Even the diary which, from her early teens, "Nellie" Herron kept, with undaunted regularity, was more than once the subject of general raillery. Mrs. Taft is, and has always been, systematic and methodical, even in her thinking.

When, as a young girl, she was advised by her instructor in music to make the most of her native talent, and to study abroad preparatory to a musical career, she was not unduly excited. On the contrary, she considered the matter gravely in all its aspects. Then she recorded her opinions and those of her advisers in her diary. "I would not wish to make the mistake of attempting to found an artistic career on insufficient talent or inclination," wrote this seventeen-year-old girl. The inscription was discovered and read aloud to an appreciative audience of young Herrons, while "Nellie" joined heartily in the general fun at her expense.

The incident serves to throw light on another very unusual characteristic of ordinary girlhood which Mrs. Taft possessed in a remarkable degree. It was fixity of purpose. "She never drifted," declares an intimate friend of Mrs. Taft's girlhood. "She seemed to do everything after due consideration, which, with her native ability, was bound to win her distinction if she had not found it in the way she chose. But she was neither obtrusive nor conceited and was straightforward in all her dealings."

Judge Herron was a lifelong friend of President Hayes, and the present mistress of the White House visited it, the first time, as a guest of the Hayes family. She was sixteen years old at the time, and entered upon the pleasures and festivities of a several months' visit, with all the enjoyment that sixteen can experience. When, after a "perfectly lovely" time, Nellie Herron came home, she made a remark, the apparent humor of which was fully appreciated by her fun-loving family. "I think I would like to marry a man who will be President," she said. Then it was quite funny. Now—was it a prophecy?

From the time she made her debut, the young woman showed herself to be decidedly adapted to social life in that she was unusually intelligent, accomplished and quite willing to exert herself, if need be, to be entertaining. One of Mrs. Taft's friends tells of an incident which occurred shortly after her marriage. Two Eastern men, friends of Mr. Taft, were to be guests for a short time at the Taft home. The young hostess took pains to inquire concerning their special tastes and interests, and jotted down a memorandum, "X——, art; Y——, literary." Both gentlemen were charmed beyond measure with the entertaining manner in which their hostess conversed with them on their favorite subjects. The day after their departure, Mrs. Taft was quite as much amused at receiving two beautifully bound volumes, one Hamerton on Art, from "art," the other Shelley's Poems, from "literary."

The first training school for nurses in Cincinnati was the direct outcome of the love of the schoolgirl, Nellie Herron, for physiology. As a scholar she was thoroughness itself, and never let any branch of a subject go until she had mastered it. Not satisfied with the course in physiology received at the private school she had attended, Miss Herron later persuaded several of her friends to form a special class in the subject, which was instructed by a professor from the Cincinnati University. A year or two afterward the same young women formed themselves into a permanent organization for the establishment of a training school. Prominent Cincinnati women were interested and the work finally established.

The "Last Chance Club" was quite a different kind of an organization. Interest in various sciences and early English history never interfered with this young woman's appreciation of a good time, and as she was one of the most popular girls in her social

Continued on next page

Copyright, 1908, by Harris & Ewing

Latest Photograph of Mrs. W. H. Taft, Wife of the President

THE GIRLHOOD OF MRS. TAFT

Continued from preceding page

Miss Emily Herron
Mrs. Taft's Sister, now Mrs. G. S. Parsons

circle, the good time was usually forthcoming. Will Taft also belonged to the Last Chance Club, whose male members were instructed in sewing, darning, cooking and other domestic arts. There was no lack of jollity at the sessions of the club, of which Miss Herron was a leading spirit.

It was after several particularly bright and interesting social seasons that Miss Herron began to teach school. The reason she gave for doing so was characteristic, and throws light on the singular logic and determination of her trend of thought.

"I will never marry a man I do not feel that I can really love," said the thoughtful nineteen-year-old girl to a friend. "But I might not love one man in a thousand, and it isn't likely that the thousandth man, if he exists, is going to love me. My father is a professional man and has other daughters. So I am glad to have an opportunity to take up work that will render me independent of marriage, unless I choose."

The Herron Family Home
On Pike Street, Cincinnati, where Mrs. Taft's childhood was spent

Miss Jane Herron
Mrs. Taft's Sister, now Mrs. Chas. Anderson

At the boys' school on Walnut Hills, where she taught for three years, the present first lady of the country demonstrated beyond a doubt her ability to make a success of this profession.

Then the fact disclosed itself that there was a thousandth man, after all, who loved her and whom she could love. And so she married William Taft, then an able and brilliant young attorney, now President of the United States.

"It was all just exactly as if she had planned it. In fact, it was as she had planned in the abstract. Only the personalities and events were fitted in," said one of Mrs. Taft's girlhood friends. "Helen Herron was sure to have had a career, for she had both the ability and the will to make one for herself. When she found the direction in which her happiness lay, she accepted it unhesitatingly and set herself to assist her husband in the efforts whereby he gained the honors which she has since shared. It was all just as if she had mapped it out, only greater and better."

After her marriage Mrs. Taft kept up an active interest in music and literature. A number of young women friends who had shared her studies used to meet regularly in the cheery home of the young couple on McMillan Street, built on a lot given Mrs. Taft by her father, Judge Herron, as one of her wedding presents. There they read Herbert Spencer and Macaulay, or perhaps Canon Farrar's What Is True Success, a book which is said to have impressed President William H. Taft most strongly, and which he presented to his wife before their marriage; for President Taft is not one of those who set a light value upon intellectual attainments on the part of women.

If he had, it is not likely that he would have loved and married Nellie Herron. On the contrary, the present Chief Executive of the United States is an open advocate of the independence of women wherever it may be wisely achieved, and is said to emphasize in an unusual degree the qualities of ability and efficiency as applied to feminine character.

To those wearied of the oft-repeated characterization which assumes woman as a mysterious entity, composed of complex impulses, prone to drift hither and thither on a wild sea of inexplicably conflicting emotions, the attitude is most welcome and refreshing. All the more because the big-brained, clear-headed thinker who holds this attitude married in accordance with his views.

The ideal woman, from President Taft's standpoint, is the efficient woman—efficient in whatever sphere of life she finds herself. And he married his ideal. A woman who "never drifted," whose ability, intelligence and good will, combined with wholesome energy to meet well every occasion with which life has brought her into contact—a girl who worked hard, and played still harder, gifted with the rare insight which accepts these as fundamental terms upon which the world is willing to allow us happiness and success.

Jack Herron
The "Small Boy" Brother of Mrs. Taft

Helen Herron as a Child
Helen (left), Emily (centre), Jane (right)

Preparing for the Fourth at Mont-Lawn

TO tell of all the lovely things in preparation for the hundreds of little guests who are looking forward to a delightful "Fourth" at our Children's Paradise at Mont-Lawn would occupy many columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Even then the description would not include many details that are very precious to the children.

Of course, the "Fourth," in addition to being a jubilee of sights and sounds and decorations, will be marked by plentiful "spreads," cooked and served by William, who for many years has presided over the culinary department of the Children's Home. The sight of a Fourth of July "spread" in Fort Plenty is a most appetizing one. The tables are snowy white, as are the dishes, and while good and substantial food is always furnished in abundance there are many little touches that are very pleasing to the eye.

On the principle that if you give children the choice of a dish of candies they will always pick out the bright-colored pieces, the tables around which the little ones gather always show something pink or red, when this is possible. "Harlequin" ice-cream is a matter of course on the Fourth and other holidays, and this, in connection with gay bouquets of flowers, furnished by Mr. Le Moult, the famous New York florist, renders the tables very attractive, and when to these are added big slices of pink watermelon and quivering cubes of "Jello," in bright red and yellow, the children fairly scream with delight.

The children themselves have a great deal to do with the "making ready" for the holiday. To be sure, eloquent men will come up to Mont-Lawn on the Fourth and make speeches to and about the children, to their great delight, while a band will make music all the day. A gaily-dressed throng of visitors will be made welcome. Mont-Lawn is surely a fine place in which to spend the holiday.

. . .

But what would it be without the children? Poor little mites! One cannot help wishing, when one sees how wildly happy they are, that at least for this one day there could be three thousand instead of three hundred to enjoy the good times. Their preparations for the Fourth do not begin at Mont-Lawn, but in poor, crowded homes, where, in most cases, children are many and pennies are few, after the rent is paid and hungry mouths even partially satisfied. Many a poor mother sits up more than one night, after a hard day's washing, that Mollie, Katie, Susie and tiny Johnny may present a clean and whole appearance, albeit their clothes are old and patched. Some other mothers are so tired and discouraged that the children come just as they are from the streets, soiled and tattered, and it is then that the caretakers at the Home bless the generosity of the kind friends who have made it possible to treat these neglected ones to clean and whole clothing. The unrestrained delight of a child who has never had any really new clothes in its entire life would bring tears to the eyes of any one not wholly careless or hardened.

And how do the children prepare for the grand day? Do you see that long double line, marching in time to—what? a band, a drum and fife? By no means; they are keeping step to the music of their own fresh young voices. See how they twine in and out among the trees, like long bands of varicolored ribbon, as they follow their leaders. The scene is beautiful, and at times seems bewildering in its kaleidoscopic changes.

Could any one interested in the Children's Home be in its vicinity for the week preceding the Fourth, such a one would certainly linger in the vicinity of the Temple, to listen to the children practicing the holiday songs. Three hundred and more American flags wave in time to a patriotic chorus. Every right hand, from the fist of the tiny, chubby-fingered tot of three or four years to that of the boy or girl old enough to realize in a measure what our country's flag means, waves the Stars and Stripes high in air.

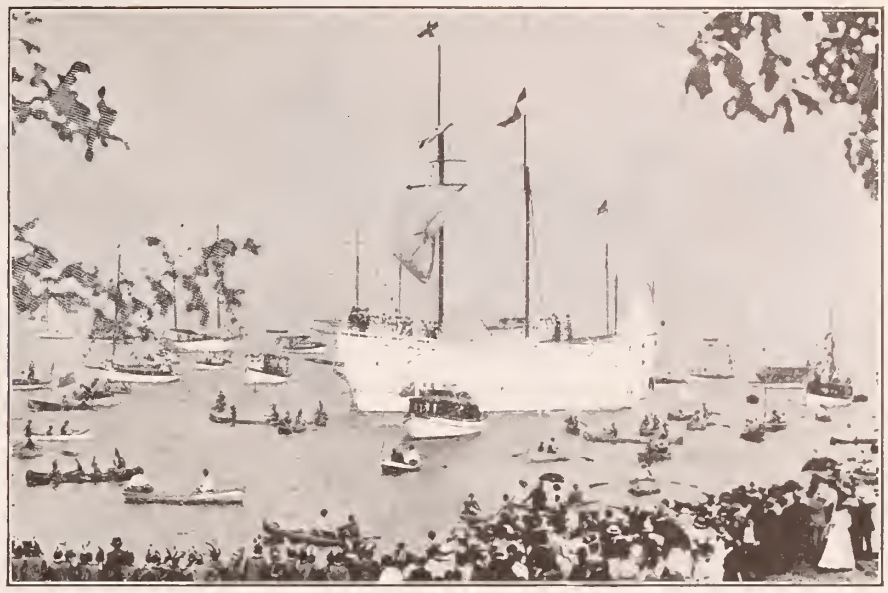
Among the speakers who are expected on the Fourth will be Admiral Sigsbee, U. S. N.; ex-Commissioner of Immigration Robert Watchorn; Rev. C. H. Mead; Rev. Leander Chamberlain, of New York; Rev. William Carter, of New York; Rev. John Hallimond, Superintendent of the Bowery Mission, and others.

Dr. Klopsch, too, will have a message for the children, as he has on every Fourth. But it is the children themselves, with their sweet songs, their merry laughter and undisguised happiness, who will awaken the deepest pleasure in the hearts of all who participate in the patriotic celebration at Mont-Lawn. It is the pure, unconfined happiness of these little ones that crowns the celebration, making the Fourth at Mont-Lawn a day to be marked with a white stone.

MARY SARGENT HOPKINS.

Huguenots Land Again at New Rochelle

The Huguenots Landing at Bonnefoi Point



Arrival of the Huguenots at Their New-Found Home

THREE weeks ago a remarkable looking ship could be seen making its way slowly into the rock-bound harbor of New Rochelle, on Long Island Sound. Her high bow and high stern were plainly of the seventeenth century type, while the people who crowded her decks were in the costume of old France, as worn in 1688, when Louis XIV. was King and distinguishing himself by sending into exile a large number of the most noble and intelligent of his subjects.

The ship was a reproduction of the one in which the founders of New Rochelle had come from France two hundred and twenty-one years ago, and the people who thronged her decks were direct descendants of the Huguenots and were to be the principal characters in the historical pageant commemorating the founding of the city.

All types were there, leaning over the rail and looking toward the shores of the New World. There were gallant officers in wide-brimmed cavalier hats. They wore stout buff coats and wide-topped boots. By their sides were the swords which more than once had beaten back the steel-clad hordes who had harried for many a year the gray walls of old Rochelle, in distant France. There were the mothers of families, with their sons and daughters grouped about them, and, here and there, by mast and ports, with watchful eye on sail and rigging, were the stout Huguenot sailors who formed the crew.

Hardly had the bow of the ship entered the harbor when the shore echoed to blood-curdling whoops, and twenty canoes shot out from shore, each manned by red-skinned paddlers of the Siwaroy tribe.

On shore, a band of fifty Indians whooped in unison with those in the canoes, who were now making for the ship. Eagle feathers towered above their heads, streaks of war-paint decorated their bronze cheeks and in their hands they carried pipes, war-clubs and bows and arrows. Eagerly they watched to see whether the palefaces came in peace or in war.

The canoes cruised about, and then formed as an escort to the ship, the La Rochelle, which was towed up to historic Bonnefoi Point, or "Good Faith Point," in English. Behind the historic ship steamed and sailed the craft of four yacht clubs, alive with guests and decorated from stem to stern with bunting. They made a picture that would have captivated the eye of an artist, the white hulls cutting through the blue waves of the harbor.

The Huguenots landed on the point, while six thousand spectators watched from every point of vantage along the rocks the shifting scenes of the historical pageant, which showed again the events connected with the founding of the town. It added much to the realism of the day that the people who took the various parts were descendants of the founders and in some cases bear the identical names.

First, the Indians met the white strangers from over-seas; gifts were exchanged and a "pow-wow" was held. Then the red men passed the pipe of peace, and the Huguenot settlers were now free to make their homes in the New World.

Suddenly a quarrel broke out among the tribesmen themselves and they made for their canoes. The fight was kept up on the water until all of the canoes but one had been overturned and the occupants thrown into the water. When they returned their war-paint was gone and they had almost become palefaces. The whole scene was carried out most realistically, and the cheers of the spectators mingled with the whoops of the warriors who danced about the shores.

Then came a war dance, tableaux of various events in the history of New Rochelle, and the school children sang patriotic songs. The latter part of the exercises were held at the Huguenot Monument, a huge block of granite, on which appear the names of the original settlers.

It was considered by visitors who have seen other historical pageants to have been one of the most successful in reproducing the settlement of early colonists in America.

The Siwaroy Tribe Makes Friends with the Newly-Arrived Huguenots

AMONG THE WORKERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

—A READER IN Hartford, Conn., writes: "The missionaries of the Disciples of Christ have five mission stations in Tibet. I believe, thus far, these are the only ones established there, but the way is opening up for other churches to send laborers."

—THE BOOK FUND instituted by D. L. Moody fourteen years ago, in connection with the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, has sent out to date 575,380 books, Bibles, Testaments, "portions," tracts, etc., for gratuitous distribution among the prisoners of this country and Canada.

—MISSIONARY WILLIAM LAMPE (Reformed Church), who is now in the United States on furlough from Sendai, Japan, writes: "The news that you are able to provide for the Japanese orphans is a source of very great encouragement to the representatives of the nine denominations, represented by missionaries, on the board of directors in charge of the orphanage. Surely THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its readers have the Father's blessing upon its work which is done in his name."

—REV. WILLIAM C. DETERLING, of the Home and Church Educational Society, Cleveland, O., writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, suggesting that the churches set apart a day to be known and observed as "Parents' and Children's Day" or "Home Circle Day," the day to have a special morning service for parents and a children's concert or exercises in the evening. He writes that the fathers have been neglected, as though "in ethical, moral and religious life, they were minus quantities and qualities."

—MRS. MYRA RIVERS, Clintonville, N. Y., writes: "I find wonderfully few have any idea of the good THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is doing throughout the Adirondacks. I came here for my health six years ago. Was trained in the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. I now have a class of forty in Sunday School—all mothers of families. My copy of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is the only one in the class, so you can form some estimate of the use it is put to. The people hereabouts are poor and there is no library nearer than Plattsburg, and a scarcity of Sunday School supplies."

—AN INTERESTING EPISODE of the late Turkish massacres is reported in a letter from W. P. Finney, Jr., a young American missionary at Kessab. Appeals to the fleets from the Christians in the hesieged town had failed to bring help: "A Covenanter missionary in that region, hearing of the desperate situation of the beleaguered town, made up a mule team of provisions and supplies, and went to Kessab. The Moslems would not permit him to enter the town, so he sat down and camped before it with the enemy, and daily harangued them on the subject of murder, retribution and the like. This he continued for about a week, until they were able to stand it no longer, and in disgust raised the siege and left. And thus one lone missionary accomplished what several battleships dared not attempt."

—HOMER RODEHEAVER, the well-known Gospel singer, relates this incident: "About three years ago, Evangelist Tilman Hobson went to Anderson, Ind., to conduct a series of meetings. Throughout the city he posted notices, with the picture of a hand pointing to the words, 'Get right with God.' One of these notices was placed right in front of a saloon, where there was a bartender named Ed Thomas. Thomas could not get the notice out of his mind. He was haunted by the words. At last he went to the owner of the saloon and told him that he must give up the business. He yielded his heart and life to God, became an evangelist and is now preaching the Gospel."

—THE NATIONAL VACATION Bible School Committee now consists of 100 prominent representatives from eight communions, sixteen cities and thirty-three colleges and universities; organized to promote daily vacation school ministry to children throughout the country. Last summer, 50 churches were opened daily for this ministry and 200 college men and women were employed in the work, preaching to about 15,000 children. It is proposed this year to broaden the work considerably, and the committee requests the co-operation of churches, college faculties and trustee boards generally. The headquarters are 82 Bible House, New York City.

—THE ANNUAL CONVENTION of the National Federation of Gospel Missions, recently held in Jersey City, June 1 to 6, was attended by over seventy superintendents and numbers of delegates from many States. Visitors and ministers came from Philadelphia and other cities, and they, with ministers and friends from New York and Jersey City, were profuse in their statements that the convention was filled with the Spirit of God and was a blessing to all who attended. The following officers were elected: President, C. H. Madison; first vice-president, Tobias L. Fretz, superintendent Philadelphia Rescue Home; second vice-president, William White, superintendent Hope Rescue Mission, Reading, Pa.; third vice-president, E. M. Forrest, superintendent Newman Industrial Home, Jersey City; fourth vice-president, Miss Sara Wray, Eighth Avenue Mission, New York City; secretary, Mrs. D. E. H. Wright, Poughkeepsie Rescue Mission; treasurer, Harry Louderbough, president Lincoln Trust Company, Jersey City. The outlook for the future is very encouraging. Those wishing to unite with the Federation in its work of reaching the lost may address Mr. H. Louderbough, Lincoln Trust Company, Jersey City.

The American Pulpit

A FOURTH OF JULY SERMON BY

Rev. John Wesley Hill, D.D.*

National Perils AND Responsibilities

TEXT—Ps. 136 : 24

THE civilization of to-day is the fruit of the ages. The centuries are lineal descendants of one another, bound by the law of heredity, vitalized by the life of humanity, and guided in their mysterious movements by the hand of Deity. When Nestor stood before the Greek generals and counseled attack upon Troy, he said, "The secret of victory is in getting a good ready." We have been "getting a good ready" for six thousand years. Just as the speed of the electric car is measured by the energy stored in the power-house, so the progress of our civilization answers to the push of past generations, the electric energy generated by such epochs as the Crusades, the German Reformation, the French Revolution, the Declaration of Independence and the Emancipation Proclamation. From these focal points of history have radiated the moulding influences of the Republic, opening the pathway for liberty, equality and nationality.

Focal Points of History

But the question that imperiously presses upon us to-day is of a different character. Is this government, which has been the pioneer of unprecedented civil and religious progress, to be permanent? Have we planted its principles so deeply that they cannot be uprooted? Let us look at this question for a moment. I maintain that the Republic will abide, because of the providential preparation for its coming. Take the period from the middle of the fifteenth to the middle of the seventeenth century, one of those great periods in which all the future was controlled. It was an age of popular uprising. The Spanish Armada had been shattered. It was an age in which great things were done in the world of literature and art; Tintoretto flashed the light of his genius upon the canvas, Paul Veronese achieved his immortal renown, Cervantes plied his scorpion scourge, Calderon wrote his undying works, Titian painted in one color and Paganini played upon one string; an age in which the genius of Michael Angelo found an enduring monument in St. Peter's. It was also an age of marvelous discoveries; the telescope first looked into the heavens; the microscope brought to light the secrets of the invisible; the barometer first felt the breath of the coming storm, and the thermometer registered the pulse-beat of the air. It was the age of Milton, Newton, Bacon and Shakespeare, whose genius was the central illumination of that immortal constellation. Seed maturing at such a time possessed the germinal element of permanency. It was electrified by great events, vitalized by divine principle, transported to the New World by divine Providence, and sown amid the snow and ice of winter. But its energy of life and heat of thought melted the snows, warmed the frozen earth and brought spring and summer. God had fanned the threshing floor of all Europe to find this seed for the planting of America. Poor but peerless, not frilled, nor powdered, nor titled, but knighted by nature and inspired by love of freedom —these were the men who crossed the trackless sea, landed at Plymouth Rock, laid the foundation of civil and religious liberty and brought to pass the dreams and hopes and prophecies of all the past.

National Crises

Not only do we find assurance of the permanency of the Republic in its prenatal preparation, but in the evidence of its providential care, as seen in the great victories which it has achieved over all its enemies. Surely God "hath redeemed us from our enemies." To-day we remember the War of the Revolution. That was not a conflict of pride and ambition, in which a continent or an island was the trophy of triumph. It was a contest of personal liberty and civil rights, waged for the free State and the free Church, coming down out of the centuries and resulting in a Confederation of States which, for beauty, strength and perfection, is without analogy in the history of nations.

We also remember the second epoch through which we passed, viz., that of the maintenance of the Union, the essential controversy of which involved the fundamental principle of free government and a social, political and industrial system incongruous with the spirit of that government. Two civilizations were struggling for the mastery—the one founded at Jamestown, representing slavery and State sovereignty, the other built upon Plymouth Rock, the embodiment of liberty and federal authority. The Puritan and the Cavalier stood face to face. Compromise was impossible. The radicals of the South cried, "No Union without slavery!" The Puritans of the North responded, "No Union without liberty!" Upon that great issue a President was elected by the free States, a man six feet four inches tall, of serious aspect yet an air of command, inspired by a divine call, as direct as that which Moses heard from the burning bush—Abraham Lincoln, the man of destiny. In response to a single cannon peal, the whole nation, as if it had been a trained army lying on its arms awaiting a signal, rushed into a war which for sweep of havoc and story of horror rises to the front rank of bloody eminence. That war was prosecuted from Sumter to Appomattox, and to-day the Union is enthroned in the hearts of eighty million freemen, whose arms, as Kossuth said, are "bayonets that think."

The third crisis through which we passed was that of the Spanish-American War. One night, somebody planted a magazine under the Maine, and then we went up into the air and came down everywhere, to stay. Spain expanded us and we disbanded Spain. Within less than one hundred days we drove Spanish despotism from this hemisphere, lifted the struggling Cubans up into the light of liberty and nationality, emancipated the Filipinos from the thraldom of despotic cruelty and planted the Stars and Stripes in the mid-Pacific as an object lesson of triumphant democracy, never to fade from the vision of the world.

The Menace of Immigration

Surely these immortal achievements strengthen our faith in the durability of the Republic, and our determination to defend it against all its foes. That there are foes no one familiar with the conditions of the times can possibly deny. I have no sympathy with that morbid asceticism which looks out upon the world from the observatory of despair, and indulges in reckless depreciation of the propitious indications of the hour. Yet I see things, as clearly as I see yonder sun in the heavens, which should alarm us. I call your attention to the rapidly increasing un-American population of our country. Boast as we may of our legislative restrictions of immigration, it is true to-day as never before that our land is being literally invaded with foreign customs, ideas and institutions. We are a chemical caldron, boiling the world into one citizenship. It remains to be seen whether we are making a witch's broth or a compound that will kill ignorance and cupidity and destroy the microbes of socialism, atheism and anarchy, a distillation which, if an honest man drinks, will make him forever free. So vast is this influx upon us that in all our great metropolitan centres there are sections, cities within cities, entirely surrendered to alienism. Walking through these sections, one is confronted with signs upon shops, offices, stores, churches and schools in an unknown tongue, and frequently in unknown characters. He hears a veritable Babel of voices, not one word of which can he understand. Dark-skinned women with shawls over their heads, or, worse still, with burdens on their heads, Chinamen with queues, or the keen-eyed, malicious, murderous representatives of the Black Hand regard him curiously, until at last he begins to feel that he has suddenly been transported to the other side of the globe.

I am casting no reflection upon a large class of foreign-born citizens who to-day constitute the very bone and sinew of our national life. But none know better than these same patriotic foreigners that they do not type the nebulous mass of immigrants. The typical immigrant is a European peasant, whose horizon is narrow, whose mental and moral training is meager and false, and whose ideas and ideals of life have been moulded by conditions incongruous with our social, political and religious life. Many of them come from the fetid fields of pauperism, disease and crime. True, our laws are supposed to preclude the possibility of such increase; but the startling facts remain that ignorance, crime and disease have found a source of prolific growth in immigration. Surely this evil cannot be abated so long as we permit the belief to obtain throughout the world that our country is the dumping ground for creation.

Another peril that finds tremendous emphasis amid the thronging problems and populations of the country is that of socialism. This is also an exotic plant, and is fed by the under currents of foreignism. There are various reforms in State and society proposed by socialism, but it has but one central purpose, and that, according to the recent declaration of one of its leading representatives, is to "replace the system of private capital by a system of collective capital, the absorption of private property into a community of interests and general proprietorship."

A Glance at Socialism

Nationalization or municipalization of capital—that is the shortest phrase in which the socialistic scheme can be set. It is only under the sting of hunger, the maddening pressure of poverty, that any man can honestly entertain such a scheme as this. If no man can say of his home, or anything else, "This is my own," the greatest motive to industry is gone, the mainspring of ambition is broken, a premium is placed upon vagrancy and violence, life becomes a game of grab and men are reduced to beasts of prey. In overthrowing property possessions, the poor man is buried in the common ruin. It is like burning the house in order to disperse the rats. I object to the socialistic propaganda, because it supplants individualism with collectivism. Its scheme to divide individual and corporate wealth is revolutionary and dishonest. Its proposition to equalize the conditions of all men is impossible. It is not a fit principle for the reorganization of society, because it is sceptical, irreverent and atheistic. And, finally, I object to it because it arouses envy and hatred, arrays class against class, encourages lawlessness, tramples upon the foundations of order and incites to anarchy.

In league with all these perils I see towering in our midst an enemy which has been characterized as the "sum of all villanies," and which is the prolific source of the great evils that confront and threaten our civilization. Our saloons, placed side by side, would reach from New York to San Francisco. Each year we pass a billion dollars over the bar of the dramshop, money we had better burn than use in destroying the souls and bodies of men. Whence come our crimes? Our bureaus of statistics, the records of our police justices, district and supreme courts, demonstrate that a large proportion of the crime of this country is directly or indirectly traceable to the traffic in strong drink. But what of the uncatalogued concealments, the hidden ramifications of this ubiquitous curse?

The Iniquitous Drink Traffic

Who has fathomed the fountain of woe fed by the currents of this unspeakable iniquity, yea, the secret soul anguish, the gnawing grief, the quivering heart-strings, the overflowing cup of woe pressed to the lips of the broken-hearted mother, the quivering fear and helplessness of impoverished and terrorized childhood, the tragedy of lost souls burning in the blue flames of alcohol? If these are but few of the endless miseries imposed upon us by this monster iniquity, then I ask, in the name of suffering humanity, in the name of God, in the name of an agonizing Christ, whose heart is bleeding afresh under the crushing weight of this mountain of woe, whether the time has not come for the Church of Christ to arise and demand that this complicity of the nation in the high crimes of the liquor traffic cease, that this menace to the Church and civilization be relegated to oblivion?

These are a few of the problems now confronting the nation, and upon their righteous solution hangs the future of our flag. "Fading as a leaf," is the pathetic inscription written upon the forehead of national immorality. History grows monotonous in recording the downfall of godless nations. Against this impending doom there is but one antidote, viz., the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Gospel which, if faithfully preached, means supernatural power, and wherever believed, means spiritual regeneration, and wherever applied, means moral reformation and revolution. We are told in some quarters that what we most need is a revised theology, and that when we have paused for scholastic

Continued on next page

* Pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, New York City.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOSTS TO MEET

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF ST. PAUL, SHOWING THE STATE CAPITOL IN THE MIDDLE BACKGROUND

By WALTER D. HOWELL

Secretary of the Convention Committee

THE forty-nine thousand Christian Endeavor Societies of the United States and Canada will hold their twenty-fourth International Convention in St. Paul, Minn., next week, July 7 to 12. It is confidently expected that this year's convention of this great interdenominational young people's organization will be, in many respects, the greatest in the remarkable series of conventions which has marked the progress of the Christian Endeavor movement on this continent. Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the movement and president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, says that no one of the great gatherings of past years has had a stronger programme, and the indications throughout the country point to a very large attendance.

The list of about one hundred and fifty speakers for the St. Paul Convention includes William Jennings Bryan, Senator Beveridge of Indiana, Governor Johnson of Minnesota, Hon. George Nicholls, M.P., of London, England; Dean Willett, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, of Philadelphia; Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, and a really remarkable array of leading ministers from nearly all the evangelical denominations, statesmen, authors, evangelists, reformers and educators. Over one hundred meetings will be held during the convention, many of which, of course, will be sectional and held simultaneously in different halls. The general theme will be "Thy Kingdom Come," and it will be treated in its application to the individual life, the home, society, civic life, the business world, world-wide missions, and so forth. Many practical conferences will be led by experts, along the lines of methods, Bible study, personal work, the Church and labor problems, immigration, prison work, pastors' problems, the ministry of healing, union work and Esperanto.

The St. Paul Convention will be strongly musical, no less than three great leaders of song having been secured—Professor E. O. Excell, of Chicago; Professor Percy S. Foster, of Washington, and Professor F. H. Jacobs, of New York. The convention chorus will number a thousand voices and will include singers from Minneapolis and Chicago, as well as from St. Paul. Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah" will be rendered at one of the evening sessions, as a special complimentary feature to the visiting delegates.

An educational exhibit of civic, moral and religious progress will be a unique and interesting feature of the convention. This will embrace graphic exhibits of the work of various reform and uplift movements, home and foreign mission boards, etc., and will be marked by lectures, stereopticon and moving picture exhibitions and songs by a special chorus in various foreign tongues. This exposition will be installed in a large building near the main convention hall.

On the second day of the convention the delegates will march through the streets of St. Paul in a "singing parade," to the Minnesota State Capitol, on the steps and terraces of which they will hold a patriotic song service and listen to addresses by William Jennings Bryan and Hon. George Nicholls, of England. The Junior Rally, with a thousand costumed children in a concert exercise and drill, called "The Bow of Promise," will be a most attractive feature. Great noonday evangelistic meetings will be held each day in St. Paul's largest theatre, under the direction of Dr. James A. Francis, of New York, evangelistic superintendent of the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, and William Phillips Hall, of New York, known as the "business man's evangelist." Frank E. Higgins, known throughout the timber country of the great Northwest as the "Lumber-jack Sky Pilot," will assist in these special meetings.

St. Paul, the 1909 convention city, offers the Endeavorers for the main convention hall her new municipal Auditorium, pronounced, after inspection by the officers of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, the finest hall in which a Christian Endeavor Convention ever met. This magnificent structure, recently built by the citizens of St. Paul, embodies the latest and best ideas in construction and arrangement, has wonderful acoustic properties and seats 10,000 people. In addition to this immense building, the National Guard Armory and six large churches will be used for the various convention meetings. The Endeavorers and citizens of St. Paul are preparing to care for at least 15,000 visitors during convention week.

In accordance with the established custom of the Christian Endeavor Conventions, every one who cares to attend will be welcomed at the St. Paul gathering, membership in an Endeavor Society or credentials not being required. A registration fee of one dollar will admit to all the sessions, procure the official badge, programme, souvenir song book and guide to the city, entitle the person registering to the services of the fifteen committees which St. Paul has provided to handle the convention, and secure to him the special low rate of $1.50 per day for board and lodging in a private home.

The residence section of the city has been divided by the entertainment committee into sixteen sections, and the delegates from certain groups of States will be quartered as near together as possible in the same section, and headquarters for them will be maintained in a church centrally located in their section. Thus the immense crowd of delegates will be divided by States as soon as they arrive in St. Paul and it will be possible to handle them without congestion or delay. A unique feature will be the Minneapolis Encampment, where the Minneapolis Endeavorers will live in tents throughout convention week, thus avoiding the daily trolley trips over to their city, which is ten miles from the centre of St. Paul.

Special reduced rates have been made by nearly all the railroads, and many special trains will carry delegations from various States and the larger cities. Side trips and after-convention excursions have been arranged to suit all inclinations. One large party will leave the night the convention closes for the tour of the Yellowstone National Park; others will go to the Pacific Coast for the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle; some will return to the East by way of the Great Lakes and Niagara Falls, and still others will either go or return on Mississippi River steamers. Altogether, this year's International Christian Endeavor Convention at St. Paul bids fair to stand high in the list of successful and profitable conventions held by this great organization of Christian young people.

Members of the Committee of Arrangements, St. Paul C. E. Convention

National Perils and Responsibilities § 4th of July Sermon by Rev. J. Wesley Hill, D.D.

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

surgery we will be ready to take the remnant of this vast theological lore and apply it in some marvelous manner to the social and political diseases of the day. But if I correctly read the deepest need of the hour, it is for less criticism and more courage, more holy living and heroic preaching of the "faith once delivered to the saints"; a faith enshrined in an authoritative revelation and centering in the God-Man and his atoning sacrifice; a faith energized, backed and vindicated by the Holy Ghost; a faith which was sufficient for Paul, as he stood before the sceptics at Athens; for Polycarp, amid crackling flames in Smyrna; for Livingstone, alone on his knees in the heart of Africa; for Cromwell, going into battle at Dunbar; for Wesley, preaching at Oxford and confronting the mobs in London; for Washington, pleading with God at Valley Forge; for Abraham Lincoln, on his knees in the White House; for William McKinley, looking to God for help in directing the issues springing from the Spanish-American War; for William Taylor, laying the foundations of Christian empire in the Dark Continent; for Dwight L. Moody, thrilling the world with his invincible and triumphant evangelism; and for every other leader of righteousness and reform who has grasped the hand of Almighty God and kept step with his purpose in the recovery of a lost and ruined world; a faith which has come out of every conflict with its Bible unfurled and its Cross lifted over new battlements of error and wrong, and its banner bullet-riddled and blood-stained yet waving in triumph; a faith which is steadily bringing nigh that glorious city which John saw coming down out of heaven, a city without cloud and without curse, "for the former things shall pass away."

The years seem long, the tears grow strong,
Faith falters and is dumb;
But God's time is the harvest time,
And it will surely come.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Side Lights on Mormonism

AN observant reader of this journal in Salt Lake City, Utah, calls attention to certain recent developments of Mormonism, which have a special interest at this time. He writes:

I am far from believing that polygamy is being suppressed. Do you not think that one of the greatest evils of Mormonism is its attempt to pervert all historical research and, with its increasing power, to wield such an influence that all honest research for historical facts will be displaced by the system of lies?

In the Mormon schools at the present time, the young Mormon is taught that the first Woman's Convention was held by Mormons. Recently, one of their most zealous devotees claimed, while in my company, that the revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith was due to Mormon influence!

I think the lovers of truth in the United States should be more on the alert, in using every lawful means to counteract the influence of this system, which can never be anything but a menace.

These are interesting side lights, disclosing some characteristic aspects of Mormonism; but they are fairly cast into the shade by the discussion in the Deseret News, the recognized organ of the Mormon Church, and in other papers, of what is known as the "mechanical theory" of the translation of the "sacred Book of Mormon." This theory, which seems to have been held till a very recent date by all faithful Mormons, is that Joseph Smith looked at the golden pages of the book, with his face covered to shut out the light, and beheld two lines of characters: the upper line Egyptian, and the lower the English translation. This spiritual illumination continued until he dictated the translation to his scribes. All this was done without "the change of a dot or the crossing of a 't.'"

This "mechanical theory," which savors suspiciously of priestly legerdemain, and which intelligent Mormons must have regarded with mingled incredulity and amusement, has now been thrown overboard outright by the hierarchy, which has substituted another, to the effect that Joseph Smith, through divine aid, was led to see (in the Urim and Thummim, or "seer stone"), not the symbols and the language, but the conception and thought of the hieroglyphics. This new declaration will probably be regarded in some quarters as an evidence of religious progress, and the Mormon organs are calling attention to the fact that all the ancient prophets wrote and translated in their own way and used their own language, whether crude or polished, just as Joseph Smith did. Incidentally, they remark that the manner of the translation is in itself trivial and non-essential.

As education advances, priestcraft, and every kind of humbuggery practiced in the name of religion, must necessarily lose their hold upon the enlightened minds of the people. No charlatanry will stand the test of awakened public intelligence.

Developing the Nation's Resources

ALTHOUGH the movement for the Conservation of National Resources is little more than five years old, it has already accomplished wonderful results, especially in some Western States. It is not a sectional, but a national movement. It has introduced, in the first decade of the new century, a national renaissance in forestry and irrigation, reclaiming the desert and adding millions of acres to the public agricultural domain and greatly augmenting the nation's wealth in coal, minerals, mineral fuels, lumber, transportation and water-power.

Irrigation is making miracles come to pass in the West and Northwest. In Montana, 30,000 acres of fine land in the Yellowstone have been reclaimed and 300 families are settled there on good farms in what was formerly a desert. In Wyoming, the Shoshone Dam—the highest in the world—will irrigate 150,000 acres hitherto unproductive. In North Dakota 66,000 acres of newly irrigated land are in progress of reclamation. In the great Yakima Valley, in Oregon and Washington, irrigation has developed hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest land in the Northwest. The Pathfinder Dam, along the Platte section of Nebraska-Wyoming, reclaims 1,500,000 acres of fertile soil. In the Uncompahgre Valley, in Colorado, 150,000 acres of desert are being transformed into a region of rich fertility. These are only a few of many similar projects.

The Chautauquan presents some very instructive figures concerning this vast work and its amazing economic possibilities. When we consider that our 6,000,000 farms represent one-fourth of the entire country; that our fisheries have an annual value of $57,000,000; that our annual mineral production exceeds $2,000,000,000; that our annual supply of petroleum is over 15,000,000,000 barrels; that our natural gases yield a value of $62,000,000 yearly; that our forest game yields $10,000,000 worth of food—when all of these are considered, together with many others, some idea may be formed of the vastness of the protective and developing work in contemplation. Every year the unnecessary loss by forest fires is $50,000,000; the loss to transportation and navigation by floods and freshets, largely controllable, $250,000,000; loss to farms from washouts, $50,000,000, and the loss in natural gas, by sheer waste, represents 1,000,000,000 cubic feet daily, which is enough to illuminate all the big cities in the country. One of the most wonderful phases of the conservation programme is the projected reclamation of 75,000,000 acres of flooded and swamp land, almost all of which can be rendered available for settlement. This great tract, with almost the area of a continent, will yet furnish homes for 10,000,000 Americans.

Heaven's Greatest Joy

IT is natural to rejoice in the hope of heaven as the place of reunion with those whom we "have loved long since and lost a while," and the hope is well supported by many words of Scripture. But the beloved John did not seem to think of that as heaven's chief joy. In his view, the great hope for himself and all believers was that "we shall see Him—as he is." And Jesus himself, it would seem, so counted on the love of his redeemed that he thought he was asking for them the gratification of their supreme desire when he prayed that after death they might see him and be with him: "Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." He prays that those who had seen him in his humiliation and suffering, and all who love him to the end of the world, though they never saw him on earth, may have the joy of seeing him there in the bliss and glory of his heavenly home. Sometimes—not always, but sometimes—cannot you say, "This, after all, is my dearest hope—that I shall see Him face to face."

John Jasper, the famous old negro preacher of Richmond, Va., was a remarkable man in many ways, but in nothing more so than in the purity of his heart and the ardor of his piety. Preaching once about heaven, he said: "When I get thar—oh, when I get thar—I'll say, Show me Jesus—show me Jesus! I don't want to see anything else! Show me Jesus!" "But don't you want a crown, Brother Jasper?" "Yes, I'll be glad to get a crown, but show me Jesus!" "Don't you want a robe?" "Yes, I'll be glad to get a robe, if you've got one, but show me Jesus! I could set thar ten thousand years and never do anything but just gaze and gaze and gaze on Jesus."

Making the Best of Opportunity

ONE of the most striking illustrations of the eagerness with which the children from foreign lands grasp the opportunities for education so freely offered in America, and the good use they make of it, is afforded by a little Russian girl, Pauline Garb, of New York City. Nine months ago she entered the land of promise, knowing no other language beside her own, but she was intelligent and filled with a desire to learn all she could of the speech and ways of the people among whom her lot was to be cast. She studied at the Baron de Hirsch School, and made surprising progress. This June, at the closing exercises, she won a prize for the best essay in English, out of a class of one hundred.

She took for a subject "America," and showed that she had not only mastered the technicalities of the language, but had come also to understand the great principles for which the nation stands. Coming from a land where the system of government and the ideas of the rights of the citizen are almost diametrically opposite to our own, this was in itself an achievement worthy of commendation. The case of the little Russian girl, though exceptional, will be encouraging to those who have feared for the safety of our institutions on account of the increasing tide of immigration which has been pouring into this country. It also proves that the school is the place in which citizenship is being successfully taught. It is the teachers who are the present bulwark of our free institutions. They are facing and solving a great problem, and the general public should show its approval and appreciation of their efforts whenever possible. Surely making Americans from the nations of the earth is one of the wonderful achievements of the century.

"The Fourth" at Mont-Lawn

THIS year our little guests at Mont-Lawn will celebrate the "Glorious Fourth" with more than usual éclat and enthusiasm. Two notable additions have been made this spring to the attractions of the Children's Paradise: the splendid new artesian well, with a capacity of fifty gallons of pure, cool spring water per minute, and the beautiful chime of bells in the clock tower that looms above Fort Plenty.

From far and near, up and down the green hillsides, the "Westminster Chimes" will be heard on the Fourth for the first time, inviting not only the children, but all within the sound of their music, to remember the Giver of all good things. The well, like that of Jacob in the desert, will be a boon to the Home and the entire neighborhood. The dedication of these two new attractions at Mont-Lawn will form an important part of the celebration programme, which marks the opening of the fifteenth year of this gracious work among the poor children of New York. Over 30,000 children, who are too poor to get a holiday otherwise, have been received, fed, sheltered and made happy there up to the present time—a work which has been rendered possible through the generosity of thousands of our golden-hearted readers and their friends all over the land. Long may it continue, and long may these friends live to enjoy the blessing that comes from such sweet service in His name.

GENERAL NOTES

—QUEEN HELENA of Italy, one of the most beautiful women in Europe, has declared herself opposed to the gigantic hats which Paris milliners are imposing on the women of Europe and America. She calls them "ridiculous," and as a protest she and her court ladies have resolved to wear mantillas only. In Paris and London, the big hat craze is already dying out.

— SENSATIONAL rumors, to the effect that the extensive sugar plantation strike in Hawaii was likely to result in trouble with Japan, have received a quietus, the Japanese government having decided that the appeal of certain Japanese, on the ground that their treaty rights had been violated, could not be sustained. The Japanese Embassy fully investigated the strike, and Japan's Consul reported that ignorant Japanese workmen were misled by Japanese anarchist agitators.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 30, 1909

	PAGE
"Flag Day" at Mont-Lawn	Cover
OUR MAIL-BAG	550
Zionist Mass Meeting in New York (Illustrated)	550
The Girlhood of Mrs. Taft (Portraits) By Ruth T. Neely	551, 552
Preparing for the Fourth at Mont-Lawn	552
Huguenots Land Again at New Rochelle (Illustrated)	553
National Perils and Responsibilities. Sermon By Rev. John Wesley Hill, D.D.	554, 555
Christian Endeavor Hosts to Meet (Illustrated) By Walter D. Howell	555
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	556
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	557
Northern Baptists in Session (Portraits)	558
Talks on the Shady Veranda (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	559
Encouragement in Prison Work (Illustrated) Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	560
Massacre Relief Committees Busy (Illustrated)	561
The Philippian Jailer. By Mrs. M. Baxter	562
Christ Is Come. Music	562
He Grew Old Gracefully (Portrait)	562
A Woman's Work of Faith (Illustrated)	563
A Congress on Alcohol	563
The Story of Marco Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter	564, 565
Young People's Societies	566
Prominent Men of the Hour (Portraits)	567

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Earthquake in France

FOLLOWING upon the heels of the earthquake that scourged Italy so terribly was the convulsion which shook the south of France, causing ruin in several villages and considerable loss of life. The shocks were felt in the coast departments from the Alps through to the Atlantic. The Departments of Herault and Bouches du Rhone suffered most severely. Many corpses were taken from the ruins of the buildings at Lambesc; thirty houses were thrown down at St. Chamas, and six or seven villages in the neighborhood were destroyed. There were scenes of panic at Cannes and Nice. Government troops were sent from Marseilles and Toulon to aid in the work of rescue. The same shock was felt in Spain and Portugal, causing considerable fright among the population. There was a similar catastrophe between San Remo and Diano Marino, which crushed 650 victims. The Mediterranean region is situated in the natural path of the earthquake. This earthquake, which has cost such a loss to property and life, was produced by a subterranean sinking due to the long contraction of the globe, brought about by gradual cooling. As the condensation is not uniform, deep breaks are made in the terrestrial crust.

In olden times, these convulsions of nature were considered an expression of God's anger and of the awful punishment he visited upon people for their sins, when they were only the result of certain laws which God has set for the action of the earth. Men, in their carelessness and industry and thirst for city building, have founded their homes and shops and offices on the very places where the earth's crust is the thinnest and where its shuddering and opening are most likely to produce ruin. Man takes this risk. In all of these calamities, however, in the rescue of those in danger, in the nursing of the wounded, and in the care for the orphaned, there is left the opportunity for Christian sympathy and charity and the learning of the eloquent lesson of reliance upon the fadeless and the imperishable.

There shall be earthquakes in divers places. (Mark 13 : 8.)

Long Life Promised to the Race

Professor Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, made a recent visit to St. Petersburg, visiting his wife's relatives and studying the capital's long cholera visitation. The professor mentions as the chief of the recent achievements at the Pasteur Institute Dr. Boret's discovery, in his cancer research, of the little spider which had its nest in a sufferer's first swelling, confirming the idea that cancer comes from the outside. Professor Metchnikoff is convinced that mankind will come to regard one hundred and twenty years as the approximate natural limit of old age, and also that man's years of working capacity will be greatly extended. He says that the experiments on the large intestine and amputations by Dr. Lane, an Englishman, furnish important scientific preparation for this consummation. The professor may or may not be correct in the number of years he has fixed for the limit of human life, but it is true that the mastery of diseases by medical science, the increased knowledge of the laws of health upon the part of the individual, and an improved physical, mental, moral and religious standard, are all contributing to health and happiness and to an increase of the average duration of human life.

For length of days, and long life, and peace, shall they add to thee. (Prov. 3 : 2.)

Ate Guncotton

Miss Helen Wells, a young woman of twenty, living at Omaha, Neb., was attacked by a room-mate and was severely beaten. She was taken to the police station, and while in the surgeon's room was left alone for a moment. In the desperation of her mortification and disgrace, she seized a package and swallowed the guncotton with which the surgeon was experimenting. At first they put her in a canvas hammock and later on a heavy mattress, with a double set of springs, and tied in such a manner that she could not move a muscle. In the meantime they dosed her with chemicals, in an effort to dissolve the explosive. The physician reported that if the guncotton did not explode by noon of the next day the explosives would have become dissolved by the chemicals and her life spared. As the telegrams have not reported any such catastrophe, it is likely that she is safe and well by this time.

This woman may have been particularly weak of will, and, like so many other creatures, overcome with shame and fear of the consequences of a police trial, did the rash and wicked thing in undertaking to put an end to her life. The religion of Jesus Christ is a cure for melancholia and the suicidal mania.

Do thyself no harm. (Acts 16 : 28.)

Royal Burial of French Millionaire

H. A. Chauchard, proprietor of a department store in Paris, has just died. He left his entire collection of paintings, bronzes, marbles, etc., comprising some of the most celebrated works, to the National Louvre Museum. The collection is valued at $4,000,000, and includes such treasures as Millet's "Angelus," which cost $200,000. He left George Leygues, the lawyer and man of letters, his intimate friend, the astonishing sum of $3,000,000. He gave $400,000 to Gaston Calmette, proprietor of the Figaro. He willed $400,000 to the poor of Paris, and $600,000 to the employees of the Louvre store. Numerous other philanthropic and charitable institutions were remembered in his will. His secretary received $75,000; and sums varying from $2,000 to $100,000 were left to the servants of his former princely residence. The tax due on his estate to the French government will amount to between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

Two years ago, M. Chauchard had his coffin made. It was a grand work of art—amaranth wood, decorated with chiseled bronzes by the best Parisian artists—costing over $18,000. Sixteen thousand dollars more were spent on the vault where it is to be placed, and its marble decorations added $12,000 more. The funeral, which was held on the 10th day of June, was, next to that of Napoleon Bonaparte, the most royal ever held in France. The millionaire had set apart $40,000 for his funeral expenses, and had given instruction as to the funeral. The gorgeous procession marched three miles to the Church of the Madeleine, and three more miles through the heart of Paris to the cemetery Père la Chaise, where the body was deposited. He was buried in full dress, the buttons on his waistcoat being each a beautiful pearl, all of them costing $100,000.

Death scattered this millionaire's fortune, as it does that of all rich men. This French merchant held his millions in his fingers as long as he could, and it was only when they grew numb that the treasures fell out of his hands. There was no bribery by which a single article out of his store, or a stock or bond or piece of money or any other article of wealth could be smuggled to the other side of the river of death. He went into eternity stripped of his wealth and his earthly equipages; and the spectacular funeral, like that of a king, seems in strange contrast to the pennilessness of the dead merchant prince. And yet he did take something with him: whatever of love he manifested toward his fellowmen or faith he had in his God, whatever he gave away to ease the pain or better the condition of his brother-man, whatever beauty and art he furnished for the development and happiness of his countrymen, whatever of integrity he manifested in his dealings with others, was a part of the wealth which he did take with him. There have been magnificent funerals of great heroes who have rendered some conspicuous service to the country, which have been the spontaneous expression of a grateful people, but this funeral in Paris was planned by the merchant prince as an expression of his personal vanity and hence seems like a mockery rather than a glory. The spectacular burial, the superb tomb, the expensive coffin, the costly grave-clothes, the precious jewels that adorn them, will not be able to shut out the decay that will set in nor the worms that will finish the task.

Thy pomp is brought down to the grave. (Isa. 14 : 11.)

Nice, France, where the Recent Earthquake Caused a Panic

Sunday Rest for Postoffice Employees

The earnest appeal of a Christian letter-carrier in the New York postoffice to the International Reform Bureau, for aid in securing deliverance from needless Sunday work, passed on by the Federal Council of Churches through Dr. F. F. M. North, has met a cordial response, and through the Council's efforts and those of the carrier, has been taken up by a union committee representing the New York Preachers' Meetings of five denominations, also by the New York Sabbath Committee and the Lord's Day Alliance. This committee has looked into the Sunday work, which is shown to be almost entirely unnecessary by the fact that the London and Toronto postoffices neither collect nor deliver mail on Sundays. Accordingly, a letter to the Postmaster General has been adopted by these seven bodies, asking that not only in New York, but in all our postoffices, Sunday work be reduced to the utmost, and whenever required of any postal employee another full day of rest shall be provided for him. These letters need to be followed up by all who believe in Sunday rest, and may well be made the beginning of a national revival of Sabbath observance, now at a low ebb, and tending at this season to grow worse.

In nearly all cities the United States Government sets a bad example by requiring unnecessary Sunday work right in the business centre of the town. With the telegraph at hand for emergencies, there is no good excuse for calling letter-carriers from home and church on the rest day, letter-carriers from Harlem going to the deserted downtown district of New York City, whose rich men never see their mail on Sunday, to wait on a few curious Micawbers expecting "something to turn up." Let us all send our Amen to Hon. Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster-General at Washington, and, if he fails us, appeal to Congress this winter to forbid all unnecessary Sunday work by government employees, in accordance with that great humane reason God gave to Moses for the Sabbath:

That thy man servant and thy maid servant may rest as well as thou. (Deut. 5 : 14.)

Giants of the Sea

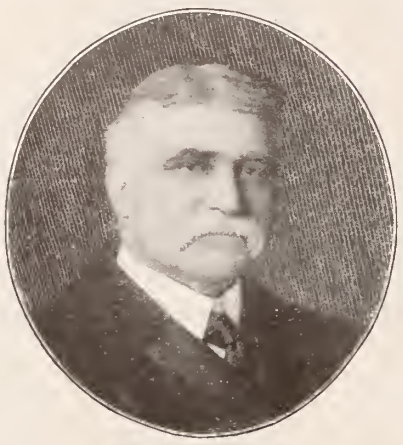
In these days of wonders on the land and sea, the Titanic and Olympic will appear the largest steamships in the world. These two vessels, which are being built by the White Star Line, are being simultaneously constructed, side by side, in a steel gantry that was begun a year before the keels were laid, and which cost over a million dollars. The new liners will be each 860 feet long, with a 92-foot beam. Their great height and the broad sweep of the bridge gives some idea of their 60,000 tons' displacement. The builders have almost eliminated the custom of carrying masts. These monsters of the deep will be ready for the New York-Southampton and Cherbourg service in 1911.

And he joined himself with him to make ships. (II. Chron. 20 : 36.)

NORTHERN BAPTISTS IN SESSION

THE meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention is called for Portland, Ore., June 25 to July 2. It is expected that the attendance will be very large, the effort this year being to secure the attendance of one thousand laymen. The convention is held in the famous and spacious White Temple, one of the finest Baptist edifices in the country. There are "Baptist trains," carrying delegates from New England, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Many delegations will visit mission stations in the far West, the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Expesition in Seattle, the Yellowstone Park, California and the Rocky Mountains and Pacific Coast.

The Baptists are growing rapidly, and have had remarkable prosperity in the North and South during the past year. The Year Book, just published, gives a membership in this country of 5,115,177. There are 48,302 Baptist churches and 34,134 ordained ministers. The churches contributed, for all purposes, the past year, $22,813,864. The church property is valued at $125,214,095. It is claimed that they lead the other denominations in the amount of money invested in schools, colleges, institutions of learning and endowments, which amounts to over $77,975,445.



Rev. T. S. Barbour, D.D.

Dr. Henry L. Morehouse

A. J. Rowland, D.D.

The keynote of all the Portland meetings is World-wide Missions. The Northern Baptist Convention is the outcome of the epoch-making conventions of the past two years, the convention last year in Oklahoma City and the one in Washington, D. C., the year before. Steps were taken at these two conventions which were revolutionary in Baptist methods. Formerly the Baptists of the North had what was called their "May Anniversaries," but at Washington and Oklahoma City steps were taken looking to the consolidation of the societies into one body, called "The Northern Baptist Convention." The new plan has been remarkably successful. There have been more enthusiasm, larger contributions and more solidarity and a growth of denominational consciousness.

We look for great enthusiasm at Portland over the cancellation of the debts of the missionary societies during the past year. In spite of the financial depression throughout the country, the Baptists have surpassed all their previous records in their offerings for missions. They have originated the Budget plan, and have an Apportionment Committee and both National and State Committees. These committees decide the amount of money which must be raised during the year for the different missionary societies, and this amount is apportioned among the churches throughout the country; $1,500,000 has been raised the past year for missions, and this sum will pay off all debts on the missionary societies. Baptists have contributed over $200,000 more this year, in the hard times, than during any previeus year for missions.

. . .

At Portland great interest is shown in the report of the five appointed to confer with the societies regarding organic union between them and the convention. Many in the denomination wish to see the consolidation of all the societies and their complete merging into the Northern Baptist Convention. Many would like to see the societies become boards of the convention.

At Portland the morning sessions are devoted to business and the evenings to inspirational addresses. The afternoons are left as free as possible. The following was the programme: Friday, June 25, the president's address, by Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, president of Chicago University. Another address deals with "American Baptists at the Dawn of the Twentieth Century." Another address is entitled "The Inspirational Value of the Northern Baptist Convention." On Saturday evening there are three important addresses on "The Modern Church," "Its Evangelistic Ideals," "Its Cultural Ideals," "Its Social Ideals." Rev. Clarence A. Barbour, D.D., of Rochester, N. Y., was chosen to deliver the convention sermon, which is always an important oratorical feature of the week. Sunday afternoon is given up to a great meeting of the young people, and Tuesday evening to an important meeting of the Baptist Brotherhood. A representative from Canada is in attendance to speak upon "The Laymen's Missionary Movement in the Dominion." Rev. Thomas S. Barbour, D.D., foreign secretary of the Missionary Union, just returned from the Orient, tells all about the most recent missionary events in China, India, Japan, Assam, Burma and other countries. Another interesting feature is the presentation of the new missionaries, young men and women, who will be sent out at once to the foreign field. Rev. Wiliam Carey, of England, great-grandson of the distinguished Dr. William Carey, known as "the founder of modern foreign missions," delivers an address. Mr. Carey is a missionary in India, sent out by the Baptist Missionary Society of England. Dr. Henry L. Morehouse, field secretary of the Home Missionary Society, is one of the speakers in the convention. He is one of the foremost statesmen of the denomination.

REV. WARREN G. PARTRIDGE, D.D.

Various Good Causes Aided by Christian Herald Readers

Blind Babies' Home

A Friend, Pasadena, Cal 1 00

Berea College, Berea, Ky.

Edith M Nesbit.... 5 10

Door of Hope

A Friend, Pasadena, Cal 1 00

Helen F. Clark Mission

J Y Bettys..... 5 00
Mr & Mrs V E Nelson 5 00
Mrs R A Allen....30 00
Evelyn Marion 2 00
Andrew H Dawley. 3 40
"William," Grand Rapids, Mich ...20 00
A Friend, Winthrop, Me 2 00

Foreign Missions

Carrie Hudelson .. 1 00
A Friend, Jersey City, N J.....21 00
F L Williford..... 5 00

(Rev Rev T J Bach)

D H, Brooklyn, NY 2 00
Emma Rostgaard.. 5 00

(For So. Ameriea)

A Mottaz..... 5 00
Mrs Esther S Gleason 2 00

(Farm Colony in India)

J A Douglass..... 5 00
D Thomas 5 00

(For China)

A Friend, Jersey N J 11 00

(For China Pres Mission)

H Farnsworth 1 00

(For Rev R Henderson)

Mrs M J Woods.. 2 00

(Rev R Henderson to educate Ministers

A K B, Hamilton, Ohio 5 00

(Rev C Schmitt)

Mrs E J Longenecker 5 00

Any Good Cause

Benj Hartman ... 1 00
M A Fuller..... 50
Mrs F H Phelps.. 1 00

Gospel Settlement

B Bradford 5 00
A Friend, Pasadena, Cal 1 00
Bertha Salisbury.. 3 10
C R Sandvig..... 5 00
Mrs L D Watkins. 1 00
L G Ketchpaw...10 00

Home Missions

A Friend, Jersey City, N J..... 6 00

India Famine

Mrs Matt Rae..... 1 00

Invalid Children's Home

A Friend, Pasadena, Cal 1 00

Jerusalem Lepers

Mrs H B, Clemment 1 00
F H C, Croton Falls, N Y..... 1 00

Lepers in India

G S M, Milwaukee, Wis 5 00

Life Line Church

E C, Boston, N Y. 1 00

Christian Mission to Jews

Mrs M A Horton.. 2 00

Missionary Substitute

Mrs F Dubles.....12 50
Jas A Hopfinger .. 7 50
Mrs Mary Davied..25 00
D W Loomis..... 5 00
Mrs W H Simmons 7 50
Miss Katherine McKillop 25 00
Mrs Ida L McKillop 25 00
P C McKillop.....25 00

Steele Orphanage

C R Sandvig..... 5 00

Jerry McAuley Mission

R H Morrison..... 1 00

Mardin Relief Work

C R Sandvig..... 5 00
Frances A Neevel. 7 50
M G Chapman..... 50
A L Williams.... 5 00
A B C, New Haven, Conn 1 00
B W Edgar.....10 00
T S Johnson 10 00
George Holmes ...10 00
M Crews 1 00
Amanda Senn 10 00
E L, Rochelle, Ill. 1 02
John A Parker.... 3 00
Rachel E Peigh.... 5 00
E & M, Harrisville, Pa 20 00
J H B, Vernon Ctr, N Y 1 00
J Y Bettys.....10 00
Emilie L Chaplin.. 1 00
Everett Shaw 75
John W Wright... 50
Jacob Wittel 50
A Friend, Los Angeles, Cal 1 00
Mrs J I Jacobson. 1 00
A S Clapp..... 2 00
A Mottaz 2 00
A Mottaz 2 00
A Reader, Caroline Co, Va 2 00
M B Costello..... 1 00
B J Rigatz..... 1 00
R E Richards &fam 2 00
——, Inez, Pa..... 1 25
An Invalid, Ogdensburg, N Y..... 1 00
S A K, Ridgefield, Conn 1 00
Mr Wm Clarke & Mother 5 00
In Jesus' Name, Hammondsport, NY 1 00
E K, Syracuse, N Y 5 00
Robert F McClean. 5 00
Mrs J F Collin.... 1 00
J S Clark..... 2 00
W I H Pitts..... 1 50

Truk Misslon, Caroline Island, N.P.O.

Mrs A A Jagnow.. 5 00

For Children of Brazil

(Sarah Chambers, Knoxville, Ill)

——, Detroit, Mich.10 00

Okayama Orphanage

Mrs Geo A Balch..10 00

Mrs. Pregensen

B Bradford 10 00

Prison Gate Mission

Sara E Pond..... 3 00
Evelyn Wright 30 00
F H C, CrotonFalls, N Y 5 14
Alexander Forbes.. 2 00

Miss Rebecca Parish

M J Baird..... 2 00
Geo Holmes 13 00
Emma Leavitt 5 00

Rev. F. Jansen

Baldwin Coolidge.. 5 00
Frederie R White.. 1 00
Mrs J M Turney.. 5 00
M M Smith.....25 00
John Beadle 3 00
W R Marshall..... 5 00
W W Young..... 6 00
A Mottaz 1 00
Mr & Mrs R L Himes 5 00
——, Newark, N J. 5 00
—, Monroe, La... 5 00
Mrs M E H Gallup 1 00
A Friend of Missions, DeKalb, NY 3 00
B B W, Gloversville, N Y..... 1 00
W A Flowers..... 1 00
F H C, Croton Falls, N Y..... 2 00
John A Parker..... 3 00
A Friend, Valley, Okla 2 00
O K H, Roehester, N Y 1 00
Susie Langtree ... 1 00
Sara E Pond..... 3 00

Gospel Mission to Tombs

Emma Rostgaard .. 4 96

Invalid's Chair

——, Tidioute, Pa.. 1 00
Mrs J D Seegar.. 25
James Dean 1 00
Baldwin Coolidge.. 1 00
P N Kraybill..... 1 00
J A Stonebraker... 1 00
An Aged Christian, Plainfield, N J... 1 00
——, Salem, N J.... 2 00

Mayesville Institute

Lamountha Belcher.. 1 00
(For Jennie S)
T D S, Washington, D C 50
Peter Dolf 1 00
Mrs Wm Harris.... 1 00
In Jesus' Name, Holton, Ind 50
Mrs Cora M Peck. 5 00
J F H, Brooklyn, N Y 1 00
Mrs J B Price.... 75
Mrs J Harris..... 5 00
Mrs Dr W H Smith 1 00
A Hagaman 10 00
M J, Philadelphia, Pa 1 00
Lillie T Smith.... 2 00
Miss M C Shelton. 1 00
E B Larkin..... 1 00
I H N, Frazeysburg, Ohio 50
Emma D Longley.. 10
James H Hall..... 1 00
Mrs C T Olmsted. 3 00
Mr Dietrich, Jr...10 00
M I B, Washington, D C 2 00
J H Betzold..... 1 00
In His Name, Covington, Ky 5 00
Mrs Brooks 1 00
Mrs C R Chamberlin 1 00
Miss J C Jamieson 1 00
A Friend, Philadelphia, Pa..... 1 00
Mr & Mrs G C Blossom 2 00
Bsesie R Wood.... 1 00
Rudolph Landes .. 5 00
A Friend, Mass... 1 00
N G Hershey..... 50
Dr Lemuel Beal.. 2 00
Friends in Indiana Womens Prison, Indianapolis, Ind. 2 50
Kate Kemery 1 00
Fred Kemery 1 00
H R, Plymouth, Mich 5 00
——, Dewey, Okla. 1 00
M B Moore..... 1 00
Mrs Richard Davis. 1 00
E K C, Madison, Wis 1 50
A Friend, White Hall, Md 25
Mrs J N Jennings. 2 00
A E V L, Monson, Mass 1 00
I H N, Waverly, N Y 1 00
A Kelly 2 00
A Friend, Buffalo, N Y 1 00
Mrs Amelia Rees.. 1 00
Walter Graves 5 00
X Y Z, Middletown, Ohio 1 00
Miss F M Cromer. 50
Peter J Carkhuff.. 50
Mrs H Cooley..... 1 00
Mary J Raney..... 1 00
Annie E Walters... 2 00
Mrs Jas H Little..10 00
Mrs R H Pearse & daughter 1 00
Mrs & E W Edwards 1 00
J N Cadby..... 1 00
M E D, N Scituate, R I 2 00
W A Bowman..... 1 00
S E, Remidji, Minn 1 50
In Jesus' Name, Catskill, N Y.... 3 50
H C N, Bklyn, N Y 1 00
C Matherson 2 00
Hope, Beloit, Ohio 1 00
"Coram," Coram, N Y 1 00
Maud Holbrook.... 26
Mrs Dan E Small. 3 00
——, —— 25
Edwin C Kurtz.... 50
May Brownell 1 52
A Mottax 1 00
The Misses Bradley 5 00
P B, N Y City, N Y 2 00
Mrs F VanHoute.. 3 00
Mr & Mrs Jno W Goode 5 00
Friends in Jesus, Red Wing, Minn 5 00
Wesley Gant 1 00
Mrs J B Warren.. 2 00
Miss D N Lyon... 5 00
Emma Hart 5 00
Mrs Robt Moore.. 1 00
Mrs P J Linden.. 50
Hazel F Hovard.. 50
J N Wolfenbarger & Family 2 00
——, Lyons, Kan.. 1 00
Mrs Carter 2 00
Harrison V Miller. 3 00
——, Walkerville, Mich 1 00
——, Palonse, Wash 1 00
L E Lyons..... 1 00
Mrs S P Avery...25 00
——, Bourbon, Ind. 50
Mrs Elsie Hills... 50
Mrs E Hulwick... 25
Mrs A E L, Woburn, Mass..... 75
A Friend, Donnellson, Ill..... 1 00
Mrs Win King.... 2 00
A Miner, Linton, Ind 2 00
Subr, Frost, Minn 1 00
Clara M King..... 5 00
S H Evans..... 1 00
Isaac W Blain.....15 00
Miss Ida I Skinner 2 00
A Friend, Riley, Kan 30 00
Mrs E Nicholas.... 10
"Newark," Newark, N J 5 00
Miss Maly C Page. 1 00
J T Gleason.....10 00
S B Terry..... 2 00
C W Charles..... 1 00
J B Matthews..... 1 00
Mrs Earl S Smith. 1 00
S J Wilder..... 1 00
G W C, Albany, N Y 2 00
Miss Nancy Montgomery 5 00
Jennie Somerville.. 2 00
Well Wisher, Gloversville, N Y..... 2 00
——, Hoboken, N J. 1 00
F W Wesley..... 2 00
Cleon J Emery... 1 00
——, S Boston, Mass 1 00
Susan A Baldwin.. 5 00
A H Bliss..... 1 00
Albert G Odell, MD 1 00
Clara M Bast..... 2 00
Mary K Hicks..... 5 00
A E, York, N Y.. 1 00
John B Peckham.... 1 00
Mrs Helen Smith.. 2 00
E P Leonard..... 1 00
——, Newport, R I. 50
M Funk Ezra..... 50
Ezra M Funk..... 50
Baldwin Coolidge.. 5 00
A Friend of Missions, DeKalb NY 2 00
Mrs Jas W Drape. 5 00
A Friend, Ellwood City, Pa 2 00
Ezra M Funk..... 50
T C Peterson..... 1 00
Mrs C Simonds.... 1 00
Samuel Clelland & wife 5 60
M A Garrison..... 1 00
Mrs S A Jacobs... 1 00
Janey Russell 1 00
A Friend, Ossining, N Y 1 00
——, Catskill, N Y.. 5 60
Sarah J Osborn.... 1 00
Mrs A L C, Trenton, N J..... 1 00
Mrs A J, Sellersville, Pa 1 00
Thomas B Osborn.. 1 00
Mrs J White & Mrs W K Heysham... 2 00
Mrs W K Heysham 2 00
I H N, Quiney, Mich 1 00
Mrs E E Seitz.... 50
Mrs J D Smith & daughter 50
Mrs Sarah Norton. 1 00
Mrs L M Robinson. 1 00
Thos W Griswold.. 1 00
I H N, ——, Ill.. 1 00
Mrs C A Synde.... 5 00
Mrs J R Williams.. 1 00
Mrs Fidelia DeWitt10 00
A Friend, E Avon, N Y 1 00
Simon A Hershey.. 1 00
Mrs J L Price..... 1 00
Otto C Steiner.... 1 00
Worth Kerr 1 50
A Subr, Morris.... 20
Mrs H W Blume... 1 25
Mrs E Hubbard... 5 00
Jas James 2 00
Ida P Smith..... 2 00
John Garbutt 3 00
P M, Utica, N Y. 1 00
Mrs B W Parsons. 1 00
C D McAfee..... 5 00
W G Steadman... 1 00
Reader of C H, Mt Clemens, Mich .. 2 00
Eva L Thompson. 5 00
X Y Z, Danby, Vt. 1 50
Mrs H D Warfield 1 00
Mrs A E Cutler.. 2 00
——, Hartford, Conn 2 00
Amelia Jones 1 00
W A C, Albany, N Y 1 00
Mrs B G Matthews 1 00
Edson S Winkley.. 1 00
X Y Z, Hixvll, O 5 00
Wm Tate 1 00
Miss M J Gates...10 00
Mrs D F Tillotson 1 00
A Reader, Allentown, Ill 1 00
H J Wiltse..... 3 00
J Y Bettys..... 5 00
E Akin 1 00
Adaline D Shaver. 2 00
Thos M Peck..... 5 00
Mrs H Brinkmeyer 1 00
Richard Smith ... 5 00
Lamontha Belcher. 1 00
Mrs Mary S Swart 1 00
Mrs J E Brown.... 5 00
A Subr, Paterson, N J 1 00
Mrs R W Williams 1 00
E J Lamb..... 1 00
——, Elizabeth, N J 1 00
P Hanson 1 00
Mrs A T Clark.... 1 00
Mr Mrs L S Martin 1 00

And a number of others to be acknowledged later.

TALKS ON THE SHADY VERANDA

The Ocean Ferry

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

SUPPOSE we wander back in thought across the ages, and look at the hardy mariners of the fifteenth century. Think of Columbus setting forth over unknown seas with his fleet of tiny ships, fearlessly determined to discover a new world. In all history few enterprises have been thus daring and none have had results so amazing and enduring. What a contrast between the Genoese sailor and the captains of to-day! The ocean is a vast and thronged highway, and although the twentieth century voyager may cross it without encountering any vessel except the one on whose deck he stands, he knows full well that other ships are crossing it with him. The ocean, Atlantic or Pacific, is simply the connecting link between continents. Precisely as small ferry-boats traverse narrow rivers, great steamships traverse the mighty spaces of the sea. The Mauretania and the Lusitania are ocean racers that go from New York to Liverpool in less than five days. These and other fast ships are floating palaces, equipped with every modern luxury, and equal in every feature to the finest hotels on the globe.

It is a far cry from the Lusitania to the Pinta, and yet the qualities of seafaring men in every age are identical. Columbus had coolness, courage and perseverance. He knew what to do in an emergency. He looked with clear vision across the wide waters, and did not rest until he reached his desired haven. So, too, the keen, cool, resolute men, autocratic as emperors and as swiftly obeyed, the captains of our racing steamships possess the highest qualities of character known to men. Our ocean ferries carry from land to land men who go in the service of commerce, invalids in search of health, and great multitudes of people whose only aim is pleasure.

When the Psalmist said that the world was established on the floods he uttered a profound truth. The ebb and flow of the tides have a ceaseless influence on the health rate and happiness of this planet. Modern science has minimized the perils of the sea and obliterated the old meaning of distance. We cannot feel that a foreign country is remote if it may be reached in less than a week. By means of wireless telegraphy people on mid-ocean are aware of what is going on in the homes they have left or in the places to which they are bound. Who knows what surpassing marvels our grandchildren may accept as simple matters of course?

Two Plucky Women

A little story, which appeared in a daily paper, was worth more than a passing notice. One morning lately, two women, a mother and daughter, left their home in Texas and traveled on horseback fifteen hundred miles, using by preference the masculine saddle instead of the old feminine side-saddle, in order that they might reach a university town where the daughter could continue her education. The University of Arkansas was their objective point. They several times exchanged their horses for others on their way, apparently on terms agreeable to themselves and those whom they met; they everywhere found friendly doors open to them for their entertainment, and the young girl was so little tired by her long journey that she matriculated the day after reaching the university. Her mother, a woman of forty and a widow, will take students to board and thus support herself and her daughter while the latter is studying. The pluck and energy of these women arouse admiration. Much may be expected from a student who has been willing to incur so much hardship to secure a desired environment. The mother, too, with the daughter, is a good specimen of the undaunted American woman who in these days, if she set her heart on any right thing, asks only a fair field and no favor.

A word may be said in favor of the method of horseback riding adopted by these ladies. It is no longer singular, as it once was. On the contrary, many horsewomen refuse to ride with the long skirt and perilous side-saddle, alike wearing on the horse and the rider. The present fashion of the divided skirt removes any objection on the score of indelicacy.

THE IMPATIENT GUESTS

Wait a bit, baby, and Kitty, be still!
How you are mewing, you poor little Jill!
Jennie, the dear, must first have her turn;
Each of you, see, has a lesson to learn.

Baby and Pussy-cat here for a day,
Both of you just in the season of play.
Wait a bit, wait a bit, I'll find a spoon,
Something I'll give to the pair of you soon.

What Do Women Talk About?

THE stock question when two men meet, after the first exchange of greetings, is, "Well, how is business?" This theme introduced, and the answer being given either with an optimistic assurance that it never was finer, or a pessimistic regret that it never was worse, the two branch out into discourse. If men do not talk about business, their theme is probably politics, and on this they descant with a great deal of heat, losing their tempers in argument if an election is pending, and praising or blaming men whose names are much in the public eye, with a plentiful use of adjectives and considerable emphasis. Men discuss business, the price of real estate, the fluctuations of the market and the doings of the government. They are not given to much discussion outside their families of private and domestic affairs. Church and Sunday School management, the new minister, the progress of Y. M. C. A. and C. E. matters also enlist the attention of men, and as a rule their talk is entertaining, instructive and worth listening to. While this is conceded, men have no monopoly of good talk. Notwithstanding the fact that women are accused of limiting their conversation to servants, children, dress and their own ailments, the accusation cannot stand the test of straightforward inquiry. Women are much more apt to discuss books and literature and questions of spiritual import, questions of ethics and what may be called common sense applied to the conduct of life, than thoughtless people give them credit for. Women are introspective and altruistic, and though of necessity they must give much thought to domestic affairs and to the raising of children, they do not invariably talk on these topics.

If, however, they did, where would be the harm? The management of the home and the shaping of the next generation have to do with the happiness and welfare of the world. Home and family are essentials to man's progress and happiness, and with these woman has almost everything to do. Home life reaches its high-water mark of influence and development in the character of the wife, mother and sister. The cornerstone of the family, the pledge of its integrity, is the attitude toward it of women. If women talk about their homes and their children, and exchange helpful opinions, they are entitled to as much respect as are their husbands when they discuss national politics.

One topic both sexes might drop to advantage. Everybody would be the better if there were less talk about illness, fewer allusions to symptoms, and a general determination to leave disease where it belongs—in the sick-room, and in the care of the doctor and nurse. We lose much and we gain nothing by thinking and talking about our physical maladies. Health, not illness, should be uppermost in our talk.

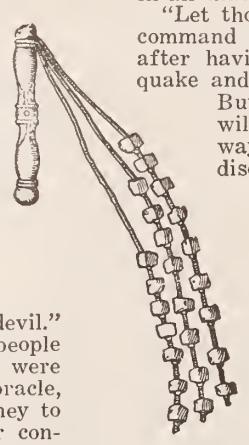
Aunt Prudence Payson's Catch-All

—HOUSEKEEPER. Bread and butter plates are simply small plates used for the purpose indicated by their name. It is much nicer to keep bread and butter at a meal on a separate plate than to have them on the one used for meat and vegetables.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN PRISON WORK*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

PAUL and Silas were put in prison in Philippi. They had been beaten with rods until their flesh was flayed, before being committed to the prison. Their close confinement consisted in being placed in the inner prison, a sub-cellar prison, and their feet had been placed in stocks, so that it was impossible for them to move about. They had been placed there through the bitter charges of a company of men, whose hope of gains in their business had been destroyed by Paul and Silas. It was a nefarious business-traffic by a girl, who has been described as "a mixture of fraud, clairvoyance, insanity and the devil." But there were credulous people who thought her utterances were inspired by the Delphic oracle, and they willingly paid money to obtain revelations from her concerning their affairs, hence the "gains" of those who owned her. Paul had broken up the business by casting out the demon which had taken possession of the girl. For many days she had been following Paul and Silas about through the streets and in the market-place, and interrupting their preaching by her cries. "I charge thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, to come out of her," were the words which Paul spoke to the demon; and it came out that very hour. And the girl was in her right mind.



The Scourge

"Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns"—at the hour of midnight—so did they comfort themselves in God, and call upon him in their dire situation. Their bodies were fettered, but not their spirits. Naturally we ask the question, "What did they sing?" Undoubtedly the Psalms were their "hymn and tune-book." It is probable that they selected "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble" (Ps. 46). "O Jehovah, my God, in thee do I take refuge. Save me from all them that pursue me, and deliver me" (Ps. 8).

God opened the doors of the Philippian prison by an earthquake. Not only Paul and Silas, but all of the other prisoners might have escaped, for all the doors were opened, and every one's bonds were loosed; but none of them did take advantage of their liberty. "We are all here," said Paul to the jailer, who was about to take his own life with his sword, thinking he would be put to death by the magistrates for neglect of duty. "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here," were the assuring words of Paul. The earthquake of God was to bring about a greater liberty than for the bodies of men. That none of the prisoners did seek to escape shows that they were under the spell of the songs and prayers of Paul and Silas, which they had heard sounding through the prison, under the Spirit's power, which held them even when they were free.

"Fell Down Before Paul and Silas"

It was the jailer himself, after he had brought them out of the inner prison, into the court. And he said: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Then there was a preaching service in that prison, and Jesus Christ was declared to be the only Saviour, and quickly there was brought into life the flower and fruit of Christian obedience, Christian love and Christian hospitality, and the jail became a Christian house, for the jailer at once accepted Jesus as his Saviour; he was baptized in the name of Jesus; he washed the bleeding bodies of Paul and Silas; he brought food and set it before them. And the jailer's whole household was included in all these righteous acts. We are not told what the fellow-prisoners of Paul and Silas did, but undoubtedly they were sharers in all that blessedness.

"Let those men go." This was the command sent by the magistrates after having heard about the earthquake and the opening of the prison. But Paul and Silas were not willing to be disposed of in that way. Paul wished honorable discharge as a Roman citizen. In claiming that distinction he so alarmed the magistrates (because they had beaten a Roman citizen uncondemned, they were liable to degradation from office, confiscation of property, and perhaps death) that they came in person and besought Paul and Silas to leave the prison. This they finally did, and went to the house of Lydia for a short time, that they might comfort and reassure their converts; then they departed from Philippi.

Illustrative Points

This lesson gives great encouragement to prison workers. There is a charming little book, called Probable Sons, that every one interested in helping prisoners should read. A little child had become greatly interested in the story of the prodigal son, as some one had told it to her, but she pronounced it "probable son" (and herein was a prophesy and a promise: that every prodigal son is a probable son in the sight of God). The child took an interest in the men of that class, and more than once she talked to them in her childish way and told them the story of the prodigal son. She especially gave her sympathy to the gardener and his wife, who had a wayward son, and the child's faith in the possibilities of "probables" was an element in the reclaiming of that same gardener's son. She told the story to her bachelor uncle, who was a prodigal in high life, and won him back to God. Mr. Moody was so impressed with this book that he put a copy of it into every prison in the United States.

In many cities in our own land, and in other lands, bands of prison workers go forth on the Sabbath day to visit the prisoners and give to them the uplift and consolation of the Gospel and the ministry of song. These services are sometimes conducted in the corridor, with prisoners in their cells out of sight, but in hearing. How strange it must seem thus to labor with an unseen audience! But this is not always the case; sometimes a speaker stands face to face with his audience, gathered in the chapel of the prison. Such work requires, on the part of the speaker, an unusually strong faith in God and in God's power to redeem the lost. There was a Thanksgiving Day service in a State prison chapel. A young layman, who had been asked to address the prisoners on that occasion, rose in the chaplain's desk, and, as he looked down into the faces of the motley crowd before him, he was overwhelmingly impressed by a sense of the varied life-stories struggling for concealment in those upturned faces, and he realized as never before the bond of common humanity. As he went on with his address, he found that he had appreciative and responsive hearers, who could feel and who were not ashamed to show their feeling. One face particularly attracted his attention. It was that of a man of mature years, whose countenance bore signs of intense experiences. His look was one of searching and longing and wondering gaze, while deep emotion was showing itself in every quivering feature. After the chapel service was concluded, and the prisoners had returned to their cells, the visitor was told that a convict desired to speak with him and he accompanied the warden to respond to the call. Behind the bars of the cell at which they stopped the visitor saw that face which had so impressed him in the chapel. The prisoner apologized for having asked the interview, and then went on to say: "It was very kind of you to come down here to talk to us to-day, and we all thank you for it. But, Mr. ——, I'm a plain man, and I want to ask you a plain question, Did you mean what you said?" "Most certainly I did," replied the visitor, "but why do you ask the question?" "Why? Because I want to know whether you really do feel as you said you do, that only the grace of God makes any difference between you and the rest of us, and that you really count us as brothers." "Indeed, I do feel that," was the earnest response; "and I constantly thank God for holding me back, by his grace, from the commission of such sins as would bring me into this prison as a convict." The prisoner clasped his hands together, and, with streaming tears, he said: "Thank God for that. I'm in here for life, and I shall stay more contentedly now that I know I've got one brother in the world."

Prominent among the converted prisoners, who have proved the genuineness of their conversion by a long career of fidelity and usefulness, stands Jerry McAuley. He was rescued by a faithful city missionary—three times—but at length, through grace, was established in the Christian life and became an apostle to the vicious classes in New York. But he did not live out half his days, his physical life claimed the penalty of his deeds. His funeral was attended not only by throngs of people who had been saved through his efforts, but by many of New York's most eminent men.

Ruins of the Market-Place at Philippi, Where Paul Was Scourged

Science the Handmaid of Religion

All inmates of prisons are not to be looked upon as "hardened criminals." Science has given us the plethysmograph; by means of it the least increase of blood in the arteries of the arm is shown. It has been found that when the sentence of the magistrate is read before the culprit there is a decrease of flow of blood in the latter's arm. When it is required, for instance, to multiply nine times seventy-three, an increase in blood flow is the result; the sight of a glass of wine produces a like effect. It is said the flow is little affected in a brutal murderer or born criminal if a pistol is shown to him, when, in a normal man, the plethysmograph indicates a decided change. From a criminological point of view, the importance of the new instrument lies in this fact, that with it the nervous and physical nature of an individual may be ascertained, by uncontrollable and involuntary testimony. With this insight of the mental and moral condition of the prisoner, it will be clearly ascertained how much of character there is to build upon, and so it is now proposed, as a part of prison reform, to send the most hopeful to one prison and the apparently hopeless to another, the plethysmograph being the divider. But the angel of God will visit both prisons, and those who go in his name will do likewise, believing that all prodigal sons are probable sons.

Science throws yet more light on this question through its agent, psychology. We are told that every thought, every sensation, produces an effect upon the brain, and that the brain is specialized for good or evil according to the right or wrong presented to it. This explains the meaning of the text, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." From a psychological standpoint the following resolution, passed at a Prison Reform Congress, is greatly to be commended:

"We urge upon the provincial government, and the various municipalities of the province, the paramount importance of enforcing compulsory education, including the establishment of industrial day schools in every large town or city; the passage of by-laws forbidding the running at large of children after dark; the furnishing of playgrounds and gymnasiums for the use of children after school hours, and the regulation of junkshops and second-hand stores, etc.; the providing for separate trial of children, and separate places of detention while under arrest; that children after trial and conviction should in no case be detained in the police cells or county jail, but should be handed over to the custody of a probation officer, to be dealt with as the circumstances may warrant; and that a law be enacted to give full effect to the probation system. That industrial schools be provided in the centres of population, and that in these the indeterminate sentence should be adopted."

Upper and Lower Dungeons

*The International Sunday School Lesson for July 11, 1909. The Philippian Jailor. Acts 16:25, 40. GOLDEN TEXT: "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved." Acts 16:31.

MASSACRE RELIEF COMMITTEES BUSY

LETTERS from the relief stations in the massacre districts of Asiatic Turkey convey the cheering news that the General Relief Committee is now thoroughly organized and that the work of helping the destitute refugees is now going forward hopefully. So extensive is the suffering, however, that the sub-committees, with slender means at their disposal, are unable to do more than deal with

A Sad Scene at the Tarsus Mission
Family Homeless; Child Dead; Father Killed a Week Before the immediate visible needs. Their appeal for help, which is embodied in the statement of their work sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and printed below, should call forth generous response.

The General Relief Committee at Adana represents the French, German, Italian, English, American and Greek communities, and the three Armenian churches have delegates on the committee. The director of the Ottoman Bank is treasurer and supervises the accounts. The American Consul at Mersina is vice-president. The following are the names of the committee:

President, Major C. H. M. Doughty-Wylie, British vice-consul, Adana; vice-president, Mr. Edward J. Nathan, American Consul; Rev. W. N. Chambers, of the American Mission to Adana; Rev. Pere Jouve; Mr. Stockel, director of the German cotton pressing factory; Mr. Dragi, Italian; Monsignor Terzian, Armenian Bishop, a delegate from the Gregorian Armenian Church; Mr. Ashjian, pastor, Protestant Church; Mr. Grabowski, director, Ottoman Bank (treasurer); Mr. C. Trypani, spinning and weaving mill owner; Sahi Bey, Director of Public Instruction; Ebrahim Effendi, a notable of Adana.

Sub-committees have been formed at Tarsus, Mersina, Hadjin, Hamidieh, Baghche, Osmanieh and Deurtyol. Latakieh and Marash made appeal for funds, and were sent $250 each.

There are at present working in Adana four hospitals and four dispensaries, not including the Turkish Hospital. There are about 250 wounded still under treatment, with about 400 sick in the camps. The greatest mortality from sickness is among children with measles, underfeeding and exposure ranking next in degree. There must be in outlying villages an enormous number of people with little or nothing to eat. The number on relief are as follows:

In camp at Yeni Mahalle	14,388
Mr. Chambers' house	1,700
German factory	4,000
In care of the Armenian Priests	2,000
Total	22,088

This number, it is hoped, will decrease, but there will be a large number of widows and orphans. There are 1,200 in Sis and 3,000 in Baghche being fed, but, except for a starvation ration, they are in need of everything.

At Tarsus, where the committee is sending money to Dr. Christie, 2,000 people are fed daily. In Hadjin the distress is very great. There has been fighting there. Mr. Lawson Chambers has gone there, with $500 from the Relief Fund. The committee will send a delegate to Osmanieh, and Dr. Shepard, of the American Mission at Aintab, will work at Baghche and Hasan Beyli, and Mr. Sabatier at Hamidieh.

The committee have many generous helpers. The captain of the warship Hamburg (German) fed 3,000 people for sixteen days and still continues a large supply of food. The captain of the Swiftsure (English) sent officers and men, who organized the Yeni Mahalle camp and gave valuable assistance in the hospitals. For five days Mrs. Doughty-Wylie did this work practically alone. Without these officers and men it would not have been possible to have fed over 14,000 people. Doctors of both English and German ships did excellent work.

Mr. Peet, of the American Mission, Constantinople, forwarded large gifts of money, amounting to 1,045 lire, and goods, and the American Red Cross Society gave $5,000. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Relief Fund was a valuable help.

Over $1,500 a day is spent on relief, without counting the hospitals. Money is wanted to buy clothing, tools, animals, shelter and loans to start people again, also to provide for widows and orphans.

An Armenian refugee from Adana gives an interesting account of many facts connected with the massacres, not hitherto known. He says:

"From the time that the Constitution was proclaimed, last July, Turkish beys, aghas and ulemas in our vilayet, stirred by envy of the Armenians (for they saw our progress in education, morals and material welfare), began to instigate the ignorant and fanatical mob against us. The religious leaders began by telling their hearers that our meetings for the promotion of education were held for purposes of sedition. We planned to organize a company to establish factories; this made our enemies still more jealous. Here are some of their statements: 'The Armenians are trying to obtain independence. The Sultan is angry against them; he wishes them to be destroyed; he asked England, Russia, Germany and France if they would interfere to protect the Armenians; they answered that it was none of their affair, and that he might do as he pleased.' One can imagine the effect of talks like this to fanatics who never see a newspaper, and who believe all that their leaders tell them. But not only were they stirred up by these lies of their chief men; they were always thinking, too, of the plunder that they could get from the Christian houses and shops; let us not doubt, also, that they thought of our young women and girls. Eighty-five per cent. of the artisans and merchants of Adana were Armenians; only fifteen per cent. were Greeks or Mohammedans.

"On the 12th of March, Zor Ali, a well-known enemy of our race, came to Adana from Constantinople. He represented himself as a friend and accredited agent of Sultan Hamid. Secret meetings of the softas and others at once began. Abdul Kadir, having collected about a thousand softas, entered the Koyoomjular market; there, a poor man named Tootfy became the first martyr. Then they marched past the Government House, having slaughtered another Armenian on the way; in the vicinity of the Konak, they found and murdered two more. From there they entered the Armenian quarter called Hamam-Mahalessi; they entered the houses and slew without mercy every male, even down to little children. The women were returned to us several days after. They said to us: 'Do not ask any questions about the treatment we have suffered; you will drive us into madness.' On Wednesday, the 14th, there must have been about two thousand Christians still in the vineyards; they were ignorant of the events of the preceding night; not more than twenty of the men among them escaped. The bodies of the others were seen on Saturday morning piled up in heaps along the railway track or scattered among the fields, gardens and vineyards; five hundred houses in that region alone were burned."

He then describes the massacre in the city, and continues: "More than two thousand shops and houses are destroyed; the loss in Adana alone will amount to over $15,000,000. The Christians killed in the province number more than twenty thousand."

Another Armenian writes: "The treatment of our women has been simply fiendish. In more than one case the wife has told her husband to kill her, and he has done so, he falling by a Turkish bullet or sword soon after. The bodies of men and women have been mutilated. Wounded men have been left to die in burning houses; others, and women also, have had kerosene poured over their heads and bodies and set on fire while still alive. Turkish men and women have looked on at such death scenes, shouting and clapping their hands in delight. It is too soon to attempt to give exact figures; 75,000 people are left destitute of food, clothing, beds and all their property; there are 2,000 wounded; there are more than that number of widows, and perhaps 3,000 orphans; over a thousand girls have been carried away to Turkish harems; the total loss of property will amount to $50,000,000."

Contributions for the Armenian Relief Fund should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Every contribution will be acknowledged in these pages.

A Street in Tarsus After the Fire and Riots

The following Additional Contributions have been received in aid of the Survivors of the Massacres:

Ramsey, Alonzo.... 1 00
Rankin, Mrs B 1 50
Ratcliffe, J B..... 3 00
Rarn, Geo 2 00
Redell, Mr & Mrs S M 2 50
Redwine, M M..... 2 00
Reid, Geo S 5 00
Remaly, A B & T W 1 00
Requa, Rev A C... 5 00
Reynolds, A W.... 5 00
Rhode, Mrs F W... 1 00
Rich, Miss A E.... 5 00
Richardson, Mrs J M 1 00
Richardson, N, Jr. 2 00
Ricketts, P 3 00
Risdale, Mrs 2 00
Risk, Mr & Mrs C C 5 00
Robe, Miss M M...10 00
Roberts, Wm 1 00
Robertson, Mrs J. 2 00
Rogers, Edw 2 00
Rood, Mrs S C.... 2 00
Roser, Mrs A L... 1 00
Roser, C C 1 00
Rouse, G W 2 00
Rousseau, S E..... 1 50
Rutherford, Mrs W & Miss A Anderson 2 00
Sampson, Eliza T.. 2 00
Sander, Mrs S 2 00
Sargent, W B 1 50
Schureman, Mrs E R 2 00
Scott, Mrs E 1 00
Scott, Julia 5 00
Scott, Mr & Mrs J A 2 00
Scott, Mrs J H.... 50
Scott, Mr R 1 00
Scott, Mr & Mrs W 1 00
Sharum, Mrs T J.. 2 00
Shenk, Jacob 5 00
Sherwood, L E.... 2 00
Shobe, Mrs S E... 1 00
Shoemaker, Mrs J W 2 00
Sievert, Albert.... 2 00
Simkin, E M 4 00
Skewis, Henry 50
Skinner, Mrs C E.. 2 00
Skinner, Geo E.... 1 00
Slanter, Ella F.... 5 00
Small, Mrs M 5 00
Smiley, Miss R H. 5 00
Smith, Mrs C E... 2 00
Smith, Mrs J 1 00
Smith, W E 5 00
Steenburg, Clyde.. 5 00
Stettbacher, G 5 00
Stewart, Miss J... 1 00
Stine, Mrs M 50
Stookesberry, Mr & Mrs W C 4 00
Storle, Jas 5 00
Stuessy, Mrs F... 5 00
Sturgis, Mrs A.... 4 00
Surface, N 1 00
Sweasy, Mrs D A. 2 00
Taggart, J C 1 00
Tait, Mrs Ada..... 5 00
Tedford, H G 1 00
Tedford, Mrs H G. 5 00
Thomas, D 2 00
Thomas, Mrs J.... 1 00
Thompson, Mrs E J 1 00
Thurlow, Wm 5 00
Tiffin, Mr & Mrs W H 1 01
Tillotson, Mrs J M 2 00
Toft, Mrs E 1 00
Tomley, Mrs E N..20 00
Trevithick, John... 3 00
Turner, Mrs R A.. 1 00
Ulmer, Mr & Mrs M D 10 00
Underhill, Anna C.. 2 00
Upham, Mrs J G... 2 00
Valentine, S T.... 1 00
Van Dyke, Josie... 1 00
Van Keuren, C H.. 1 00
Van Tassell, B 4 00
Viergever, Wm 1 00
Voorhis, Rev J C.. 2 00
Walbram, J P & H A 6 00
Walrath, Mrs C W 2 00
Ward, W D 1 00
Warner, Mrs N.... 1 00
Warye, S L 5 00
Washburn, W 50
Watson, Leon E... 1 00
Weaver, Frances... 1 00
Weber, Stewart, Willie & Kath.. 2 00
Webster, S B 2 00
Welch, S E 2 00
Wertz, Mr & Mrs D M 5 10
Weston, Mrs J A... 1 00
Whayne, Mr & Mrs H W 2 00
Wilbur, Jesse 1 00
Wiley, Miss M..... 1 00
Wilhelm, J C..... 2 00
Williams, J B 10
Williams, J F..... 1 00
Williamson, Mrs S 1 00
Wilson, Don 1 50
Wilson, Frank E... 25
Wilson, Mrs S M...20 00
Winkley, E S..... 1 00
Winsborough, Mrs L E Corinth 1 00
C K 2 00
Winslow, J W 10 00
Wiswall, Mr & Mrs W B 2 00
Woods, Mrs C E... 1 00
Woods, Mrs H J... 1 00
Woosley, Alice H. 1 00
Wright, Miss A E. 1 00
Youse, Sarah J.... 1 00
Ynille, Mrs A H... 1 10
Zachman, Rev R H 3 00
Zurfluh, A 2 50
Harriet, Marion... 1 00
City 2 00
L G H, Allegan.... 1 00
C W J, Amesbury. 2 00
M S B, Amorita.. 1 00
E G, Bradford..... 1 00
F E S, Bradford... 1 00
E S, Brunswick.... 1 00
F W, Cawker City 1 00
J H K, Delhi..... 1 00
W A G, Detroit... 5 00
D B C, Dunstable.. 1 00
J C, Fordoche..... 1 00
J S, Grand Jct.... 1 00
M L S, Greenwich. 1 00
M M B, Haven..... 2 00
A, Hazleton 5 00
Mrs W W, Hooper 2 00
E T F, Hynes..... 1 00
P E A, Jamaica... 1 00
Mrs D C, Jersey City 2 00
S T, Knoxville.... 1 00
J H L, Lansing.... 1 00
A R M, Lebanon.. 5 00
A P C, Lewiston..20 00
H L M, Louisville. 1 00
M & L, Louisville 1 50
W E H, Manteno.. 1 50
C G M, Melrose... 1 00
Mrs C H S, Montclair 1 00
S R W, N Y City.. 2 00
O S, Norristown... 2 50
D S, Norwich..... 2 00
B S M, Norwood.. 1 00
A F H, Palmer.... 1 00
N T, Park Rapids. 1 00
Mrs H M P, Prescott 1 00
E L, Rochelle..... 1 00
Mrs K, Rogers 1 00
E G M, Royalton. 5 00

And several hundred others to be acknowledged next week.

The Philippian Jailer

By Mrs. M. Baxter

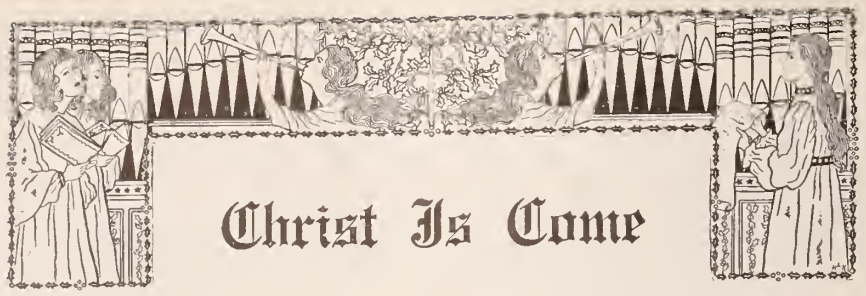
HOW long Paul and his two companions remained in the house of Lydia at Philippi is not told us. Precious days they were for Lydia and her household, in which she opened her heart and received the blessed Word of God, which Paul unfolded in the power of the Holy Ghost. Daily, by the riverside, at "the place of prayer" (R. V.), the few believers who had been gathered in this city sat at Paul's feet to hear messages of God through him. But the enemy of souls could not longer let things go on quietly; he placed day by day in the path of these worshipers of God one of the priestesses of Apollo, a poor, possessed creature, through whose frenzied soothsayings her masters gained much money. She followed the men of God, and the little company of Philippian disciples, attracting attention to them by her ceaseless cry: "These men are the servants of the Most High God, which show unto us the way of salvation." It was just such a notoriety as they would have wished to avoid; it was a test of love and patience. But the time came when all was ripe, and when, in the freedom of the Spirit, he could say, with authority: "I command thee, in the name of Jesus, to come out of her."

What a lesson for impulsive workers! Here was a man full of the Holy Ghost, but, until the Spirit had brought him into fellowship with Christ's sufferings in regard to this possessed one, he could not, and would not, go forward.

Now the battle began; the name of Christ had been manifested as superior to the hosts of darkness, and heathenism had received a deadly blow. No wonder Satan should rage; he stirred up the masters or owners, probably heathen priests, whose slave this newly-delivered one had been. "The hope of their gains was gone." They saw that, with the deliverance of their victim, they should become poor men. No question was it with them of right or wrong, truth or error, but what was to their advantage or disadvantage. On the plea that their teachings were dangerous to the peace of the city, they obtained an order for the apprehension of Paul and Silas, and brought them before the rulers. They were thrust into an inner prison, probably a dungeon, where the jailer made their feet fast in the stocks. God heard them, and in his own wondrous way delivered them. It was not too much for him to send an earthquake for the express purpose of showing to the heathen that their power against his messengers had a limit, and was bounded by his permission. The jailer awoke from his sleep to find himself still in the possession of the keys, while every lock had been broken, and the manacles and fetters unfastened from every hand, without any intervention of man. It was a terrible moment for him; public disgrace and execution awaited him if he proved unfaithful to his charge, and the prisoners committed to him were not forthcoming. To him there was but one alternative, suicide.

Neither manacles nor prison doors were between Paul and liberty; escape was offered him from another power than the jailer's, but Paul had still a witness to bear in the Philippian prison for the Master he served, and he said: "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." The heathen man could not understand it; it overpowered him. He "called for a light, and sprang in trembling," and fell down before the servants of God, saying, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." And they spake unto him the Word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house: family, servants, prisoners.



Christ Is Come

Words by JOHN R. CLEMENT

Music by J. ALLEN SANKEY

Not too fast.
1. Christ is come, the lost ones seek - ing, On the earth-ly plains of sin;
2. Christ is come, the on - ly Sav - iour; Come with glory in His train,
3. Christ is come, All Heav'n is watch - ing, While the sons of men de - bate,
4. Christ is come, the seek - ing Sav - iour, Hear His love-call ring-ing still,
With a shepherd's ten-der long - ing, He doth strive their love to win.
Come to call, with love and plead - ing, All the wayward home a - gain.
Christ is come, but, sad con - di - tion, Some still halt out-side the gate.
O - ver all the hills and val - leys, Sounds His "Whoso-ev - er will."
Chorus.
"For the Son of man is come," He has come to seek and save for - ev - er: From the hills and vales of night He would draw men to the light; Win them from the wrong to right; Christ is come. . . . . .
Christ is come.

Copyright, 1907, by The Bigelow & Main Co., New York.
From Hallowed Hymns, New and Old, by per.

BOYS AND GIRLS!

Who Wants a Bicycle? To Be Given Away!

EVERY BOY AND GIRL can earn a Sentinel Bicycle by doing a little pleasant work for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. All your relatives, Sunday School Teachers and friends will gladly assist you.

If you really want a Bicycle, send for particulars AT ONCE. Don't put it off until to-morrow. Address

CHRISTIAN HERALD JUNIOR DEPT., Bible House, New York.

He Grew Old Gracefully

VERMONT is mourning the death of her great war governor, Frederick Holbrook, at the age of ninety-six. The intimate friend and counselor of Lincoln during the dark days of the early sixties, a leader in the politics and the civil life of his beloved State, Governor Holbrook goes to his grave like a shock of corn fully ripe.

He was a man of striking and impressive presence, standing more than six feet high, broad shouldered, well proportioned and of a handsome countenance. He loved "the simple life," and despised ostentation; had studied music, and for forty years led the choir in the Brattleboro Congregational Church; and was seldom absent from its services, even up to the end of his life. He loved the best literature, and only three weeks before his death, on April 28, repeated long quotations from Milton, Tennyson, Longfellow and Bryant. His knowledge of the Bible was remarkable.

The Late Governor Frederick Holbrook

For many years Governor Holbrook had been in the habit of repeating the words which his mother, in her eighty-fifth year, had said to him: "I tell you, Frederick, it is a great thing to grow old gracefully." He determined that he would learn and practice this art. Serenely and masterfully, relying always upon divine aid and trusting in the sufficient grace of his Saviour, he pursued his ideal. Little by little, he retired from the bustle of public and social life. Up to his very last years he walked and drove quietly through the streets of the beautiful village in which he had lived since his early childhood, greeting old friends and neighbors, but venturing no farther. In January last he presided, as he had done for nearly forty years, over the deliberations of the Vermont Savings Bank. Up to March, he rode daily to the Brattleboro Retreat for the Insane, of which he was a trustee. Every summer he has worked in his beautiful garden, the model for all the country round.

His memory of the great events of the first half of the nineteenth century was extensive and clear. The reception to Lafayette, the great speeches of Webster, the progress of the anti-slavery movement, all these and more he could vividly describe.

For fifty-three years he was permitted to live happily with his beautiful wife, but when she was taken from him, more than twenty years ago, his faith was still unshaken and he died in the secure hope of meeting her in a brighter world.

"He was," says the Vermont Phoenix, "Vermont's most revered and foremost citizen." But Governor Holbrook was far more than this; he was a pattern to us all of a devoted patriot, a pure and upright citizen, a consistent Christian, and one who nobly trod the "path of eld," even as one who "wraps the drapery of his couch around him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

A Woman's Work of Faith

As many readers of this journal are personally interested in the remarkable work of Miss Mattie Perry among the poor neglected children of the South at Elhanan, N. C., we take pleasure in publishing the following letter from Miss Perry, telling of the progress of her work, which from the very beginning has been founded upon faith:

Walked 200 Miles in Search of a Home

"I praise God for the privilege of caring for those who otherwise would be neglected. Our effort is to give an opportunity to those who never get a chance at life. We have never been able to take more than half of the children who make application to us for help, but we are thankful that we have recently made arrangements to place in Christian homes those we can't keep ourselves.

"Last winter brought us a larger number of destitute children than usual, but this has been the best year we have had; there has been more love, oneness and happiness than ever before. We have never had such an abundance of clothing. The table has been more bountifully supplied than ever before. We have been enabled to pay $4,400 on debts and improvements since the first of November, and this month has brought in $1,000 for foreign missions above running expenses; so that the last five months enabled us to support our large family better than ever before in almost every respect, with $1,000 per month over for our debts, our improvements and our missions.

"I recall the case of two little girls who came to us during the year, and the following is their story as told to me by the mother. She said: 'I have walked thirty-five miles with my baby in my arms (to reach Elhanan), and these two had to walk through the mud and snow and cold across the Blue Ridge Mountains. My husband deserted me in December, and left me with three children, aged seven months, two years and four years, and nothing to support us. On our long walk, when we went to spend the night, I was muddy right to my knees.

" 'The children could hardly get out of the mud. I'd have to put one down and go back and pull another out. I was many days on the way, and lots of days we traveled and didn't get anything to eat. Sometimes I could beg the children a little bread. Sunday, I couldn't get anything for them till we got to Marion.'

"Then, one day last summer, a father and a four-year-old son walked in, having made a journey of two hundred miles walking to Elhanan. When the boy was too tired to walk his father took him on his back and carried him, and they were pitiful looking objects when they reached us and the man asked for a home for the child. He was admitted into our family. The father hung around two or three days, then disappeared, and we have not seen him since, but have had several letters from him, one containing $1.

"We had a definite answer to prayer in the establishment of a postoffice at Elhanan, McDowell County, N. C., and of our own printing office and our bakery."

Miss Perry tells many instances of answered prayer in connection with her work at Elhanan. On one occasion, not long ago, there was a combination of circumstances which almost discouraged her. There were two notes of $1,000 each falling due; a bread-wagon was imperatively needed for the Home, and some fourteen little children were at a distant point in another State, awaiting transportation to Elhanan. At this particular time, as Miss Perry declares, the Home treasury was empty. But the Lord had never failed to supply the material needs of the work thus far and she had faith that he would not fail her now. Within a few days, the distressing entanglement was unraveled; she got free transportation for herself and the children, received voluntary gifts more than enough to meet the two notes, and in addition the cost of the bread-wagon was donated by a friend who had never even met her before, but who had heard of her wonderful work from others.

She came back from that journey for the children happier and more firmly fixed than ever in the conviction that God's blessing was upon the work at Elhanan.

SPECIAL OFFER

Large Type
RED LETTER BIBLE

FOR the benefit of those of our readers who desire a large type Bible, but do not require Helps, we make the following remarkable offer:

Until our present limited stock is exhausted, we will fill orders for our Large Type, Self-Pronouncing Red Letter Bibles, Without Helps, at

PRACTICALLY HALF PRICE

Bound in Soft Flexible Leather, Over-Lapping Edges, Round Corners, Red-Under-Gold, Divinity Circuit and Silk Sewed, this Exquisite Bible, heretofore sold for $1.75, is now offered at the nominal price of $1.00 per copy.

This Red Letter Edition of Holy Scripture, known and appreciated throughout the civilized world, is the Authorized Version, unchanged, save for a variation of color in the type:

1. In the New Testament, the words universally accepted as those of our Lord and Saviour are Printed in Red.
2. In the Old Testament, the passages printed in Red are those quoted by our Lord, or directly related to incidents to which He referred.
3. Red lettering in the Reference Column of the Old Testament directs the reader to some particular utterance of Christ, in which the corresponding quotation or allusion may be found.
4. A Red Star (★) immediately following a verse in the Old Testament indicates that, in the concurrent opinion of scholars and theologians, the verse embodies a prophetic reference to Christ.

ADDITIONAL FEATURES

In addition to the wonderful help afforded Bible Students by the above device in color printing this, the most Perfect Edition of God's Holy Word ever published, is printed from unusually large type and includes Maps, Key to Pronunciation, Synopsis and Alphabetical Arrangement of All the Books of the Bible. Durable and Beautiful, the Red Letter Bible is a joy to handle, a comfort to the Aged and a Bible that will last a lifetime!

If it is not convenient for you at this time to pay a dollar for the additional beauty of the leather binding, send us only Sixty Cents for exactly the same Bible, but without Maps or Synopsis of Books of the Bible, and bound in fine quality cloth with round corners and red dustproof edges. Regular Price $1.00; Now 60 cents.

This remarkable offer now puts our world-renowned Red Letter Bible within the reach of every Christian Herald subscriber, but—once our present supply is exhausted, we shall never again be able to make an offer of this kind.

Though we always feel sorry to disappoint our readers, it will be impossible for us to fill orders for these Bibles at the prices here quoted, if any reach us after the balance of this edition has been sold out.

Therefore, write to-day, if you wish to take advantage of this exceptional offer, and make sure of prompt delivery. Money refunded if your order reaches us too late or you are not fully satisfied.

RED LETTER BIBLE

(LEATHER)	(CLOTH)
Regular Price, $1.75.	Regular Price, $1.00
$1.00	60 cts.

We Cannot Prepay Express Charges

If you live within five hundred miles of New York, have the book sent Charges Collect; but if you live at a greater distance, you will save money by sending us 25 Cents (in addition to the price of the Bible) to Prepay Charges.

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT.
92 Bible House, New York City

A Congress on Alcohol

THE British Government, through the Foreign Office, has sent an invitation to the United States Government to appoint delegates to the Twelfth International Congress on Alcoholism, to be held in the Imperial Institute, London, July 18 to 24. H. R. H. Field Marshal the Duke of Connaught, brother to the King of England, K.G., K.T., K.P., G.C.B., late Inspector-General of the Forces, is the honorary president, and will be supported by an influential body of vice-presidents representing the government, both houses of Parliament, religious bodies of all denominations, the medical and legal professions, education and the universities, municipal and commercial life and the organized temperance movement. The work of the Congress will include the inaugural address and reception of representatives of governments; sermons in Anglican, Catholic and Free churches, and public meetings on the national, social and moral aspects of the alcohol problem.

A general meeting will be held each morning, at which papers on the scientific, educational, legislative, social and economic aspects of the alcohol problem will be submitted. Specific aspects of these subjects will be considered at meetings held afternoons or evenings. Among those who have consented to speak are: Mrs. Bramwell Booth, London; Professor Clouston, Edinburgh; Dr. Erno Deutsch and Dr. Imri Doczi, Budapest; Herr Gonser, Berlin; Landesversicherungsrat Hansen, Kiel; Professor Hercod, Lausanne; Dr. Holitscher, Karlsbad; Regierungsrat Kogler, Vienna; Professor Laitinen, Helsingfors; Dr. Legrain, Paris; Dr. F. W. Mott, London; Mr. T. Petersen, Kiel; Miss A. W. Richardson, B.A., London; Dr. Rivers, F.R.S., Cambridge; Dr. Philippe Stein, Budapest; Madame Trygg Helenius-Sappala, Helsingfors; Miss Cora Frances Stoddard, Boston, U. S. A.; Herr Vietor, Bremen; the Right Hon. Sir T. P. Whittaker, M.P., London; Professor G. Sims Woodhead, M.D., Cambridge. An exhibition of publications, apparatus and utensils, and other objects of interest, will be held during the Congress.

The Prohibitionists will hold a World's Congress in London at the same time, and will organize a World Prohibition League, or International Prohibitionist Organization.

A "Mela" in Western India

AN American, who arrived in India on the 3d of March last, would have thought that the missionaries at Sangli, in the Bombay Presidency, were preparing to celebrate Washington's Birthday or a Presidential inauguration. From the roof and front of the schoolhouse fluttered the Union Jack—not the Stars and Stripes—as only the British flag is allowed to fly in India. Inside the building were elaborate decorations of paper flowers. Over the speaker's platform hung a large strip of red calico, bearing in gold letters the words: "Come, let us serve the Lord." Over the entrance to the compound, "Welcome" was inscribed in red letters upon a bamboo arch.

Excitement was everywhere. Teachers and pupils were hurrying around, clearing the rooms, preparing temporary shelters for those from a distance, and greeting the arriving guests. For the four days' Annual Christian Conference of the American Presbyterian Mission in Western India, in the native language, the "mela," was about to open, and great results for the cause of Christ were expected to flow from it.

At 5 P.M. four cars came in from Kohlapur, bringing girls and women from Miss Patton's School and from the Widow's Home there. Each bears under her arm her roll of bedding and clothing. Families arrive continually; dark, happy-faced fathers and mothers, with shy little "brownies" clinging to their skirts, and there is much confusion until all are well settled for the night.

The next morning the meetings begin. There are three daily. Four hundred natives are in attendance, and a handful of missionaries. The heat is intense, but the interest does not falter. Bibles are in every hand and are freely used.

Dr. Wilson (M. D.), of the Presbyterian Mission, and Mr. Fairbank, of the American Marathi Mission, have the study hours. The native pastors take charge of the other meetings. There is an animated discussion during the "Open Parliament," when many take part, in three-minute speeches.

Two of the four evenings are given up to magic-lantern shows, consisting of scenes from the life of Jesus and from the Old Testament. Two evenings are devoted to the "kirtan," or musical recitative of the Orient. It is given usually by four or five men, one of whom is the leader and principal speaker. They accompany themselves with various musical instruments, of which the native drum is the chief.

No one present at this wonderful gathering would have asked, "Are missions worth while?"

The Story of Marco

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco did not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder became more and more unbearable. The man grew ugly and the food was scarce. Marco ran away and played for a living but made little. Christmas Eve Marco began to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to his selling on a corner he called his own. He rescues Jimmy from under a moving car, takes him home, and remains with him. Both go to Mont-Lawn. A great man talks there one day and tells the children to be red, white and blue like the flag—red for valor; white for purity; blue for justice. Marco resolves to be "red, white and blue," like the flag. He finds a new friend in an Italian laborer.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

MARCO now frequently ran across the Italian laborer, and every time he stopped the boy and said something. He was pleasant and genial, and seemed to be trying to make friends. He knew about many curious things, too, that were wonderfully interesting to a small boy, and Marco came to like him, and to watch for him. On the day before his visit was to close, Marco himself accosted the man to say good-by.

"You see, I'm goin' away to-morrow," he explained sorrowfully. "My time is up."

The man hesitated. He looked swiftly about him. There was no one near. They were at the end of the path, and were quite by themselves. For a moment he looked at Marco in silence, then he spoke, his face flushing a dull red.

"Marco, did your mother ever speak of—your—dad?"

"Once or twice."

"What did she say?"

"Nothin' much."

"But what was it?"

Marco drew his brows together in a frown, then answered slowly:

"It wasn't so much what she said—as how she—looked."

"Oh!" The man pulled at the collar of his flannel shirt as if it hurt him. After a time he spoke again.

"Didn't you ever wonder where—he was?"

"Why, mebbe. I dun'no."

"Wouldn't you—like it if you could—see him?"

Marco hesitated.

"I don't think—I would," he said with some deliberation. "I don't think he was good to mumsey."

"But he meant ter be. He always meant ter be. It was only that he—" The man stopped abruptly, refusing to meet the boy's widening eyes.

"How do you know that?" demanded Marco. "How do you know he—" The boy stopped, a growing terror in his eyes. Suddenly he realized that this man had known his name, "Marco;" that he had known many other little things about him, before he was told; that he looked strangely like the picture in his mother's locket; and that he was standing now shamefaced and trembling, as if— "Say, you ain't—you can't be—dad!" stammered the boy.

"And if I was?" The man turned sharply with the question. He had his answer in the way the boy fell back before his approach.

"But you mustn't—you don't know! I am your dad," cried the man, feverishly. "And I'm hungry for ye. You're my boy. I need ye. I want ye. I'll take care of ye, too. You must come!" And he poured into Marco's ears an appeal that stirred the boy as had the words of the great man about the flag on the Fourth of July. To Marco they seemed alike, too—those appeals. He must be brave, be true, be loyal; he must do what was right. . . . But what was right? It was all so confusing. He must think it out alone. He could not decide now.

"I'll tell ye in the mornin' 'fore I go," he promised falteringly; then he hurried away.

They sang "The Red, White and Blue" in the song service that night, and some one gave them a little talk on what it means to be brave, loyal sons of God, of their country, and of their fathers and mothers on earth. Before Marco went to sleep that night, his decision was made.

The man looked haggard, and as if he had not slept, when Marco saw him just before it was time to start for the ferry. But his face lighted up so wonderfully when Marco told him his decision, that the boy felt a choking lump rise in his throat.

"Come to the Grand Central to-night at six o'clock," said the man huskily. "I'll be there ter meet ye, and after that you'll be my boy—my own boy."

A little sadly, Marco went back to New York with Jimmy and the others. Behind him lay the trees and the grass and the far-reaching blue sky; before him lay the city, and a new life with a man who was a stranger. But in his ears were ringing the strains of "The Red, White and Blue," and in his heart was a stern determination. He would do right. He would be loyal, brave and true.

At Mont-Lawn that night the boss of the laborers reported to Miss Denny that a man was missing. He had slipped away some time during the day, and had been seen apparently going to New York. His place would be filled at once, however, the boss said, and the work would not suffer.

CHAPTER XVIII

LIVING WITH "DAD"

MARCO told only Jimmy where he was going.

"It's dad—I've found him," he explained tersely, silencing Jimmy's expostulations afterward by a short: "But bein' dad, so, I've got ter go. Don't ye see?"

In the great station Marco found the man waiting for him at six o'clock, and together they went out upon the street.

"I hain't got much of a place yet, ter take ye to," apologized the man, nervously; "but it'll be better soon. I've got you now—somethin' worth workin' for."

Marco had been wondering all day what his father's home would be like. Since giving his promise that morning he had grown fearful. With a shudder he remembered his experience with the organ-grinder. He certainly did not want to repeat that. In spite of himself, since living with Jimmy, he had come to share that youth's aversion to "Dagoes," and for some time he had made little use of

Continued on next page

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 566, and write them for full information.

ZU ZU
GINGER SNAPS
Rain! Rain!! Rain!!! All in vain!
If you lack snap and want ginger, use the old established countersign
ZU ZU
to the grocerman
No one ever heard of a ZU ZU that wasn't good
No! Never!!
5¢
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Permanent Investments
IN NEW YORK REAL ESTATE
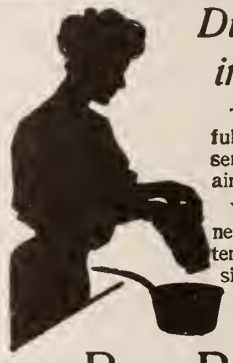
Yielding
Full Profits

Past . . . Over $1,000,000
Present . Surplus $765,000
Future . At Least 12%
(3% Cash, Annually
9% Accumulations)

Assets, - $3,000,000
STOCKHOLDERS ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Write for Booklet 14 and 14 Years' Results

New York Realty Owners
489 Fifth Avenue, New York



Dip Fruit Jars in Paraffine

Think of setting away full fruit jars at preserving time, every jar air-tight.

You can do it—you need not lose the contents of a jar if you'll simply dip the caps and rubber sealing rings, after closing, in hot

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

as the final step in the preserving process. Nothing makes so perfect a seal as this, and nothing is more easily done.

Always keep Pure Refined Paraffine in the house. Makes a fine floor polish—gives a gloss to starched things and helps clean clothes on wash day.

Write for a neat Paraffine Paper Pad to keep sad irons from sticking.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

"To save time is to lengthen life." Do you value life? Then use SAPOLIO

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

his surname. As he trudged along now by the man's side, he needed all his courage to keep himself from slipping away at the nearest corner; and he had to repeat over and over to himself all that he could remember of what the great man on the Fourth of July had said about truth, and loyalty, and duty bravely performed. So busy was he, indeed, with lashing himself into the proper frame of mind, that he was surprised when his companion stopped before a door leading to a basement tenement. He was more surprised when a quick glance about him told him that the place was not two blocks away from where he had been living for six months with the Nolans.

Inside the house the man led the way through a dark hallway and evil-smelling kitchen to a small bedroom lighted by a narrow window on a level with the sidewalk.

"You see, it ain't much," he said wistfully.

"But is it ours?—all ours?—this room?" demanded Marco.

"Yes—when I pay. Milanovitch—I get it off him. He lives there,"—with a jerk of his thumb toward the evil-smelling kitchen. "He has two rooms, but he's got a wife an' five kids. I've got a kid now. I've got you!" And he looked at Marco with a curious longing in his eyes.

Marco shifted his position, and gazed about the room. He was embarrassed and ill at ease. He wished he were back with Jimmy Nolan. He was afraid he was not going to like this new father, who acted so strangely, and who looked at one so curiously. He realized, too, uncomfortably, that something was expected of himself, but it was a full minute before he managed to stammer:

"It's very nice, I'm sure — this room."

There was a moment's silence. The man, now, was embarrassed. At last he spoke, but with evident effort.

"You hain't said 'dad' once, yet. Did ye know it?"

The boy flushed; then he blurted out the one question that had been close to his lips all the evening—and it was the one question that he had meant not to ask.

"Dad, am I—a Dago?"

The man scowled angrily. For a moment he looked as if he would strike the boy; then his hand fell impotently.

"We better eat," he said, in a dull voice, turning to some packages he had brought with him. "Mebbe then we'll talk."

It was a frugal meal, and soon over. Marco was not hungry, and did not eat much. The man, too, ate little, and was silent. Out in the kitchen a babel of angry jargon told that Milanovitch had come home—and with a bad temper. Everywhere strange sights and sounds met Marco's eyes and ears. Nothing was familiar save the smoky odor of the kerosene lamp, and that brought only homesick memories of the Nolans.

Not for some time after he had finished eating did the man speak; then he began slowly:

"You might as well know now right away your name ain't 'Bonelli,'" he said. "It's 'Covino'."

"Covino!"

"Yes."

"But, what for? How is it? Who said—"

The man stopped the torrent of questions with an imperative gesture.

"It's too late ter go into all that—an' 'twouldn't do no good if I did. What's necessary, I'll tell ye. I'm John Covino, an' you're my boy: so your name's 'Covino'."

"And was you—a gipsy?"

"Mebbe—an' mebbe not. I was with them—when you was born."

"But you went away; you must have went away. Mumsey told me she didn't know—where you was."

To Marco's surprise the man turned away his head suddenly. The next moment his face was in his hands, and he was sobbing bitterly. Marco watched him with growing uneasiness. In his own throat that curious lump was coming again. He was distressed, embarrassed, and angry with the man; yet within himself a strange, imperative something was even at that moment dragging him to his feet. In obedience to it he crossed the room and touched the man on his shoulder.

"Dad, I—" He could not say more. The man had him in an embrace that hurt.

CHAPTER XIX

A Hard Master

AS ONE by one the weeks passed Marco found that his daily life was not so much changed, after all. He still sold papers, and still belonged to "de gang." He saw Jimmy, too, and occasionally visited the Nolan home. He lived, to be sure, in the little room out of the Milanovitch kitchen; and he was the object of the most slavish devotion on the part of a man who worked all day at one of the wharves, only to invest his earnings in something for the pleasure or the comfort of "my boy Marco."

Neighbors who had known John Covino during the past year could scarcely believe the evidence of their own senses now. They had known before that he could work, and work well—when there was no liquor to be had. But they had known, too, that his employers must keep a sharp lookout and see that temptation was never put in his way. They were amazed now, to see him start day after day for his work, with erect shoulders and a steady eye; and they were more amazed to see him return each Saturday night sober, and with money in his pocket. They told each other that it was a good thing that Covino had found his boy. They always liked him, they said. He was a good fellow—if he would only keep steady.

In September Marco went into school again. He was still looking for Flossie—and still in vain. Twice he had questioned John Covino concerning her, but he had learned nothing; the man did not seem to wish to talk of her.

"'Twa'n't dad, then, that come after her," Marco had muttered to himself afterward, "'cause if 'twas he'd ha' known now where she was. It must ha' been some other man."

Marco had been in school three weeks when one Saturday night John Covino did not come home at supper time. Seven, eight, nine o'clock came, and still he did not appear. Marco was puzzled and almost frightened. Not once since they had lived together had his father failed to be there at the appointed time, gleefully displaying some dainty he had bought for their supper.

Ten o'clock came, and with it an unsteady step outside the door. At the sound Marco sprang to his feet. A vision of Pat Nolan dimmed his eyes; then the door burst open.

"Dad!"

The man braced himself against the door, balancing on unsteady legs before reeling across the room to the nearest chair. Marco sprang to the door and closed it; then turned and faced his father.

"Dad!"

The man lifted his chin, half aggressively, half jauntily.

"Well, watsh ye got—ter shay?" he demanded thickly.

"Dad, oh, dad! How could you?"

To be continued

Let Us Bake Your August Beans

Until the summer is over, bid your oven good-by.

Let us have the heat, the work, the worry, and supply your meals ready to serve. They'll be delicious meals—the finest baked beans in the world. For, when you try us a month, we'll try to keep you forever.

Baked pork and beans, when the beans are digestible, form an ideal summer dish.

Don't judge them by home-baked beans—beans that overtax digestion—that ferment and form gas.

Van Camp's are digestible. They are baked in steam ovens, where we apply twice the heat applied in a dry oven.

And Van Camp's are delicious, for every bean is left whole. No crisped beans—none mushy and broken.

And the tomato sauce is baked into the beans, giving a delicious blend.

Beans are 84% nutriment, and they are cheap.

With more food value than the choicest beef, they cost not a third so much.

Every can on the shelf means a meal without cooking, and a meal that all people like.

Buy a dozen cans and try them one month. Then decide what you think of home baking.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

Van Camp's are the whitest and plumpest Michigan beans, picked out by hand. All but the best are discarded.

They cost us four times what some beans would cost.

Our tomato sauce is made of whole, vine-ripened tomatoes. It costs us five times what some sauce costs, ready made.

Our process is the result of 48 years of experience. That's why Van Camp's are so much better than others. That is why you ought to insist on them.

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can.

Van Camp Packing Co. Established 1861 Indianapolis, Ind.

The Baking Test

Baking proves the quality of a stove. No stove, regardless of the fuel used, will stand the BAKING test better than the New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook Stove.

Besides, the "New Perfection" makes the kitchen a cool and pleasant place in which to do the baking.

All of the family cooking, the baking, the washing, and the ironing can be done with a

NEW PERFECTION

Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove

in far greater comfort than with any other style of stove. This is especially true in the summer season. Its quick heat saves moments, its cleanliness saves labor, its fuel economy saves money, its new principle of blue flame combustion saves you the physical discomfort of an overheated kitchen. Made in three sizes. Can be had either with or without Cabinet Top. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

The Rayo LAMP Just such a lamp as you've been looking for. Made with artistic simplicity and fine proportions. Beautifully nickeled; hence easily cleaned. Very handy to fill and trim. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

Barrett Flexible Sham Holder.

A Spring Made from Extra Plated Piano Wire. Everybody delighted. The Most Convenient, Economical and Only Sanitary Sham Holder Known.

If you cannot secure these from your dealer, we will send you, postage paid, one Sham Holder, complete, on receipt of twenty-five cents.

Write for Free Catalog.

Chas. R. Barrett Co., Sole Mfrs., 50 State St., Chicago, U.S.A.

LADIES OF THE CHURCH

here is a great opportunity to make money selling articles that are new, every woman needs and will buy.

SHINO CHEMICAL DUST CLOTH

a chemically treated dust cloth 25"x 33" that not only prevents the dust from scattering but absorbs and causes it to disappear entirely. It leaves a beautiful lustre on all polished surfaces better than furniture polish. Every room in the house can be dusted without shaking it out, and can be cleaned with warm water.

WRITE to-day for a large sample cloth enclosing 25 cents and ask for special prices on quantities

The "SHINO" Mop chemically treated for hardwood and painted floors, price, 50c. cleans and polishes at the same time; absorbs all dust and will last years. Write for special prices on quantities. AGENTS WANTED.

PIONEER MFG. CO., 518 Citizens Bldg., Cleveland, O.

Dessert Book Free

I want every housekeeper in the land to send for my new dessert book. It has been greatly enlarged and improved, contains many new recipes and is handsomely illustrated in colors. The book is full of the daintiest and most delicious desserts imaginable, suitable for any and all occasions at every season of the year. For the name and address of your grocer I will send you the book free. If he doesn't sell Knox Gelatine, for 2c. in stamps and his name I will send a full pint sample or for 15c. a two quart package.

CHARLES B. KNOX, 55 Knox Ave., Johnstown, N.Y.

Hair Like This FREE Let me send you a remarkable treatment for Baldness, Dandruff, Gray Hair, etc., at my own expense. It will surprise and delight you. Write to-day to

WM. CHAS. KEENE, President LORRIMER INSTITUTE, Dept. 2540, Baltimore, Md.

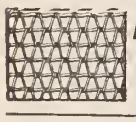
CORNS You don't need to suffer from aching corns. A-CORN SALVE removes them quickly and painlessly. No dangerous cutting. Instant relief on application. 15c. at druggist's or by mail.

GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia

GENUINE BARGAINS IN HIGH-GRADE UPRIGHT Pianos. Slightly used instruments: 12 Steinways from $350 up; 6 Webers from $250 up; 9 Krakauers from $250 up; 7 Knabes from $250 up; 3 Chickerings from $250 up; also ordinary second-hand Uprights $75 up; also 10 very fine Parlor Grand Pianos at about half. Write for full particulars. Cash or easy monthly payments. Lyon & Healy, 62 Adams St., Chicago. We ship everywhere on approval.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND? If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO., 290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.



FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We pay freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

ARE YOU DEAF? We have 25 INSTRUMENTS TO ASSIST HEARING. On approval. Send for Catalogue.

WM. C. WILLIS & CO., 134 So. 11th St., Phila.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED. Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.

EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Life Lessons from John*

THE book of John's Gospel and his first epistle are, perhaps, more generally considered authentic than any others in the New Testament; while the second and third epistles have been somewhat hesitatingly accepted by certain commentators. Internal evidence alone would, to the lay mind, confirm the identity of their writer with that of the fourth Gospel. Of the thirteen verses which compose the second epistle, eight are to be found in the first, and at least four in John's Gospel. The third epistle has also all of the Johannean characteristics.

In reviewing the life of this remarkable man, almost as much comfort may be taken by the ordinary mortal as in contemplating that of the faulty Peter. No one that ever lived has shown a more beautiful spirit than the apostle John. The highest and most unselfish love seems to have actuated him. According to Jerome, the last words which he breathed were, "Little children, love one another."

And yet John was ardent and ambitious. The request of his mother, Salome, and of her two sons, that they should occupy the seats of honor when the Lord should enter into his glory, indicates strong and not generous traits, which were naturally rebuked by Jesus and condemned by the brethren.

The impetuosity with which John forbade the man casting out devils (Mark 9:38) to continue, "because he followeth not us," and the calling down of fire from heaven upon a village of the Samaritans, indicate that he was far from being the yielding and effeminate character that many imagine him. He was a man of fiery energy and of like passions with ourselves; and yet he has exemplified the possibility of controlling and subordinating selfish and powerful faults, until they disappear in gentleness and love. He is supposed to have been not distantly connected with the family of Jesus.

The traditions which surround the later life of this extraordinary man are innumerable. He is said to be boiled in oil, and to come forth from the horrible torture unscathed. He is forced to drink a cup of the fatal hemlock, yet it does not poison him. He levels to the ground the magnificent temple of Artemis. He plays with a bird, and pleads in defense of his levity that "the bow must sometimes unbend"; and he inaugurates the immortal festival of Easter, celebrating it at Ephesus by appearing before the people with a golden plate upon his brow, bearing upon it the sacred name—the badge of the Jewish pontiff. Even in these apocryphal incidents, he appears ever as the champion of all that is noble and innocent; sets an example, even in the folk-tales of his era; and shows us, in fable, how nothing earthly can hurt him who abides in Christ.

But the great lessons for us all from this most spiritual of the Gospels are, first, the divinity of Christ—that he is surely the only begotten Son of the Father, given to save us from our sins; and, second, that love is the supreme motive of the Christian life—the love that, beginning with the Creator, takes in the meanest of his creatures—all-embracing, naught-despising. "Love believes in to-morrow for those in a dark day," says George Matheson. "Though as yet thou seest no rainbow, though as yet thou hearest no bells across the snow, still thou shalt believe. Love shall be thy rainbow; love shall be thy bell of hope." Love beareth, believeth, endureth all things.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 11. TEXT: John 14: 1-21.

Things Transformed*

A STORY appeared not long ago in the papers, of a heedless child, whose mother was constantly urging her to practice her music more carefully. For some time no improvement was noted. One day, after the mother had exhausted her own ingenuity in devising motives to spur the child to greater efforts, yet without result, suddenly she played a movement with wonderful skill and spirit.

"That was finely done," exclaimed the mother. She thought that at last her admonitions had become effective; but, no! the child had thought out a remedy for herself.

"Oh," she said gaily, "I made believe that President Taft was listening to me."

Some people are moved in one way, others differently; but nearly always some thought or idea can be suggested which can turn a dull and disagreeable duty into a joy. It is like the inspiring march which quickens the lagging steps of a weary army; or like the beautiful pattern which awakens the interest of the bored little needle-woman, who has been toiling upon the stitches of her "over and over" patchwork.

Two little boys who were quarantined in a large, sunny room, on account of scarlet fever, were really quite strong and were not in bed for a single day. The confinement wore upon their active bodies, and the worried mother found that they were in danger of falling into a state of chronic ill-temper. It occurred to her to name one of them Prince Constantine and the other Prince Edmondo. One day Prince Constantine visited the other prince, supposedly in his ancestral castle. The next day the compliment was returned. All sorts of fancies clustered about this romantic situation. The manners of the boys rose to their princely condition. They became dignified and courteous. It was a grand transformation, and entirely one of mind and imagination.

In one of Beecher's great sermons, he dwells upon the vast change which is bound to come over society as the ages roll. He speaks of the way in which fruits, vegetables and animals are constantly improving, as men become more intelligent in their management; and he foresees the time when the human race also shall rise higher and higher in the scale of being. One becomes discouraged at times. "One feels as though men were whitewashed with Christianity, not transformed—changed essentially by it. But when I take a larger view of it, I see that this is a part of that struggle which has been running on through thousands of years, and very likely will run on through thousands of years to come, but which has an inevitable termination—such an exaltation of the race as that all the animal elements will be purged out of it and a larger intelligence and a better moral element shall reign—to the "glory of God and the joy of the universe."

We are bidden by the poet to "pluck the flower success out of the nettle failure." If sorrow and pain harass us, we are told to cheer up, for "the best is yet to be." A great lesson taught us in all literature, sacred and profane, is the control which a determined will and a strong purpose may have over destiny. We may "work out our own salvation"; we may reap anything we choose to sow; we are given the transforming "spirit of power"; and we have always a Great Ally, whose aid is never sought in vain.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 11. TEXT: John 2: 1-11.

How Loss is Avoided and Income Increased

STATISTICS prove that Savings Institutions supervised by the New York Banking Department are among the safest in the Union. For 16 years the operations of this Company have been regularly examined and its statements confirmed by the New York Banking Department.

Our patrons are protected by Assets of over $1,900,000. Surplus and Profits, $138,000. Testimonials from hundreds of investors, who pronounce our dealings exact, fair and equitable, go still further to justify your confidence.

We receive for investment, at 5 Per Cent. per Year, any sum from $25.00 to $3000.00. Earnings are paid for every day the funds are in our hands, and the principle is subject to withdrawal at any time on 30 days' notice.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS and LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Note that 5 per cent. yields an income one-quarter larger than a 4 per cent rate. Loss of earning-time at the latter rates due to arbitrary dates for crediting interest, makes the difference still greater.

It is less trouble to deal with us by mail than to bank locally.

Let us send testimonials and write you fully.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. 2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

AUSTIN'S "PYROTONE"

KILLS LICE ON CHICKENS

Also mites, Texas fleas, scaly leg, and prevents feather pulling.

CURES MANGE

ear canker, and fleas on dogs and all animals.

Mr. E. W. Philo, author of the Philo System Book uses "Pyrotone" exclusively in his Model Poultry Plant and says of it: "I believe a few drops of this remedy is worth more than all the lice powders on the market."

Large bottle sent express prepaid for $1.00 Six bottles, $5.00. Circular free.

Attractive terms to Agents

W. P. AUSTIN, ELMIRA, N. Y. 397 WEST WATER STREET

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief For PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all afflictions of the skin.

Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free.

GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

THE FAMOUS EVANGELIST'S NEW HYMN BOOK

GIPSY SMITH Edition of HALLOWED HYMNS NEW AND OLD By I. ALLAN SANKEY

35c. a copy, postpaid. $25 per 100 Returnable Sample mailed to Pastors, etc.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., CHICAGO NEW YORK

PULPITS, Platform Chairs, Sunday School Seats, Collection Plates, Church Pews, School Desks, Opera Chairs, Lodge and Bank Furniture, Office Desks. Ask for Catalog by number only

C112 Church Furniture	School Desks S112
L112 Lodge Furniture	Opera Chairs O112
B112 Bank Furniture	Office Desks D112

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

WEDDING INVITATIONS 100 for $3.50 Announcements, etc., engraved and printed. Latest styles, best quality, sent prepaid anywhere. Visiting Cards, 100 50c; with case 75c. Write for samples.

The Estabrook Press, 27 Head Bldg., Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

PATENTS that PROTECT Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps. R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

"NO BURN" WIRE KETTLE BOTTOM Rapid Seller. Agents make $3 to $5 per day. Write for large catalogue and free sample offer. Richardson Mfg. Co., Dept. 6, Bath, N.Y.

LECTURES ON THE APOCALYPSE. Best Commentary on Revelation. 3 vols. cloth $2.50 postpaid. C. C. COOK, 150 Nassau Street, New York City

"ASTRONOMY AND BIBLE COURSE": Cloth Book, $1 Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa.

PROMINENT MEN OF THE HOUR

President Nichols

Bjornstjerne Bjornson

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE, one of America's most famous institutions of learning, has chosen for its new president Professor Ernest Fox Nichols, head of the department of experimental physics at Columbia. Professor Nichols will be one of the youngest of college presidents, since he is but forty years old.

Professor Fox is a Western man. He was born in Leavenworth, Kan.

Chefket Pasha

He attended first the Kansas Agricultural College, and then went to Cornell University to take more advanced work. From this institution he received the degree of Master of Science. For five years he studied abroad, at Berlin and Cambridge, and then returned to Cornell, where he was made a Fellow in Physics. Colgate University called him to the chair of physics and astronomy. He held this post until 1898, when Dartmouth College called him to be professor of physics. In 1903 he came to Columbia. Many honors have come to him as the result of his scientific discoveries. Cornell and Dartmouth both made him a Doctor of Science. He received the premium from the American Society of Arts and Sciences for his original work on radiation. In 1904 he received the Rumford Medal.

Professor Nichols has made many important discoveries in the measurement of heat waves, and also measured the heat radiation of the planets Saturn and Jupiter. He has found time, in the midst of his studies, to prepare many articles for American and foreign scientific magazines. Dartmouth will not fail to be progressive and to expand its activities under the leadership of this brilliant student and investigator. The college has been growing rapidly in late years, and its site and handsome buildings make it one of the colleges of which the Eastern States are so justly proud.

. . .

The world of letters has been seriously concerned at the repeated reports of the ill-health of the great Norwegian poet, Bjornstjerne Bjornson. His writings have been translated into so many tongues that he long ago ceased to be the author of one nation alone, but has secured a place among those happy writers whose fame is not confined by artificial geographical limits. He has, until recently at least, been actively at work with his pen, which has kept him in the public eye for over forty years.

. . .

The portrait of Marshal Mahmoud Chefket Pasha, printed on this page, is the latest authentic photograph of the famous Turkish general. The marshal received his military training in the German army, as did a number of the other officers who led the army of the Young Turks in their march on Constantinople.

A QUESTION TOUCHING MANY HEARTS

EDITOR CHRISTIAN HERALD.
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly give your opinion as to the teaching of Holy Scripture concerning the state of the soul immediately after death? I cannot suppose, of course, that you know to a certainty, but would very much appreciate your personal opinion on the matter; and by favoring me with an answer in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD you will greatly oblige an old subscriber who is Respectfully yours,

S. J. D., Jacksonville, Ore.

The above is one of many dozens of letters of a similar nature that constantly reach this office, but the subject is too profound to be disposed of in a single paragraph. Perhaps no other question has so absorbed, puzzled and baffled the human mind since the beginning of time as this vital question, "What lies beyond the grave?"

. . .

Volumes have been written on the theme, but we know of no book so comprehensive, logical, simple and satisfying as the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters' great work, AFTER DEATH—WHAT? which not only reviews the whole subject at length, but quotes the greatest Writers, Preachers, Poets, Philosophers and Sages of all ages who have discussed the eternal question of the future life. The book at least tells us all that can be known this side of eternity, and is at once wholesome, comforting and uplifting.

. . .

"What Is Heaven and How to Reach It," "Occupations in Heaven," "The State of the Soul Between Death and the Resurrection" and "What the Heavenly Rest Means" are chapters which reveal not only the penetrating, scholarly mind of a profound thinker, but the touch of a master hand. The chapter "Our Children in Heaven" can never be forgotten by any father or mother whose heart goes out to some little one who has passed before.

AFTER DEATH—WHAT? 400 pages, bound in delicate violet cloth, gold stamped, $1.00, postage prepaid. Address CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEP'T, 92 Bible House, New York.

ANCE—Prejudice, of Common Sense make drudgery of housework. WOMEN WITH BRAINS, know that is the Best Soap—in a convenient, powdered form—and something more. It cleanses without rubbing—simply SOAK and RINSE (boil if you prefer). Avoids the washboard's wear and tear.

Pearline

THE DIRECTIONS ON THE PACKAGE ARE ALWAYS FOLLOWED BY Intelligent Women

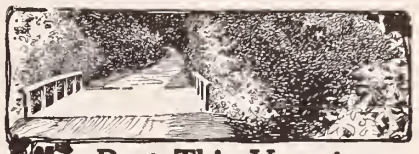
USE IN PLACE OF "FRESH" MILK FOR COOKING.

BORDEN'S PEERLESS BRAND EVAPORATED MILK (UNSWEETENED)

RICHER AND MORE DELICIOUS

THE GREAT NORTH COUNTRY

Nimrod was a mighty hunter, but had he hunted in the "Temagami" region he would have been a mightier one. Nimrod hunted for glory, but Temagamians hunt for game. Those Indians who made the first canoe of birch bark long ago, were our greatest benefactors. The children of these Indians know the canoe, and they know how to use it, and if you go to Temagami this summer they will paddle your canoe in their own superb way. They will be the best guides you ever had. Students who camp in summer along the Temagami lakes are able to do two years' work in one. Finest of fishing and hunting. Good hotel accommodation. Easy of access by the Grand Trunk Railway System. Information and beautiful descriptive publication sent free on application to W. S. Cookson, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.



Rest This Vacation

Come home thoroughly benefited—yet having all the fun and frolics of a delightful summer outing. Arrange now to spend a week or two at

French Lick West Baden Springs

Enjoy your favorite outdoor pastime—and drink the famous waters—noted the world over for their curative powers. It's really a vacation worth while. Situated in Southern Indiana—among the picturesque Cumberland Hills on the

MONON ROUTE

For booklets and other information address FRANK J. REED, Gen. Pass. Agt., or E. P. COCKRELL, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt. 198 Custom House Place, Chicago.

LITTLE BEAUTY NIGHT LAMP

Once filled with kerosene it will burn for 40 hours and is absolutely odorless. Ornamental, too, because handsomely constructed of brass, nickel-plated, and each lamp is provided with enough wick to last several years. The lamp can be used in entries, hallways, closets, and is invaluable for Nursery and Sickroom.

Ask your dealer or by mail (postpaid) 65 cents. Agents wanted. 65c.

SILVER & COMPANY
Sole Manufacturers
320 Hewes St., Brooklyn, N.Y.
Trade-Mark Registered, U. S. Patent Office

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

IT ONLY COSTS one cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1909 model bicycles.

FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Art Catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.

RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We Sell cheaper than any other factory. Tires, Coaster-Brakes, single wheels, parts, repairs and sundries at half usual prices. Do Not Wait; write today for our special offer.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. A-71, CHICAGO

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label. Get "Improved," no tacks required.

Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

Deafness

"The Morley 'Phone"

A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.

Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO., Dept. E, Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

2 IN 1 SHOE POLISH

The only perfect water-proof leather food polish. Doubles the life of leather.

10 cents

At All Dealers

The F. F. Dalley Co. Ltd.
Buffalo, N. Y. Hamilton, Can.

Her "Declaration of Independence"

The Servant Problem changes to Servant Sense and Servant Sunshine in the Home where is known.

SHREDDED WHEAT

A knowledge of its nutritive value and its wide culinary uses emancipates the housewife from "food worry" and kitchen drudgery.

When servants fail and cooks fail, there is Shredded Wheat to lean upon in every emergency. With Shredded Wheat Biscuit and fresh fruits in season a delicious, wholesome and nourishing meal can be prepared in a few minutes by the housekeeper without culinary knowledge or experience—nothing to do but heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness; then cover with berries or other fruits and pour over them milk or cream and sweeten to suit the taste.

More healthful and more nutritious in Summer than heavy meats or soggy pastries.

Shredded Wheat is made of the choicest selected white wheat that grows, in the cleanest, finest, most hygienic food factory in the world.

ALL THE MEAT OF THE GOLDEN WHEAT

THE SHREDDED WHEAT COMPANY

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, July 7, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 27. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

From a Tableau in the Great Church Pageant, London

See Page 574

King James I. Receiving the First Copy of the Newly Translated Bible, 1611

The Federal Government and State Prohibition

"Christian Herald" Readers Express Their Views on the Invasion of Prohibition Territory by the Liquor Interest Under Federal Protection

IN a recent number, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, apropos of an issue raised by Hon. William Jennings Bryan, which is at the present moment an overshadowing topic in a number of States, invited its readers to express their views on the following question:

Is the Federal Government justified in issuing Federal licenses for the sale of liquor in a State where it has been prohibited by statute?

The letters received in response to our invitation show a clear comprehension of this great question, which affects many millions of our population. A number of the letters are given below:

A New Law by Congress Needed

I am very much interested in the question you raise as to the injury done by granting Federal licenses for the sale of liquor in prohibition territory. Mr. Bryan is by no means the first able man to question the legality of so doing; in fact, a bill, I believe, was introduced into the last Congress aimed at the present system of allowing the national government to nullify the laws of a State or of a community by sanctioning a thing which has locally been prohibited.

If the national government is right in claiming jurisdiction as regards the sale of intoxicating liquors, then the local veto may as well be done away with, for the present system breeds lawbreakers and encourages anarchy.

I reside in a manufacturing city of 2,000 inhabitants, the President's summer capital, and never in its history has it voted "license," nor has it ever been near the danger line. Nevertheless, some sixteen Federal licenses are taken out by restaurants, clubs, hotels, grocers and secret societies, that they may sell liquor and yet escape the clutches of Uncle Sam's revenue men, who are keener on the scent than local officers. Then, again, there is a big difference in the penalties.

The possession of a Federal permit is prima facie evidence that liquor selling is taking place, and with the sanction of the national government, notwithstanding that the expressed will of the people is for local veto. The government cannot say, with Pilate, "I wash my hands; I am innocent of the blood;" for no matter how faulty may be local law enforcement, upon the government rests the responsibility of nullifying local laws.

May I suggest to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that the friends of temperance should be the last to advance "unconstitutionality" when a pressing need is before us, and especially when championed by men of intelligence. We have a tribunal that will pass upon such a question if properly raised. The interstate commerce regulations on the transportation of liquor would have received a tremendous setback last year had not some Senators made themselves pro tem. justices of the Supreme Court, and in place of what was asked for reported the emasculated interstate measure that was finally passed.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has proven itself a great public benefactor in the years gone by. It will do a tremendous service to nine prohibition States, and thousands of towns and cities where local prohibition prevails, if it can secure the passage of a bill that will compel the government to recognize the principle that it cannot license an evil in communities where it is locally prohibited.

WILLARD O. WYLIE,
N.G.Sec. International Order of Good Templars.
Beverly, Mass.

. . .

A State's Laws Must be Recognized

In Section 4, Article 4, of the United States Constitution, we find: "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion," etc.

Again, Article 10 of the amendments of the Constitution declares that: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

If a State Legislature, under a republican form of government, enacts prohibitory laws in response to the expressed wish of the people of the State, it would only be exercising its legal and legitimate prerogative, and any attempt on the part of Congress or any other body to ignore or set at naught such laws would be an invasion of the rights guaranteed to such States by the organic law.

JONATHAN WOOLSEY.
Hankinson, N. D.

. . .

Federal and State Governments Should Co-operate

Our friends proceed upon a mistaken notion in demanding the non-payment of this tax and the non-issuance of special tax receipt. They seem to think it is a license. That language has, unfortunately, been used, and upon one occasion in a decision by the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, the language is not justified either by the statute (see Section 3243 of the Internal Revenue Laws) or by the explicit language printed in red ink across the face of the tax receipt itself. Section 3243 reads as follows:

"The payment of any tax imposed by the Internal Revenue Laws for carrying on any trade or business shall not be held to exempt any person from any penalty or punishment provided by the laws of any State for carrying on the same within such State, or in any manner to authorize the commencement or continuance of such trade or business contrary to the laws of such State, or in places prohibited by municipal law; nor shall the payment of any such tax be held to prohibit any State from placing a duty or tax on the same trade or business for State or other purposes."

These provisions have been upheld time and time again, as will be seen by reference to the license tax cases, 5 Wallace, 462; Pervear v. Commonwealth, 5th Wallace, 475; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S., 461.

It is purely a revenue proposition on the part of the Federal Government. It simply says that every one engaging in the retail liquor business shall pay a $25 tax to the United States Government. This is all there is to it, and I do not think it reasonable to ask that the Federal Government, so long as the regulation and control of the liquor traffic is primarily a matter belonging to the police powers of the several States, should pass a law upon the one hand making it impossible for collectors of internal revenue to issue this special tax receipt to a retail liquor dealer living in prohibition territory and at the same time enforce another law which requires a man to possess this internal revenue tax receipt, which the other law renders impossible to issue.

Three years ago we passed what was known as the Humphries-Gallinger Bill, which requires collectors of internal revenue to furnish certified lists of those paying the internal revenue tax to the proper officers of States and counties on demand. Under this arrangement the United States Government, by the issuance of these tax receipts, facilitates the prosecution of "blind tigers" and "speak-easies" in prohibition territory by helping to furnish evidence against them when they have paid the internal revenue tax. If this is prevented, one means of detection is taken away from the State, and many of our States are violently opposed to the repeal of this special tax law. It authorizes no one to sell, and is no bar to prosecution of violators of State or local law, as has been seen.

But there is a clear, explicit decision by the Internal Revenue Department on that very matter. Treasury Decision, 1899, No. 21,851, found in Vol. 2, is as follows:

"Persons who engage in the sale of alcoholic liquor, even if such a business is a violation of the law of their State, are nevertheless required to pay special tax under the Internal Revenue Laws of the United States. The stamp, however, issued to them is not a license, and does not protect them from prosecution, conviction and sentence under the State law."

What is needed to get the best results under present conditions is the passage by each State of a law making the payment of the tax and the possession of the special internal revenue receipt prima facie evidence of the intention to violate the local or State prohibitory law. Our temperance friends in the various localities over the country have a right to expect all needful co-operation from the Federal Government, so that the enforcement of local legislation will not be hampered by national law; but, on the other hand, they must not get into the habit of imagining that local laws can be successfully enforced and this question completely solved by redress from Washington.

EDWIN C. DINWIDDIE.
Superintendent, International Order of Good Templars.
Washington, D. C.

. . .

The State Can Protect Itself

You speak of the anomalous conditions mentioned by the Hon. William Jennings Bryan in the Commoner, wherein he points out the fact that the Federal Government is to-day issuing licenses in territory where the local government has prohibited the sale, and claims that this is a disregard of State and local law and sentiment.

Allow me to say that the Federal Government does not grant any license or give any right or authority to sell liquor in any State or Territory where it has been prohibited by statute. The Federal Government does, however, collect an excise tax of $25 from every person selling liquor, whether in prohibition territory or otherwise; but it is in no sense a license. It confers no right, power or authority to do or perform any act or business not authorized by the laws of the State.

It follows, therefore, if there is liquor selling in prohibition States, and the person has paid the Federal Government $25 and got his "special tax stamp" posted in a conspicuous place (as he is required by the internal revenue laws), he is still liable to prosecution under the State laws. If this is not done, it is because the people themselves in that locality have not public spirit enough to enforce the laws made to protect them.

O. B. WRIGHT.
Scranton, Pa.

. . .

An Enforceable Law Needed

I cannot see, by the repealing of this Federal tax, how it would remedy the matter, as then the government could no longer take legal cognizance of illegal sales within a State, after it had removed the only foundation it had upon which to act, any more than it could assume the right to take general supervision over all prohibition territory within the States, which right it is generally conceded is outside of constitutional limitations. The only gain I can see in the repeal of this tax would be in relieving the government of the responsibility of aiding in the destruction of its own citizens. This would be planting itself upon higher ground, from which a broader, clearer vision of the whole question would come in view of all the people.

If Mr. Bryan had suggested that Congress pass an enforceable law against the shipment of liquor under interstate commerce laws, into prohibition territory, his suggestion would have been of real value.

The liquor traffic—the common enemy of the human race—is the great question, and it is as great a sin to tolerate or compromise with it by local option or regulation as it is to receive money as a license.

R. G. WEST.
Weatherford, Texas.

. . .

A Southerner's Idea of the Question

Without going into the merits of prohibition I answer "No" to your question: "Is the Federal Government justified in issuing licenses for the sale of liquor where it has been prohibited by statute?"

A majority of voters in the South are theoretically opposed to sumptuary laws and are for the greatest individual freedom. Yet we see one Southern State after another voting for prohibition, either State-wide or in many local divisions—counties, cities or precincts—and prohibition sentiment is growing. The dominating reason for this is the widespread belief that if our race problem is to be solved rightly intoxicants must be kept from the negroes.

I have been told that fully 90 per cent. of assaults by blacks on white women and children are committed by drunken or drinking negroes, and that in some of the counties of the "black belt" in Mississippi and Alabama where liquor can be had there is practically a state of siege, and white women and girls are afraid to go out of sight of their homes. Such conditions cannot last, and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, which has done so much for foreign charity, would do a good work if it would send a commissioner into the South, and tell its readers and the world what the trouble is and the remedy. I am sure Booker Washington will tell him that what I have said is true.

So much for expediency; now as to the ethics of the matter. Is it right for the general government, in return for a few paltry dollars, to license men to violate the laws? More than 1,200 of such permits have been taken out in Oklahoma, more than 250 in one city of that State. There is no excuse for mob law, but one reason for it is the contempt people are

Continued on page 575

Photo by Paul Thompson

Presentation of Medals of Honor to the Wright Brothers

DAYTON, Ohio, gave itself up to a general rejoicing on June 17 and 18, when public recognition was given to the great achievements of its distinguished sons, the Wright brothers. The ceremonies of the first day began at nine in the morning. For ten minutes every whistle shrieked and every bell was rung. The two brothers were hard at work until the parade started. They were escorted to the reviewing stand by State and regular troops. The procession included floats, showing events in the history of Dayton for the last 113 years. Speeches were made by the public officials, thanking them for the honor they had brought to Dayton. The next day there was the presentation by General Allen of the medals given by Congress.

NEW YORK, JULY 7, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

Typical Chinese of Mott Street, New York

White Visitors in a Chinese Restaurant

SHOULD OUR WOMEN TEACH CHINESE?

By HELEN F. CLARK

*Missionary Superintendent, New York

THE case of Leon Ling, the New York Chinaman, accused of the murder of the young American girl, Elsie Sigel, who was supposed to have been his Sunday School teacher, has stirred up the whole country. It has brought acutely before the American people the question whether, in view of the startling developments of this case, the present system under which our white women act as teachers in the Chinese Sunday Schools should not be abandoned.

What is the Chinese Sunday School?

When the Chinese first came to the Pacific Coast an effort was made to evangelize and uplift them. It was made by our great denominational home missionary societies, and the work was done by men specially prepared for difficult frontier mission work. In some instances foreign missionaries were called back from China to inaugurate the work, and the methods they used were those found by fifty years of experience to be the most successful in China. Preaching stations were opened, where these specially prepared American clergymen preached to the Chinese in the Chinese language. Schools for adults, and later for children, were opened, on the plan of the public school system of America, with graded classes, and these classes were taught by other appointed, salaried missionaries, trained for the purpose. As pupils in the public schools are taught in classes of from thirty to sixty or more, so these Chinese were taught in large classes, one teacher handling several grades in a single evening. While one class recited another studied, exactly as is done in thousands of district schools throughout the land to-day.

These missions on the Western coast were a success. Their converts stood the test of time and sharp opposition from their own race. As the Chinese spread East, the desire for their evangelization sprang up in the hearts of people here. But the denominational societies did not take the lead in the work, thus stamping the societies' methods upon them, as they had done in the West, although some of them eventually supported the work here. It was for a time neglected, when women took it up, though men worked with them. In the beginning the women were noble workers, and there is no question that much good was done. Many of the Chinese became sincere Christians, and are living clean lives to-day. And during all the years that have followed since, notwithstanding the unfortunate system which has since characterized the work, there have unquestionably been many genuine conversions among the scholars of the Chinese schools. Some of these converts are successful missionaries to-day, both in this country and in China. But inexperience led these early founders to mistakes that have since proved fatal to the very end they sought, that is, the general spiritual uplift of the Chinese in the East. As there were no clergymen or missionaries in the East who spoke the Chinese language, it was impossible to communicate the Gospel to the people in their own tongue. Therefore they resorted to the expedient of teaching English to the Chinese. Not being trained teachers these women did not know how to organize a school or to properly teach it. Partly from their own inefficiency, partly from the great difficulty of teaching a language to a foreigner who imperfectly reads his own language, or does not read it at all, but more from sheer heedless lack of regard for logical consequences, the "single scholar" system took the place in the East of the sane class system of the West.

In the Heart of Chinatown, New York

Soon there was the spectacle of ladies—and they were ladies—meeting in a hired hall, or some Sunday School room, or side-room of a church, each sitting down beside one Chinese man from one to two hours each Sunday, teaching him to read the English-Chinese primer, and returning to teach the same scholar week after week for long periods of time. It is surprising that the impropriety of the thing did not dawn upon these good people—for they were good people—in the beginning, and that they did not stop to think to what such a course might ultimately lead. But evidently they neither thought nor saw.

What was the effect of this sort of procedure upon the Chinese? To understand it we must go back to the customs of China and the environment from which these men sprang.

The status of woman in China is exceedingly low. She is supposed to be but a high type of animal, without intellect and without soul. She is bought in marriage, and in the case of concubines, for the Chinese are polygamous, she may even be sold after

Continued on page 582

* Miss Clark is founder of the Foreigners' Mission, now the Helen F. Clark Mission, at No. 195 Worth Street. She has had many years' experience in mission work among the Chinese, but has never believed in the system under which a white woman teacher is assigned to each Chinaman.

THE
American Pulpit
A Sermon by
Rev. Hugh Black, D.D.*

GOD'S LOVING KINDNESS

TEXT: Ps. 31:21—"Blessed be the Lord; for he hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness in a strong city." (R. V.)

THIS psalm is the review of a life, a hard and sad one on the whole, yet throughout sustained by sincere faith and reaching through present distress to peace through the assurance of God. It begins with faith based on experience and prayer built on recollection of past grace. He knows he has submitted his heart to God and bent his life to God's will. And because of that he knows he has been supported and strengthened and led out of dangers and distresses. "Into thine hand I commend my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, thou God of truth." More than once as life narrowed down and the outlook had been straitened he has been delivered, and his judgment of the past is, "Thou hast set my feet in a large place."

The Test of Faith and Courage

But in spite of the experience of past mercy, he feels that the present is more grievous than anything before. In a sense, the past only makes the present more severe. The sunshine of God's favor on which he has been meditating only casts into deeper shadow his distressful state. He is suffering so much pain of body and pain of heart, and with all, pain of sense of sin. "My life is spent with sorrow and my years with sighing. My strength faileth because of mine iniquity and my bones are wasted away." He has tasted the bitterness of slander, the defaming of many, and the enmity even of men who seek his life. Yet he does not let go faith, but feels sure that his times are in God's hand, until at last he is led out under clearer skies. If the danger is not past, at least he enjoys a deeper peace, the assurance of spiritual comfort and strength. He learns that all things work together for good to them that love God, and can say, in the midst of all his trouble, with soaring faith, "O how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee!"

What can man do to him in the covert of God's presence? In haste, or rather in fear, what Keble calls "in my wild, hurrying heart," he had said, "I am cut off from before thine eyes," but now he looks back in surprise at his want of faith. And he can close the psalm with a joyful exhortation to all God's people to deeper faith and higher courage and truer love. "O love the Lord, all ye his saints. The Lord preserveth the faithful. Be strong and let your heart take courage, all ye that hope in the Lord." This is the note that faith ends on. It sees enough to know the need and the reason for waiting. When faith weakens a man can say, "I am cast out of Thy sight." But when faith regains her hold he knows that it was in a moment of faint-heartedness, in haste, in his wild hurrying heart he said it, when patience had broken down and he had ceased to wait upon God. So long as faith holds, courage holds. The great inspiring spiritual lesson of the whole psalm is the lesson of self-surrender into the hand of God. This was made possible and easy to the psalmist because his experience in the dark hour had taught him something, had given him new insight. "He hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness."

The Awakening of the Soul

When we read of some of the straits through which psalmists and prophets and saints of old came, when we feel the throb of anguish in lines like this psalm, even when we remember times in the history of the Church when the most pathetic and terrible of psalms could be applied to the actual situation, when the same persecution and distress, the same despising and defaming of men were the lot of the righteous, we are ashamed of our petty troubles and sorrows. We feel sometimes as if these psalms did not quite fit our case. They are too clamant, with too strident a note, and their pictures are too lurid. We can hardly apply the exact situation to ourselves. It is true that many a time we can say, "Have mercy, for I am in trouble." Sooner or later, it is true, grief comes to us and seldom can a life pass without somewhere the sting of pain; in times of conviction and repentance and awakening of soul we can even say, "My strength faileth because of mine iniquity," but we can hardly make the whole picture our own. It may be that our lot has been cast in pleasanter places, as we certainly spend our days in more peaceful scenes, so that the music is too constantly in a minor key. But yet the difference is only in degree, and we can surely enter with sympathy into the case of this man of God, speaking for himself or for his country, or for both, and we can learn the lesson of his faith.

One thing we learn, which helps our partial explanation of the great mystery of pain and sorrow, is that through these there can come a new insight into life and into the purpose of God. It was through his sad experience that the psalmist had been shown much that formerly he had not completely realized. Sorrow rightly used does give insight, not only insight into itself, but insight into other things, into life and religion. In one of his letters, speaking of what pain has taught him, R. L. Stevenson says, "The rich fox-hunting squire speaks with one voice and the sick man of letters with another." There is a simple, easy optimism of the untroubled life, which sounds hollow to the man who knows and which is intensely irritating. Till we have been driven beneath the surface we do not know of what we are capable, both of good and of evil, and we have false views of the world and of life. There are many things a man is shown when the surface calm is ruffled. The song of the old harper in Goethe's Wilhelm Meister moved the listening Wilhelm powerfully:

> Who never ate his bread in sorrow,
> Who never spent the darksome hours
> Weeping and watching for the morrow,
> He knows you not, ye gloomy powers.

The heartsick, plaintive sound of the lament pierced deep into the soul of the hearer. The avenues of his heart were opened so that old feelings were awakened in him and new claims of sympathy roused. There are depths which are disclosed only to those who have paid the price. All others are mere outsiders till they have been initiated into that region of deeper knowledge and deeper feeling.

The Value of Pain and Disappointment

It is the way to ultimate peace; for there is no permanent satisfaction in the mere surface life. There are men and women seemingly with everything the heart can wish, and yet the salt is out of their life. Life is full of interests and amusements, they are always doing something and going somewhere, but never do they find rest. They have never been awed by the thought that life is a sacred and solemn mystery. The voice of the rich fox-hunting squire may be very bright and pleasant, and it is sometimes good to hear the cheerful sound of that type; but it never touches chords of deep feeling like such words as those of the old harper.

The insight that comes through pain and disappointment may be insight into the value of what we have. We learn to see not merely the many compensations, but also to see the great good in present blessings. It is often the happy and prosperous man who talks loudly and largely over the misery of others and makes large judgments on the injustice of the world and on the mystery of suffering. The man who, like the psalmist, has tasted for himself the bitter cup has often been shown something which he thinks even worth the price. The outsider's partial observation leads to many a shallow judgment, whereas the man who has himself been through the experience can see something which makes him even thankful that he now knows. It may be merely a sort of joy in the struggle, a recognition that he has been counted worth some discipline, a joy in knowing that strength is being added to character through the strain.

It may be a new joy in what is left, learning how precious some unregarded things really are. We often do not value things until we have tasted the dread of losing them. We accept health and peace, and love and service as a matter of course, and for the first time we learn how precious are these gifts when they seem taken from us. What revelations have come to men at sickbeds and deathbeds! They never really saw what the best things in life are until then. In a flash of recognition they were shown some of the depths of life, the pathos and mystery and tragedy; and if love has been given back to them from the brink of the grave, they know ever after how good it was that they should have looked into the pit. Some answers are received to many a question when suffering has been the schoolmaster. The world has been richer to a man ever since. Sorrow has brought out truth as the night brings out stars.

This may seem merely that we become content with less, that because the sun has ceased to shine we are grateful that the gloom of night should be enlightened by any star. Even that is worth something—to learn true contentment. But there is more in it than this, more than just cutting our coat according to our cloth and becoming more easily satisfied. There is a new and real value given to things which before were unregarded. This illuminating power of sorrow has chiefly to do with the fundamental basis of life, getting deeper to the true sources of life, and all who have gone through this school can add their own illustration to the fact. This psalmist's experience might seem a wild tale of imagination, a dramatic posing, to the man who had never been beneath the surface, but its essential truth is known to the man who also has been shown something. Luther said that he could not understand many of the psalms till he had been afflicted. Intellectual appreciation came with spiritual insight, and the spiritual insight was partly the fruit of sympathy born of a similar experience. Rutherford declared that he had found a new Bible through the furnace. He had had the Bible before, but it became precious to him in a new way. For one thing, the sense of need creates the insight.

The Marvel of God's Loving Kindness

But above all, it is insight into God's love and will which the psalmist received. "Blessed be the Lord," he could say, "for he hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness in a strong city." He had tasted of sorrow, and for that he could be grateful; for it had been the occasion of his tasting of love. We hold things as commonplace, knowing them only on the outside, until our eyes are sharpened to see. We do not see the marvel of God's loving kindness and perhaps take it as a matter of course. So it often needs a sharp lesson to drive us deep. We need to be blinded with seeing tears until we see. We need to be shown, and how are we to be shown unless we learn by experience? We find that the men of insight are always the men who have themselves graduated in this school. The fruitful lives are the lives into which the ploughshare has cut deep. Rutherford said: "I never knew by my nine years' preaching so much of Christ's love as he hath taught me in Aberdeen by six months' imprisonment." He could say, "He hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness." He had put it to the proof and had found new insight through his own pain.

In our dull eyes and shallow hearts there seems nothing marvelous in God's love. The story of it does not touch us. Even the Passion of the Cross is as a tale that is told. We cannot speak of it as love so amazing, for the wonder has not kindled in our soul; but when we know our sense of need and are driven to it in weakness and helplessness we get new insight and can say, "He hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness." And when we do, it was worth everything we have suffered, worth any price to learn that, the price of all earthly joy. For the tragedy is that a man should go to the grave untouched by the pathos of life, unmoved by its mysteries, never once awakened to the great facts in words we use so lightly—sin, repentance, sacrifice, forgiveness, love—having never once been broken by the Passion of the Cross.

The Lesson of the Psalm

The lesson of the psalm, which is the lesson of all similar experience to that of the psalmist, is the lesson of self-surrender into God's hand. As life gets narrower, make it deeper. As the outgoings of life seem cut off, enrich the sources from within. If the enmity of men be your portion, love God only the more passionately and devotedly. If weakness comes, only be stronger in faith and let your heart gather courage. As sorrow, or sickness, or age brings detachment from earthly things, only cling more tenaciously to spiritual things. Pray for the insight into the will of God, which sees it to be love, however high be the price to be paid for the prayer's answer; for it is worth anything to be able to say at the last, "Blessed be the Lord, for he hath shewed me his marvelous loving kindness in a strong city."

*By the Rev. Hugh Black, D.D., Professor of Union Theological Seminary, New York.

SUMMER EVANGELISM IN NEW YORK

THE work of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City has already begun. The first out-of-door meetings of this fifth season of the Tent, Open-air and Shop Gospel Campaign were held on Wall Street. It was on Flag Day, and the street was gay with the Stars and Stripes flying from nearly every building. Hundreds of men united in repeating the Lord's Prayer, as they halted during the noon hour of the bright summer day.

The Rev. Nelson Page Dame, rector of St. Paul's Church, Ossining-on-Hudson, has been selected to conduct the Wall Street noon meetings this season. Mr. Dame is by birth and education a Southern man. A graduate of the University of Virginia and the Theological Seminary at Alexandria, he has served as general missioner of the Parochial Mission Society of the United States. He organized and carried on for several years a most successful and unique rescue mission work while stationed at Winchester, Va. For the past five years he has been at Ossining, N. Y. Crowds of listeners have attended the Wall Street meetings and a spirit of earnest, respectful attention characterizes the work.

Other noon-day meetings are held on Broadway, in the shadow of Grace Church, on a corner lot included in the parish grounds, where a pulpit is erected especially for these services. The Rev. Alden L. Bennett, of Stamford, Conn., is in charge of this new centre, right in the midst of the traffic and turmoil of Broadway.

Quite a different class of persons attend the meetings at Jane and West Streets, where sailors from nearly every part of the globe are liable to be found in the crowd that gathers to hear the Gospel message. It is said that there are always in port at least 5,000 sailors on the west side of the city, and work among these seamen is to be an important feature of the campaign this season.

Tents are springing up in various localities, and a wonderful union of Christian workers in the several communities is noted. In one of the tents the pastors of four neighboring churches—Baptist, Reformed, Congregational and Episcopalian—are carrying on the services, under the direction of the Evangelistic Committee.

Gospel Meeting for Children of the West Side of New York

Of the millions of immigrants who reach our shores it is estimated that 78 per cent. come through the port of New York. Many of this number remain in New York City. These people must be Americanized and evangelized, for the sake of our own land and its revered institutions, as well as for the sake of their own souls, now darkened by superstitions, ignorance and lawlessness. Is it possible to reach and save these classes by means of evangelistic effort? At a meeting held on a recent morning, a young Italian was introduced to the conference assembled, who was two years ago leader of "the gang" in his neighborhood, and who emptied a bucket of water over the soloist at one of the first tent meetings. To-day he is a Christian, and this summer he will help in the very tent where he first went to scoff and to riot.

There are in New York City nearly 400,000 young people of school age, with no Sunday School connection. The temptations of city life are stronger for these young people in the summer time, as shown by the records of the Children's Court. To bring the Gospel message to the boys and girls who roam the streets, to show them higher and purer ideals of life and love, is not the least important part of the work undertaken by the Evangelistic Committee.

"As we cannot send all the children of New York to Mont-Lawn, we must bring the spirit of Mont-Lawn to the children of the tenements, as far as possible," says the superintendent, the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Smith. "I shall never forget the day I spent last summer at Mont-Lawn with Dr. Klopsch. The green grass, the sunny skies, the hundreds of happy children, all were delightful. The part that impressed me most, however, was the personal sympathy and inspiration that existed between Dr. Klopsch and his assistants and the fortunate children who were enjoying the blessings of such association. That is what we desire to bring to the children who gather in our tents —personal love and helpfulness, 'wooing them from the streets and winning them to Christ.' "

The extent of the committee's work depends entirely upon the contributions of the public, as no collections are taken in any of the meetings. Mr. John S. Huyler is treasurer.

THE CALVIN CELEBRATION AT GENEVA

DURING the first ten days of July the ancient city of Geneva, in Switzerland, which is said to "have left a deeper mark on history than any other town of its size," will celebrate the anniversary of the birth of John Calvin, the great reformer, whose name and fame have been so linked with that of the town which he made one of the centres of Protestantism.

Calvin was born in the episcopal city of Noyon, in France, about fifty-eight miles northeast of Paris, but the greater part of his life was spent in exile from the intolerance of his native land, and it is doubtful if many of the French people who now dwell under the spire of the Romanesque Cathedral of Noyon know that one of the most famous men of French blood was a native of the place. The house in which he was born still stands, an object of interest to the American visitors who penetrate to this quiet corner of sunny France. Hardly in history can we find another example of a man so completely identifying himself with a city on foreign soil that the people who came afterward could not think of one without the other, as did Calvin with Geneva.

It is not known at this writing that Noyon will observe in any way the 10th of July, the four hundredth anniversay of the day on which Calvin was born, but in Geneva elaborate preparations have been made and visitors from all over the Old World, and hundreds from the New, will gather to do his memory honor.

The celebration will last a week. July 6 is devoted to laying the cornerstone of the international monument to the Reformation. This massive memorial will take a most unusual yet appropriate form. At the time of the Reformation the little independent city lay practically encompassed by hostile States; every citizen was at call a soldier, ready to defend his own fireside and the principles for which his much-loved city stood. The city fortifications were considered inadequate to the dangers which threatened after the city had become the centre of Calvinism, and the reformers, students in the schools and university, the professors and citizens, worked with their own hands on a new wall, defended at intervals with towers and bastions. This wall, unfortunately, was removed during the last century. On part of its site the new Reformation Monument will be built. It will be a copy of a part of the old wall. The statues of famous reformers, especially those who for a time dwelt within its shelter, will flank the monument and numerous inscriptions will decorate its surface.

The Protestant Church of Geneva will have special services in honor of Calvin, who for twenty years preached from its pulpit and gave a definite stamp to its character. In this church reformers from other lands sat under him as a teacher. Calvin's chair is still kept in the Church of St. Pierre. It is quaintly carved; quite wide in front, but tapering to a high and narrow back. The high-canopied pulpit, from which he thundered the expositions of his theology, stands in another church, not far distant. It will be used by a number of distinguished speakers during the memorial services.

From a Contemporaneous Painting

John Calvin Preaching

The University of Geneva, whose foundations were laid by Calvin in 1559, when the reformer was just forty, will celebrate its three hundred and fiftieth anniversary. Invitations have been issued to other famous institutions to send representatives to the exercises.

Calvin, already a reformer of note in France, was called from Basle to Geneva to make it his permanent home in July, 1536. That city had in a comparatively short time already taken steps toward establishing a Reformed Church. Calvin moulded it into its historic form. The city had driven out its bishop and assumed authority as an independent church. Its council passed stringent laws governing the moral conduct of its citizens and ordering those not of the Genevan Church to leave its walls.

Step by step Calvin's power in the city grew. Articles proposed by him, outlining the government of the city, were accepted. The inhabitants were tested as to their creed, all becoming members of the Genevan Church. The discipline of the church was aided by the government. He desired to make Geneva what he considered a model Christian community. Later, there was a schism on the question of the Eucharist and he had to leave, but in 1541 he returned at the request of the inhabitants, and his system of church discipline, called the consistory, was established. Practically Calvin ruled the city and its district from 1541 until his death, in 1564, governing largely through influence and not from holding an executive office. His time was largely given to developing his distinctive system of theology, preaching, teaching in the university and in writing. Calvin showed in his will that his ideas on predestination, which we of the present day think of as one of the main points of his teaching, were carried farther by his successors than he would have approved. He speaks of "the blood which my sovereign Redeemer has shed for the sins of the human race"—not for any one sect or for a spiritual elect.

Calvinism has been fiercely attacked in recent years, but the Christian Church owes much to this fearless, God-fearing man, and does well to honor his memory in the city he made famous and loved so well.

AVENGING THE ARMENIAN MASSACRES

"YOUNG Turkey," as Europe now denominates the Mohammedan reform element which has come into power, is energetically prosecuting the investigation of the recent massacres in Asia Minor. A correspondent writes: "The Young Turks have announced their intention of carrying out summary executions on the authors and chief abettors of the massacres at Adana and in the neighborhood, and they will undoubtedly do so. Whatever may have started the trouble at Adana, the soil was well prepared beforehand, for Abdul Hamid was undoubtedly privy to the plans of the Moslems, and the authorities did little or nothing to stop or suppress the excesses."

The Ruined Armenian Quarter of Adana, as It Now Appears

Describing the present condition of Adana, the same correspondent says: "It is a picturesque city, and was once an important station on the road from Tarsus to Issus. The city is a busy hive of commerce—cotton manufactories and bazaars—and outside there lies a rich and lovely country, covered just now with fields of waving, ripening wheat, while, as a glorious background, stretches in the distance the snow-clad Taurus range. Now parts of the city are practically devastated, there being whole streets of irregularly built houses partially burned and destroyed, with ugly traces of bloodshed, while in the country round there is many a blackened ruin where was once a house nestling among green trees. There is the greatest distress in the district, and funds are being raised, one by the British residents in Constantinople. This part of Asia Minor is, however, very recuperative, and, under even moderately good government, would be very wealthy. One of the first acts of the new Turkish Ministry was to appoint a Parliamentary Commission of Inquiry and to send funds to relieve the distress in Adana."

* * *

Within the last two weeks a number of arrests have been made of Turkish officials, including several military men, who are accused of inciting the massacres and of actual participation in the disturbances. It is fully expected that many more arrests will follow and that severe punishment will be meted out to those who are found guilty.

Relief work is now going on vigorously at many points, operations being under direction of the committees at Adana, Tarsus and Beirut. Secretary and Treasurer E. G. Freyer, of the Beirut Committee, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

"In the name of our committee, I beg to thank you most heartily for your valuable aid.

"Our committee has received very generous support locally; but you will understand that local subscriptions invariably are for small amounts, and it takes a good many of them to enable a committee to hand over a lump sum when called on for help. A case in point is that of Kessab, to which we are forwarding this week food, medicines, clothing, tools for mechanics and household utensils, the cost of which will exceed $2,000. We feel that a special effort should be made to place tools and implements in the hands of this people that they may become self-supporting. What applies to Kessab holds good in greater measure in Durtyol, Baghche and many other villages.

* * *

Letters enclosing contributions for the Armenian relief work continue to be received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from every State. All contributions should be addressed: Armenian Relief Fund, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York.

KING JAMES AND THE AUTHORIZED BIBLE OF 1611

HISTORIC pageants are becoming more and more popular in Europe. England has just enjoyed a somewhat remarkable one, which took place in the grounds of Fulham Palace, opening on June 10 and lasting nine days. It was known as "The Church Pageant." It presented in about twenty grand tableaux famous scenes in the history of the Church, from the "Alleluya Victory," won by the early Christians over the heathen Picts and Saxons, in 446 A.D., up to the branching out of foreign missions in the eighteenth century.

One scene, which is of more than merely national interest, is reproduced on the cover-page of this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. It is entitled "The Presentation of the Bible to James I., 1611." Probably no scene in the entire pageant possessed so much significance as this for the Christian of to-day. The Bible presented to the monarch was the first completed copy of the famous "Authorized Version," otherwise known as the "King James Version."

Three Figures in the English Historic Pageant

St. George× the Dragon Slayer and an Ancient King and Queen

The preparation of the "Authorized Version" was undertaken by the King's express command. The most learned men in the leading universities were chosen as translators, and their work was reviewed by the bishops, and finally laid before the privy council and ratified by royal authority. The work occupied four years. In 1611 it was printed in Gothic letter and first published in folio, with the title "The Holy Bible. Conteyning the Old Testament and the New; Newly translated out of the Originall Tongues, and with the former Translations dilligently compared and reuised by His Maiestie's Special Comandment. Appointed to be read in Churches." The volume handed to the King was a stately folio, each page being 14¼ inches by 8⅞ inches, exclusive of margin, two columns of type on each page. The text was heavy Old English type and the headlines of each page were in large Roman letters. Each chapter opened with an engraved initial and every book with a still larger initial. None of these embellishments were prepared expressly for this Bible, however; they had all been used in previous editions of other translations. It contained the text and Apocrypha, an "Address to the Reader," a dedication to the King, 34 pages of Bible genealogies and a calendar. There were a few necessary marginal notes, although the King had given orders that none were to be used. A second edition was printed the same year (1611), and others in 1613, 1617, 1634 and 1640, all from the same type.

The presentation of the completed work to the King marked an epoch in Bible translation. For purity of English, ripeness of scholarship, beauty and dignity of diction, it surpassed all previous translations and soon became the standard Bible of the English-speaking world. Many millions of copies of the Authorized Version have been sent to all parts of the world by the different missionary societies here and abroad. It has been translated in whole or in part into almost every known language under the sun, and to-day the Gospels, the New Testament and, in many cases, the Bible entire, may be truthfully said to be known not only in the Christian countries, but in Asia, Africa, South America, the Arctic and the islands of the sea. The American Bible Society, now ninety-two years in existence, has printed and distributed in that period a total of 82,316,323 volumes of the whole or parts of the Scriptures, the field of distribution taking in practically the whole world. Last year it issued 1,895,941 volumes. Other Bible societies in Europe have also done magnificent work in Bible distribution. Outside of the great Bible societies, THE CHRISTIAN HERAD has been one of the largest disseminators of the Gospel. In fifteen years it has distributed over 1,250,000 volumes of the Bible, New Testament and Gospels in our own and many other lands.

* * *

Thus the grand old King James Authorized Version, the "well of English undefiled," which was represented by a single book laid in the monarch's hands in 1611, has been divinely multiplied beyond all calculations or expectations and has spread the message of redeeming love through all the earth.

NEW PROMISED LAND OF THE JEWS

Three Native Lace Workers

A Girl's School in Mardin

Quaint Types of Modern Mesopotamia

MESOPOTAMIA of to-day is, for the most part, the Mesopotamia of the Middle Ages. The centuries have come and gone, generations of men have moved their narrow round which makes up life in "Syria of the Plain," and have been gathered to their fathers, leaving no impression on the life of their day. The very costume of the people in the districts outside of the larger towns, we have no reason to believe has been changed since the Turks overran the country in the second decade of the sixteenth century. The women of the country have not worried their heads over changing styles. The men have had little desire to change their methods of living, though missionary influence is being strongly felt and is opening especially the minds of the boys and girls to a desire for better things.

A Native Mother and Her Children

It is probable that the country at one time was much more productive and fertile than at present. At least it was regarded with covetous eyes as a rich country by many conquering races.

For long it was part of the ancient dominion of Babylon. Then came in conquering waves the Medes, the Persians and the invincible Macedonian phalanx. The Romans then took the "Plain," then the Persians came back, and the Romans surrendered it. The Arab chiefs thought it looked attractive, and followed up their inclination for its possession with the sword. Then the followers of the Star and Crescent appeared, and they have possessed the land to this day. Now there is a prospect that it may become the new land of promise for the Jews.

Over its wide expanse at present wander bands of Arabs and Kurds, whose only concession to the age has been to adapted rifles, when they were obtainable, and old-fashioned flint-locks when they were not. With long lances in their hands, pistols stuck in their belts and a curved scimeter, which might have moved in defiance against the hosts of the Cross in days gone by, the nomads seem to the traveler from America to have suddenly appeared from the dim and distant past, legendary characters of the Arabian Nights. These weapons are not carried as mere matters of dress, the upkeeping of ancient traditions, as is the case in some parts of the East. They are used, and frequently. There is many a foray and skirmish, of which the world at large hears nothing.

It is hoped, now that such a great change has taken place in the government of Turkey, that conditions in this part of Syria will gradually improve.

The land takes an added interest to Bible students since a large number of the most prominent Zionists are making arrangements for the establishment of large Jewish colonies, to which, it is expected, the Jews in Russia and Roumania especially will flock in large numbers, as they will be free to conduct their own affairs as they choose, the general government, however, retaining its sovereign rights over the district assigned to the Hebrew colonists. The Turks have always shown a disposition to treat the Jews fairly.

Mesopotamia has large areas of fertile ground in its fifty-five thousand two hundred square miles, which could be made to support a large population. Modern methods of agriculture are absolutely unknown, but if the progressive Jewish farmers were supplied with the latest American farming implements, the results would certainly be equal to any attained in some of the newly-opened regions of our own Southwest.

A large part of the land which has been tentatively offered to the Zionists is not well watered, and extensive irrigation canals will be a necessity. The first cost of this would reach the somewhat startling figure of $40,000,000. Nevertheless, it is thought that the money will be forthcoming if it is planned to go on with the project. Other districts could be given over to the raising of sheep.

The city in the old Mesopotamia district in which our readers have probably the greatest interest, is that of Mardin. During the dark days which followed the earthquake, funds sent through this paper did much to relieve the suffering of the people.

The Mardin Club, whose secretary and treasurer is Miss Virginia T. Wells, of Hanover, N. H., is working actively to support the industrial work for boys and girls, started two years ago by the missionaries in Mardin, at the time of the failure of the wheat crop. The articles made by the boys can be sold there, but the lace work and other articles made by the girls has to be sent out of the country to find a market. The Mardin Club sells these articles for the benefit of these young Syrian Christians, to help them continue their training under missionary auspices. They are sold through the secretary. The unmarried girls are anxious to become self-supporting and eager for a better life. Miss Wells will gladly give information to any one interested in this most worthy Christian work.

The Federal Government and State Prohibition

Continued from page 570

apt to have for the laws when they see our great and strong central government issuing permits to lawless men to violate the State and local laws.

I am sure there is a great and good work for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD if it will examine this question, take sides, as it will, with law and order, and teach the country its duty. Will you undertake it? JOHN MARTIN.

Paris, Texas.

• • •

A Wrong that Should be Righted

A year ago we outlawed the saloon by a majority of 147 votes, and for one year we have had a "Law Enforcement League," that has paid out about $1,500 to detectives for finding evidence against such as violate our laws. In every instance of conviction the convicted has held a government license, hence has been protected against proceedings of the Federal Government. Having been a member of the "Law Enforcement League" for all this time, I consider it very much to the detriment of our township and I fail to see it in any other light than that the government becomes a partner of the lawbreaker.

I trust THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will assist in changing this wrong. C. J. WESTENBERG.

Rockford, Ill.

• • •

From a Lawyer's Point of View

It seems that the misunderstanding comes from a misconception of the provinces of the State and Federal Governments touching the liquor traffic. Banv. Law Dictionary defines a license to be an "authority to do some act or carry on some trade or business in its nature lawful, but prohibited by statute except with the permission of the civil authority, or which would otherwise be unlawful." A license upon trade or business can only be justified on one of two grounds: either it is a tax upon the occupation, or else it is a police regulation. In the former case, the legality of the exaction depends upon its compliance with constitutional limitations upon the power of taxation, while in the latter its warrant rests upon the prevention of threatened evil. While the imposition of a license on a trade or business can only be justified on one or the other of these grounds, it is often that it can be justified on both. Such is the case when a State imposes a license on the liquor traffic. States have a right to impose a license on this traffic to raise a tax, and further, the States have the right and authority under their police power to regulate or prohibit the liquor traffic. This right of the States to regulate or prohibit has often been tested in the Supreme Court of the United States and has been universally upheld by that court. On the other hand, the United States Government has no right emanating from the police power except in the District of Columbia and Territories, and in places under direct Federal control, to impose a license on the liquor traffic. Its only right is to impose a license to raise a tax.

The question is, therefore, has the United States a right to tax a business within the limits of a State, when the laws of the State prohibit the business? This question has to be answered in the affirmative, for the United States license only puts the holder of it at peace with the revenue officers of the United States and leaves him to make his own peace with the State authorities, if peace can be made with them at all.

It can be further said that the United States never assists the States in enforcing their laws; and since a United States license neither confers rights on the holder nor abridges the rights of the States, there is no conflict between Federal license and State prohibition.

Gloucester C. H., Va. C. S. SMITH.

• • •

Takes Mr. Bryan's View

I take the view Mr. Bryan does. Our youth should be taught by precept and example, and protected by legal enactments.

Ironaton, Ala. T. W. PAINE.

• • •

The Church and the Liquor Question

Not long ago I heard some one, who I have forgotten and it is immaterial, quoted as having said that "the liquor interest would down the Church if it could and the Church could down the liquor interest if it would." Believing this to be true, I am led to remark that it would be a good thing to keep this fact before the Church and that that could be done if religious, family and other publications would display those words prominently and continuously—the top of every page would not be too much so. C. M. D. BROWNE.

Washington, D. C.

How an Invalid Trusted God

A friend of this journal, Mr. John C. Havemeyer, of Yonkers, N. Y., sends us this extract from a letter which he has received from a poor invalid in a Western State. It furnishes a beautiful illustration of simple trust in God and his protecting care in all our troubles and difficulties:

"From my childhood God has spoken to my heart, and I am impressed to refer to one instance which has meant much to me. It was winter time, more than twelve years ago. I had then been unable to work so long that my wife was taking in washing. We always gave something to the Lord's work. A few more days and it would be Quarterly Meeting, and our good brother called to inquire about our welfare. The only twenty-five cents I had left was in my pocket, and I owed this to a neighbor, which I expected to pay. Under these conditions God spoke and said, 'Give me this.' A little thing! But can you wonder that I thought of wife and children and my obligation? How glad I am I did not stop to reason longer, for I would have missed the blessing if I had. When I offered the money, the good man refused to take it; said we ought not to deprive ourselves of it. But I gave it to him and he departed. In a short time I picked up my crutches and hobbled out, when the first one to see was the neighbor I owed, and how my heart was lightened when the first thing he said was, 'You needn't think any more about that quarter, we'll call that paid.' That was God's way. So when we follow where he leads we are always safe."

Appreciates the Flags

Dear Christian Herald: The flag and pictures of our Presidents came all right, the flag arriving on "flag day." It is not necessary to say that it floated proudly for the rest of that day from our home. We sincerely thank you for these grand remembrances. We are glad to belong to THE HERALD family.

JAMES M. PADDOCK.

Pontiac, Ill.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

A Dangerous System

THE sad fate of a young girl, who had been a mission worker on the East Side of New York and who met her death at the hands of Chinamen whom she had been teaching, has aroused an immense amount of public comment throughout the country. It has placed on trial what is known as the "single scholar" system, under which every Chinaman has a woman teacher—a system which has been growing up during the last twenty years and which is now discovered to be fraught with danger to our American women. Some of the developments in this case are of a character so startling that they would seem to justify the popular demand for the substitution of men for women teachers in Sunday School and mission work among the Chinese hereafter.

In support of the demand for a radical change, involving the abolition of the "single scholar" system, these reasons are given:

1. It needlessly exposes our American women and girls to a danger which has never been rightly understood before, and which it is asserted has already resulted in blighting many young lives;
2. It establishes a too familiar relationship, and lowers the dignity of American womanhood in Chinese eyes;
3. Its spiritual results are comparatively nil, as far as genuine conversions are concerned;
4. It degrades the whole missionary work and affects it injuriously.

There are other weighty objections to the "single scholar" system, and these are very clearly stated in the article by the superintendent of a well-known Chinese Mission in New York, which appears elsewhere in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. It is a system which is shown to lead to indulgence in frivolities and flirtations; to the unwise acceptance of presents, sometimes very costly ones; to clandestine meetings and the establishment of relationships that are the inevitable forerunners of still more serious trouble. In a word, it is claimed that it is a system which discredits the women teachers, the Church organizations, the missions and the whole religion of Jesus Christ.

Of course, the system, which has now been in existence for nearly twenty years, is not without its ardent defenders, who claim that there is nothing in the recent tragedy that affords a justifiable basis for condemning the "single scholar" plan, as the victim was not a Sunday School or mission worker accredited to any denomination. They point to the fact that in New York and vicinity there are some thirty Chinese Sunday Schools, averaging twenty teachers each, principally women. A few metropolitan churches have discontinued their Chinese Sunday School classes, but the others still maintain them with undiminished activity. Men cannot be found to do this special work, they claim, so it is chiefly in the hands of the women, who perform it faithfully and patiently, and the results have been many real conversions. All the pastors and superintendents interested unite in saying that the women's work is done wholly in the classroom or mission and that personal efforts, outside visits to the Chinese and the cultivation of closer acquaintanceship are firmly discouraged. It is not denied that there have been intermarriages of Chinese and white teachers; but the work, as a whole, has been creditable and free from imputation of dishonor. Such, in brief, is the defense of the system.

It is undeniable, however, that among the officials of our leading missionary boards and among pastors who have come in contact with the Chinese work, the consensus of opinion is very properly that in mission work among the Chinese in New York and other cities, men should be employed in preference to women. If members of the latter sex engage in it, they should not do so until they have passed middle age. Girls in their early twenties are too impressionable and inexperienced to enlist in such service.

It is to be hoped that a radical change may immediately take place, as regards mission work among our Oriental immigrants. They are not distinguished for purity, and they misinterpret the motives of young women, whose only impulse is that of the divinest charity. There are Christian laymen in abundance who are enlisting in crusades against evil and pledging themselves to evangelical work. They are competent to undertake the education of Chinamen who cannot speak our language; and if they have the true spirit of the foreign missionary, they will not labor in vain.

In next week's issue we shall present an array of authoritative opinions on the subject from prominent men and women engaged in various fields of Christian activity, and whose views must carry weight and influence in the final disposition of this momentous question.

The Midsummer Hot Spell

AFTER a comparatively cool spring, the cities of the Eastern States were plunged into the heat of summer during the last half of June, greatly to the chagrin of the amateur weather prophets, who had boldly declared that the climate was changing. Summer can be seen at its worst in New York City, where hundreds of thousands are huddled together in apartment houses where, under the best of conditions, there is insufficient circulation of air. The sun beats down all day between the high brick walls until the city seems to be literally "under fire," and it is an attack by nature, against which the city dweller has no adequate defense. For several days the thermometer ranged around 90, and even higher, and the prostrations from heat filled large spaces in the columns of the city press. It is during the hot wave that all those who can get away pack the outgoing trains and fill the coastwise steamers to their rails. To one who can go there are a hundred who must stay and fight it out with nature. The city on the worst nights allowed the people to sleep in the parks or along the docks.

More and more is there a demand for open spaces and playgrounds for those who must remain in town, not placed at haphazard, but arranged according to a general plan in a way that all congested districts may have their regular breathing places.

The fairly well-to-do can make living in summer in the towns and cities bearable by using ordinary precautions. The idea that one can eat meat and heavy foods in warm weather has probably caused more illness than the sun itself. Light food, temperance in all things, and a mind under control and not given to fretting or to outbreaks of temper are the best kind of summer insurance.

Liquor in Prohibition States

THAT deep and widespread interest is felt in the complicated issue recently raised by Mr. Bryan concerning the moral and constitutional right of the Federal Government to issue excise tax receipts, which are in a sense equivalent to licenses, in States where the sale of liquor has been prohibited by statute, is evident from the number of very able letters THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received on the subject. A portion of this correspondence is printed on another page. The writers discuss the peculiar situation in a way that shows them to be familiar with the main points. Mr. Bryan's contention is that the excise tax constitutes a license, and that the government thus becomes a partner in assisting others to violate the laws in prohibition States. On the other hand, it is claimed with equal force that the excise tax stamp or receipt is not a license and that the person selling liquor by virtue of possessing such stamp or receipt is liable to prosecution under State laws. This complicates the question and would seem to furnish a sufficient reason for legislation by Congress to meet the needs of the occasion.

There still remains the question of constitutionality. This has been briefly discussed by Mr. Woolsey, one of our correspondents; but it is a complex problem, which would seem to demand elucidation from some high, authoritative source. As the law now stands, the Federal Government may be wholly within its rights. If it can be clearly shown that there has been any infringement of the constitutional rights of the States, then the question is open to remedial legislation by Congress.

The End of the Episode

WE have heard no expressions of surprise over the action of the Chicago Baptists in dropping the name of Professor Foster, of the University of Chicago, from the conference rolls. This, of course, does not affect the professor's standing in the church or the university. It was inevitable, however, as we pointed out some time ago, that there should have been some such action when the case came up for discussion. Professor Foster has been one of the most prominent offenders against modern orthodoxy. His published writings, no less than his teachings, have stirred up discussion not only in the Baptist denomination, but among the churches generally. Fortunately there is no disposition in any quarter to dignify his theories by a trial for heresy. It is well that such a thing is out of the question in these progressive times. We know of no church that goes heresy hunting nowadays. The modern tendency is not to make martyrs of those who may differ with the recognized orthodox views of the churches, but simply to release them from their pledges and let them go their own way, where they can stand in the open and make their battle on a free and independent field.

We have no criticism to make concerning this particular case, which has just been adjudicated in Chicago, further than to say that it was what might have been expected to happen to any one who had "dashed off in thirty days" a book which settled out of hand the momentous questions that affect man's life here and hereafter, including the most sacred convictions, that have been the means of spiritual life and blessing to countless millions since God first sent his message into the world.

"If the Worm Should Turn——"

AN interesting development in the suffrage movement is the pledge said to have been drawn up and signed by a number of young women in New York, binding themselves not to accept as husbands men who do not favor woman suffrage. This, no doubt, will prove quite distressing to some of the sterner sex. Right here, however, an interested reader inquires: "What if the worm should turn? What if the men take a sudden notion not to propose or become engaged to any young woman who is known as either a suffragist or suffragette?" Well, the ultimatum would probably make a tremendous social sensation—for a week. It would then be promptly forgotten.

GENERAL NOTES

— DR. ANDREA, a German excavator in Babylonia and Assyria, has made several important discoveries lately. The temple of Assur, the national god, has been unearthed, also the double temple of Anu, the god of heaven, and Adad, the thunder-god. The latter is the Babylonian Jove and is depicted on his statues with a golden thunderbolt in his hand. A New Year's feast-house said to have been built by Sennacherib was found, and beneath it were the remains of a still older edifice. These discoveries were all made under the great mounds of Kileh Shergat, which mark the ruins of Assyria's oldest royal capital city. Dr. Andrea's work is financed by the German Emperor and many of his "finds" will probably enrich the great collection in the Berlin Museum.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 7, 1909

	PAGE
King James Receiving the Translated Bible	Cover
Federal Government and State Prohibition	570, 575
Medals of Honor to the Wright Brothers (Illustrated)	570
Should Our Women Teach Chinese? (Illustrated) By Helen F. Clark	571, 582
God's Loving Kindness. Sermon By Rev. Hugh Black, D.D.	572
Summer Evangelism in New York (Illustrated)	573
The Calvin Celebration at Geneva (Portrait)	573
King James and the Bible (Portrait)	574
Avenging the Armenian Massacres (Illustrated)	574
New Promised Land of the Jews (Illustrated)	575
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	576
Washington Gospel Mission Celebrates (Illustrated)	577
Tombs of the Patriarchs (Illustrated)	577
Talks on the Shady Veranda (Illustrated)	580
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	581
England's Christian Chancellor (Portrait)	582
"Search the Scriptures" (Illustrated) Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	583
The Story of Marco Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter	584, 585
Young People's Societies	586
Paul at Thessalonica. By Mrs. M. Baxter	587
A Fortune Hid in His Bible	587

Washington's Gospel Mission Celebrates

THE third anniversary of the organization of the Gospel Mission, Washington, D. C., was celebrated lately by three simultaneous services in different halls in the nation's capital. The Mission, which is located at 1230 Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest, was founded by a number of Rescue Mission workers. On the opening night seven persons knelt at the altar, seeking peace and pardon. From that night forward a continuous revival has been in progress, "inquirers" being present at nearly every service and many persons publicly confessing Christ.

In addition to the regular services in the Mission Hall every night and on Sunday afternoons, two Gospel wagon meetings are held on Sunday evenings; street meetings every night when the weather and talent permit; many meetings between 10 P.M. and 12 midnight in the "red light" section, and a number of cottage prayer meetings. All of these have been wonderfully blessed and have produced remarkable results.

A lodging-house is conducted on the two floors above the Mission Hall, where homeless men find a shelter and resting place. Those who have money are charged 10 cents for a clean, comfortable cot, while every night some are provided absolutely free.

One of the most interesting services is the "Free Sunday Night Supper Service," held at 7 o'clock Sunday evenings during the winter, and attended by as many as 150 men at a time. Many cases of rescue from a sinful life are traceable to these services. One case was that of an educated minister of the Gospel who had fallen upon evil ways and was separated from home and family, an outcast, feeling helpless, hopeless and abandoned. He wandered into the Sunday service for supper, and heard the Gospel; his heart was stirred and within a week he was on the road to spiritual reformation and had secured employment.

The expenses of the Mission amount to about $100 per month, and this amount has been provided by the generosity of the workers and friends The greatest need of the work is a suitable building, with an auditorium which will seat five hundred men.

S. M. Craft, Secretary

H. D. Gordon, Treasurer

Geo. W. Wheeler, Chairman

Washington is a hard place for a man out of work. The classes who appeal to the Mission are old men, whose working days are over; a few immigrants from Northern Europe; sick men, who are barely able to walk about; peddlers, and the hungry and homeless. Then there are the criminal classes and the drunkard, who has lost his grip, family and place in society. The Mission managers have seen some of every class mentioned redeemed, placed back in society, among the producing power of the nation.

During the period from January, 1908, to April, 1909, the work of the Mission showed the following: Attendance, 29,353; requests for prayer, 1,432; seekers, 639; conversions reported 58; number of services held, 444. From January to April, attendance at Gospel Mission, 5,447; requests for prayer, 352; seekers, 125; conversions, 55; meetings held, 125. Probably 3,000 received meals. During the year employment was found for probably 300 men.

The Washington Gospel Mission is supported entirely by voluntary subscriptions. Its officers are George W. Wheeler, chairman executive committee; S. M. Craft, secretary, and H. D. Gordon, treasurer.

"Our Gospel wagon services," said Chairman Wheeler, "which opened the first Sunday in May, have been unusually successful in attracting large audiences and the exercises have apparently produced deep conviction, many kneeling on the streets for prayer and giving other evidences of a profound purpose to live a Christian life."

A Gospel Wagon Service in a Washington Street

Woman and the Suffrage

My Dear Christian Herald: In reply to your inquiry I will say that, if a choice must be made among the many "great things" which should be achieved as soon as possible by the government, mine would be the equipment of woman with the privilege of the vote, equally with men.

This because it is right, and it is not prudent for the State to longer permit it to be a question for vociferous argument. ROSE ELIZABETH CLEVELAND.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPHS EVER TAKEN OF THE TOMBS OF THE PATRIARCHS

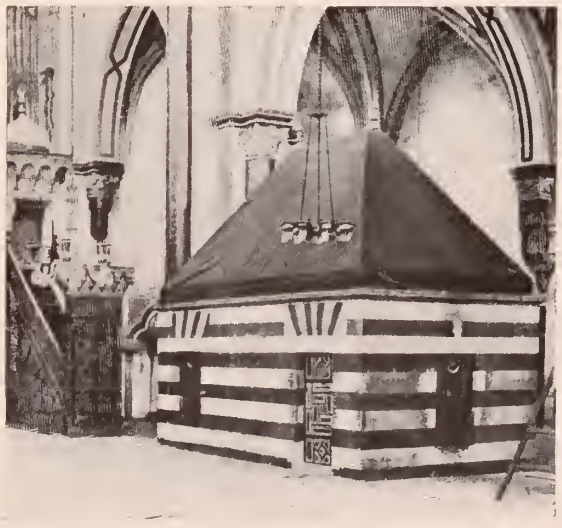
FOR the first time, says the London Sphere, photographs have been secured, by permission, of the cenotaphs above the tombs of the Biblical patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, inside the Haram at Hebron, Palestine, the "cave of Machpelah," purchased, according to the Scripture narrative, by Abraham, to be a family sepulchre forever. The haram, or enclosure, is held in high veneration by the Moslems and hitherto has been secluded carefully from "profanation" by visitors from Western countries. A notable exception was made in the case of Edward VII., who was permitted to enter the precincts when he visited Palestine as a young man.

The cave lies under the Crusaders' Church, in which the cenotaphs have been erected. The church was built in the twelfth century and is kept in repair by the natives. Their cenotaphs are supposed to be erected directly over the graves of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and their wives, Sarah, Rebecca and Leah. They are covered with silk hangings, richly embroidered, with inscriptions in silver and gold, and have cloths hung as canopies above them. Manuscript copies of the Koran are placed around them.

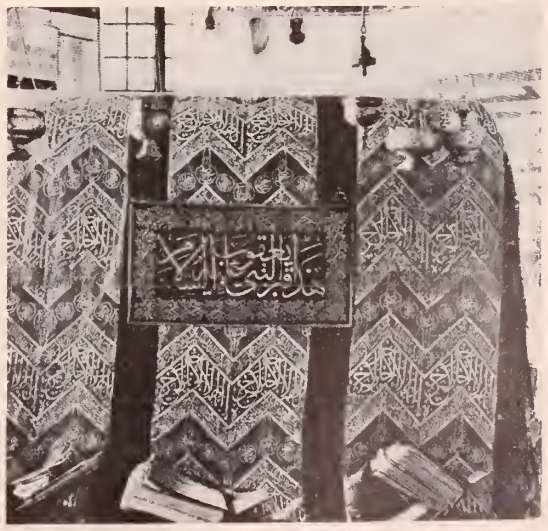
The coverings of the women's cenotaphs are red, those of the men green, the sacred color of Islam. The only entrances to the cave which are known to exist are never opened, and could be reached only by breaking up the flags of the flooring, a proceeding which would be regarded as desecration by the Moslem custodians.

Benjamin of Tudela, who visited Hebron in 1163, claims to have entered the cave and seen the actual tombs under the cenotaphs; but the known entrances have long ago been closed. He wrote: "If a Jew gives an additional fee to the doorkeeper of the cave, an iron door which dates from the time of our forefathers opens, and the visitor descends with a lighted candle. He crosses two empty caves and in the third sees six tombs, on which the names of the three patriarchs and their wives are inscribed."

The Tomb of Abraham



Tomb of Isaac



Tomb of Jacob

COST NEARLY $250,000 TO PR

ILLUSTRATED H

Fifteen Massive Volumes

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT, AND AFTER LON with one of the leading publishing houses in the country our readers a limited number of sets of that Foremost Historica History of All Nations, by Israel Smith Clare, reviewed and en fessors of History in American Universities and Colleges, and oth

This colossal work, with recent contributions and revisions brings the history of the world right down to date, including ev the past year, and is unquestionably the Greatest Achievement in the Whole Range of Historic Literature.

Not only is the Illustrated History of All Nations a comprehensive and complete record of the history of mankind, but the whole narrative is invested with a human interest that makes the story of the world and its peoples, its immortal heroes, its great men and famous women, far more absorbing than any work of fiction.

Never for even a moment does the fascinating narrative lapse into a dry, prosaic recital of facts, but every volume tingles with full-blooded life as the ever changing panorama unfolds before us, engrossing, fascinating, captivating from first chapter to last.

EXHAUSTIVE INDEX—SPECIAL FEATURES

The masterly editorial direction of the work, the scholarly contributions from distinguished essayists, and the mechanical perfection of each volume, have everywhere assigned this Magnificent Library of World-Wide History to first place in the libraries of prominent statesmen; and scholars nowhere find such a vivid presentation of the leading facts and factors that have shaped the histories of all the nations.

INDEX—No more complete system of indexing has ever been devised. Each volume contains its table of contents. Every chapter is then, for greater convenience, subdivided into sections, and the contents of each section is indicated by a subhead in large type. To further summarize the text, a brief memorandum of each paragraph is printed on the wide margin of every page. Finally, in the last volume is the General Index to the complete work. Over 5,000 Large Pages. Nearly 3,000,000 Words.

BINDING—The Fifteen Massive Volumes are very handsomely and substantially bound in a beautiful silk-finish cloth, beautifully stamped in genuine gold, with the lettering in gold on a deep red panel.

THE TYPE is unusually large and very clear, and the paper is heavy, rough-finish stock of beautiful texture. The 338 Exquisite Illustrations are printed on fine coated paper as full-page inserts.

Exact Size of Volume I. All the Others are of Uniform Size with Volume I.

HOW TO GET THE SUPERB "ILLU

PUBLISHER'S PRICE, $40.00

OUR PRICE $20 On Easy Instalments

SEND us Only ONE DOLLAR, and your full name, with shipping instru and immediately we will send you the Whole Fifteen Volumes of The Illustrated History of All Nations, neatly boxed, freight charges payable a end. Then, send us ONE DOLLAR A MONTH for Nineteen Mo

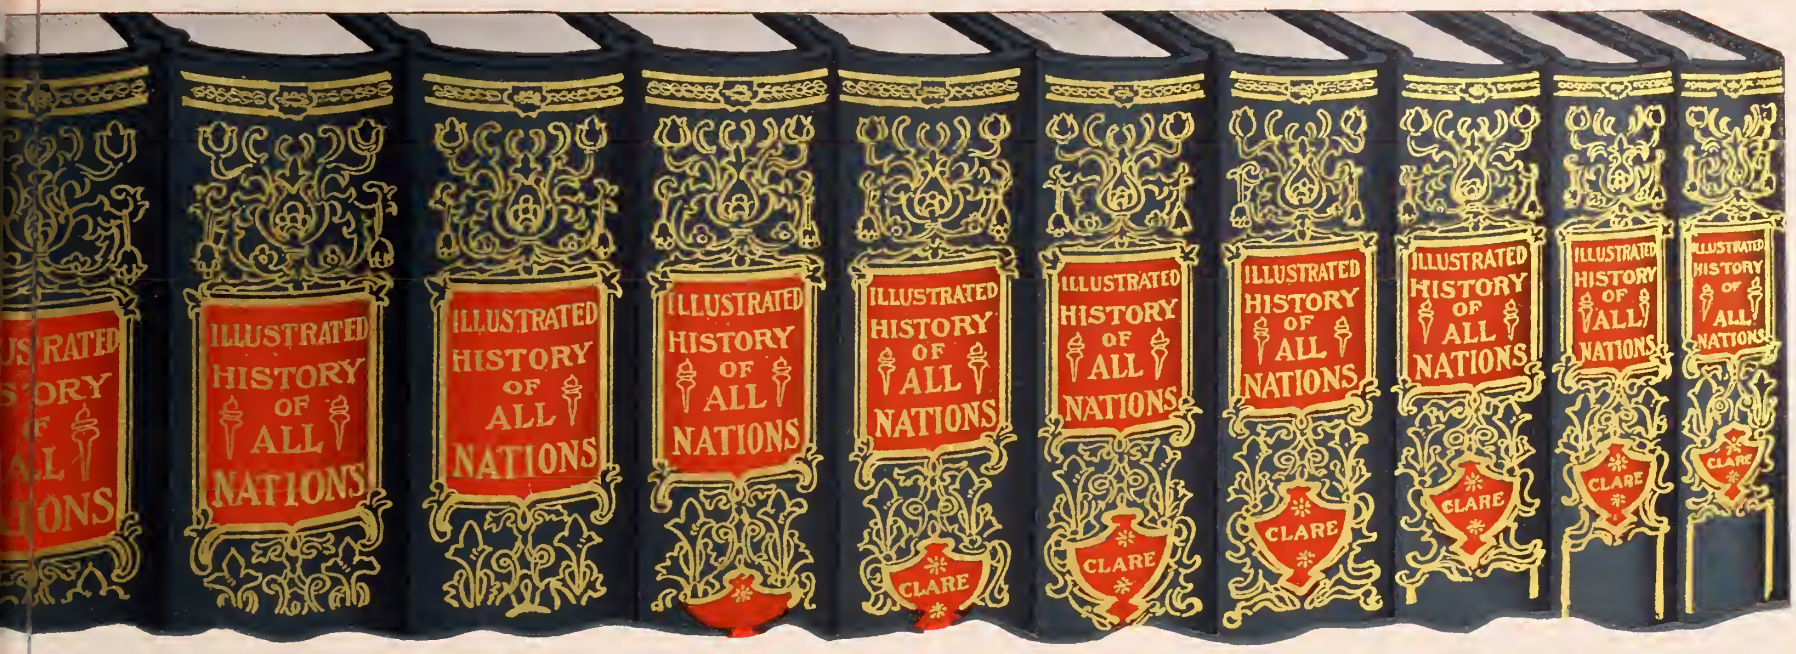
5,000 Large Pages. 64 Colored Maps. 338 Full-Pag

...UCE THIS INCOMPARABLE WORK



...TORY OF ALL NATIONS

...TATIONS
...scured for
...e Illustrated
...Fifteen Pro-
...ntEducators.
...et scholars,
...cat event of

THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS enhance the beauty of this costly edition of the Illustrated History of All Nations—exquisite half-tone engravings, that give life and fresh interest at every turn of the narrative, and make the set easily worth double our present price.

These rare illustrations are reproductions of world-famed paintings by master artists of the world, most of the originals being in the great galleries abroad. It would be impossible to say too much of these superb pictures or to adequately describe their surpassing richness and beauty. Every volume is further enriched by a splendid frontispiece in rich color, which feature alone adds immeasurably to the value of the books.

Superb DeLuxe Edition

In addition to the remarkable illustrations throughout the work, Sixty-four Finely Engraved Colored Maps, historical, political and geographical, are added to the many special features of this matchless edition. These maps—many of which were specially draughted for the work—make the leading facts of history doubly clear, and are invaluable to the student. The Illustrated History of All Nations has the Imprint and Endorsement of The Christian Herald.

...NPOLEON AND QUEEN LOUISE AT TILSIT
...es Thrilling History Wonderfully Told in this Great Work

FOR BUSY PEOPLE—YOUNG AND OLD

The Illustrated History of All Nations strikes that rare point, "a happy medium"; it is neither too brief nor too lengthy. It is the history of all others for the busy man or woman who has not the necessary time or means for exhaustive research, but who would be well-informed and at ease with persons of scholarly culture.

Young men and women, boys and girls who cannot have the advantages of a college education: the Illustrated History of All Nations broadens your horizon, gives you a comprehensive knowledge of the civil, social, intellectual and moral development of mankind in all ages, widens your opportunities, and enables you to discuss intelligently the affairs of your own and other days.

From the countless glowing testimonials received from distinguished statesmen and prominent writers who enthusiastically endorse this great history, we have space for only the following:

WALLACE RADCLIFFE, D.D., Washington, D. C.: "The history of religion is succinctly and fairly given; the style is compact, clear and graphic; the illustrations are superb."

RICHARD HEATH DANBY, A.M., Ph.D., Professor of History, University of Virginia: "Southern readers will be gratified at the impartial spirit in which the war for Southern independence is treated."

REV. W. C. BITTING, D.D., New York: "Every parent should put this work within the reach of his children."

...RATED HISTORY OF ALL NATIONS"

...HESE payments are so easy that you will never miss them, and while you are paying ...for the books you are enjoying the advantages of this work. Remember, $1 Down ...ures the Set. As a further inducement, Ten Per Cent. Discount for Cash ...ffered, making the price $18 if Paid by Cash Accompanying Order.

...ons. Set Measures 28x10 Inches. Weighs 60 Pounds

ADDRESS
CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT.
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY
Remember, this Edition is Limited—Order To-day!

TALKS ON THE SHADY VERANDA

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

A Mother's Complaint

"WHAT would I give," said the mother of two beautiful little boys, aged five and three, "if I could afford to give them the pleasures that are so freely bestowed upon rich children! We are poor, and all we can do is to clothe and feed our family and keep a roof over our heads. I cannot buy little carts and express wagons, mechanical toys and such things for my darlings. Sometimes I feel bitterly the contrast between my circumstances and those of my wealthier neighbors whose little ones have toys in abundance and are stinted in nothing that is for their advantage. I see before John and myself a long, weary road stretching into a dreary future. We have four children; the girls are older than the boys and are attending school. I cannot dress them as their schoolmates are dressed. I am sure that they would be more considered by their teacher if their clothing was less plain."

The mother who wrote in this discouraged strain was no doubt tired after a long day's work. The day may have been hot and humid, and she may have been worn out with toil at the ironing-board, making fresh and tidy the frocks that her little girls wear to school. Those little girls, by the way, will never be treated with disfavor by a teacher on account of the dresses that they wear to school. Their sweet faces, good manners and readiness to learn are recommendations that far surpass mere dress in the eyes of a teacher. As for the little fellows of five and three, although their mother may be reluctant to believe it, they are quite as happy with home-made toys as they would be with the most expensive playthings that are procured in the shops. A cart may be made by an inventive child with a pasteboard box and a string; a kite and a top cost little, and almost any parent can afford to give his little sons a rubber ball. The boys playing together do not need many toys. The simpler the life of children, the happier they are. From such homes as this mother describes have come into American life the strongest and best of the citizens. Our greatest men, our most successful women have known poverty in childhood. If this mother has ever read the story of Abraham Lincoln's early years, or has heard the brave life of Louisa M. Alcott described, she may as well stop worrying about the future of her sons and daughters. When we drift into the low mood we are not able to see the good times that are waiting for us a little farther on. Who knows what surprises of good fortune may before very long be the portion of this household? There are millionaires in this country of ours whose sadly broken homes and wrecked happiness are the very opposite of the beautiful union that prevails in many a home of narrow means. Father and mother and a group of children, mutual confidence, a common aim, trust in God, work to do, what does it matter if there must be planning, contriving and rigid economy?

A SEWING BEE

THESE thrifty matrons are busy at work dear to every woman's heart. They are sewing the long white seams that have something to do with bridal linen and future housekeeping. The bride's mother began long ago to make ready the linen chest, but now that the maiden must soon leave her home, the mother and the mother's friends are busy in her behalf. Although we cannot see the bride herself, the picture tells its own pleasant story.

The Harvesting of Learning

With the return of summer we reach the annual harvesting of the school. A great number of liberally educated young people, having finished their college curriculum, are looking forward to life in earnest. In this busy world a place is waiting for every earnest toiler. The young doctors, lawyers and civil engineers who step to the front have won their right to enter their chosen profession by strenuous application, and all they lack is experience. This, however, they will soon obtain. The young people just graduated have had the benefit of the most skilled and scientific instruction, and they start on their careers well equipped, ardent and ambitious. Some of them may have a period of patient waiting before they become self-supporting. Others may be compelled to face disappointment and may have a tough time in wrestling with unkind fate. Nevertheless, the old word of the wisest of men still remains appropriate to the conditions of the modern day: "Seest thou a man diligent in business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."

Those of us who have borne the heat and burden of many a working hour, who have known strife and conquest and occasional defeat as well, look with affectionate interest on the young who are pressing forward, and with all our hearts we wish them god-speed.

A Question for the Housekeeper

A MAN turned his latchkey in his front door the other evening, and announced his return from business by a cherry "Hello!" to the household. "Take care where you step, dear," cried his wife. "The rugs have just been beaten and the floor oiled, and as usual you have forgotten to wipe your feet. Here, let me take your hat. Don't throw it on the table, and please don't let the baby touch your coat. Her fingers may be sticky."

By the time this greeting was ended something of the cheer had gone from the man's face. He was of an impulsive disposition, and had never been able to reach his wife's ideal of faultless tidiness. He was much like another man who looked up deprecatingly after his wife had crossed the room and straightened a book that he had laid on the table in a rather haphazard fashion, "I used to fancy myself a neat sort of fellow, but Edith manages to make a chap feel like crawling into a very small hole. I never feel easy in our parlor. I am always putting something out of place, upsetting a vase or disarranging a drapery, and, on the whole, I am better outdoors than in." Both these good men suffered from the extreme nicety of wifely housekeeping.

It would not hurt some excellent matrons to ask themselves occasionally whether the house exists for the family or the family for the house. An immaculate home may be maintained by most women if they are not continually on the watch against a temporary untidiness. A clever story was once written about a housekeeper who spent a large portion of her time in setting her home in apple-pie order and who then thought it much too good to live in, and compelled her family to eat in the cellar.

Life is too short and has too many doors into other service to be exhausted in continual sweeping, scrubbing and scouring. There must, of course, be a radical weekly cleansing in houses where a standard of daintiness prevails, but it may be carried forward a room or a floor at a time without upsetting the peace of the entire house.

The woman who is wholly domestic may waken some morning to discover that she has ceased to be her husband's comrade, and that while he honors and cherishes her he no longer consults her on subjects beyond her province of home management. Imperceptibly, the man to whom she was once all in all has learned to live in some portions of his being in independence of her influence. The children, who are growing up so fast, may naturally regard their mother as a person entirely satisfied with the affairs of the kitchen and may outrun her in the race, partly through their wider education and partly through the fact that she never takes time for amusement or study, beyond her own doors. The too strenuous housekeeper should call a halt.

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

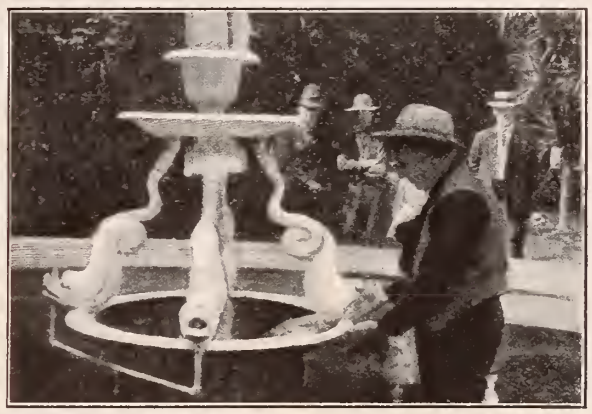
An Intelligent Fish

CHARLES G. RILEY, of Fountain Park, San José, Calif., has trained a fish, which is to have a part in a public exhibition. It took seven years for the trainer to teach his finny pupil his tricks. It was one of the duties of Mr. Riley to remove this fish every Saturday from the fountain in the park to clean out the basin. In a short while, when the water began to get low, the fish would come to his keeper and allow himself to be handled. He was given the name of Abe Ruef, and taught to answer to the call of a whistle and also to his name. His next feat was to take worms from his keeper's hand and allow himself to be stroked like a cat or dog. He then developed the trick of jumping out of the tank into his trainer's hands. Mr. Riley took him to his own home, built a special tank for him and taught him to go over and under a stick, to go through two or three hoops, to swim backwards, to come to the surface and kiss his master, and to swim under and jump over a bridge at his command. Abe is now learning to ring a bell by pulling a string. When he shall have gotten expert at this feat, he is to go on the stage. The fish measures thirteen inches long, and is a splendid specimen to behold.

Nature study is becoming more and more popular with scholars and with the common people. That study has revealed almost an infinite variety of beauties and characteristics; the knowledge manifested by the lower tribes seems more marvelous, revealing the infinite wisdom of the Creator. All these grades of intelligence, illustrated in the story of the trained fish, lead up to man, the highest expression of earthly intelligence and the one akin to God in his nature. In the story of the creation, after making mention of the fish that swim the deep, the birds that fly in air and the beasts and creeping things that tenant the earth, the inspired writer records, "and God saw that it was good," and then he speaks of the climax of creation in the making of man, who is to have dominion over these creatures.

The Trained Fish Kissing Its Master

Coming at Its Keeper's Call in the Fountain



Mr. Riley and His Trained Fish

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. (Gen. 1 : 26.)

Thief Caught in a Clever Way

A woman was arrested in London recently and a quantity of jewelry, which was in her possession, was seized by the police. She had been under indictment of the Grand Jury of New York County, charged with stealing jewelry from a Fifth Avenue firm. One day in May, a tall, masculine woman, wearing a sombrero hat and a tailor-made suit, went to the store of a silver manufacturing company, claiming that she was Mrs. Margaret B. Stearns, and selected two traveling clocks valued at $50 and a suit-case fitted with silver toilet articles, worth $100, and ordered them sent to the so-called address of Mrs. Stearns. The next day she ordered a gold watch and chain worth $180 and a sealskin writing portfolio worth $115. Two days after, she had sent to the residence other articles worth about $600. While the woman was being waited upon one day a clerk named Taylor, standing by, was struck by the appearance of the customer. She was six feet high, weighed 170 pounds and had light hair and blue eyes. Her broad hat and large shoes emphasized the tall figure, and Taylor made a pencil sketch of her as typifying a suffragist, smoking a cigar and having a card in her pocket bearing the motto, "Vote for Me." Members of the firm became somewhat uneasy two days after the goods were delivered and sent a detective to the house, who learned that the young lady had sailed for Europe. This hasty pencil sketch of the woman by Taylor was sent to London, and with it the police easily identified the thief and found some of the stolen goods in her possession.

There is no end to the devices of those who are bent on securing the property of others without giving an equivalent. There are many who retain their ill-gotten gain without detection; but, in normal conditions, nature and society conspire to discover and punish the thief. There is a natural relationship between the sketch of the woman and her arrest in London.

Be sure your sin will find you out. (Num. 32 : 23.)

"My Soul Is Dead!"

Louis Milgrow, a Russian twenty-two years old, committed suicide on the East Side in New York City recently. The youth had fastened a tube in his mouth, turned on the gas and sank down into his long sleep. His last message to the world was: "My soul is dead, why should my body live?" He came to this country from Russia about a year ago, and found employment as a suspender maker and saved a hundred dollars. This money he sent in a letter to his sweetheart Lekla, in the town of Veegra, a suburb of St. Petersburg. The two belonged to the revolutionary party in Russia, and he had come to this country with the understanding that he should earn the means and bring her to him. His letter with the contents was returned to him, with the information that his seventeen-year-old sweetheart had been banished to Siberia. The terrible disappointment unbalanced his mind and he became a suicide. His sweetheart Lekla will be thinking of him constantly and grieving most because she has been taken away from him, and it may be that she will reach middle life before she shall have heard of the fate of her lover.

Poor fellow! what a mistake he made in killing himself! He ought to have lived and worked for his betrothed, himself and his fellow-men. There was so much work to be done by him in the fields of patriotism and of piety. Furthermore, his love ought to have kindled lamps of hope in him that a larger liberty and tenderer mercy might shorten the banishment of his beloved and bring them together in their native land or under our own free government. The greatest mistake that the young man made was to consider that because his soul was dead his body must necessarily die. His despondency and want of faith in God led him to believe that there is no life for a dead soul in this world. Oh that he could have had a look in the face of Christ and felt the breath of life which he could have communicated to his dead soul! The great lesson of the Scriptures is that the soul is dead in trespasses and in sins, and that Christ came into the world to give it life.

But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ. (Eph. 2 : 4, 5.)

A Sweet Singer Translated

Miss Marianne Hearn (Marianne Farmingham), after fifty years of writing and speaking for her Master, was called to her reward recently at Barmouth, England. Her books of prose and poetry are known throughout Christendom. She had the warmest affection for the young, and devoted her long life largely to the intellectual, moral and religious instruction of young people. No arithmetic can compute her influence for good in her Bible class teaching and in her articles for Sunday School periodicals. In her Consecration Hymn she thus voices the approach of a youth to the Saviour:

'Just as I am," Thine own to be,
Friend of the young, who lovest me;
To consecrate myself to Thee,
O Jesus Christ, I come.

. . .

"Just as I am," young, strong, and free,
To be the best that I can be
For truth and righteousness and Thee,
Lord of my life, I come.

Another stanza of the same hymn expresses the impulse of love which impelled her life:

I would live ever in the light,
I would work ever for the right,
I would serve Thee with all my might,
Therefore to Thee I come.

What a help such a life is to the betterment of men, what a divine inspiration it is to diligent service for the Master in the young and old!

Christ shall be magnified in my body. (Phil. 1 : 20.)

Comet Named After Him

Professor Zaccheus Daniel, the Princeton astronomer, has become famous as a discoverer of comets. In June of 1907 he first found a comet of the round, hazy type in the constellation Pisces, near the planet Saturn. At first no tail was noticeable; later it became visible to a two-inch telescope. The discovery was at the same time confirmed from Paris and from Harvard. The other day Professor Daniel discovered another comet and simultaneously the same was discovered by Mr. Borrelly at Marseilles. On June 22 the director of the Paris Observatory announced to the Academy of Sciences the discovery of the new comet made by the French and American astronomers, and the comet will be designated "Borrelly-Daniel."

Men with their telescopes find here and there a star and give it a name, but there are myriads of worlds lying far beyond the reach of any instrument, made by our heavenly Father, who counted and named them all. The same eye discovers the most secret thought and the same heart provides comfort for the sorrow of his humblest child. The psalmist makes special reference to this fact in the words, "He healeth the broken in heart and bindeth up their wounds," and then continues:

He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names. (Ps. 147 : 4.)

Worcester Continues Dry

Worcester, Mass., is the largest city in the country not in a prohibition State which has banished the saloon by popular vote. About a year ago the whole nation was surprised at Worcester's going dry. The wonder was because it was a city of 125,000 and because as a manufacturing city its population is, in large part, composed of alien immigrants or their immediate descendants, and most people, friend and foe of alcohol, predicted that the saloon would be successful in the contest. After a year of experiment, the citizens voted to prohibit the license to sell intoxicating drinks. The doleful consequences that the liquor dealers prophesied under a prohibition administration were not realized, and the temperance people circulated statistics showing that the city had been greatly benefited by the absence of the dramshop. In the year of no license, arrests were decreased; those for drunkenness from 3,924 to 1,843; for assault and battery, from 382 to 263; for larceny, from 343 to 255; for neglect and non-support, from 112 to 87; for disturbing the peace, from 210 to 109. Deaths from alcoholism were reduced from 30 to 9.

The experience in Worcester dissipates two popular errors: one that the working people favor the saloon and the second that foreigners and people in large cities cannot live without their daily portion of intoxicants. One of the greatest surprises of the modern temperance reform is that so many Germans and other foreigners, and especially of the younger class, in the different sections of the country are voting for no-license.

Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity. (Hab. 2 : 12.)

ENGLAND'S CHRISTIAN CHANCELLOR

ADMITTEDLY the most brilliant of the rising stars in the group of able Liberals now in political power in Great Britain is Mr. Lloyd George. He even eclipses the Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, himself, in the part played in statesmanship. Lloyd George is the foremost of living Welshmen. His versatility is amazing. He is a magnetic, popular orator, constantly delivering, both inside and outside of Parliament, speeches replete with solid information and sparkling with humor and genial satire. As Chancellor of the Exchequer he is the most important member of the government next to the Premier and many regard him as destined to the Premiership. He is the people's favorite orator of the hour. He is a noted lawyer and thus is ever ready in debate. Above all, this remarkable man is a most ardent Christian.

Lloyd George was articled to a lawyer at sixteen, and admitted an attorney at twenty-one. At twenty-seven he was elected a member of Parliament and at forty-three became president of the Board of Trade. He distinguished himself and won the gratitude of the whole nation by the diplomatic skill and the spirit of Christian conciliation he displayed in bringing about the settlement of a long and bitter railway dispute, which for a time threatened to paralyze the whole business of the nation.

Hon. Lloyd George, England's Great Liberal

I was told recently by a minister, who is my own friend, this little story. Said he: "Mr. Lloyd George came to my town lately for a week-end's quiet rest. He walked and talked with me for a time, and after a while my boy met us. Lloyd George left me to talk with another mutual friend who was with us, took hold of my son's arm and led him along. Presently he asked the lad whether he had given his heart to God, and into the boy's soul he poured sweet counsel which led him at once to real decision."

This year, Lloyd George has been elected president of the Baptist Union of Wales. His installation is fixed for October 1, at Treorchy. Every Sunday, while he is in London, he attends a Welsh Baptist chapel in Charing Cross Road. He is now engaged in the great stress and strain of carrying through Parliament his first budget, with party political conflict raging round him. The Tory opposition, especially of the great landlords and big brewers, is virulent, as he proposes to lay heavy taxes on drink licenses, thus seeking in some measure to compensate for the defeat of the great Liberal temperance measure last year by the House of Lords. Mrs. Lloyd George often speaks at religious meetings, both in company with her husband and on occasions when she appears in her own capacity.

WILLIAM DURBAN.

SHOULD OUR WOMEN TEACH CHINESE?

Continued from page 571

marriage. She is kept in confinement. Not until a woman is past middle life may she walk through the streets alone and with bared face. Before that age she must be covered, and shut into a sedan chair if she goes from one place to another. There is absolutely no intermingling of the sexes in social life. All the natural social instincts have been shut down in these men's hearts for thousands of years. A woman knows no men save her immediate relatives. A man knows no women save those of his household. If a man saw a woman of his family on the street, he would not recognize her in the slightest manner. It would be the greatest insult if he did. There is no such bond of love in the marriage union as we know. All expressions of affection, even between relatives, or between women, that another eye might possibly see, are repressed as unbecoming and as something bad in themselves. Only a young child may be caressed in the presence of others.

How, then, does this man feel when he steps down from the steamer into an American city, and suddenly sees women, women, women everywhere, old and young, in every street, in every public conveyance? But worse, women in the company of men, openly talking with men, even giving their hands to men in the common salutation. Every feeling of propriety in this Chinese man's whole being is outraged. He is shocked, deeply shocked. He cannot look at it at first. If he is a good man, it is long before he is even partially accustomed to these sights.

Now put this man into the Chinese Sunday School. He not only sees women, but they speak to him, he feels the touch of the courteous handclasp as they greet him. A woman sits down beside him—beside him alone—and teaches him alone, for an hour or more, and does this Sunday after Sunday. I have watched these men many a time under this experience; men who came straight from the agricultural districts of China, men who knew little of the iniquity of either their own coast cities or of the cities of America. I have seen them so abashed that they could not lift their eyes to a woman's face. I have seen them struggle with embarrassment for many months—I am not exaggerating—before they at last conquered it to some degree. Some did not seem at home or at ease in the schoolroom for three years. But, when the shock of surprise had been lived down, apparently their ideas of women, at least of American women, had suffered a tremendous upheaval, almost a complete reversal. The American woman was superior—very far superior—to themselves in education and general knowledge, and because of this they accorded her the most supreme respect. Their own deportment toward her was absolutely correct. They were deferential, polite, respectful. There was never a word or a look out of the way from the pupil to the teacher.

Had the situation remained thus, there might not have come any great harm from it. But it was not in the nature of things that it should remain so. Other teachers were taken in, among them many young girls.

Now I want to ask: Would American women work for any other nationality in this way? Would they work for Americans in this way? Would any self-respecting community suffer such a method to be used for American young men? Would you want your son to be taught that way? Would you want your daughter or your wife to teach some other man that way? Why, then, break all the laws of propriety, put themselves and their scholars in such an equivocal position just because they were Chinese? Any one can see at a glance the flood of temptations such a position would open up to girls and American young men. Why didn't it open up the same before Chinese men?

One young man—this was told me by his superintendent, a white-haired woman, told me while the tears rolled in a flood down her cheeks—one young man begged his teacher to let him go to her father and openly ask for her hand, and stop the clandestine meetings on street corners, etc. But this she refused, and the thing was only stopped when the superintendent laid before her the alternative of either ceasing all communications with the young man or having the whole matter put plainly before her father, a noted lawyer in New York. The young man broke completely under the disappointment and went insane. This is but one instance of the havoc wrought in the lives of these men. I could tell you of many. I could tell you of one, a gentle, melancholy boy, who committed suicide—a story that wrings my heart at every thought of it.

This superintendent deplored to me again and again the unfortunate influence of these foolish women teachers, and they were not always young, upon the Chinese men of her school. Another superintendent, one of the best we ever had in New York, said to me of her teachers: "Oh, Miss Clark, my heart is broken with them. We watch them every moment of every session. We are constantly weeding them out, yet with all I can do some get in that are unworthy. They are the hardest problem of my work."

I myself saw the spiritual atmosphere of a mission completely dispelled by the giggling, silly behavior of two young white girls in a Sunday night prayer meeting of the Chinese. One of these engaged herself to her scholar, went about with him for two years as her fiancé and then threw him over. He, judging Christianity by his teacher, turned back from his profession and held us all in bitter contempt.

In almost every school were teachers who accepted the escort of their scholars to entertainments, became their guests at the Chinatown restaurants, on excursions, etc. One mission in New York City gave balls and dances for its pupils and teachers.

These teachers have also accepted expensive presents from their pupils of clothing, furs and jewelry. Marriages occurred between teachers and pupils, some happy, if the husband remained in this country; some terribly unhappy if he returned to China. Then either the American wife must be deserted, or she must go to China and submit to the sad social customs of that dark land.

Some people may say my arraignment of these Chinese Sunday Schools is too scathing. Go to the Sunday School excursions, and see for yourself. I saw sights there which filled me with shame, shame for the women of my race. I do not wonder that there has been scandal after scandal in connection with these schools. I do not wonder that American homes have been broken up when some infatuated daughter has run off with a Chinaman. I do not wonder that there have been desertions, and women left with their little ones ostracized from both races, to fight life's bitter battle alone. I do not wonder that there have been Eurasian children left to starve, as I know there have been. I do not wonder that, within a stone's throw of me, I myself found a tiny, dying, disowned Eurasian babe—the nameless offspring of a Chinese Sunday School teacher. Oh, Christian men and women, I know these things, and I cry to you from the depths of my soul to put an end to this system. For seventeen years I have fought it. Mine has been the only voice in any Chinese mission in New York that has been raised against it.

And where does the blame for all this lie? Unquestionably upon the founders of the schools, upon the people and the societies who have supported the schools, upon the pastors and officers of churches which have sheltered the schools; but, most of all, upon these young women's own natural guardians. We cannot escape responsibility by laying the blame on the young women themselves. The sin was, first of all, in putting such a temptation in their way—in letting them go in the way of such a temptation. Every father, every mother, every older brother of such a woman, is to blame. Nor can we blame the Chinese wholly. Do you think this man from the Orient, from the social environment of men only, this man who could not so much as raise his eyes to a woman's face, do you think he would have deliberately set himself to cross the boundary to American social life and woo an American girl? Never! The transformation in him is the work of the Chinese Sunday Schools, and the diabolical system which has broken lives and characters and sent men and women to their graves.

It does not mitigate the force of this arraignment to argue that dead Elsie Sigel was not a missionary. It is not certain that she was even at any time a teacher of the Chinese. Leon Ling was the product of the Chinese Sunday School. If not, what do these hundreds of letters from American women in his possession mean? Where did he cross the boundary into American social life? Emphatically, in the Chinese Sunday School.

Is it for this that we support Chinese missions, and take the money of Christian givers? I thank God my mission is clear. Again and again, when the Chinese have whispered to me to bring in lady teachers and they would make my school the most popular in New York, I have said to them, "I can shut my doors and never hold another session, but I will never bring in women teachers while I live."

Our Sunday School has been conducted by men from its inception. Our night school has been a graded school, on the plan of the public school and the Chinese missions of the Western coast. But now we shall set the example to other schools. We shall have no more a men's Sunday School for the teaching of English, not even with men teachers, but only strictly religious services, under the leadership of our pastor, a returned missionary from China.

What shall we do about it? There is but one remedy that will work the change: Close up every Chinese Sunday School in the East, or wherever there is the woman teacher system. Reopen with religious services only, by your Chinese pastor, and whatever further work you can find consecrated, Christian American men to do. No measures less drastic will stamp out this obnoxious system. Save the missions, but destroy the system, for the sake of American womanhood, and, if you can, spare a bit of sympathy, for the sake of the Chinese.

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES"*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE apostle Paul carried his Bible with him wherever he went. It was not a book, but a roll. It was only that part of the Bible which we call the Old Testament, for the New Testament was not then written; indeed, Paul himself was destined to be the writer of a large share of the New Testament. In his missionary journeys he was making history. His visits to Antioch, Iconium, Derbe, Lystra, Philippi, Thessalonica, Berea, Athens, Corinth, Ephesus, etc., were the warp through which the Spirit of God, as the woof, should weave the beautiful picture of life to be copied by Christians in all the world.

The Preaching of Paul

Dr. Arnot says of the preaching of Paul: "The Old Testament he treated as a nut. He broke the shell, opened out the kernel and presented it as food to the hungry. The Jews were like little children, who had a fruit tree in their garden, their father's legacy. The children had gathered the nuts as they grew, and laid them up with reverence in a storehouse; but they knew not how to break open the shell, and so reach the kernel for food. Paul skilfully pierces the crust and extracts the fruit, and divides it among them." His method of reasoning with them was about as follows: "(1) The Christ expected by the Jews must suffer and die, and rise again. (2) This Jesus whom I preached unto you suffered and died, and rose again. (3) Therefore the Jesus whom I preach unto you is the Christ." Some of the Jews believed, others sought to kill the preacher and drove him out of their city. Many Gentiles heard the preaching of Paul and believed, and some of the Jews therefore became jealous and joined themselves with "vile fellows" against Paul. This was the result at Thessalonica, where Paul had gone to preach the Gospel after leaving Philippi. At Adana, the scene of recent massacres, a similar condition existed. Adana usually has a population of about twenty thousand, but at certain seasons wild hordes of people come down from the mountains, who swell the population to more than three hundred thousand, and are usually a very dangerous element, and it is supposed that they are the people who began the massacre. It has been suggested that the "vile fellows" referred to in Thessalonica were of that class. At any rate we know that many of the Jews in Thessalonica accepted the truth of the Lord Jesus as presented by Paul, and a noble church was formed there, to which not a few of the chief women of Thessalonica joined themselves. Thessalonica was often called "the lady city" because it had been named by one of Alexander's generals after his wife. How fitting, then, that in that city women should be in the lead! But it was expedient for Paul to go away from Thessalonica, partially on account of his relative Jason, in whose home he was lodging, and who was threatened with destruction because he was harboring Paul.

Paul, three days after, with his Bible under his arm or stuck into the folds of his girdle, entered into the city of Berea, on the slope of the Olympian Mountains. And for the treatment which the Bereans gave to Paul their very name has become a synonym for Bible-loving students. A most popular system of Bible lessons, which preceded the International Lessons, was called the "Berean Lesson System," of which Bishop J. H. Vincent was the author.

We are told that when Paul began to preach in Berea the people not only listened attentively, but with open minds and open hearts they searched the Scriptures daily to see if Paul's words were true, and for so doing they are called in the Scripture noble—"more noble than those in Thessalonica."

All Christians Should Be Bereans

in the sense of searching the Scriptures, not only to confirm the truth as it is taught or preached to them, but also to be intelligent Bible students. Blind, traditional reverence for every word found in the Bible has led many to consider every sentence in its pages as an utterance of God's truth. For instance, how often that saying is quoted: "All that a man hath will he give for his life," as if it were a "Thus saith the Lord," instead of being a devil's lie, which the whole book of Job is thus given to disprove. He who studies not the letter only, but the spirit of truth in the Bible, will always consider by whom each sentence is uttered and whether it is given with approval or disapproval, or is simply stated as a matter of history. Christ not only sought to lead men below the surface words of the Bible into the mines of thought, but also to show them that the aim of the Bible is not alone to give them knowledge but life. Knowledge, such as the Bible gives, he told them was only the means by which to lead them to life.

Jezebel, the Bloody Mary of the ancients, knew the Mosaic law as well as some modern thieves and murderers know the laws of their land. In her robbery of Naboth, whose vineyard her husband coveted, she showed that she had read the Bible. She had its laws in her memory, and arranged her crime with regard to them. But her Bible knowledge did her no good, as she applied it only to her brain and not to her life. The Pharisees had read their Bibles in the same way. They had learned texts, but did not seek to live them. They went to their Bibles for knowledge, not for guidance, hence they used their time between prayers to stone the prophets who rebuked their sins.

The 119th Psalm might be called a eulogy of the Bible; at least it is a song of praise about the Bible. Let us note its peculiar structure. It is divided into parts, and each part has the name of a Hebrew letter; but there is something about it that will interest us still more: it is like a harp of ten strings. We might draw a harp with ten strings on the blackboard, or on a piece of paper. The ten strings are ten names by which the Bible is called, as the singer strikes his harp and sounds forth his praise of the Word of God: Law, Way, Word, Truth, Precepts, Statutes, Judgments, Commandments, Testimonies, Ordinances.

Blessed are they that are perfect in the Way,
Who walk in the Law of Jehovah.
Blessed are they that keep his Testimonies.

Thou hast commanded us thy Precepts,
That we should observe them diligently.
Oh that my ways were established
To observe thy Statutes!
Then shall I not be put to shame,
When I have respect unto all thy Commandments.
I will give thanks unto thee with uprightness of heart,
When I learn thy righteous Judgments.

Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?
By taking heed thereto, according to thy Word.
With my lips have I declared
All the Ordinances of thy mouth.

All thy commandments are Truth.

While the object of the Bible is to show us how we can change our lives, Christ warns us against the mistake of the Pharisees, who came to the Bible as the source of life instead of coming to him. "Ye search the Scriptures because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me" (John 5:39). The mistake of a Pharisee was in expecting to get life from a book, as a talisman or charm, rather than from the Son of God, the Creator, to whom the whole book directs us.

Salonica, the Ancient Thessalonica, as It Appears To-day

A colporteur gave a Bible to a French soldier. "This will do," said the soldier, "to light my pipe with." The colporteur grieved over having given it. But a year after, at another place, a mother was rejoicing over the conversion of her soldier son, who had come home wounded from the Crimea to die. A Bible had impressed him. "Let me see the book," said the colporteur. He recognized it as the same he had given the young man. The first fifteen or twenty pages had been torn out. But on the inside of the cover was written: "Received at Toulon [with the date]—despised—neglected—read—believed—and found salvation."

How a Little Boy Found Jesus in the Scriptures

Far away in a heathen home in Korea a little baby boy was born. It was a very poor home, hardly more than a grass hut. They named the baby "Bobbie." In a short time his father died, and he had only his mother to love him. Alas! she soon discovered that a hump was growing between her little boy's shoulders. No one told her that he was a hunchback, but that is what he was. The hump grew bigger and bigger, until his little head seemed just to peep out. He was taken to some Korean doctors, and they said: "A vile spirit is in possession of his body." The neighbors all watched him, and felt sorry for him and said: "Alas! it is pitiful. The evil one has done it." By and by, Bobbie's mother died. Neither the mother nor the boy had ever heard of Jesus or heaven, and the lonely boy often cried bitterly and wondered what had become of his mother. He was left homeless as well as motherless. He sold a few things—some very poor pieces of furniture—and bought a box of candies to sell, hoping in that way to make enough money to rent a room and buy a little food. People felt sorry when they saw the poor boy trying to help himself in this way, so they bought his candies. He went on doing that way year after year, until he should have been quite grown up, but he was not much taller—only his hands and feet seemed to grow bigger, and so did the hump on his back. One day a missionary came into the town, bringing packages of books—they were Bibles. Bobbie bought one out of his little earnings. Day after day he read his Bible, and then he began to say to himself, "How wonderful is Jesus!" Other Koreans had bought Bibles too, and they used to meet together every week to read their Bibles and pray.

Bobbie met with them. Soon there were so many the house was too small, and they said, "We must build a church. We will have a collection for it and bring what God tells us to give." Bobbie went to his little room, lighted his candle, took out his Bible and began to read; then he laid his head on it and prayed; then he got up and took down a little box, all wrapped in a rag. Slowly he unwrapped it and opened it. It was his money-box, and contained his savings against a time when he might be too sick to sell candy. He took it all out and counted it—ten dollars! He put it back in the rag, but not in the box, and tied it tightly with a string. And when the collection was taken he put it all in. When it was counted, the people could hardly believe that Bobbie had given so much. "It's God's, not mine now," he answered. And when the church was built the kind people had a little room made for Bobbie, where he could live and not have so far to come.

An Old, Old Friend

It gives us much pleasure to reproduce this likeness of Mrs. Blanche Elliott, one of our oldest subscribers, who is now in her ninety-second year. No feature of the work carried on in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD offices is more gratifying to the editors than the many evidences of loyal friendship on the part of our readers which come to us now and then from all parts of the country. We, in turn, cherish every expression of their esteem and good opinion more highly than we can well express, and it is our earnest desire that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD shall always play the part of a true friend to every member of the great CHRISTIAN HERALD family.

Mrs. Blanche Elliott, Brooklyn, N. Y.

---

*International Sunday School Lesson for July 18, 1909. Paul at Thessalonica and Berea. Acts 17 : 1-15. GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." Ps. 119 : 11.

The Story of Marco

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta went out to sing while Marco played, Christmas. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco did not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder became more and more unbearable. The man grew ugly and the food was scarce. Marco ran away and played for a living but made little. Christmas Eve Marco began to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to his selling on a corner he called his own. He rescues Jimmy from under a moving car, takes him home, and remains with him. Both go to Mont-Lawn. A great man talks there one day and tells the children to be red, white and blue like the flag—red for valor; white for purity; blue for justice. Marco resolves to be "red, white and blue," like the flag. In an Italian who works at Mont-Lawn, he finds his long-lost father, who takes him to his wretched home in New York, and tells him that his name is not Bonelli, but Covino. Marco's father works steadily at first, but afterward takes to drink.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued

JOHN COVINO'S gaze drifted from Marco's shocked face and roved unsteadily about the tiny room, resting finally on the violin which Marco had been playing.

"Give ush—a chune, boy," he muttered. "I like—chunes."

Mechanically Marco picked up the violin and began to play. He was trying to think what to say, what to do; but he was stunned and confused. To his relief the bleared eyes opposite closed after a time, and the huddled form in the chair relaxed in sleep; then Marco laid down his violin, and hurried out into the kitchen.

"Look a-here, was dad ever—like this—before?" he demanded tremulously of Milanovitch, who was dozing by the stove.

Milanovitch's broken English was not easy to understand, but in time Marco had his answer.

Yes, John Covino had been like this before; but not for some time. He had fallen in to-night with some old companions, and had evidently yielded to their entreaties to take a drink. Milanovitch himself had seen him only an hour before down at the saloon on the corner, and he had been drinking then heavily. Milanovitch was sorry; but there was nothing that he could do, nothing. . . . And Marco could only turn and go sorrowfully back to the little room, which was worse than empty.

It was pitiful to see John Covino's shame and remorse when he awoke to a realization of what he had done. He blamed himself bitterly, and made many protestations of future good conduct—yet October was not two weeks old, when again Marco came home Saturday night to find a silent, unlighted room.

Milanovitch brought word this time that Covino was "fighting drunk" down at the saloon. He was certainly scarcely less than that when he finally came home at eleven o'clock.

For half an hour Marco dodged blows and winced at angry curses. For half an hour he exerted all his skill to pacify the rum-crazed brain; then he remembered his violin, and began to play.

The bleared eyes did not close in slumber this time, but they did lose their angry fire. Gradually the twitching muscles and menacing fists fell quiet. The oaths and snarls of rage ceased. The man sat silent, listening. Afterward he yielded to Marco's entreaties, and was put to bed like a child.

It is hard to say whether John Covino was the more angry or the more ashamed when his befogged reason finally cleared. Certainly he could not endure Marco's sorrowful eyes, and at the first opportunity he fled from their mute reproach. From himself he could not flee—though he tried to: he made straight for the saloon on the corner that he might drown memory in drink. That night he did not return at all, and Marco lay in his bed and shivered at every sound outside the door.

It was the beginning of the end. More and more frequently as the days passed, Marco came home to find an empty room and no supper. Entreaties and pleadings were in vain. There were promises—plenty of them, and even tears; but the promises were scarcely made before they were broken, and the tears only served to emphasize the weakness of a man who wept because he drank—and then drank because he wept. Even the violin failed sometimes to bring peace, though it was the most potent weapon that Marco possessed. So potent, indeed, was it, that one night Milanovitch suggested that Marco take it down to the saloon, and see if he could not lure Covino home.

In the saloon Marco faced a crowd of amazed, jeering men. He would have backed out in dismay, had not John Covino at that moment caught sight of him.

"It'sh my boy! It'sh Marco," he exulted, staggering across the room. "He'sh goin' play—he ish. He playsh good—good!" And with an unsteady hand laid on the boy's shoulder, he turned and tried to make a bow to the staring men.

Marco flushed and tugged at his father's coat.

"Dad, dad, come home," he implored. "Come home now, and I will play to ye—truly I will! Come!"

Covino frowned. His clasp on the boy's shoulder tightened.

"Home? No! It'sh better here. All light—all warm. Play!" he commanded.

Marco drew back.

"No, no, dad—come home. I'll play there."

With an angry snarl the man jerked the boy to the right-about, and held him there while he delivered himself of a tirade, the burden of which was that the boy was his, and that he was going to play; that he could play, and he should play; that things were at a pretty pass, indeed, when a mere slip of a lad could defy his father like that, and refuse to entertain his father's friends.

Marco raised his violin then, and began to play. He could see no other way out of it. He hoped that the music would have an effect—and it did; but not the one he expected. He had looked to see his father become docilely willing to accompany him home: he found instead, a score of men decidedly unwilling that even he himself should go home. With a drunken cheer they demanded more and yet more; and with an oath, one cried:

"Set 'em up on me for the fiddlin' kid!"

John Covino found out then how he could get more drinks, even though he had no more money. Again and again he ordered the boy to play, and again and again some man among the crowd

Continued on next page

IVORY PASTE. This is something which every housewife should have on hand at all times. Useful in all sorts of ways—to clean kid gloves, white kid and satin slippers; straw hats; canvas shoes and brasswork; to remove spots from woolen goods and fresh ink stains from carpets.

HOW TO MAKE IT.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces of Ivory Soap cut into shavings; boil ten minutes after the soap is thoroughly dissolved. Cool in china or glass dishes. It can be kept for some time in glass jars with tops tightly screwed down. NOTE: A piece of Ivory Soap two inches long, one and one-eighth inches wide, and one and one-eighth inches thick, weighs one and one-half ounces.

IVORY DESIGN PATT'D AUG. 26, 79

Ivory Soap

99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure

Better and Cheaper Than Lath and Plaster

BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD

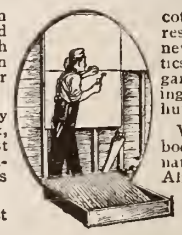
No Dirt, Cracks or Damp Walls

You Yourself Can Nail It to Studding—Ready for Immediate Decoration

This wonder-worker in building construction is made of kiln-dried, dressed lath, imbedded in hot Asphalt Mastic, which is surfaced with sized cardboard. It is cut at the factory in 4 x 4 ft. sheets, and shipped in crates ready for immediate application and decoration.

BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD is clean, sanitary and odorless; is guaranteed not to shrink, warp, crack, flake or blister; is proof against moisture, vermin, heat or cold. Being a non-conductor, it saves fuel in winter and keeps the building cool in summer.

It is suitable for costly dwellings, modest cottages, bungalows, flats, pleasure and health resort buildings, office and factory buildings, new partitions in old buildings, finishing attics, back porches, laundries, cellar ceilings, garages, poultry houses, dairy barns and buildings—in short, it is the ideal material for a hundred purposes.



Write to-day for FREE Sample, descriptive booklet and prices, freight paid, from Cincinnati or factories in New Orleans, La., and Alma, Mich.

Dealers Should Write for Our Attractive Proposition

The Mastic Wall Board & Roofing Co. 40 East Third Street, Cincinnati, Ohio

THE BEST LIGHT — THE BEST LIGHT

ABSOLUTELY safe—Is very brilliant, powerful and steady.—One burner gives more light than six 16-candle power electric light bulbs—more economical than kerosene. Each lamp is a miniature light works.

FULLY GUARANTEED. OVER 200 STYLES. Agents wanted. Catalogue Free. Write to-day.

THE BEST LIGHT CO. 3-70 E. 5th St. Canton, O.

Auto Masseur REDUCES

40 DAY FREE TRIAL FOR BOTH SEXES

So confident am I that simply wearing it will permanently remove all superfluous flesh that I mail it free, without deposit.

When you see your shapeliness speedily returning I know you will buy it.

Try it at my expense. Write to-day.

PROF. BURNS, 1298 Q, BROADWAY, N. Y.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium

Established Thirty-one Years.

For the exclusive treatment of cancer and all other forms of malignant and benign new growths (except those in the stomach, other abdominal organs, and the thoracic cavity),

With the Escharotic Method

(without resorting to surgical procedure).

Ask your family physician to make a personal investigation. This institution is conducted upon a strictly ethical basis. Complete information given upon request. Address,

Wallace E. Brown, M. D., North Adams, Mass.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Bissell

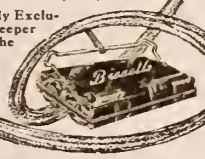
Carpet Sweepers

are absolutely essential in sweeping the sick-room, convenient in sweeping up the crumbs around the dining-room table, or in sweeping up the ashes in the smoking room; while nothing picks up the clippings, threads, etc., from about the sewing-room as quickly and easily. Then, too, as an investment, a Bissell costs less than 2c a month and will save many times this every month in carpets, time, labor; besides saving human energy, preserving the health. Write for booklet.

Buy a Bissell "Cyco" Ball-Bearing Sweeper now of your dealer, send us the purchase slip within one week from date of purchase, and we will send you FREE a fine quality card case with no printing on it.

BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO.
Dept. 47a, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Largest and Only Exclusive Carpet Sweeper Makers in the World).



3847

Where Your Savings Are Placed to Earn 5%

AMBITIOUS young mechanics and business men, paying for homes by monthly instalments, form the best class of borrowers in the world. In New York their number is legion. The Industrial has dealt with them for 16 years, more exclusively, systematically and profitably than any other loaning institution. The Company's assets of $1,900,000 are chiefly in mortgages on these properties.

It is your $25.00 or $1,000, combined with similar sums from hundreds of other clients, that we invest in that way. We pay you regular dividends at 5 per cent. You withdraw the principal at any time on 30 days' notice. Dividends are reckoned to the day we return the money, from the day we receive it.

ASSETS $1,900,000

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS and LOAN Co. NEW YORK CITY

The New York Banking Department supervises our business, as required by the rigid protective laws of the State governing Savings Institutions. Our 16 years' successful record is in the public files of the Superintendent of Banks, and is also open at our office to the inspection of every one interested in making a safe investment.

Surplus and Profits $138,000

Let us send you our booklet and more detailed information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

AN OLD TIMER

Has Had Experiences.

A woman who has used Postum since it came upon the market knows from experience the wisdom of using Postum in place of coffee if one values health and a clear brain. She says:

"At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia, and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum. I got a package and had it carefully prepared, finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got well of my nervousness and dyspepsia.

"My husband had been drinking coffee all his life until it had affected his nerves terribly, and I persuaded him to shift to Postum. It was easy to get him to make the change, for the Postum is so delicious. It certainly worked wonders for him.

"We soon learned that Postum does not exhilarate or depress and does not stimulate, but steadily and honestly strengthens the nerves and the stomach.

"To make a long story short, our entire family continued to use Postum with satisfying results, as shown in our fine condition of health, and we have noticed a rather unexpected improvement in brain and nerve power."

Increased brain and nerve power always follows the use of Postum in place of coffee, sometimes in a very marked manner. "There's a Reason."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

was moved to treat. Marco himself was powerless in their hands, and in sheer terror was forced to submit. Only when the "cop" looked in, did he have a respite from playing, and then only while he was being hidden behind the men until the officer left the saloon. Not until nearly midnight was Marco finally allowed to lead home the man who was almost too stupefied to put one foot before the other.

Sorry days dawned then for Marco. Covino lost his job at the wharves, and obtained another only to lose it in turn. When sober he was all tears, all repentance, all eager promises to Marco to do better. When not himself, he forced the boy to play and earn the means for further degradation.

Marco was in despair. There was little money coming in now, and food was scanty. The pawnshop was daily growing richer by John Covino's frequent visits; and the little room off Milanovitch's kitchen was growing correspondingly bare.

"Jimmy Nolan, who for some time watched the struggle in silence, was finally goaded into wrathful remonstrance.

"Why don't ye quit, an' come back ter us, Marco?" he protested at last. "We'll take ye in, an' be glad to."

Marco made a gesture of dissent.

"No," he said decidedly. "I just can't. You see, it's this way," he explained, with some hesitation. "Dad's mine, an' I ought ter stick to him; an' I hain't got much that is mine. Ev'ry feller ought ter have somethin' ter be red, white, an' blue to, like a flag, ye know. Now I'm shady on flags, bein' as how I ain't real sure whether I—I'm a Da—well, I ain't real sure what I am. But I have got dad, an' I've just got ter be red, white, an' blue ter him!"

CHAPTER XX

A "Big Brother"

IN THE great hall of one of the stone palaces facing Central Park, Howard Preston hung up the receiver, and turned slowly away from the telephone. On his face was a peculiar expression, half eager, half regretful. Even his mother, coming down the stairs, noticed it.

"Well, Howard," she smiled, "from your face I don't know whether to congratulate you, or to commiserate you. Which shall it be?"

"That's exactly it," laughed the young fellow. "I don't know myself."

"What is it?"

"Well, I—" He hesitated, and placed a caressing arm around the woman, as together they entered the library. "Well, mother dear, I—I have just had a communication that my—brother needs me."

"Your—brother!" The mother of an only son drew back in amazement.

The man laughed.

"Oh, the relationship is very recent, and very sudden," he retorted whimsically: "and I fancy he won't, by even the greatest stretch of his imagination, attempt to include you in his family."

"Howard, what are you talking about? What is the meaning of all this nonsense?"

One of the curious changes that were perhaps Howard Preston's greatest charm, crossed the young man's face and left it alight with purpose.

"Forgive me, mater, for my jesting. It isn't nonsense at all, as you'll see. I told you the other night, didn't I? about Dr. Fernald's lecture on the Children's Court?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's that. You know at the time we asked him what we could do, and he told us. We agreed. I agreed; and it's come. That's all."

"What's come?"

"My 'brother'. I agreed, you know, to hold myself in readiness for the work."

"But Dr. Fernald is so quixotic, Howard. As if you had any business with courts, and policemen, and—and jails!"

"That's exactly it, mater. I haven't any business with courts and policemen and jails; it's only with the boy that the Court hands over to me. And Dr. Fernald isn't quixotic a bit. He's as practical as—as a fire when it's cold. If you'd only heard him, mother, when he said in that ringing, live voice of his: 'Men, I want each one of you to take just one boy who has been in trouble. I want you to help him at this critical moment. I want you to be a big brother to him.' "

"A brother?"

"A big brother," nodded the man, the old whimsical smile coming back to his face. "I'm half an inch and six feet tall. I weigh one hundred and seventy pounds; and I'm twenty-one years and three weeks old. Surely, may I not be a big brother?"

Mrs. Preston opened her lips, but before she could speak, a childish treble across the room broke the silence.

"You aren't any one's big brother but mine," it called decisively.

In spite of her disquietude, Mrs. Preston laughed.

"You see," she said with a wave of her hand, "you are answered."

Across the room a pair of blue-violet eyes, topped by a white forehead and a fluff of yellow hair, looked out from between the tightly-held curtains of the window alcove. Then the curtains dropped suddenly, and a twelve-year-old girl, all in white from slippers to hair-ribbon, stood revealed.

"Well, Puss, and what are you doing?" demanded the prospective big brother.

"I was reading, when you came in—and interrupted."

"Books, books, always books, Kittykins! And was it a Prince or a Princess that was imprisoned this time?"

The small girl advanced, her chin uptilted, and seated herself on a hassock a few feet away.

"It wasn't either," she retorted with dignity. "It was a young lady. I shall be a young lady in four months. I shall be thirteen then. This young lady's name was Helen Annabel Augusta Miranda."

"Dear me! All that? Only fancy, Fluff, if you had that!"

"Me!" cried the little girl, aggrievedly. "Me! And if I did, I suppose I'd be twenty-'leven hundred more names. Even now I'm Fluff, and Fluffy-top, and Puss, and Kittykins, and Flossie, and Floy, and—"

"And a dear, whatever you are—Florence," interrupted the young man with mock gravity.

"And I'm Mater, and Mother, and Sweetheart; and those are only a few of my names," Mrs. Preston reminded, her, laughingly.

"And I'm a Big Brother," said the man, with a gravity that was not mocking.

"Yes, you're my big brother," affirmed Florence.

"Oh, but I'm somebody else's big brother, too, now."

"Whose?"

"I'm not real sure yet that I know his name. But I think it's Covino, or something like that."

"'Covino'! Howard, how can you do it!" murmured Mrs. Preston, shudderingly.

"That's exactly what I mean to find out," smiled the man. "I expect Dr. Fernald's going to tell me—how I can do it."

To be continued

"Porosknit"

SUMMER UNDERWEAR
For Men For Boys

Comfort quality—quality comfort.

This Label

TRADE MARK "Porosknit" REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
FABRIC MAY DEC 28 1905 DESIGN MAY NOV 28 1905

Makes You Sure

of perfect fit, longest wear and a cool summer. Give the breeze a chance. Ask your dealer.

MEN'S Shirts and Drawers, each 50c
Boys' Shirts and Drawers, each 25c
Union Suits: Men's $1.00, Boys' 50c.

All styles and sizes. Send for new illustrated booklet.

CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY
30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, N. Y.

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

Particularly Desirable after Dinner

BETTER—STRONGER

More lasting in flavor than any other. A try—a test—Goodbye to the rest!

Sold in 5¢ 10¢ and 25¢ packets
Frank H. Fleer & Company Inc.
Philadelphia, U.S.A. and Toronto, Can.

LABLACHE

FACE POWDER

DURING THE SUMMER

avoid that red, shiny complexion caused by perspiration. Use Lablache, the great beautifier, and have no fear of exposure to the sun and wind. Pure and harmless.

Refuse Substitutes. They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink or Cream, 50c. a box, of druggists or by mail.

Send 10c. for sample.

BEN. LEVY CO.
French Perfumers
Dept. 22, 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass.

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

The Palace Beautiful*

THE Pilgrim's journey is in innumerable respects a type of the journey of every soul which seeks the Celestial City. One of the ways in which its universality of application is indicated is in its steady succession of alternating sorrows and joys.

Thus, he is first agonized with fright and sorrow at the revelation of the plight of his city, and his inability to save his relatives and friends. Then he has a season of joy in his meeting with Evangelist; followed by his discouraging interviews with Obstinate and Pliable, and his hard experience in the Slough of Despond. Again comes relief at the hands of Evangelist, helped by Goodwill, and the stay at the Interpreter's house. In addition to these heart-cheering episodes, he gains a view of the cross and his heavy burden falls off his back.

But observe that now comes the terrible Hill Difficulty, and the loss of his precious roll. Then this is found, and after braving the chained lions he comes to the Palace Beautiful.

And herein lieth an allegory within an allegory. The House is Beautiful chiefly because it is kept by Discretion and guarded by Piety, Prudence and Love. The meanest lodging becomes beautiful under such care and containing such a family. A witty woman once said that even if one had no religion in one's heart, it would pay to cultivate the graces which it inculcates simply as an æsthetic investment for the home. It was a discerning remark. Truly, fine furniture, pictures and statues are but a mockery so long as Discretion, Piety, Prudence and Love are absent from the home.

One of the most charming features of this enchanting palace is "the large upper chamber, whose window opened toward the sun-rising," and the name of which was Peace.

Peaceful sleep! What joy of earth surpasses it! The poet expresses it in his beautiful lines:

Night slid down one long stream of sighing wind,
And in her bosom bore the baby, Sleep.

In that large eastern room, poor Christian "slept till break of day, and then he awoke and sang." No wonder! The man who sleeps in the Chamber of Peace can usually sing when he awakens.

Peace of mind, as Drummond has ably pointed out in his Pax Vobiscum, is no accident. "Men," he says, "expect Rest, Joy, Peace, Faith to drop into their souls from the air, like snow or rain. Rain and snow do drop from the air, but not without a long previous history. They are the mature effects of previous causes. Equally so are Rest, Peace and Joy. They, too, have each a previous history. If a housewife turns out a good cake, it is the result of a sound receipt, carefully applied. Random ingredients would produce only random cakes. So it is in the making of Christian experiences. Rest has a cause. 'Learn of Me,' Christ says, 'and ye shall find rest to your souls.' How novel the connection between these two words, 'Learn' and 'Rest'! How few of us have ever thought that Rest was a thing to be learned!'

We learn it and find peace only by girding our loins with truth, donning the breastplate of righteousness, taking the shield of faith and the sword of the Spirit—and praying always.

Fénelon puts it in this way: "Resign every forbidden joy; restrain every wish that is not referred to His will; banish all eager desires, all anxiety; desire only the will of God; and you will find peace."

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 18. Pilgrim's Progress Series. TEXT: Eph. 4 : 7-16; 6 : 10-17.

Fearfulness in Security*

THE panic of the disciples in the storm figures well the foolish worry with which most of us look forward to the perils of the future. Christ was with them. They might have known that he would protect them. The violent pitching of their boat was doubtless merely a device to try their faith, and yet they allowed themselves to fall into a perfect paroxysm of hysterics. It is a stern lesson for us all.

Christ is with us. He has promised never to leave nor to forsake us, and has bidden us to keep untroubled hearts, and we know that he is not slack concerning his promises—a faithful Creator. Yet still we moan and worry.

Mr. Moody once said that his main effort, when entering upon his great work, was to be a man of faith. "I prayed for faith," he says; "I worked for faith; I fasted for faith. I looked for some wonderful, miraculous gift that should suddenly come to me. One day I was reading the Epistle to the Romans when I came to the verse: 'So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.' That one passage gives the only direction for receiving faith in Christ, and that is simply by reading about him."

A good rule: Search the Scriptures. Nothing relieves worry like that. It bolsters one's faith in God more firmly for every moment that you read.

It was said of Alexander the Great that he had perfect confidence in his physician. An enemy of this man tried to arouse Alexander's distrust of him. In an anonymous letter, he warned the king not to take some medicine which his doctor would mix for him the following morning, saying that it would contain a deadly poison. Alexander showed his contempt for this warning by tossing the letter to his physician at his next visit, at the same time drinking fearlessly the medicine which had been prescribed for him. Nothing could shake his trust in his friend. This was the sort of faith which those foolish disciples should have had.

The failure of the disciples to realize the power of their Lord reminds one of the old story of the disconsolate Highland mother, whose only son had gone to Australia. She was a poor widow and very ignorant. One day the dominie came to visit her, and she poured into his ear her tale of woe. "Why should I be so lacking, and my bairn so rich, as they say in Australia?" she complained. "Doesn't he write to you at all?" "Oh, yes, he writes every month, but he does nothing to help me. He only sends a little picture in every letter, and what does that amount to?" "Let me see the pictures." She brought them, and was told that each one was a draft for ten pounds—fifty dollars—and yet she had distrusted her faithful boy.

Bryant gave to us an almost sublime lesson on this subject in his exquisitely descriptive lines to a waterfowl. It is said that he was leaving home for the first time, to engage in business. Lonely and homesick, he trudged along the road. What was to become of him? Would success or failure attend him? Were any friends awaiting him?

As he pondered in this melancholy strain, he looked up, while the heavens were glowing "with the last steps of day," and saw a solitary waterfowl. In an instant it flashed over the boy that this wandering creature was in the care of a divine Being, and so was he.

He who, from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 18. TEXT: Mark 4 : 35-41.

NEW PREMIUMS

For Boys and Girls

WHERE is the boy who wouldn't like a fine Baseball Suit—shirt, pants and cap complete, light or heavy weight flannel? Or a real Cowboy Suit, hat and all? Or a Military Suit of khaki cloth, with military cap and trimmed with brass buttons, and all the regulation pockets? Wouldn't "roughing it" or going off with the boys to a ball game, be lots more fun if you could go dressed in one of these? Of course! And any Junior Agent can very easily earn such a suit by selling only a very small number of copies of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Write to-day and tell us which kind of suit you are most interested in, and we will at once send you a full description of it and let you know just how many copies you need to sell in order to earn one.

Granville H. Purdum
Junior Agent, Chillicothe, O.

Laura Hughes
Junior Agent, Santa, Idaho

. . .

Another splendid new premium on our list, and one that must appeal to all boys who love good sport—and to girls, too, for that matter—is our "Reliance" Steel Sailboat; beautiful model; hull painted in red and white, with large mainsail, topsail and jibs. You can have a boat measuring 20, 22 or 24 inches, just as you prefer—and for very little work, too—which will make a fine showing when you "put her to sea" in a pond or brook. Write to-day for list of New Premiums.

The Christian Herald Junior Department
92 Bible House, New York City

Special Rewards to Beginners

Two Words

JUST a short, sharp word,
But the one who heard
Was weary and sick at heart;
And her strength so slight
Led a wavering fight,
When she tried to do her part.
So that quick word flung
From a thoughtless tongue
Pierced deep, like a poisoned dart.
Was that word yours?

Just a bright, sweet word
To the one who heard
When body and soul were bent;
But it wakened strength
To begin at length
The task she believed God sent.
So that kind word came
As in His own name
To finish the work He meant.
Was that word yours?

Phoenix, Ari. NELL RANDOLPH BLOUNT.

BUSY DOCTOR

Sometimes Overlooks a Point.

The physician is such a busy man that he sometimes overlooks a valuable point to which his attention may be called by an intelligent patient who is a thinker.

"About a year ago my attention was called to Grape-Nuts by one of my patients," says a physician of Cincinnati.

"At the time my own health was bad, and I was pretty well run down, but I saw at once that the theories behind Grape-Nuts were sound, and that if the food was all that was claimed, it was a perfect food.

"So I commenced to use Grape-Nuts with cream twice a day and in a short time I began to improve in every way and I am now much stronger, feel better and weigh more than ever before in my life.

"I know that all of this good is due to Grape-Nuts and I am firmly convinced that the claims made for the food are true.

"I have recommended, and still recommend, Grape-Nuts to a great many of my patients with splendid results, and in some cases the improvement of patients on this fine food has been wonderful.

"As a brain and nerve food, in fact, as a general food, Grape-Nuts stands alone."

Look in pkgs. for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville" "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

NOW IN AN ORCHESTRA

How Music Lessons FREE Started Him

"I could not play a note when I received the first lesson from you, and now I am playing in a good orchestra of ten pieces, and can read music and play as well as any of them. I shall always recommend your home study school of music." That is what Eli Smith, Jr., R. R. No. 2, Marietta, Ill., writes after a one-year course on the Violin.

Eli Smith's only expense under our free tuition plan was for postage and music. That cost him less than Two Cents a day, and he was under no further obligation whatever.

If you wish to learn to play the Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, Cornet or learn to Sing, our teachers will come to you by mail once a week with a lesson until you can read music and play your instrument to your own satisfaction.

Over ten thousand weekly lessons are now being sent to homes all over the world to pupils in all walks of life, from seven years of age to seventy.

Our free tuition plan will enable you to get weekly lessons costing You less than two cents a day. It will be your only expense and places you under no further obligation whatever.

Don't say you cannot learn music till you send for our booklet and free tuition offer. It will be sent by return mail free. Address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7, 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

No need to have lamp-chimneys that crack and break when you turn up the flame; nor a smoking, flickering light.

I make a MACBETH chimney to fit every kind of lamp and burner, insuring perfect combustion, full illumination, and a steady, even flame.

My lamp-chimneys are made of glass that won't break from heat. My name is on each one. Lamp-chimneys may be but "little things," but I'm proud of mine.

My Index, sent free, shows which is the right chimney for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh

6%
AND SAFETY

Because---we have been in business over 14 years

Because --- under the laws we must deposit first mortgages equal to at least 75% of our assets with a strong trust company as a protection for our depositors.

Because --- we never loan a dollar, except on improved real estate worth at least twice as much as the loan.

Because --- of a most careful, conservative and efficient management.

Because of these and other reasons, savings deposited with this Company are absolutely safe. They are exceptionally profitable in interest return.

On Time Deposits we pay 6% On savings, payable on demand, 5%

Interest checks mailed every 6 months. Write today for the book

CALVERT MORTGAGE & DEPOSIT CO.,
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

32 page specimen pamphlets of the new hymn book
HALLOWED HYMNS
loaned free for Camp, Union and Special Meetings.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago.

PATENTS that PROTECT
Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps.
E. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

GRADUATE COURSES AT HOME. Terms easy. Write Pres. C. J. Burton, Ph.B., Oskaloosa, Iowa

SCOFIELD BIBLE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL. Terms nominal. Free Prospectus. 150 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

PAUL AT THESSALONICA

By Mrs. M. Baxter

PAUL and Silas, directed by the Holy Spirit, who had led them into Europe and to the praying band of women at Philippi, passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia. It is very unlikely that they passed through these regions of ancient Greece without leaving some traces of their Master, and of his message of reconciliation, as they went. Wherever they were, they were witnesses.

Still guided by the Holy Ghost, the two messengers of Christ "came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews." It was always "to the Jew first" that Paul preached the Gospel. Not only was it the Lord's command that the disciples should begin at Jerusalem, but Paul always gave the Jews, as the chosen people of God, the first place. He knew the life-giving power of the written Word, and therefore he spun no sermon out of a single text, but he let the Word tell its own tale and work its own effect. He "reasoned with them out of the Scriptures, opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead." He would tell them, as Peter and Stephen did, of their past sad history of rebellion against and departure from God, rejecting the Father, rejecting Christ and crucifying him, and also rejecting the Holy Ghost; and then would have opened to them the way of salvation foretold in Ps. 22, 32, etc., Isa. 53, Zech. 13:7, etc., and show them how the Messiah, foretold by Micah 5:2-4, had been born in Bethlehem. But they had not recognized their King, because "they knew not the Scriptures, neither the power of God." Then he would show them from Ps. 16 how God's Holy One "could not see corruption," and that he rose again from the dead, and ascended into heaven, when he had by himself purged our sins.

Paul was "a chosen vessel," to do a work which was not committed to every child of God. He was chosen to special witness, before special people, and to special suffering. Those who are "chosen in Christ" before the foundation of the world, that they may be holy and without blame before him in love, are also a selection for a special purpose, which comes out in this epistle. How did Paul know the election of these his Thessalonian converts? (1) He knew it by the way they received the Gospel; "not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance" (I. Thess. 1:4, 5). And, again, "When ye received the Word of God, which ye heard from us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the Word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe." (2) He knew it by their willingness to suffer. "Ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the Word in much affliction with joy of the Holy Ghost." (Such a spirit is not earth-born.) (3) Their fruitfulness in service. "From you sounded out the Word of God, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything." (4) They recognized that they were saved from idols, to serve and to wait.

How many believers there are who have no doubt of their pardon, and yet who do not manifest these marks of their being "chosen in Christ!" But election is no work on the part of man; it is only the exceeding grace of God. The special grace in the Thessalonian converts was not something out of themselves, which they gave to God: it was the grace of God, which he gave to them; they simply yielded themselves; he did the work in them and through them.

A FORTUNE HID IN HIS BIBLE

AN exchange relates a remarkable story of an old soldier, named Stephen Marsh. He had been living for many years on a modest pension of $12 a month. One day lately he came across an old family Bible, that had been left to him some thirty-five years ago by his Aunt Sarah. Covered with the accumulated dust of many years, the old Bible had lain on the shelf neglected, for the ex-soldier was not a Bible reader and, though a good, moral man in a general way, he gave little heed to religion.

He took up the volume and, shaking off the dust and cobwebs, he wiped the cover and was surprised to find the book in a good state of preservation. To Marsh, however, it was simply an old Bible—nothing more. Although he fingered the leaves, turning them over and over, he had no desire to examine God's Word or to find out the precious message of the book.

Suddenly Marsh's fingers came in contact with something and the mechanical turning over of the pages ceased, while he looked sharply at the book. What his fingers had touched proved to be a dollar bill hidden between two leaves. The old soldier at once became an eager Bible student. He grasped the book with both hands and, sitting down, began a search with as much care and assiduity as any theologian ever displayed. Leaf after leaf was turned over, almost every leaf yielding some financial reward to the searcher. The bills were of various denominations. When Marsh had finished his task of "searching the Scriptures," there lay before him on the table a pile of bills the total of which he found, to his astonishment, to be $4,867. This money had been placed there by his dead relative, who in her lifetime was a faithful Bible reader. She had thought by this manner of bestowing her legacy upon her nephew to direct his attention to God's Word.

Marsh, it is needless to say, no longer neglects his Bible, as he had done for more than half a lifetime. Doubtless he has been strongly impressed by what he had missed for so many years by his utter neglect of his relative's legacy, which at last came to his hands by the merest accident.

There is, however, a greater treasure concealed within the Book of books than that which was found by the old soldier. It is the "unsearchable riches" of salvation, the gift of God to the world through his Son, beside which all earthly wealth of gold and silver and other possessions are as nothing. If a man find this treasure, he is rich indeed.

Called Higher

Ira Hochstrasser died October 9, 1908, at his home in Wyoming, Ill.

Mrs. Austin W. Merrick, of Corry, Pa., passed away March 8, 1909.

Mrs. Margaret A. Gish, of Randall, Minn., departed this life November 23, 1908, aged seventy-nine years.

Mrs. Adaline Blanchard, of Grand Rapids, Mich., entered into rest recently. She was seventy-eight years of age.

Mrs. Sarah L. Jackson died at the home of her daughter at Ottawa, Minn., February 23, 1909, aged sixty-seven years.

Mrs. Lucy Finch, of Alexandria, Minn., passed on to the higher life recently. She was very much beloved by all who knew her.

R. D. Bills, of Hubbard, Texas, died August 12, 1908, aged seventy. He had been a reader of the dear old Herald for ten or twelve years.

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 585, and write them for full information.

TRY a cooling fresh fruit pudding the next warm day.

¶ The simple ingredients are: A custard of eggs, milk and Kingsford's Corn Starch, poured over berries or any fresh fruit, and put on ice to thoroughly chill. One box of berries will serve the whole family.

¶ Good cooks know scores of Summer uses for

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

It makes ice cream far smoother and finer grained. Some time, instead of dairy cream — try "mock cream" on fruits. Make it of Kingsford's, a little milk and fruit juice. The Book tells.

¶ Send a post card today, and we will mail without charge our remarkable little Cook Book "O"— with One Hundred Cool Desserts for Hot Weather.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, OSWEGO, N. Y.
NATIONAL STARCH CO., Successors

3 IN ONE — REGISTERED TRADE MARK

"3-in-One" brightens everything about home or office; injures nothing, not even soiling hands.

"3-in-One" is the only CLEAN HOUSE OIL. Oils bicycles and sewing machines. Good bottle and book free. Write quick. 3-in-One Oil Co. 54 B'way, New York.

Rider Agents Wanted

in each town to ride and exhibit sample 1909 model. Write for Special Offer.
Finest Guaranteed 1909 Models $10 to $27
with Coaster-Brakes and Puncture-Proof tires.
1907 & 1908 Models all of best makes $7 to $12
500 Second-Hand Wheels All makes and models, good as new..... $3 to $8
Great Factory Clearing Sale.
We Ship On Approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow
TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL.
Tires, coaster-brakes, parts, repairs and sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalogs and offer. Write now.
MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. A-71 Chicago

The great durability and handsome appearance of concrete products is now recognized world wide. Big Money Making plants being established every where. It will pay you to investigate our proposition for a factory in your locality. We furnish machines, molds and everything needed. Write for particulars.
THE PETTYJOHN CO., 673 N. Sixth St., TERRE HAUTE, IND.

DEAF 25 YEARS
CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

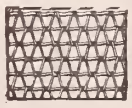
Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

Tricycles for Cripples and Chairs for Invalids

Complete catalog sent on request. Write for it today.
WORTHINGTON CO., 201 Cedar St., Elyria, Ohio

FREE BOOK ON DEVELOPERS
with every order of
ENSIGN FILMS
Hauff Developers, Imperial Plates Sussex Paper
Free catalogue on request
G. GENNERT, Dept. 20
NEW YORK, 24-26 E. 13th St.
CHICAGO, 20-24 State St.



FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We pay freight. Catalogue free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

AN ANGLER'S ELYSIUM

According to advertisements all summer resorts are alike. They are the best ever—but if fishing is better anywhere else than it is in "Georgian Bay" we do not know where it is. There is a greater variety of fish in this water than anywhere else, and they are always hungry. The only place where you can afford to fish is where the fish are numerous, big and delicious in flavor, and that place is Georgian Bay—so the fishermen say. Suppose you send for booklet, issued by Grand Trunk Railway System free, telling about the home of the bass, pickerel, pike and the noble trout family. Address W. S. Cookson, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business.
Don't pass up this chance Write today for particulars.
CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO., 290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

Magnetic Corn Salve guaranteed to remove and forever destroy the most painful and obstinate hard or soft corns. Full sized 15c box postpaid for 5c. Agents wanted. Magnetic Co, box 57, Pekin, Ill.

Cost of Industrial Insurance Further Reduced Voluntarily

By

The Prudential

Industrial policies now being issued have Increased Benefits, averaging over 10% and will Give Many Millions of Dollars of Life Insurance more than the old rates would have provided.

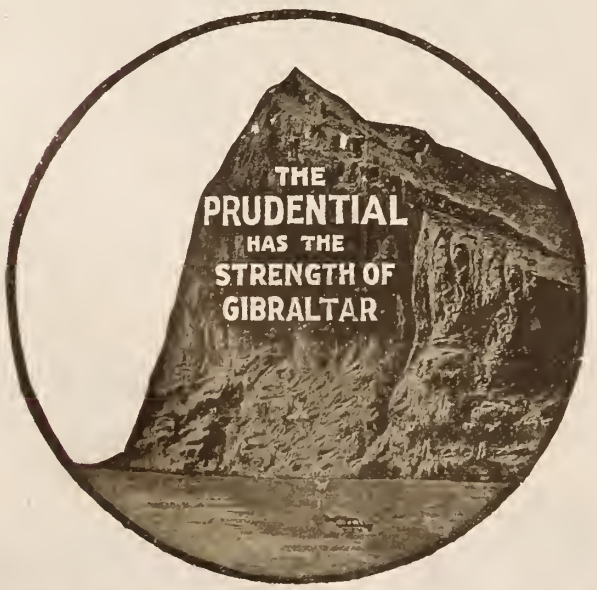
Over 20 Million Dollars

Extra Life Insurance has also been added voluntarily to Industrial Policies issued since January 1st, 1907, and in force July 1st, 1909, with no increase in Premiums.

This is the Greatest Benefit to Policyholders Ever Granted by The Prudential, Giving More Life Insurance for the Money than any similar Policy Ever Before Issued.



You want the Best in Life Insurance at the Lowest Cost.
Write to The Prudential for it. State Age. Address Dept. 70.

The Prudential

INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President. Home Office, NEWARK, N. J.

Incorporated as a Stock Company by the State of New Jersey

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, July 14, 1909

VOLUME 32 — NUMBER 28
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Photographed by a Missionary for The Christian Herald

Sorting Clothing in the Gregorian Church, Adana, for the Destitute Armenians

Questions and Answers

D. A. F., Charlotte, N. C. Please explain the meaning of James 1:8.

It means a fickle or wavering person, not hypocritical, but weak and vacillating. Such a one is here spoken of in contrast with one who is of strong, simple faith, who trusts God implicitly and whose trust is abundantly rewarded.

A. J. S., Michigan. Are there wild pigeons in Africa, as there used to be in this country?

There are pigeons in Africa, one of the most noted varieties being the Fruit Pigeons, the Vinago of some writers. There are, however, not such flocks as used to be seen in this country. At one time, probably the largest flocks of pigeons in the world were found in America. One flock seen by Wilson, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, consisted of several millions.

Subscriber, Chaumont, N. Y. Give the meaning of this passage of Scripture: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

Jesus referred to his approaching death on the cross. The passage means, inferentially, "If I be lifted up, I, through the virtue of that uplifting, will draw all men unto me." The cross is an essential and crowning part of the great scheme of redemption. It has an attraction for the whole world, civilized and savage, learned and ignorant. It breaks down all opposition by convincing men of the surpassing love of Christ for humanity.

D. W. S., Phillips, Me. What is the official language of China?

The Mandarin is the language of the official class.

D. B. G., La Salle, Ill. In reading your issue of April 28, I note your reply to "Mrs. M. E. H., California," in regard to inquiry why the gift of divine healing to the apostles has come into disuse. You refer to the claim of the "Emmanuel Movement" in that direction. Is not Christian Science an older and more established move in the direction named?

It is not our custom to enter into any discussion of the relative merits of the different cults, religious or philosophical. To do so would be simply to invite endless and profitless controversy. We therefore leave to others to decide for themselves the validity of the various claims. God is as omnipotent to-day as in apostolic times, but human conditions have greatly changed. Moreover, divine healing for profit is not the divine healing of apostolic days, but something very different, as any one who reflects for a moment must admit.

T. B., Saucona, Pa. Can a true Christian, having property when he dies, withhold from one of his children, in his will, its part of the property because such child did not use its father well during his lifetime, always disobeying his orders?

Such an act might be set aside, and would not be a Christian one, if it were done in bitterness or resentment. We ought to forgive, as we ourselves hope to be forgiven, and especially those of our own blood and kin. If the child has already received its proper share, or is otherwise provided for, the case might be different.

Mrs. J. F., West Sand Lake, N. Y. I read recently that "The excavations from the Panama Canal during one month aggregated 1,838,468 cubic yards. This amount of dirt would cover ten city blocks to a depth of forty feet." What is done with this dirt?

The dirt taken from the excavations, we are informed by one of the engineers, has been used to fill up depressions along the sides of the canal and to cover swampy places that have hitherto been breeders of disease. You will have to write to the State Engineer, Albany, N. Y., for an answer to the other question you sent.

R. S. G., Quissett, Mass. Can you tell something about international yacht contests? Have any of the American yachts ever been built in Europe? Did the cup originally belong to America, and has it ever been won by England in American waters?

The international cup was offered by England and the first race, August 22, 1851, around the Isle of Wight, England, was won by the American yacht America, and the cup has been called the America's cup ever since. England has tried to regain it thirty-one times since, but without success. All of the American yachts were of American construction. The regulations would require it, aside from patriotic reasons.

O. C. K., Ithaca, N. Y. Who was the first President of the United States who received a salary, and what was the amount?

Washington was paid a salary from the time of his first inauguration. On February 8, 1793, the President's salary was fixed at $25,000.

I. W. H., Pittsfield, Mass. There was a very pleasant picture in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of June 2, representing the joy of New York "society women" in a charitable fair. If the providing for one "home" gives such joy to those who participate, why not make that a national source of joy, in which all can unite? This "fete" reached only one place of suffering, in one county. But that was enough for a sample. There is a world of want and suffering in this country unprovided for. Why not be broad-minded and systematic and relieve every one who is in want? If the providing creates such pleasure in New York for those who contribute, and carries happiness to that "home" in Dutchess County, this might be an investment to yield an hundredfold, surpassing that of stocks and bonds in Wall Street and much safer. What prevents this government making

Soldiers Looking for the Wounded in Rognes, France, Wrecked by Earthquake

PICTURES just received in this country show the devastation wrought in the south of France by the recent earthquake. Though not so extensive a disaster as the shock at Messina, many of the scenes witnessed by the rescuers were as pitiful as those in Sicily. Many lives were lost and quite a number of large towns were completely wrecked. Aix, Lambesc, St. Cannat and Rognes were among those which suffered severely. Homeless people camped in the fields while the soldiers searched the ruins. Fortunately, the worst shock came when the people were out-of-doors.

the people of this country happy the same way, by adopting a system of organization like that for common schools in every county? Then every one in need would be helped, and all would be happy. Those who are idle now could earn enough to support all the sick. Give them work, and we would soon cease to be a nation of paupers, and American manhood would be restored to its rightful inheritance.

"The poor ye have always with you" (Matt. 26:11). Poverty, the fruit of sin and selfishness, no doubt will exist while the world lasts, or at least until millennial conditions prevail. Organized State and local charities, old age pensions and abundant employment would greatly aid in alleviating distress. The world to-day is engaged in larger benevolences than ever before, but the solution of the problem of poverty is probably one beyond human reach. Let each of us do his or her share in relieving the distress that lies nearest to us and which we can readily reach, and great good will be accomplished.

A. M. C., Wilmington, Del. When were patents first issued by the United States?

The first patent law was approved the 10th of April, 1790. Three patents were granted the first year, thirty-three the second year, and eleven the third. One of the first patents of the first year was to Samuel Hopkins, for making potash and pearlash.

M. E., Crane, La. Three years ago, in a New Year's editorial, you suggested that Christians take a half hour every morning for Bible reading. I began at once to put your suggestion into practice, although I found it hard to do so, for, like Martha, I am "cumbered with much serving." But oh, the joy, the peace, the strength and the foretaste of heaven that I have found in these half-hours at the Master's feet, have more than repaid me for the effort.

This furnishes what may prove a profitable suggestion for many other readers.

E. B. P., Oklahoma City. Why is the Atlantic cable larger in the shallow water than in the deep?

It was found necessary to increase the size of the cable near shore to prevent its being torn by anchors, etc.

E. M. L., Philadelphia, Pa. At the dispersion, did any of the Jews go into China?

It is presumed that they did. Isa. 49:12 mentions "the land of Sinim" as the extremity of the known world. There is no direct statement in the Bible, however, supporting this presumption; but a colony of Jews has been found in China, which gives color to the theory that some must have settled there.

R. A. McL., Pewamo, Mich. 1. What is the area of Palestine (the Holy Land) in square miles? 2. Is The Other Wise Man, by Dr. Van Dyke, published separate from other stories?

1. The area of Palestine is about 12,000 square miles. 2. The story of The Other Wise Man is published as a separate book.

H. S. D., Michigan City, Ind. 1. Is the wireless telephone much in use? 2. Are any States, as a whole, gone "dry"?

No; the wireless telephone is used to a certain extent in the Navy, but for land use it is still an experiment. 2. Nine States are dry.

M. P. M., Colchester, Ill. Please give General U. S. Grant's full name.

Ulysses Simpson Grant.

E. R. R., Albany, Wis. Fifty and more years ago we used to hear a great deal about the "Maelstrom." Our geographies had pictures of ships being drawn into it. What has become of it? Was it a fable of Norse mythology? Does it still exist, or what has become of it?

The maelstrom still exists. It is an ocean current between the Norwegian islands of Mosken and Moskenas. It is only when the northwesterly gales blow against the tide that the current is dangerous.

C. J. H.; Burton, O. Why are no quotation marks used in the Bible?

The use of quotation marks is comparatively modern. The earliest books had practically no punctuation marks to speak of. In printing the Bible, even now, the old, time-honored forms are adhered to very largely, out of respect to the character and dignity of the book.

Subscriber, Monteith, Ia. What is the law in the State of Iowa in regard to the disposition of a man's real estate and personal property after death, when leaving a widow without children? What share does she get, and who will fall heir to her share when both have been formerly married and have children?

Widow takes dower and personal property exempt from execution. Husband's children take the rest. As the law is intricate, better ask an Iowa lawyer.

J. W. B., Aurora, Mo. Explain origin, dates, organization and purpose of "Flag Day."

June 14 was selected as Flag Day because on June 14, 1777, Congress adopted the United States flag. The American Flag Association is endeavoring to have the day observed throughout the United States as a day on which every one will fly an American flag and "show it honor."

M. S., Tulsa, Okla. What is the law in Oklahoma regarding the disposition of a man's real estate and personal property after death, when leaving widow without children?

The widow takes one-half, if husband leaves a father, mother, brother, sister, nephews or nieces. If none of these survive decedent, widow takes the whole estate.

L. A. C., Bay Port, Mich. 1. If a marriage ceremony is performed on Sunday, is it perfectly legal according to law? 2. Does that invalidate the wife's claim to her share of the property in case of the husband's death?

1. Yes. 2. No. See Law Reports of your State.

Miscellaneous

F. W., Milford, Conn. Address Miss Lucy Rider Meyer, at 4949 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

M. B., Brattleboro, Vt. We have been unable to find the poem you mentioned in any published collection.

Mrs. G. C., Hooper, Colo. Gross feeding, philosophers say, means gross living and thinking. Our bodies should be kept pure, as fit temples for the Holy Spirit. Your decision is, therefore, a wise one.

Reader, Watford, Canada. Marriages between those of close relationship are generally regarded as inadvisable, though they may not be specially prohibited by law. There is nothing in the Bible itself concerning the marriage of cousins.

Mrs. E. W. B., Bellingham, Wash. Already repeatedly explained in MAIL-BAG. The rules concerning women's head-covering, etc., had a purely local significance, suited to the times, places and conditions when and where they were written.

Ethel T., Arnold, Kan. See answer to Mrs. E. W. B., Bellingham, Wash.

Kansas, Fort Scott, Kan. 1. Predestination is set forth in Rom. 8:29, 9:11-18; Eph. 1:5, etc. It is not emphasized in any Presbyterian church to-day that we know of. 2. World's religious census (estimated) shows 18,650,000 Methodists, 9,230,000 Baptists, 12,250,000 Presbyterians, 29,200,000 Episcopalians. For answer to your third question we must refer you to some good religious encyclopedia.

W. E., Napoleon, O. 1. See Ezek. 18:4; Matt. 10:28; James 4:12; James 5:20; I. Cor. 15:42-54. 2. Sheol means "the place of departed spirits," or "the state of the dead." It is also used to signify the grave. 3. The second death (Rev. 20:14) is, according to leading commentators, "admitting of no rebellion of thought, word or deed against God, but a deep, everlasting woe, shame and irreversible separation from the saints; an eternal forfeiture of honor."

M. J. J., Cranbrook, Canada. 1. No one can say positively. 2. Same answer as No. 1. The "lion and the lamb" passage is a figurative description of the millennium. 3. When one takes Christ into the heart and life, there is a change and sin becomes hateful, as the person realizes the meaning and duties of Christian living. To be a Christian is to be like Christ; to follow him and to do what he would have us do, and to look to him always to guide and help and strengthen us. 4. Repent, ask God for his Son's sake to forgive, and signalize your new allegiance by joining the Church.

NEW YORK, JULY 14, 1909

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

A Group of the Leading European and American Delegates to the Presbyterian International Council

1 Retiring President Rev. J. O. Dykes, Eng.; 2 Prest. Rev. D. J. Burrell, N. Y.; 3 Gen. Sec. Rev. G. D. Mathews, Eng.; 4 U. S. Sec. Rev. W. H. Roberts, Phila.; 5 Rev. J. Ross Stevenson, in whose Church the Council met.

THE PRESBYTERIAN WORLD-COUNCIL

THREE hundred delegates, representing all sections of America and various foreign countries, attended the Ninth General Council of the Alliance of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian system, which met in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, June 15 to 25. It was an international assemblage. Any church organized on Presbyterian principles, holding the supreme authority of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments in matters of faith and morals, and whose creed is in harmony with the consensus of the Reformed Confessions, was eligible for admission to the Alliance. Previous General Councils have been held in Edinburgh, 1877; Philadelphia, 1880; Belfast, 1884; London, 1888; Toronto, 1892; Glasgow, 1896; Washington, D. C., 1899, and Liverpool, 1904. The meetings in New York were characterized by conservative orthodoxy and liberal tolerance. The first week was "a Calvin week," as addresses and discussions relative to that father of Reformed Churches occupied most of the sessions. The conviction of the speakers, whether from colleges or pulpits of this land or across the seas, seemed to be that the Calvinistic conscience is not dead, that Calvinistic doctrine generally obtains to-day and that Calvinism is the mother and defender of liberty.

Sir Alexander Simpson

"Calvin saw truth for himself," said the Rev. George William Knox, of Union Theological Seminary; "Calvin, however, would have been the last to claim that he be accepted as final authority, for he taught that truth should be free from the bondage of tradition."

The Rev. David Woodside, of Glasgow, said: "Calvin could not speak for all time. Every age must interpret Jesus Christ for itself, even as Calvin himself did." Another Scotchman, the Rev. Buchanan Blake, gave it as his belief that religion is more than theology, and a working acquaintance with the Bible and a mastery of the art of getting near to men more valuable than a mere technical scholarship.

"We are standing on the threshold of a new era of religious teaching," said the venerable president, the Rev. J. Oswald Dykes, D.D., principal of the Presbyterian College at Cambridge, England. "God is ever beckoning his people onward and religion cannot stand still while science is advancing. Christ rebuked his people for being blind to the spirit of the times. I speak of this as an age of change. We all can dimly feel, even the most conservative, the old order giving place to the new. Altered social conditions call for a new application of the old work of saving souls by the Gospel. Our advance must be moral as well as material. This is a missionary age and an age of socialistic doctrines. We admit that the doctrinal fortresses over which the confessional flag was once raised are now silently being evacuated. Our creeds are changing, in order that we may co-operate with each other, instead of spending our time in controversy. But in this time of change men's souls are stirred. We all need to be mutually tolerant and patient."

During the second week of the Council, many subjects of vital interest were presented for discussion, including foreign missions, home missions, temperance and Sabbath observance. Every speaker was a person of more or less distinction, and all the addresses were well worth while crossing the continent or the ocean to hear or to deliver. A decidedly unique feature of the meetings was the total absence of instrumental music. The beautiful organ of the church remained silent throughout the services. In deference to the convictions of the more conservative members, music was confined to the metrical version of the Psalms led by Precentor Lewis W. Armstrong, without instrumental accompaniment.

Great interest centred around the titled delegates from Great Britain. Sir Samuel Chisholm, of Glasgow, gave an encouraging report of the progress of temperance in his country. "In all Scotland," said he, "there is not one public-house which sells a drop of whisky on Sunday. There is a large and ever-increasing number of total abstainers in all ranks of life. The strongest power in the world is public opinion, and when the Church gives its influence in no uncertain way the cause of total abstinence must win."

While lord-provost (mayor) of Glasgow, a few years ago, Sir Samuel became deeply interested in the liquor problem and other social questions, and since that time has devoted considerable time and attention to the temperance cause. He continued his investigations on this line during his visit to this country. Sir Samuel is deeply interested in the religious life of boys and is president of several public institutions. At a reception given him in New York, he said that he "felt it his duty while mayor not only to see that there were better houses for the people, but that there should be better people in the houses."

Sir Alexander Simpson, of Edinburgh, spoke on "City Evangelization." "What the city needs is a Gospel that preaches the need of redemption to Nicodemus as well as to the woman of Samaria. Earnest members of different denominations, minimizing their differences and emphasizing their points of agreement, should work together in the churches, impressing on parents the need of religious training of the children in the home, encouraging study of the Bible and doing evangelistic work in the home and in the Bible class."

Professor Jas. G. Simpson described the growth of the "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon" movement, attributing its success to the dominant tone of brotherliness, sympathy and mutual helpfulness that characterizes the meetings. The motto of the society is "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brothers." The objects are "to win men for Christ and the Church" (not any particular church, the one best suited by circumstances); and "to promote the welfare of the neighborhood in which they live." These distinguished men come of a family noted for achievements and practical interest in medicine and philanthropy. Chloroform was discovered by Sir Alexander's uncle, James Young Simpson. While Sir Alexander was a student, he was elected one of the presidents of the Royal Medical Society. In addition to his medical work he has paid great attention to evangelistic work in Edinburgh. His son has traveled extensively in European and Asiatic Russia and is engaged in biological research. He is professor of natural science in New College, Edinburgh, and United Free Church College in Glasgow. He has written much and, like his father, is interested in religious and social problems. Professor Simpson was married about a year ago to Miss Helen Day, of Indianapolis, Ind. Mrs.

Prof. Jas. G. Simpson

Continued on page 593

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis *

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

TEXT: Mark 10:22—"And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved."

THIS rich young ruler is one of the most fascinating figures in the New Testament. In disposition he was most lovable, while his manhood was of the highest order. He had the serious temper also, which is the first sign of greatness in young men. He was reverent in spirit, he had a hungry mind, he was eager, ingenuous and courteous, being altogether praiseworthy. From the very moment that Jesus saw him, the Master loved the young ruler. Indeed, the words that describe his affection for the youth are the words used to describe his love for John, the beloved disciple. There are two kinds of friendship. There is an exterior friendship based on neighborhood, or commercial partnership, or political plans. But friendship is also an interior quality, in that two men hate the same social wrongs, cherish the same political and moral ideals, and then the two coalesce like two drops of water, and become one. Straightway Jesus tested this youth, to make sure of his worth, and then he widened the little inner circle of friendship and made a place for the young ruler.

Every generation has one outstanding man. When that one man of genius, who held the heart of the people in His hand, made an overture of friendship to the rich young ruler, what an opportunity was that upon which he had chanced! Addressing his judges, Socrates exclaimed, "At what price would one not estimate an hour's converse with Homer or Hesiod?" But at what price would a youth, who aspired to be the leader of his generation, not estimate daily converse with the greatest popular leader of his day? At what price would a student of ethics and morals not estimate the friendship and daily instruction of the one man of moral genius of that epoch? Oh, what an overture was that! One longs to see the young ruler rise up, fling away his baubles, forsake all and follow his Master to influence, fame and fortune! But something blinded the rich young ruler's eyes and cast a glamour over his vision. The jewel slipped between his fingers. He tossed the gold away. He lost his treasure when he made the great refusal.

Striving Toward Perfection

Consider the reasonableness of Christ's command. It was not a question of the rich young ruler's salvation, but of his perfection. Ambitious for spiritual supremacy, the youth asked: "What shall I do to be perfect?" For the rich young ruler was one of those noble and occasional spirits that are not content with the better, but long for the best. It is one thing to be saved, so as by fire. It is another thing to have an abundant entrance, and come home like a prince from victorious wars, to have all the hosts come out to meet and greet the leader. No question about his integrity; he had kept all the commandments from his youth up. The problem was a problem of influence, how to make his gold and official position to flame his name and character out into all the world. Jesus was showing him how to make his name immortal forever, how to make his influence shine like a star, that would never die out of the world's sky. He bade him do the rare, wonderful and godlike thing. He seemed to be one of the occasional and gifted souls who can sacrifice and lift themselves up, until, like a star, they dwell apart from and above their fellows. But when he had gazed long upon the vision of ideal perfection and immortal influence, the youth stood long in silence, and then, wistfully, he shook his head and sorrowfully went away. It is said that "he was sad"—not that he was startled, not that he was angry, not that he was bitter. Reason approved Christ's counsel—otherwise he would have contradicted Jesus. Christ's advice was not impractical and visionary—otherwise he would have gone away mocking the dreamer. His judgment affirmed the practicability of Jesus, otherwise he would have been bitter, and stormed against the Master. But Jesus was right. The one course that was open was either to do what Jesus commanded, or else to remain silent. His own heart condemned him. At last, silently and sadly, the youth stole away.

Grieved was this young ruler? How could it be otherwise? He knew the man that he was, and now he saw the vision of the man he ought to be. Oh, the great gulf that separated the real man from the ideal man! He had achieved the better. Had he strength to climb the hills of Difficulty, where the Angel of the Best dwelt, tempting and alluring him upward toward those glorious heights, where perfect beauty, ideal truth, ever dwell? Verily, the hour of destiny had come. Choose he must, and that quickly. But he compromised. He made the great refusal. Ah! it is Daniel Webster, turning his back on his vision of liberty and exchanging his birthright, in the ideal, for the chance of the Presidency. It is Daniel Webster, after the fugitive slave law, walking in an inferno of remorse and gnawed by memory and by conscience. Who is this rich young ruler who made the great refusal? It is Stephen A. Douglas, knowing that liberty was right, but choosing to defend the slave-owner and the wrong, making the great refusal when Lincoln urged him to break with expediency and live and die for perfect justice. Who is the rich young ruler? It is that rich banker in London, scoffing at Lord Shaftesbury and his gifts for social reform. Turning away from his vision of helpfulness for the outcasts, the poor children and the starving wretches in the Whitechapel road, he pulls down his blinds in his palace near St. James' Park, shuts his purse with a snap, stops his ears against the call of the poor, hardens his heart and dies as he had lived, in selfishness, and his name has perished forever. Shaftesbury forsook all to follow Him, and his rich friend made the great refusal. In hell Dante turned to Virgil and, putting his hand on the poet's arm, whispered, "Who is that young patrician, gnawed with remorse and memory?" And Virgil whispered, "Let us flee! It is that youth who made the great refusal."

The Note of Unreality

At first blush, the rich young ruler acted upon motives of prudence and sound judgment. For the moment it seemed as if Jesus was asking him to wreck his whole earthly career. The gist of the matter is in this—he had become a ruler, being young, simply because he was rich. Tradition, precedent, and formal law had decreed that only old men could be rulers in Israel. But this rich young ruler had turned longing eyes toward the Sanhedrin. So skilfully had he handled his gold, his social position and political influence, that all precedents were overthrown and he was made a ruler. But spiritual supremacy asked for the mellow judgment, the ripe reason and the gentle spirit. Some things cannot be forced—the ripening of wheat, the mellowing of apples, the maturing of souls. A young judge can condemn a criminal, and with iron justice hang the wretch; it is given to an old man to transform a bad man into a good man. It is better to heal the soul than to break the body. Young men for leadership in war, strong men for railways and factories, and fleets of ships; but we want no boys on the bench, where justice and spiritual supremacy rule. What nothing else can do for the intellect and the heart, time, experience and age alone can accomplish. Outwardly the rich young man had achieved his ambition and was enthroned with the gray-haired members of the highest court in Jerusalem. And Jesus told the rich young ruler plainly that he did not ring true. Being a ruler was more than seeming to be one. There was the note of unreality in a young man, with his inexperience, wishing to do an old man's work. He had the experience of twenty summers, but wanted the honors of seventy ripe and rounded years.

Unearned Honors

It is one thing for a soldier to be in the Old Guard, surviving a hundred battles and winning the great Victorian cross when the soldiers carried the hero off the field of Waterloo. It is quite another thing for a rich youth to go to the Old Soldiers' Home and with gold buy an aged hero's Victorian cross, and pin it on his coat. The rich young ruler was decorated with a medal that he had never won upon the battlefield, where sin went down before the onset of right and justice. When the young ruler asked Jesus what he should do to be perfect, the answer was quick and searching: "Strike the note of reality. But for your gold you would never have been elected a ruler. You have not earned the right to sit in judgment on other men's souls. If you would be perfect, and still keep your position as ruler, give your gold to the poor, and quickly achieve the maturity, the mellowness, that work for the poor alone can give. Come with me, and together we will search out the heartbroken, feed the hungry, save the prodigal, be light to the darkened, be life to the dead.

"There must be no schism in the soul. You must not be young and inexperienced, and seem to arrogate to yourself maturity, and the right to judge older and wiser men."

Missing a Great Career

How reasonable! how just! how generous! The rich young ruler was outwardly sound, but inwardly he had played the prodigal. Oh, how we long to see him rise up, and forsake all, and return to his Father's house! What an opportunity he lost! He might have been the great apostle to launch Christ's enterprise. This youth had the position and the genius that fitted him to have divided honors with Paul. He might have saved the early Church from a century of persecution, and the baptism of blood and fire. When Sir Francis Xavier heard the call, he left his gold and his castle, and became immortal forever. But this youth—ah, the gold slips between his fingers down into the sea! And little wonder that Dante fled from the youth who made the great refusal!

Christ is not unreasonable. God asks only one step at a time. He gives strength for to-day's burden—no more. He gives light for to-day's path—no more. "Give us this day our daily bread"—not bread for five years from to-day. He sends help, never too soon—that is our safety; never too late—that is our salvation. The first step along the path Christ pointed out was no harder for the youth than the first step he took along the line of his own selfishness and ease. The Christian life is a reasonable life, a natural life, a beautiful life and an easy life, as well as a heroic and hard one. There is a great chasm that separates the babe from the statesman and the sage and the poet, but the child grows so naturally, by taking a step at a time, that suddenly this babe, named Isaac Newton, wakens up to find himself a scientist, full of years and honors. It can never be reasonable to refuse to obey Christ, because of the difficulties of the Christian life or the vastness of the enterprise, until a child is justified in refusing to go to school, because it is a great thing to be a scholar; in refusing to undertake to become a clerk, because it is a great thing to be a merchant or manufacturer. For every consideration of reason rebukes the young ruler for refusing obedience because of the magnitude of the life proposed.

Total Indecision

Unconsciously, also, the rich young ruler was influenced by the desire to postpone the decision. The one duty of the moment was instant action, while delay lost all. He had no power to cast himself fully into Christ's cause. He failed by not taking his courage into his hand. The difference between two young men of equal gifts is the difference of will, decision and instant resolution. We have all known young men of great promise, courteous manners, superior natural gifts, ripe culture, who just miss success. A friend goes to them with a splendid opening. And the young man says, "That seems just the opening I want. I will look into that at once." When a month has passed by, and the opportunity has gone, then the youth wakes up and decides to act. There are men who remember the treasures in the orchard immediately after the robins have picked the last red cherry. The world is full of moulders, who decide upon the pattern an hour after the iron has cooled. Yesterday opportunity knocked at the man's door, and day after to-morrow he will decide to arise and open to the stranger, to discover that she has gone forever. To the farmer comes a strange conjunction of events in May, and soil and sun and seed conspire, but he who postpones to July need not expect that October will postpone also her frosts. The men who fail in the world have not failed because God and Nature did not give them harvests. There are many men whom Nature bids go into the fields and sow in May, and they decide to obey in August. Then Nature and God bid them gather the harvest in September.

Continued on next page

* Pastor, Plymouth Church, Brooklyn.

MANY STILL SENDING AID TO ARMENIA

LETTERS still continue to come daily from many States, enclosing contributions for the relief of the survivors of the massacres in Asiatic Turkey. Many of the writers have felt a deep sympathetic interest in the Armenians ever since the massacres of ten years ago. In almost every instance, the gift is accompanied by a prayer that the sufferings of the persecuted race may be relieved and their future peace assured.

Orphan Children in One of the Armenian Relief Camps

H. W., Akron, O. ($5), writes: "They [the Armenians] sacrificed their lives for Christ's sake and for his cause. May the Lord bless this mite, is the prayer of one who loves Jesus." Mrs. S. A. P., Bellingham, Wash. ($1), writes: "This looks to me just like a drop in the bucket, but it will possibly assuage the pangs of some poor helpless sufferer." Mrs. E. W. P., Jersey City, N. J. ($1), writes: "May God open the hearts of more of his people to give to suffering humanity. My own heart goes out in sympathy for those poor, distressed, down-trodden people. May God help them, is my prayer."

W. H., Snow Camp, N. C. ($1), writes: "Sent in love and sympathy for an unoffending people, who are enduring unheard of suffering and irreparable loss." J. M. N., Utica, N. Y. ($1), writes: "I had already given all I thought I could spare, but I am enclosing $1 more to help swell the amount you are likely to receive—just a wee bit." Mrs. C. K., Warren, Pa. ($1.02), writes: "This is for your work, to be used where most needed." Mrs. W. B., Massena, N. Y. ($1), writes: "May God grant that the world shall witness no more such horrors as the 'unspeakable Turk' has inflicted upon the people of Armenia."

Miss E. M. B., Philadelphia, Pa. ($5), writes: "I was saving this for another purpose, but after reading in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of the terrible need of the poor people I feel that I cannot withhold it. It was a gift, and I could find many uses for it, but my heart was so deeply stirred that I send it cheerfully in his name." G. A., Waterbury, Conn. ($1), writes: "Sorry I could not have made it more, but I am an old man in my ninety-first year." Dr. J. V. B., Petoskey, Mich. ($5), writes: "My sympathies call for a donation. The condition of the Armenians is truly sad and makes one's heart ache for them." Mrs. C. P. W., Ripon, Calif. ($2), writes: "I desire to do what little I can to afford relief for these poor people. I wish I were able to send many times this sum."

E. J. H., Colorado Springs, Colo. ($10), sent through a friend who writes: "Something more than $130 have been sent through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and the American Board from this place, but how small for such need! May God have mercy and defend and relieve the sufferers." Mrs. A. M., College Hill, Cincinnati, O. ($4.20). This lady encloses a list of twelve members of the "Methodist Home for the Aged," at College Hill, by whom this contribution was made up, and she writes: "We have been deeply moved by the details of the Armenian massacres. Personally, I have been familiar with the missions in Turkey since my school days in Mary Lyon's Seminary. She parted with some of her best teachers, and gave godspeed to many pupils to go to those and other missions. I feel that I must share my mite with the hungry, the homeless and wounded, for Christ's sake, and so I have made this small collection from friends here."

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. S., Eureka, Tex. ($5), writes: "May God's blessing attend it, and may he so restrain the rulers of that section that such a thing may never occur again." M. A. A., Montreal, Canada ($2), writes: "I cannot think how all the great powers of Europe could stand aside and see their poor brethren murdered in thousands and give no help. Surely the Lord will require it at their hands." A. J. H. P., Reading, Pa. ($5), writes: "May the Lord mete out to the perpetrators of these deeds a just punishment for their fiendish acts. He alone is able to punish righteously and justly at the same time."

J. M., Princeton, Ind ($10), writes: "Go on with your good work stirring up the people to help the unfortunates, and may this reach them in time to relieve some poor suffering one." Mother and daughter, West Chicago, Ill. ($2), write: "May the dear Father help the poor sufferers, and give strength to his children who are ministering and giving needy attention to the poor and sick and dying." H. D., Eureka, Calif. ($5), writes: "They have had an awful experience, but verily they shall have a great reward. These are they which came out of great tribulation." A farmer's wife, Mercersburg, Pa. ($1), writes: "I wish it were more, but, by the blessing of God, it will help."

. . .

As the suffering in Asiatic Turkey is now greatly abated, and abundant relief is flowing in from many quarters, it is believed that the period of most urgent need has passed. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Relief Fund will close on July 20. Any contributions received after that date will be returned to the senders.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

About Thanksgiving time, when the first snow comes, they decide to build a granary. The rest of the winter is occupied with wondering why they did not have some store laid up for the winter. When the ruby glass runs like water, that is the time to pour it into the mould. Not a second may be lost. The true man acts at the first note of duty. The successful man bestirs himself at the first overture of opportunity. Life is large, but it has no room for delay. What robbed this youth of fame and immortal influence? The answer is immediate—delay, indecision and drifting until a more convenient season.

Perhaps the youth was in the mood when it was easier to dream than to change moral impressions and ideas into actions. Nothing is easier to form than the habit of spiritual revery. Some natures there are that exhale aspirations like clouds. But the desert lands of Sahara are not cloudless lands—the skies above the hot sands are often overcast, only the white clouds are too high, and never condense into raindrops. Years ago, in Paris, I made the round of the American studios. One day my artist friend took me into a garret. Going up the steps he told me that he would show me the most glorious dreamer in France. I found the low ceiling covered with pencil sketches; every inch of the walls and the very floor plastered over with outlines. Every morning found the artist at his canvas. In one ceaseless procession the visions passed before him—angels, seraphs, sunsets, trees, castles, scarred cliffs, golden clouds, palace, hut, canoe, ocean steamer, mound, volcano, peasant, prince, tropic luxuries—ten thousand sketches—not one of them complete. A thousand dreams and faces in the air, but no power to pin them down to a canvas and fix them there forever. No artist had more glorious visions of beauty, but men with one-tenth the imaginative power painted ten times the number of pictures and had a hundred times the income. The artist who indulged in his dreams and lived on his reveries was like multitudes who dream their dreams of ideal perfection, plan noble deeds of helpfulness, but do practically almost nothing. For years they have been going to join the church, but they have never aligned themselves with the forces of right. For other years they have had their hours when they planned what they would do for Christ's poor and weak, but these are still only clouded aspirations. And now the visions are beginning to die away. No longer is the heart agitated with joyous tumult at the thought of Jesus Christ and his overtures of friendship. No longer does the pulse beat high with hope at the sound of his footsteps and the stroke of the Divine Stranger knocking at the door. For the harvest is past, and the summer is ended, and they are not saved, having made the great refusal.

The early traditions tell us that this youth, who went away sad, could not stay away, but returned. His great refusal haunted him, the vision of immortal influence tormented his spirit, and at last he rose up and returned to his Master. Some scholars tell us that the rich young man was Lazarus, who lived at Bethany, and that he was among the first of the martyrs. But we question the tradition. Some have thought that the rich young ruler was Saul, who at length became bitter toward his Master, and finally, to justify himself, wrought out the persecution that killed Stephen. But it seems incredible that Paul should not have recalled the greatest hour in his life, the hour when he made the great refusal. We conclude, therefore, that this rich young ruler never found his opportunity again. His name has perished. His influence has passed like the morning dew. His work and career were as evanescent as a drifting cloud. His name might have been one to charm by, but he perished like the falling leaf, leaving a warning, oh, how searching! Oh, all ye young hearts, have ye not drifted long enough? For years ye have postponed the great decision. Will you once more make Dante's great refusal? Is there no one who reads these words in whom the wells of feeling are choked up? Is there no one who reads these words who has come toward mature years and old age, whose ambitions have exploded, whose finest hopes have been snuffed out like candles? Is there no one who begins to chafe under the fetters of habit and passion and to long for deliverance? Are you not weary of your restlessness? Are you not ready to exchange storm and tumult for the calm of the harbor? If sins have uprooted your life, as storms have broken some goodly tree, will you not remember that the Husbandman is abroad in his world garden, and that once more the south wind may blow softly through the broken branches? To you once more comes opportunity. To-day all the moments are big with fate. Oh, listen to the voice!

Master of human destinies am I!
Fame, love and fortune on my footsteps wait.
Cities and fields I walk. I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by
Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden once at every gate!
If sleeping, wake; if feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death: but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury and woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore.
I answer not, and I return no more!

THE PRESBYTERIAN WORLD-COUNCIL

Continued from page 591

Simpson is a sister of Mrs. J. Ross Stevenson.

"The spirit of fraternity, the Christian fellowship and interchange of ideas which mark the Councils are an invaluable uplift," said the Rev. Dr. G. D. Mathews, of London, general secretary. "I consider this meeting in New York most satisfactory and encouraging."

The honor of the presidency of the Alliance now falls to the United States by the election of the Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City.

In summing up the results of the work of the Alliance, the Rev. W. H. Roberts, D.D., of Philadelphia, American secretary of the Alliance, said: "The Alliance has brought about the unification of the foreign mission work of its churches in Brazil, China and other countries, and has also established closer relations between foreign mission workers in other lands. It has secured the adoption of a plan of co-operation in home mission work between the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in the United States. It has brought the influence of the churches of the Reformation to bear upon civil governments in various parts of the world, and has also effectively supported the acceptance of the principle of arbitration for the settlement of controversies between nations. It has brought into practical, sympathetic and mutually beneficial relations many churches maintaining the same type of doctrine and form of government. It has enabled the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches to make themselves distinctly felt as a great power in the life and progress of the Church Universal."

Should Our Women Teach the Chinese?

Leading Pastors, Missionaries and Teachers Unitedly Oppose the "Single Scholar" System

WITH scarcely a dissenting voice, the leading officers of our missionary boards, our prominent pastors and mission workers, have placed themselves on record as opposed to the "single scholar" system, under which a white woman teacher is assigned to each Chinese in Sunday School and mission work. The letters below were written in reply to these four questions, propounded by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

1. Is the present method of teaching Chinese in Sunday School and in classes by individual personal instruction (one woman teacher to every individual Chinese pupil) a proper one to be continued?

2. Has it come within your knowledge that any disagreeable results have grown out of this peculiar system above referred to?

3. Do you consider that this system places the white woman teacher in peril or do you hold the opposite view?

4. If you favor the discontinuance of this system, what substitute would you suggest in its place?

. . .

Would Discontinue the System

I do not believe that the present method of teaching Chinese in Sunday Schools in classes by individual personal instruction—one woman teacher to every individual Chinese pupil—a proper one, and I hope it will be discontinued from this time on.

Second. I have never known any disagreeable results growing out of this particular system above referred to unless a case in Greater New York is an exception, where one of the lady teachers in a Chinese Sunday School married a talented young Chinaman—a young man of considerable means and, as far as I could learn, a gentleman and a Christian. However, I have not fully made up my mind that marriage between American girls and Orientals is to be encouraged.

Third. I have often thought that this system (one woman teacher to every individual Chinese pupil) is apt to place a white woman, especially one lacking maturity, in peril. I certainly would not care to have a young friend of mine put into such a position.

Fourth. Since I favor the discontinuance of this system, I would suggest as a substitute that all the Chinese Sunday Schools be under the direction of some church or group of churches, and that the supervision be as careful as is the supervision of a government school like West Point.

C. C. CREEGAN,
Gen. Sec'y, A. B. C. F. M.,
New York City.

. . .

No Young Women Should Teach Asiatics

In dealing as a missionary with Mohammedans in Turkey, during more than thirty years, I think I have gained their point of view as to the association of young men and women for religious conversation. This point of view does not materially differ from that of other Asiatics who seclude their women. It is summed up in the sentence frequently on the lips of Mohammedan acquaintances: "I cannot understand how you Americans, when no one is watching, can remain by the side of a blooming young woman as unmoved as if she were a man." Nothing further is needed to justify my answers to your questions, here numbered in their order:

1. No woman under fifty years old should be set to teach Asiatic young men. Even classes of young men should not be placed under charge of young women.

2. Many cases have come under my observation in Turkey where young Mohammedans have attended Sunday School classes clearly for the sake of the exciting experience of association with charming young ladies. I have also had to use physical suasion to open a Turk's mind to the idea that he assumed too much.

3. The peril of the young woman is rarely serious. The greatest evil of this native practice is that it causes the aim and meaning of the mission to be misunderstood. When young women are appointed teachers, the raw Asiatic considers them as bait offered by the mission for souls. Missions ought not to be placed under such a stigma, nor share unwittingly in making hypocritical "inquirers."

4. By all means let this ill-devised system be dropped at once. Let men be drafted into the service for teaching Chinese men.

Poor Elsie Sigel will not have died in vain if her bitter sufferings shall lead to the use of thought in choosing methods in missions to Asiatics.

HENRY OTIS DWIGHT,
American Bible Society.
Roselle, N. J.

. . .

An Unsafe and Ineffective System

Regarding question 1, this is my answer: It is my judgment that the present method of teaching Chinese in Sunday School and in classes, by individual instruction by having one woman teacher to every individual Chinese pupil, is not wise, safe nor effective.

Regarding question 2, my answer is: It has come to my knowledge that disagreeable results grow out of this peculiar system. Again and again, while in a rescue mission under the Philadelphia City Missionary Society, I was brought face to face with some of the disastrous consequences of that system.

Regarding question 3, my answer is: From what I have observed and read it is my impression that, when one white woman is placed in the position of a teacher to one Chinaman, it is done at the risk of a result that will mean distress to all concerned.

Regarding question 4, my answer is: The sooner the above mentioned method is relegated to the past the better it will be for the evangelization of the Chinaman in the true sense of the word, and for the workers who go into that department of Christian work.

There should be a man in absolute control of the mission for Chinese. The Chinamen should be put in classes, the same as representatives of other nationalities are treated. The teacher should be a man, or, if this be not practicable, a woman of mature age, with a man present to protect her and suggest control to the Chinamen.

CHARLES M. BOSWELL,
Asst. Sec'y M. E. Home Mission and Church Extension Board.
Philadelphia, Pa.

. . .

A Work Suited to Men Alone

First. Male teachers for Chinese Sunday Schools by all means, and one teacher to each individual where necessary, and it can be done.

Second. I have heard of several instances where harmful results have followed the teaching by women. I know of one case, on the other hand, where a mature woman has been of great service to the Chinese for a number of years, not only in Sunday Schools but in other ways, but exceptions do not make a rule of action. Mature women should teach, if any.

Third. The white woman, in my judgment, is in constant peril in teaching the Chinese.

Churches, Sunday Schools and chapels, or mission schools connected with churches, are always wanting more teachers, so that women who have taken up Chinese work have done so from a decided choice rather than because they were not needed in their own church schools. A great mistake has thus been made, as results have shown. They have abandoned a good work for one of doubtful expediency.

E. P. BANCROFT,
Sec'y for N. Y. and N. J. American Sunday School Union.
New York City.

. . .

Dr. MacArthur Tells His Experience

1. I never could see why Chinamen, rather than men of any other nationality, should be taught in this way. When I had a large Chinese department in Calvary School, we abandoned the old method, except in the case of absolute beginners. We strove to put men of equal attainments into classes, as we taught any other pupils.

2. Yes, I had frequent illustrations of such unfortunate results a few years ago. There never were any such results in connection with my own immediate work; but, fearing such results, we combined our work with that of the Baptist Home Mission Society, of Doyers Street.

3. All, or at least much, depends upon the woman herself, as in all the other relations of life. Sanctified common sense is necessary here as everywhere. As a general principle, it may be said that the whole system of instruction is bad, and ought to be replaced at once by the more general employment of men as teachers and by great care in all the relations of the teachers to their pupils.

4. The employment much more largely of men teachers, and the classification of the pupils according to their attainments, as would be done in the case of pupils of any other race. It would be quite wrong to discontinue missionary work among the Chinese. We ought to thank God for the opportunity of doing foreign missionary work at home. It would be quite wrong, also, to allow recent events to create race prejudice. Against this possibility we must strive.

R. S. MACARTHUR,
Pastor Calvary Baptist Church.
New York City.

. . .

Chinese Sunday Schools Defended

In answer to your questions I would state that, first: I see no impropriety in the present method of teaching as used in our Chinese school, that of individual personal instruction. This does not necessarily mean with female teachers, as our boys are perfectly indifferent whether the teachers are male or female, young or old, so long as they are competent. I think it is generally conceded that a woman is better as an elementary teacher in our schools than a man.

The matter of sex, however, does not enter into the question with us. It is a question of competency and availability only. There are more female than male teachers in our school, for exactly the same reason that this is true in the regular Sunday School.

2. Our Chinese school is one of the oldest in the East, having a history of over twenty-five years, during which time there has never been even a shadow of suspicion of scandal in connection with it.

3. Under proper supervision, which is true in exactly the same sense of any Sunday School or mission work, I do not consider the female teacher in any peril from the system in question.

4. This question is answered in the above statements. I am glad to add these further facts, as of possible interest and use to you: I have fourteen Chinese members of this church, and for genuine Christian character and piety I have no one in my whole membership of about 600 who can excel some of these. There are no more liberal supporters of the church and its enterprises than these Chinese members.

Much has been said of the custom of making gifts to teachers, but it should also be noted that they are as lavish with their gifts to the male as to the female teachers, and indeed often to the whole family of the teacher, even to the little children. It is a characteristic of the Chinese. Finally, I think we should remember that this unfortunate girl was not and never had been engaged in any legitimate Chinese mission work; her murderer was not a regular attendant at any Chinese mission school; she was not his teacher, and Christian charity would prevent further comment on this condition; but surely there is nothing in the case to connect it with the work of Christian teaching, or to bring such wholesale condemnation of methods, largely from those who have no intimate personal knowledge of that of which they speak.

SANFORD C. HEARN,
Pastor First M. E. Church.
Yonkers, N. Y.

. . .

Sanctified Common Sense Needed

When one takes into consideration the fact that here in New York there are about ten thousand Chinamen and about ten Chinese women, I believe that the teachings of the glorious truths of Him who gave his life a redemption for all mankind should be done by men or experienced, consecrated, middle-aged women. In China, the noble, self-sacrificing female missionary labors among Chinese families. A church or a parent allowing a young, sympathetic, untrained girl to work among single young Chinamen would certainly seem to be lacking in sanctified, prayerful, Christian common sense.

THOMAS J. NOONAN,
The Rescue Society.
New York City.

Chinese Sunday School Children and Their Young Men Teachers

LIFE ON THE MEXICAN BORDER

By LOUISE E. DEW

A Lesson in Tortilla-Making

TEXAS is a State of strange and startling contrasts. Embracing an area of 265,780 square miles — a territory large enough to include within its borders all the New England States, as well as New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware—it presents more varied attractions than any other State in the Union. In fact, our United States, with all its wealth of scenery, agricultural and mineral resources, great lakes, mighty rivers, canyons and countless features of value and interest, can scarcely offer a single phase which Texas cannot duplicate, plus its picturesque Mexican life along its southern border. It seems strange indeed that the Rio Grande River, which marks the boundary line between our possessions and those of Mexico, should separate us from a people more foreign than many across the ocean.

New York and Brooklyn are more widely separated by the East River than Brownsville, Texas, and Matamoras, Mexico; yet one might as well have crossed the ocean, so far as the contrast in modes of living are concerned. Although more widely divided by racial differences also than Brooklyn and New York, intercourse between the twin cities of the border is quite as constant. Five minutes in a ferry, plied by a Mexican, lands one on the Mexican side, where the kaleidoscopic picture begins when one boards the car—strange little vehicles, drawn by burros that meander along in the same mañana spirit as the natives. The car is sure to be filled with bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked Mexican girls, their heads becomingly draped with mantillas.

It was midday when I first ventured over to Matamoras, and even the American consul, Mr. Miller, was having a siesta. Later in the afternoon, however, both he and Mrs. Miller joined me for a stroll about town. That initial visit reminded me of similar trips to some out-of-the-way place in Spain. Burros closely hugged the sidewalks or dozed and blinked against the garden walls, playing hide and seek with the sun. Boys, mere babies many of them, were gambling on the pavements, with pennies and marbles—a passion inherited from a long line of ancestors. The windows of the low adobe houses were grated after the Spanish style, appearing grim and prison-like on the exterior. We stopped at one to pay a call on Señora Rodriguez, and were ushered into a beautiful patio (court), where our hostess offered refreshments with true Mexican hospitality.

It was a fascinating experience to watch her make tortillas (pancakes) and café (coffee). The latter she first ground in a machine attached to the wall, and the aroma of the powdered bean filled the patio. A charcoal fire was used for boiling water and baking the tortillas. For the latter purpose the señora first soaked maize in limewater, after which she placed the pail of grain beside her metate (mill) and proceeded to grind the corn with a heavy stone, chiseled from solid rock. When the corn was reduced to a mass of dough-like pulp, the señora broke off a lump and deftly fashioned a tortilla, which she baked over the charcoal fire. It all looked very simple, but I afterward learned, to my surprise, that it is a difficult art.

The tortilla is to the Mexican what bread is to us—the staff of life—and he never tires of it. The women take the corn as it comes from the stalk and carefully strip it, saving the husk for cigarette wrappers, as smoking is a national vice, practiced by both sexes. The stalks are utilized in numberless ways, but chiefly for thatching the roofs of the adobe houses and jacales.

I shall never forget that first lunch in the señora's patio. Not only tortillas, but chile con carne (meat baked with an abundance of red chilli peppers) was served us, and although the day was exceptionally hot I ate the fiery viand with a relish, enjoying a cup of real ambrosia afterward. The señora called it café and insisted that I must not drink it black, so we corraled an accommodating goat and procured leche (milk).

Such a delightful spot as that patio was! In the centre was a fountain, which sprayed the water-lilies in the basin and cooled the torrid air. In one corner of the court was a clump of pomegranate trees, a mass of red and yellow bloom. In another corner was a Cape jessamine, the wax-like blossoms of which emitted a delicate and delicious odor. A huge ebony tree, with glossy green leaves, also filled with fragrant bloom, sheltered the rest of a pair of mocking-birds, which entertained us with charming songs. Little Señorita Rodriguez and her small brothers stood shyly about me, only venturing to exclaim to one another now and then, "Muy bonita!" (very pretty), as they gazed at a trinket which I wore.

After a half-hour chat, we said our adios. Small Mexican children, with their omnipresent dogs, crowded about the doors and with many bewildering acrobatic feats begged for "cumshaw." We were obliged to restrain ourselves by repeating, "No tengo dinero" (no money).

The picturesque old city of Matamoras is in its decadence. It has now a population of only 7,500, whereas once it was several times larger. During the Mexican War, in 1846, the town was occupied by American troops, under General Taylor. Presidente Soleil, whom I frequently met, often spoke, through an interpreter, of his regret over the departed glory of his beloved city.

Types One Sees on the Mexican Border

A Peon Bird-Cage Seller

Pilgrimages may be made to Point Isabel, Tarpon Beach and Bagdad, primitive fishing points, once the resorts of the pirates of Lafitte. A fascinating ride in a carriage or automobile may be taken from Brownsville, along the military road, to San Benito, 20 miles north, through a succession of Mexican villages. But whether on the American or the Mexican side, the same picturesque life is going on in the jacales and villages. Women carrying ollas (water jars) on their heads; children dragging barrels of water by a rope; dulce (candy) sellers driving the flies away from their sweets as they doze, lizard-like, in the sunshine; peons peddling reed bird-cages; and, wherever there is a stream of water, whether it is a canal or an irrigating ditch, Mexican women are always to be seen at their laundry work, rubbing the saponaceous amole root on the clothing, in lieu of soap, and slapping the garments up and down on flat stones. This was always a leisurely task, performed between bits of gossip and much animated conversation. If a mission bell suddenly rings, all work is suspended until after worship.

In the village houses, the cooking is done by a small camp-fire in the open air, or in a bamboo shed, loosely built, to permit the escape of smoke. Chimneys and windows in both jacales and kitchens are regarded as superfluities, as the light comes in where the smoke goes out. But in whatever duty the housewife is engaged one cannot fail to be impressed by the ease with which she performs her task. Sometimes she sits, tailor fashion, upon a large stone platform in one corner of the room. Before her is a charcoal fire, around which are many pots and kettles. An occasional poke with her stick sets things right. Her daily menu is rarely varied from café, tortillas, chile con carne, frijoles and enchiladas.

The dress of the Mexican woman is usually of plain calico, and over this she wears a large black shawl, which covers her head as well. The younger women love bright calico petticoats, and wear the picturesque mantilla. All Mexican women are industrious, and the American sewing machine is no longer a mystery to them, although they still patiently toil at their beautiful drawn-work, which they sell for a pittance to tourists. The men dress in cool linen and immense sombreros.

No house is so humble that it does not have a reed cage, containing at least one mocking-bird; a pair of cocks, for the weekly fights (shameful to relate); numerous mangy dogs, and many half-clad, dirty children. Great two-wheeled, ancient-looking ox-carts, convenient for hauling supplies and wood, stand in the yards, under still more ancient mesquite trees.

Mexican men are inclined to be lazy, but since the advent of a railroad in the valley, and since irrigation has been established, the native has developed into a faithful, efficient worker. Only a Mexican could clear the land of mesquite, chaparral, sagebrush and cacti, and this he does for the land-owning Americanos, afterward tilling the soil and raising the crops.

As farming in Texas is a task involving three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, slothfulness is not encouraged and it is not at all improbable that the word mañana may yet be banished from the Mexican vocabulary.

The Varied Interior of a Mexican Market

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor — GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Our Relief Fund in aid of the Armenian sufferers in Asiatic Turkey will close on July 20. Any contributions received after that date will be returned to the senders.

Church Loyalty

BE loyal to your own church. Be as true and faithful to your own church home as you are to the domestic circle in which you were born. You will seek long before you find a very useful Christian to whom one church is just the same as another; who wanders around from church to church, picking up crumbs or larger morsels that fall from this feast or that with equal satisfaction.

One sometimes answers at table, when asked what part of the turkey he will have, "No choice, thank you." It may be a little embarrassing to the carver, but if it is the truth, it really does not matter what part he gets. So some people seem to look at the question of church membership. That spells weakness. It is not worthy of a man of brains and conscience. True indeed, there are just as good people in one church as in another; but all the really good and strong and helpful people in any church are in that church rather than any other. They have made a choice, not as a matter of taste, or association with friends, or preference for the music or the forms of worship, or admiration for a preacher, but because they believe they are conforming as nearly as possible to the teachings of Jesus Christ and the apostles whom he inspired to make known his will.

Be sure you have good reason in love and obedience to Christ for being what you are in church relation, and then be loyal. Give yourself with earnestness and self-sacrifice to the service of Jesus Christ as represented by your own church, yet with heart and hand uniting on all common ground with fellow Christians, whatever their name or sign.

The Judgment of Posterity

HOW true it is, as Shakespeare says in Julius Caesar, that:

> The evil that men do lives after them;
> The good is oft interred with their bones.

Voltaire has been dead nearly a century and a half; but the evil influence of much of his literary work has been continuous and persistent. One of his books, at least, was judicially condemned in France long ago and was publicly burned in the streets of Paris, as unfit to be read. It has remained for an American civil court to pronounce the latest judgment upon Voltaire's writings. That judgment was more tolerant than the French incident referred to; but, while pleading for tolerance and claiming eminent qualities of wit, sarcasm, logic and learning for the author, it did not hesitate to admit that his writings were tinged with the vices of the age in which he lived, that they contained passages which dimmed his fame, and much that is offensive to modern taste. It is evident that the verdict of posterity on one who was "the foremost literary man of his age," as well as the most brilliant scoffer, has not changed materially in a century or more.

The Recognition of Service

THEY have methods of honoring distinguished service to the community in some older nations than our own, which must bring to the recipient far more pleasure than would any material or financial reward, which would be his only recognition in America. In fact, these distinctions, in great part, are intended for people who are not looking for financial benefit from their labors and would not regard it highly if it came. Despite the impression of Americans prevailing in some quarters of the earth, there are many of them who regard the mad rush for money as ignoble and value it only as a means of doing good or of promoting some work in which they are interested. When the recent list of honors conferred by Edward VII. was announced there appeared on the roll of newly created knights the name of an American, F. J. Campbell, who has made his life-work the teaching of music to the blind, so that, though the pleasure of seeing nature as she is, and her counterpart in art, is denied them, they might have the great happiness which comes to those who have a knowledge of music, one of God's most precious gifts to man.

The graceful act of the sovereign gives at once to this worker for his fellow-men a recognized distinction. Whenever his name is spoken those three letters which precede it will tell at once to the listener that here is a man who has done something. Money, houses and lands are not the reward sought by great teachers, great physicians, and many others, but they would greatly appreciate some public recognition of their work in the community. It is to be regretted that in this country we have no adequate way of conferring honor upon those who deserve well of the country. In the Army and Navy we recognize merit by promotions and medals, which many a gallant officer has risked his life to gain; but those who give their lives to some great purpose in civil life are compelled to pass on with scant recognition of what they have done, beyond a casual mention in the public press. Even here some of our most distinguished men in lines of scientific research or in philanthropy are so far from the searchlight of the daily journal that they and their work are overlooked altogether.

We have fallen into the habit, here in America, of taking work of real merit, done for the good of the country, too much as a matter of course. Perhaps some day this may be changed and proper appreciation shown in some way that may be a source of gratification to the one honored, and in which his descendants may take a just pride.

The "Single Scholar System"

MEMBERS of churches and Sunday Schools, as well as mission workers throughout the country, will find material for serious reflection in the very able letters which appear on another page, dealing with the much-discussed question, "Should our white women teach Chinese?" These writers treat the subject conservatively and deprecate the tone of a certain portion of the press, which has unfairly made the Sigel case a basis for condemning Chinese mission work in general. Writing from wide experience in work among Asiatics, our correspondents take the view that reform is necessary in present home missionary methods. With one exception, they agree that the "single scholar system," which allots a white woman teacher to each Chinese student, should be discontinued, and that hereafter men teachers should do the work. Since it has been shown that the principal actors in the recent sensational tragedy bore no regular relationship to Chinese mission work, it is only fair that the "single scholar system"—which has been in operation many years—should be judged apart altogether from that particular case. It is therefore on a new indictment, which these letters very clearly present, that it must be tried and judged. If we believe it to be a system involving moral peril to young and inexperienced women teachers, and one which creates in the Asiatic mind a false impression of missionary aims and principles, these convictions alone should go very far toward bringing about an early and radical change. Prejudice should not enter into the question; the logical conclusion must be the same, even if the race under discussion were Hindu or other heathen, instead of Chinese. All must receive the Gospel, without distinction. It is only a question of methods.

A Loss to New York

IN the resignation of Dr. J. Ross Stevenson from the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, and his acceptance of a call to the Brown Memorial Church of Baltimore, the one loses and the other gains an able and eloquent minister.

The seven years of Dr. Stevenson's New York pastorate have been filled with earnest evangelical work of a sort especially characteristic of him. Few men of such profound scholarship as his retain with it a mastery of what President King calls "the seeming unreality of the spiritual life," and few so efficiently diffuse around them a serene confidence in the substantial nature of the unseen things of faith.

The Brown Memorial Church, to which he goes, occupies a leading place not only in Baltimore, but in the whole South. Something of its earnestness and vitality can be measured by the fact that at a Wednesday evening prayer meeting in early June, at a time when many had already left the city for their summer homes, there was an attendance of eight hundred. The church membership is composed largely of young married people, full of enthusiasm. Their breadth of sympathy is somewhat indicated by their wonderful mission work.

Dr. Stevenson is to be congratulated upon exchanging the onerous responsibilities of the Fifth Avenue Church for those which cannot possibly be heavier. But it seems hardly possible that the metropolis will allow itself to lose him permanently. The sort of service which he renders to the community is more deeply needed there than anywhere else in our land.

Mistaken Enthusiasm

AMERICAN women, who are watching the progress of the suffrage movement abroad, are at a loss to understand the wild tactics pursued by the wing known in England as the "militant suffragettes." On a recent occasion, this feminine phalanx, a hundred strong, made its thirteenth futile attempt to force an entrance into the presence of Premier Asquith. They were led by the indomitable Mrs. Pankhurst, who can always be depended upon to furnish a sensational episode when dulness threatens the movement. When the Premier's letter, regretting his inability to meet the phalanx, was handed to her she tossed it on the ground, and cried out that "she stood on her rights as a citizen," and then, with her followers, tried to force an entrance to the Parliament. She slapped the police inspector and knocked off his cap, which was promptly knocked off a second time by another Amazonian follower. Then the entire phalanx was firmly, though gently, gathered in by the police.

These heroics are, no doubt, very fine in their way; but they are also very foolish and altogether unnecessary. Such displays retard rather than advance the cause of woman suffrage, which has already made such encouraging progress that it is a pity to have it obstructed by tactics that create opposition where it did not exist before. Violent public attacks of suffragitis, which invariably leave their victims literally in the arms of the police, are not an edifying spectacle. And the singular part of it is that these women, though clever and educated, do not seem to realize that they are doing serious damage to the very cause they really wish to serve.

. . .

—A PRETTY STORY comes from China, apropos of the boy Emperor's recent coronation. All the high dignitaries and officials were assembled in the palace at Peking, which was brilliant with decorations. The child-Emperor looked around anxiously; then he turned to his father, the regent, and asked: "Where is Mow?" Nobody knew who he wanted until his mother explained that Mow was his five-year-old playmate, the son of a humble Chinese family. Mow was quickly sent for, but couldn't be admitted until he was first ennobled. He was dubbed an officer of the palace guard, received a cap with a button on it, and then was permitted to see his royal playmate ascend the dragon-throne, to the great delight of the little Emperor.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 14, 1909

	PAGE
Sorting Clothing in Gregorian Church, Adana	Cover
OUR MAIL-BAG	590
Looking for Wounded, Rognes, France (Illustrated)	590
The Presbyterian World-Council (Illustrated)	591, 593
The Rich Young Ruler. Sermon. By Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis.	592, 593
Many Still Sending Aid to Armenia (Illustrated)	593
Should Our Women Teach Chinese? (Illustrated)	594
Life on the Mexican Border (Illustrated) By Louise E. Dew.	595
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	596
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	597
The True and Ever Living God (Illustrated) Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	598
In the Public Eye (Portraits)	599
Those Quaint "Slipper Boats" (Illustrated)	599
The Story of Marco. Serial Story by Eleanor H. Porter	600, 601
Young People's Societies	602
Paul's Ministry at Athens. By Mrs. M. Baxter	603

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

England's War Scare

THERE has been almost a panic among some of the leading statesmen of the British empire over imagined dangers in Europe and elsewhere, and a loud cry for an increase in the navy and army as an adequate protection. This question was pretty well discussed recently by one of the most memorable colonial conferences ever held in London. The warning words of Lord Roseberry and Lord Roberts had rung through the farthest confines of the empire. Their words received their confirmation from the gravity of Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Balfour, and many representatives from all the colonies seemed to think that the ship of empire was drifting toward a horizon dark with storm and one that would try her as she had never been tried. A number expressed conservative views, among them Mr. McKenna and Lord Crewe. The climax of the conference was reached when Lord Roberts addressed it on the danger to the empire and the necessity for a fuller military protection against it, making a plea for universal military service. Mr. Haldane, in an address, had prophesied that in about twenty years they would have something like an empire army. Lord Roberts replied: "Twenty years is a long time to look forward to. Many things may happen in the meantime, and I think it would be wiser and safer if we were to limit the time to twenty months and not twenty years." England usually does the sensible thing, and after sober second thought she is not likely to be carried off her feet by this war cry. The empire is an American power through Canada, an Asiatic power through India, a Pacific power through Australia and New Zealand, a European power through the mother country. As a league of sea States, she will require a few more ships than some nations and an army only large enough to police her territories.

The heavy armaments of the nations of Europe, with the constant tendency to increase them, are an oppression of the people, a menace of war and a disgrace to our civilization. The best judgment and conscience of the world demand the reduction of navies and armies and the reliance upon peace, good will, the arts of industry, the education of the young, the building up of national character, and loyalty to the country and to the Church as the best safeguards of an empire. England's greatness consists not in her navy, nor army, nor treasury, nor colonial dominions, but in the character of her people, in their faith in the Bible and in their loyalty to Christ. While some force must be mixed with love as an ingredient in the building and preservation of an empire, its real life depends on its virtue and piety. When the people of Israel, weary of the leadership of the Almighty, called for a king, Samuel saw the danger of leaning on human instrumentalities solely and pleaded with the people not to throw away their spiritual support, saying:

Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for consider how great things he hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your kin. (I. Sam. 12 : 24, 25.)

Lord Roberts Addressing the Colonial Conference on England's Military Need

Value of Artificial Light

It is a long step from the tallow candle of the grandfathers to the electric light of to-day. It is only necessary for the light in the electric car or in the railroad coach to go out, or for the last match in one's own home to miss fire, to appreciate the practical value of light. Cincinnati has, in the centre of its business section, a long open square, which naturally affords a prominent location for business. One side of this square has been brilliantly lighted, mostly by private enterprise. As a result, nine-tenths of the people afoot pass on that side, rendering it a better location for business than the other. The merchants in one of the business districts of Newark noticed that the bulk of pedestrians failed to pass them in the natural course of business. They installed a brilliant system of street lighting and soon became the centre of attraction. The street lamps of a city are not only immensely convenient, but they aid in police regulation, discouraging crime and encouraging virtue. The Christian's light fills the world with encouragement and cheer. It is friendly to thrift, it discourages vice, it promotes virtue and piety.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 5 : 16.)

Electric Current Strangely Fatal

In a terrible thunderstorm recently, lightning struck a feed wire of the Edison Company's line, in Crescent Street, East New York, burned the insulation from a wire running down the pole and short-circuited the electric current. John Keenan took a tin pail of water and went out to extinguish the blaze which the current had started near the foot of the pole. Keenan's clothing was wet and the ground on which he stood was flooded with rain. As he threw the water on the sputtering wire a circuit was completed with the flying water, the metal pail and its bail, the person of Keenan and the ground, and the electrical current of 2,700 volts passed through his body, killing him instantly. Two friends of the dead man, John Brogan and Otto Nicelauser, undertook to take Keenan's body away from the fire and were thrown from their feet as they touched it with their hands. Flames shot out from the body and the water-soaked pole. Recovering their feet, they undertook, with wooden poles, to remove the body, but failed. They then obtained a piece of rubber matting, which they cut into pieces and wrapped around their hands, and were thus able to gain possession of the body.

Strong drink is a subtle agent, which literally burns hundreds of thousands of victims to death in our country. Various reforms have been adopted from time to time, but the religion of Jesus Christ is the only security against the destructive energies of drink. The divine power secured by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the only protection that the human soul can have against the deadly current of this or any other form of moral evil. The Bible history records that those who have been loyal to God and have refused to bow the knee to his enemies, have been proof against the power and penalties of sin, against the fires that would burn both body and soul. This idea is strikingly illustrated in the three men who refused to bow down to the golden image set up by the king, and trusted God to save them from fire.

Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. (Dan. 3 : 25.)

Led by the Honey-Bird

Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford, for many years the successful rector of the St. George's Episcopal Church of New York City, in a current newspaper gives a most graphic description of a hunting expedition in East Africa. His thrilling experiences with angry lions almost make the hair stand on end. After the most bloodcurdling account of his pursuit of lions, rhinos, leopards, etc., he gives us a delicate description of the honey-bird and of its guidance of him to the bee-tree. The bird is about the size of a brown thrush, marked with white on the neck and upper breast. Its voice is a chatter, and it seems on the friendliest terms with the natives. Dr. Rainsford says: "I think I must have followed the bird certainly more than a dozen times, and it never once failed to lead me straight to the honey-tree. I had followed one bird for many hundreds of yards. It would wait for me, and while it was waiting it would never cease to utter its sharp, chirping cry. Once I was up, it would go on again." It is said that this honey-bird will sometimes lead a hunter up to a wild animal, that its enemy may be killed. The singular intelligence of animals is here illustrated. It was not unselfishness which prompted the bird to lead the hunter to the tree, but it was its fondness for honey, which it could not secure from the tree without a human helper.

Men in the shows and on the street corners with cages of trained birds point out the phenomenal intelligence of these creatures. The instinct of the bird that found the tree and knew how to get the honey was given to it by our kind heavenly Father, who provides us with all the instincts and opportunities for securing a livelihood, and with the higher faculties with which we are related to him, to our fellow-men and the great universe about and beyond us.

For a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter. (Eccles. 10 : 20.)

A Criminal Immigrant

A Syrian immigrant had been in this country only a few days before he commenced to practice the art of theft among his fellow-travelers. By some Satanic magic he transferred a silver dollar from the pocket of a fellow Syrian to the inside of his shoe. The coin was discovered, and in half an hour a board of inquiry ordered his deportation. It has taken the Federal government a long time to wake up to the dangers of an undesirable immigration. According to present laws, we admit no convicts, no persons subject to incurable diseases, no persons liable to become public charges, and no suspicious characters. Despite our stringent laws, many mistakes are made. A census of the prison population of New York State alone shows 990 alien convicts, of whom 27 have served sentences in other countries, and at least 319 more are liable to deportation because they have committed felonies within three years after their arrival. Governor Hughes is to be asked to commute their sentences to deportation and the Immigration Bureau to have them sent away.

It is a wonder that we have been enabled to assimilate the foreign-born populations of our country as well as we have, and we owe much of our national greatness to the fact that so many of the best elements have come to us from other shores; but the number of immigrants has increased so greatly, and the lowering of the mental and moral grade has been so manifest, that much greater care is required now in guarding our land from the enfeebled and criminal classes that are knocking at our doors. Vice is a weakness, a damage, a menace to our free institutions; and our national self-preservation is involved in the closest scrutiny of the moral quality of the immigrants who come to us. Let all criminals be sent back to their native countries at once.

Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people. (Prov. 14 : 34.)

THE TRUE AND EVER-LIVING GOD*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

ALL went well with Paul and his teaching in Berea, because the people there were of a teachable spirit, and searched the Scriptures daily to better understand what Paul had told them. All would have ended well had not those who had stirred up a mob in Thessalonica come over to Berea with riotous intent. Affairs assumed such a threatening aspect that some of the brethren deemed it wise to have Paul leave Berea, and to accompany him to Athens. They were so solicitous for Paul that they departed secretly with him. Silas and Timotheus remained in Berea for a season, to carry on the work there.

What a city was Athens! It was chief in all the world for architecture, art and learning. It is said that Paul "beheld the city full of idols." There were over three thousand public statues of gods and heroes, and there were in some streets, at the gateway or porch of each house, a statue of its protecting god, and inside of the house myriads of lesser images, household gods. Paul walked around among the idols, while he waited for Silas and Timotheus. But it was a waiting full of activity, for he betook himself to the market-place, the Agora, which was the centre of life in Athens, and there he preached and taught concerning Jesus. In going to the market-place Paul followed the custom of Athenian teachers, for there they were sure of an audience. Not alone did the common people listen to Paul, but also certain philosophers of the Stoics and the Epicureans, two schools, one teaching Pantheism and the other that pleasure is the only good, and vice should be avoided only for the suffering it entails.

"Paul stood in the midst of the Areopagus." It was Mars' Hill, so-called because of the legend that Mars, the god of war, had his trial here for the murder of the son of Poseidon. It was, in fact, an eventful spot, being a meeting place where great questions were wont to be discussed, as the judges sat in the open air, on seats hewn in the rock. It was indeed a tribute to the dignity of Paul and his theme that he was brought by the Athenians to Mars' Hill, for, said they: "Thou bringest certain strange things to our ears; we would know, therefore, what these things mean." (In 1904 the Jerusalem Sunday School Pilgrims one Sabbath day held a service on Mars' Hill. The Athenians stood round about, not idol worshipers, as in the days of their ancestors, but as worshipers of the true God.)

Paul's Address

"I perceive that ye are very religious" ("I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious," old version). According to the old form, Paul seems to have opened his address with an unfriendly criticism; no one of Paul's judgment would have done that; even common politeness would have forbidden it. But rather Paul wished to let them know that he had seen evidences on all sides of their deep religious feeling, which of course seemed to him misdirected; but he did not say so at first. He laid hold of the fact that among the altars there was one which bore an inscription, "To the Unknown God"; and he declared that he could give them knowledge concerning this God, about whom they desired to know.

Thus in a tactful way Paul secured from the beginning the sympathetic attention of his hearers. There probably was more than one altar in Athens dedicated to the unknown God. One of their writers, Philostratus, has said: "It is more discreet to speak well of gods, especially at Athens, where there are erected altars to unknown gods."

"What therefore ye worship in ignorance, this I set forth unto you" ("Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship," according to the old version). It would seem that again Paul spoke in a cynical, impolite manner. But not so; rather he would have them understand he appreciated their half-confessed sense of need beyond anything which their idols could supply. And he declared unto them the God who had made the world, and all things therein, who was not an idol and did not dwell in temples.

We Also Are His Offspring

Again Paul showed his tactfulness in taking a point of contact "dear to the Athenians" when he referred to what their poets had said about men being the offspring of gods (Acts 17:28). It was a cherished thought among the Greeks that they were the offspring of the gods. Zeus, their highest deity, they called the "All-Father." Paul in his wisdom sought to enthrone the true and living God in the room of Zeus, but he wisely did not tell them his purpose. Instead, he reasoned all around the question, saying that if we really are the offspring of God we ought not to think that gods of gold, silver, etc., should be worshiped. This he said in sight of yonder temple, the Parthenon, in which stood a chrys-elephantine statue of Athena, for whom Athens was named, a statue of wood, forty feet high, with face and hands and feet of pure ivory and decorated with gold to the amount of $640,000. The Parthenon was her treasure temple, built of the purest white marble; close beside it stood the Erechtheium, the temple for the worship of Athena. What God-given wisdom and courage Paul had that day on Mars' Hill, as he declared to the Athenians that the true and living God had given life, and breath, and all things! It is passing strange that a people so learned, so intelligent as the Greeks, should have been so blinded by their own sophistries that the true God should be unknown to them, while men almost savage have had knowledge of God.

A French sceptic was crossing the Great Sahara in company with an Arab guide.

He noticed that at certain times the guide, whatever obstacles might arise, put them all aside and, kneeling on the burning sands, called on his God.

Day after day passed, and still the Arab never failed; till at last one evening, when he rose from his knees, the traveler asked him, with a contemptuous smile, "How do you know there is a God?"

The guide looked at the Frenchman for a moment, and then said solemnly: "How do I know that a man, and not a camel, passed my hut last night in the darkness? Was it not by the print of his feet in the sand? Even so" (and he pointed to the sun, whose last rays were flashing over the lonely desert) "that footprint is not of man."

We have heard much about the "natural law in the spiritual world," but there is also a spiritual law in the natural world. Dr. Guthrie, the well-known Scotch preacher, recognizes it in these words:

"With the Sabbath hills around us, far from the dust and din, the splendor and the squalor of the city, we have sat on a rocky bank, to wonder at the varied and rich profusion with which God had clothed the scene. Nature, like Joseph, was dressed in a coat of many colors—lichens, gray, black and yellow, clad the rock; the glossy ivy, like a child of ambition, had planted its foot on the crag and, hanging on by a hundred arms, had climbed to its stormy summit; mosses of hue surpassing all colors of the loom spread an elastic carpet round the gushing fountain; the wild thyme lent a bed to the weary, and its perfume to the air; heaths opened their blushing bosoms to the bee; the primrose, like modesty shrinking from observation, looked out from its leafy shade; at the foot of the weathered stone the fern raised its plumes, and on its summit the foxglove rang its beautiful bells; while the birch bent to kiss the stream as it ran away laughing, to hide itself in the lake below, or stretched out her arms to embrace the mountain ash and evergreen pine. By a very slight exercise of fancy, in such a scene, one could see Nature engaged in her adorations and hear her singing, 'The earth is full of the glory of God. How manifold are thy works, Lord God Almighty! In wisdom thou hast made them all.'"

Long ages ago, Tertullian wrote: "'Great God,' 'Good God,' 'God grant,' are expressions in every mouth. In pronouncing these words, the soul looks not to the Roman capital, but to heaven; for it knows the dwelling place of the true God, because from him and from thence it descended."

Paul Preaching on Mars' Hill at Athens

Stretch we hands toward the sky,
God of souls and God of suns;
Thou dost prompt our wailing cry,
Through us, too, thy order runs.

With our foreheads in the dust,
Over us thy thunder rolls;
But thy promises we trust,
Thou hast peace for contrite souls.

God of justice, God of grace,
Rebels without ransom we;
Make our souls thy dwelling place,
Lord of Hosts our ransom be.

—JOSEPH COOK.

The Athenians had listened to an altogether new theory of the universe so far as they were concerned, but it was all so plain and logical that children have understood it. A little girl was one day going through an idol temple with her parents, and she suddenly broke out with this exclamation: "I should think they would know that it would take better gods than these to make the sun and moon and stars."

It is not unlikely that while Paul preached on Mars' Hill on that eventful day he may have had his Bible open to the first chapter of Genesis, and it is not unlikely that he read it; all of the particulars are not given us by the historian Luke. While Paul held to the theme of God as the Creator of the universe and of man, no discussion among his hearers is recorded. They at least listened with a curious interest.

He Hath Given Assurance Unto All Men

Paul had changed his theme. He spoke of the sinfulness of man and his need of a Saviour. He preached Jesus crucified, and raised from the dead, to become the propitiation for sin. Of all the company on Mars' Hill only two are named as believing his words concerning Jesus—Dionysius, an Areopagite, and Damaris, a woman (strange that she should have been there). It is related by Eusebius that Dionysius became bishop of the church at Athens and died a martyr. Paul was given a polite dismissal: "We will hear thee concerning this yet again." And the company broke up, and Paul shortly after left Athens. We do not read that he ever returned. He certainly never wrote a letter to the Athenians. Athens has no part in important church history. But it is an interesting fact that the Parthenon was, during a part of the Byzantine period, occupied as a Christian church, with the statue of Athena left out! As one sees it to-day, it is the most magnificent ruin in the world. The front portico is intact, composed of eight columns, thirty-three feet high; other columns on the side are standing, all outlined against the marvelously blue sky of Greece. It has been despoiled of its wonderful frieze, carvings relating to Athena and to victories won by the Greeks in war.

Idolatry is in ruins, while the Gospel of Jesus Christ is an ever increasing force in the world. The resurrection of Jesus is the cornerstone of the Christian's belief.

Among the Workers

—EVANGELIST ROBERT A. ELWOOD is holding meetings on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City, N. J., this summer. The work is a Gospel effort to reach the many away from home in the midst of the pleasure-seeking whirl.

—REV. GUSTAVE BLOMGREN, of the Chicago Finnish Mission, has gone on a Gospel trip to Alberta, Canada. He will have to preach there in five different languages: in Finnish for the Finns, Swedish for the Swedes, Russian for the Doukhobors, German for the German farmers and English for the Canadians.

—NEW YORK'S LARGEST Sewing Circle has its headquarters at 105 East Twenty-second Street, and is one of the most successful and practical charities in Manhattan. Twenty-one years ago the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor decided to relieve the distress of some of the women coming for aid by giving them work instead of charity. The superintendent bought a bolt of gingham and, distributing the cloth among the needy women, gave orders for as many children's dresses as could be made from it. The women were well paid for their work. Since that time, not a day has passed in which needles have not been flying in tenement homes and helpless women have been given an opportunity to earn food and clothes for their children. From the first of last October to the first of May, 1909, the sewing bureau has given sewing to 683 different women and paid them in wages $5,761. These women have made 33,427 garments, of which enough have been sold to net $1,621.

*The International Sunday School Lesson for July 25, 1909. Paul at Athens. Acts 17:22-34. GOLDEN TEXT: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth." John 4:24.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

COMMENCEMENT at Brown University was made particularly notable this year by the presence of Governor Hughes, of New York, who came to see his son graduate, and of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who was present to receive the degree of doctor of literature. Mrs. Howe was ninety years old on the 27th of May, yet she was able to make the journey from Boston to receive the honor conferred upon her by the university. Ex-Chief Justice John H. Stiness, a member of the board of fellows, said of Mrs. Howe:

"Mrs. Howe has written in ineffaceable characters the nation's hymn, a production which did more to stir the masses, arouse a spirit of patriotism and cause men to rally to the defense of the nation than all the meetings that were held to secure enlistments. Mrs. Howe is a great and noble woman, and in honoring her Brown University honors itself."

Only four other women have received this distinction from this university. They are Miss Caroline Hazard, president of Wellesley College; Julia Josephine Irvine, Adelia Thompson Hillman and Sarah Elizabeth Doyle. Few women in our country have had more honors conferred upon them than has Mrs. Howe, and no woman has deserved better things than she has received at the hands of her countrymen. She has won for herself the title of the "First Lady of Boston," and that city never fails to do her honor whenever opportunity offers.

Copyright by J. E. Purdy

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe

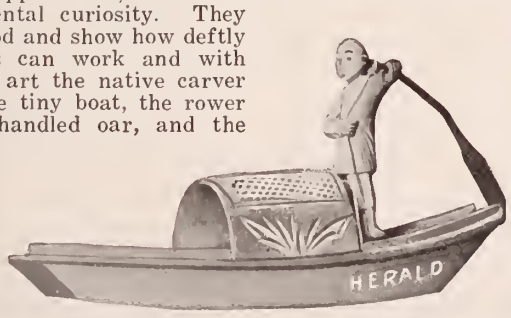
Ambassador Hakki Bey

. . .

Hakki Bey is the new Turkish Ambassador to Washington. The Young Turks at Constantinople are making extensive changes in the foreign service of the country in order to have their interests abroad looked after by men in sympathy with the recent revolution. The new Ambassador is progressive and is considered a clever diplomat. During his public service he has received at least a dozen decorations from European rulers.

THOSE QUAINT "SLIPPER BOATS"

MISSIONARY Z. CHAS. BEALS, of Wuhu, China, has sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office in New York a number of very quaint looking, hand-carved "slipper boats," which are a genuine Oriental curiosity. They are of light wood and show how deftly Chinese fingers can work and with what skill and art the native carver can produce the tiny boat, the rower with his long-handled oar, and the shady, bowed awning, which gives the little craft a canoe-like appearance. It is an artistic souvenir from the ancient East, which will be everywhere appreciated. These "slipper boats" are intended to be sent to every reader who contributes toward the construction of the Gospel boat for the WuhuMission, which is to be used for religious work on the canals and little rivers of that section of China. Contributions can be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.



THE AGED INVALID'S CHAIR

SOME time ago THE CHRISTIAN HERALD printed an appeal for an invalid chair for an aged Christian widow in Nyack, N. Y. She had been bed-ridden for several years, but could use an invalid wheel-chair, if one was supplied. She is supported by the efforts of an only daughter. The two are very poor, and have had a hard struggle for several years, the daughter selling toilet soap and other articles in the time she could spare from her sick mother's bedside. A number of kind-hearted readers of this journal sent in small sums to be applied toward the procuring of a suitable chair. Two ladies, the Misses Mason, of Springfield, Mass., for a nominal sum, sent a beautiful chair (with the latest improvements, double set of axles, etc.), which the invalid is now using with the greatest comfort and satisfaction. The balance of the contributions ($57) was deposited in the Nyack National Bank, to be paid at the rate of $3 weekly for the support of the aged sufferer, who is profoundly grateful for the kindness of those generous-hearted friends who have brought so much joy into the closing days of her life. She is over eighty and very feeble. Any reader who desires to know more about this aged invalid may procure her address by writing to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Recommended by Physicians

A Mellin's Food little girl.

A mother, who had nursed her baby until she was three months old, found that artificial feeding would soon have to be resorted to.

She wrote us and asked if doctors ever recommended

Mellin's Food

Indeed they do. The doctors are its best friends.

The formula of Mellin's Food was originated by Liebig, one of the greatest scientists the world has ever known.

Liebig's son and son-in-law were both doctors, and it was for their children, that he produced and gave to the world a new and better way of preparing fresh milk, so that it could be given successfully to babies.

Under the direction and patronage of doctors the sale of Mellin's Food has spread throughout the world, so that to-day there is scarcely a place inhabited by civilized people, where Mellin's Food cannot be found.

Mellin's Food is not only the most scientific food, but it is the most practical as well. As it does not contain starch, it requires no boiling. It is to be added to fresh cow's milk, and when this is done, it modifies the milk to baby's tender needs, and makes the best substitute for mother's milk yet devised.

If the feeding of your baby troubles you, ask your doctor about Mellin's Food. Ask him to show you how to prepare it. He will do so and gladly too you may be sure.

Our beautiful book, "The Care and feeding of Infants", will help you to remember what he tells you. It is Free to mothers.

Mellin's Food Company, Boston, Mass.

MELLIN'S FOOD COMPANY, 32
Boston, Mass.

Please send me a copy of your book, "The Care & Feeding of Infants", and a Sample Bottle of Mellin's Food to try.

_____

_____

Vudor Porch Shades Allow Those Inside To Look Out But Prevent Outsiders Looking In.

They keep out the sun but let in the breeze. Vudor Porch Shades are made of wide strips of linden wood firmly bound with strong seine twine and artistically stained with weather-proof colors. They cost from $2.25 up, according to width, and a porch of ordinary size can be completely equipped with them at a cost of from $5 to $10.

Write for Booklet and Name of Local Dealer

We will send you, free, upon receipt of a postal card request, the beautiful Vudor booklet fully describing and illustrating, in actual colors, Vudor Porch Shades and Vudor Re-enforced Hammocks. With the booklet we will send you name of dealer in your town.

HOUGH SHADE CORPORATION, 242 Mill St., Janesville, Wis.

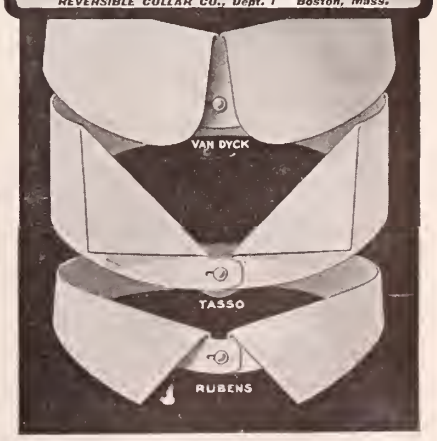
REVERSIBLE

"Linene" COLLARS

MADE IN 10 STYLES.

10 collars for 25 cts. at stores. By mail 30 cts., or sample 6 cts. in stamps. Give size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. T Boston, Mass.



BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FENCE STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong chicken-tight. Sold to the user at Wholesale Prices. We pay freight. Catalogue free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana

The Utmost In 6% Bonds

Irrigation Bonds, when properly issued, form ideal investments. No other large class of bonds, based on equal security, pays six per cent.

Irrigation Bonds are secured by first liens on the most fertile farm lands in America. The loan will not average one-fourth the land's value.

They are additionally secured by a first mortgage on all that the Irrigation Company owns. Some are municipal obligations—in each case a tax lien on all the property in the district.

Where else can one find such ideal security behind bonds that net six per cent?

These are serial bonds, so one may make short-time or long-time investments. And every bond paid off increases the security back of the rest.

The bonds are issued in denominations as low as $100, so they appeal to both small investors and large.

We are the largest dealers in Reclamation Bonds. During the past fifteen years, we have sold seventy such issues. Not a dollar of loss has resulted to any investor.

We have written a book based on all this experience—the best book of the kind ever published. Every investor, small or large, owes to himself its perusal. Everyone in these days should know Irrigation Bonds. The book is free. Please send this coupon to-day for it.

Trowbridge & Niver Co.

(Established 1893)

Municipal and Corporation Bonds

First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO — 50 Congress Street BOSTON

Gentlemen:—Please send me your new Bond Book, "The World's Greatest Industry."

Name _____

Town _____

State _____ 70

DOLLARS & COLLARS

$16.00 Saved

The usual "Laundry-way" figures something like this:

2 doz. Collars, at $1.50 . .	$3.00
1 doz. pairs Cuffs	3.00
Laundering Collars 365 times	7.30
Laundering Cuffs 156 times	6.24	$19.54

The new "Litholin" way:

½ doz. Litholin Collars . .	$1.50
4 pairs Litholin Cuffs . . .	2.00	$3.50

$16.04

With a damp cloth they wipe white as new. Won't wilt or fray and have a "slip-easy" space for the tie.

Collars, 25c. Cuffs, 50c.

The GENUINE goods are always sold from a RED box. If not in stock at your shirt store, send style, size, and remittance, and we will mail to any address, postpaid.

Catalogue complete with all latest styles free on request.

The Fiberloid Co., Dept. 2, 7 Waverly Place, New York

WATERPROOFED LINEN LITHOLIN TRADE MARK

CAN YOU FURNISH A BOND?

If you can, we have a steady job for you, delivering goods and collecting money for us. You need no experience and risk nothing. We furnish everything and teach you the business. Don't pass up this chance. Write today for particulars.

CONSOLIDATED PORTRAIT & FRAME CO., 290-138 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

The Story of Marco

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Into Still Waters" and "The Transformation of Margaret"

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Gipsies have been encamped near the Pennsylvania village of Gaylordville. The villagers have compelled them to move on. One sick woman has been left behind until she becomes stronger. Her little girl, Flossie, has been taken along with the gipsies, but her ten-year-old son, Marco Bonelli, hides in a cave. After the camp has been deserted, he appears to his mother and vows not to leave her until she is well. He plays the violin in the village streets to support her. The village boys torment him, and the Widow Martin comes to his rescue. The mother dies in a few weeks and he goes to live with the Widow Martin. He tries to earn by his violin enough to pay board and save a fund to find his little sister. He fails in this, and gets a position in a coal mine as a breaker-boy. Marco is taken ill and cannot work. His savings are stolen. He takes his violin and joins an organ-grinder on the road. They come to the gipsy camp. He meets his old friend Jake. Jake informs him that Flossie has gone to New York. Marco returns to the organ-grinder, who had said he was going there. He becomes a member of the organ-grinder's family, and the niece Annetta goes out to sing while Marco plays. The inspector obliges both to go to school. Marco does not like school and life at the home of the organ-grinder becomes more and more unbearable. The man grows ugly and the food scarce. Marco runs away and plays for a living but makes little. Christmas Eve Marco begins to sell papers. A small hunchback named Jimmy objects to Marco selling on a corner he calls his own. He rescues Jimmy from under a moving car, takes him home, and remains with him. Both go to Mont-Lawn. A great man talks there one day and tells the children to be red, white and blue like the flag—red for valor; white for purity; blue for justice. Marco resolves to be "red, white and blue," like the flag. An Italian working at Mont-Lawn, he finds to be his long-lost father, who takes him to his wretched home in New York, and tells him that his name is not Bonelli, but Covino. Marco's father works steadily at first, but soon takes to drink. He makes Marco play for money and stops working. Up near Central Park lives a rich young artist named Howard Preston. He joins the "Big Brother" movement and is told by his pastor that a boy named Covino needs his help. His mother is much surprised. Her little daughter is curious concerning the "Big Brother" relationship.

CHAPTER XX—Continued

MRS. PRESTON sighed and shook her head; but the child crept nearer.

"And are you his brother?"

"I said I'd be."

"Then am I his sister?"

"No, no, child!" cried Mrs. Preston, in quick horror. Even the man frowned.

"Well, that hardly—follows," he said grimly.

"But will you bring him home—here?" persisted the little girl.

Mrs. Preston rose to her feet.

"No, no, dear. Howard, I forbid you to put such nonsense into this child's head. You know how imaginative she is!"

"Yes, I know," he murmured, as if to himself; then he rose and held out both hands to the little girl. "It's only a boy, Kittykins, who is poor and unhappy and in trouble, and whom I've promised to help. Dr. Fernald's going to show me how to do it; and I'm going down now to his house to find out about it."

CHAPTER XXI

The Art of Big Brotherhood

WHEN the Rev. Doctor Fernald, pastor of a fashionable Fifth Avenue church, lectured to his Men's Club one night on the Juvenile Court, he himself did not know, perhaps, the extent of the forces which he was putting into motion.

The Club, laboriously gathered by the Doctor from the men of his congregation, had for some time been a source of great anxiety and disappointment to him. He told himself that he realized, of course, that the Club was composed mostly of either hard-headed men of business, or light-hearted men of society; and that he could not expect much from them. Yet he had hoped for—something. Thus far he had been disappointed. Doctrinal discourses plainly bored them. Political discussions fell flat. Social ethics and cults and isms of various sorts awakened only a fleeting impression. The Club was plainly dwindling, both in numbers and interest. Then one night he had spoken on the Juvenile Court.

The change was electric. This was something new, something vital, something human; and like one man they had responded. Before the lecture was a week old, each member had pledged himself to be a "Big Brother." Already the Doctor had set ten of them at work, when he summoned Howard Preston.

Dr. Fernald had been a little fearful of Preston. He knew him as a young artist, rich, talented, popular, a little eccentric, and a member of one of the city's most exclusive families. He had been surprised when Preston joined the Club, and he had been still more so when he received the young man's ready pledge to serve. If any lingering doubts remained in the Doctor's mind, however, they faded quite away after one glance into Preston's eyes, when that young man called for "orders," as he expressed it.

"The boy's name is Marco Covino," began the Doctor, going straight to the point. "He was up before the Court last week for stealing scrap iron, and he's been turned over to us as a good subject for a 'Big Brother.' I've investigated his case somewhat, but I'll own I haven't found out much. He seems to be an odd chap, and decidedly reserved."

"How old is he?"

"Fourteen. He lives with his father at the top of a tenement block in—I've forgotten the street, but I'll give you the address from my book. As near as I can judge, they have been moving from cellar to garret, and garret to cellar for the last two or three years. The man is sick."

"What is the trouble?"

"I should say, old-fashioned consumption—and drink. The boy sells papers, blacks shoes, runs errands, and does odd jobs of all sorts to bring in a little money. The man works only intermittently, and drinks most of that up, I fancy. The boy was sullen, and almost impertinent, when he was brought before the Court. Nobody could get much out of him. I've a shrewd suspicion that when we get to the bottom of the matter, we shall find out he stole for his father. I've been trying to trace his history, and though I didn't make out very well, I did find a city missionary, a Miss Dole, who knew him several years ago, but who had lost sight of him lately. She said he was a brave little chap then, and doggedly devoted to his father. She says that whatever he is now, she wouldn't hesitate to stake her faith in human nature on the real goodness of his heart—if one could ever get at the core under the crust that abuse, poverty, and hard luck have coated it with."

"And what am I to do?"

"You're to find that—core," smiled the Doctor, with a level look into the young man's eyes.

Unconsciously Preston straightened himself and squared his shoulders. He said nothing, and because he did say nothing, the Doctor was conscious of an odd gratification.

"You understand, of course," went on the Doctor, after a moment, "that this isn't a charity scheme to give money. Aid of that sort is necessary sometimes, of course, and must be given. If you do find that it is needed now to any great extent, come to me, please, and we'll confer together, and

Continued on next page

You can place money in the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, and know that it is safe, and is where you can obtain it when wanted, and will yield fair earnings for every day invested. See their advertisement on page 602, and write them for full information.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM

Doctor Was Firm and Was Right

Many doctors forbid their patients to drink coffee, but the patients still drink it on the sly and thus spoil all the doctor's efforts, and keep themselves sick.

Sometimes the doctor makes sure that the patient is not drinking coffee and there was a case of that kind in St. Paul, where a business man said:

"After a very severe illness last winter which almost caused my death, the doctor said Postum was the only thing that I could drink and he just made me quit coffee and drink Postum. My illness was caused by indigestion from the use of tea and coffee.

"The state of my stomach was so bad that it became terribly inflamed and finally resulted in a rupture. I had not drunk Postum very long before my lost blood was restored and my stomach was well and strong, and I have now been using Postum for almost a year. When I got up from bed after my illness I weighed 98 pounds and now my weight is 120.

"There is no doubt that Postum was the cause of this wonderful improvement. I shall never go back to tea or coffee but shall always stick to the food drink that brought me back to health and strength."

Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville, in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

6%

AND SAFETY

Because---we have been in business over 14 years

Because --- under the laws we must deposit first mortgages equal to at least 75% of our assets with a strong trust company as a protection for our depositors.

Because --- we never loan a dollar, except on improved real estate worth at least twice as much as the loan.

Because --- of a most careful, conservative and efficient management.

Because of these and other reasons, savings deposited with this Company are absolutely safe. They are exceptionally profitable in interest return.

On Time Deposits we pay 6% On savings, payable on demand, 5%

Interest checks mailed every 6 months. Write today for the book

CALVERT MORTGAGE & DEPOSIT CO.,
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

6th "Cruise of the Arabic"

To Madeira, Spain, Mediterranean, Holy Land and Egypt,

SAILING JANUARY 20, 1910

under direction and management of the

WHITE STAR LINE

73 days of travel under escort for $400 and upwards by this fine twin-screw steamer.

SPECIAL FEATURE: Oriental Travel League for Bible Teachers and Students organized by Rev. John Bancroft Devins, Editor N.Y. "Observer."

Address Cruise Dept., WHITE STAR LINE, 9 B'way, N.Y.

YOUR BOY OR GIRL need have no fear of being dropped for deficiency in studies after getting in college if prepared at Centenary Collegiate Institute. We are not advocates of the "short-cut" method to learning, but we do practice the "thorough" policy with competent instructors. Large illustrated catalog sent free on request. Address REV. J. M. MEEKER, D.D., President.

Centenary Collegiate Institute

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J.

32 page specimen pamphlets of the new hymn book

HALLOWED HYMNS

loaned free for Camp, Union and Special Meetings.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chicago.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
EVANS, WILKENS & CO., WASHINGTON, D.C.

PATENTS that PROTECT

Our 3 books for inventors mailed on receipt of 6 cts. stamps.
R. S. & A. B. LACEY, Washington, D.C., Dept. 36, Est. 1869

LECTURES ON THE APOCALYPSE. Best Commentary on Revelation. 3 vols. cloth $2.50 postpaid.
C. C. COOK, 150 Nassau Street, New York City

GRADUATE COURSES AT HOME. Terms easy. Write Pres. Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

THE STORY OF MARCO

Continued from preceding page

with the Association, and decide just how to go about it. But that doesn't reach the 'core,' you understand. Look the boy up; get acquainted with him. Find out what he likes and dislikes, and how he spends his time. Help him to spend some of it yourself, perhaps. Take him home—to a good lecture—concert, or—or Art Exhibition," added the Doctor, with a twinkle in his eye. "Take him to something you like. You can't be really interested in him, you know, unless he's interested in you. He must know what you like, and what you do. In fact, he must find in you—if this thing is to be successful—a big brother."

"And he shall—God helping me!" cried Preston, rising to his feet.

"Good!—and God will help you!" returned the Doctor, with a warm grip of the hand.

CHAPTER XXII

The Big Brother's Bright Idea

IT IS one thing to march to war to the tune of "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," with the ringing cheers of admiring throngs in one's ears; it is quite another thing to do picket duty on a lonely mountain at midnight with only the stars and silence for company.

In the Doctor's study, with the Doctor's stirring words in his ears, and with the Club a full score strong at his back, Howard Preston counted success already his; but in the dark hallway at the top of a rickety stairway, and with fearsome sounds, as of some one heavily asleep, coming from behind the door at which he was to knock, he saw failure staring him in the face. Yet Howard Preston, even were he the picket on the lonely mountain, was not the man to drop his gun and run. With a semblance of courage he knocked at the door.

There was no answer.

He knocked again and waited.

There was still no answer.

At the third knock a door opened across the landing, and a frowzy head appeared.

"What you want?"

With the words came a fretful duet of wails from two children, who were trying to peer around the woman's skirts; and over the woman's head floated out the aroma of rum, onions, and unwashed humanity.

The picket-man then did nearly drop his gun and run—nearly, but not quite.

"I'm looking for a boy named 'Marco Covino'," he said pleasantly. "A man downstairs told me that the boy had just come up; but I have knocked several times and received no answer."

"Ho, that ain't nothin'," retorted the woman. "He don't never answer knocks—he's 'feared o' perlice or Settlement folks: an' his dad's asleep, likely, or drunk. If ye want him, jest open the door and walk in. He's there all right, I bet ye!"

"But—" Preston hesitated, and stepped back. It had been his wish to come alone and try to make the boy's acquaintance. He had not looked for such a reception as this; and, surely, to storm one's heart was no way to reach its core, he thought. The next moment he had no choice, however, for the owner of the frowzy head had stalked by him, banged the door open, and pushed him into the room with a swiftness and unexpectedness that left him literally gasping for breath.

"There!" she flung over her shoulder, as she retreated to her own quarters. "I reckon that'll teach him ter answer a civil knock when he hears it!"

In the room Preston found himself confronting a dark-haired boy, who stood defiantly in the middle of the floor with a broken-nosed pitcher of water in both hands, ready to throw.

There was not a drawing-room in all New York or London, in which Howard Preston would not have been at ease; but in the Covino attic he stood tongue-tied, staring helplessly at his young host.

The boy returned the gaze unflinchingly, and for a time in silence; then he spoke.

"If ye come in any further I'll let her drive—an' 'twon't be jest the water, neither. The jug'll go, too," he said quietly.

Preston laughed. For him the atmosphere had suddenly cleared.

"Well, I don't know that I blame you," he retorted with a quietness that matched the boy's own. "One has to protect one's home from invasion in some way, of course."

Marco's eyes widened. Unconsciously he lowered his weapon; but almost instantly he returned it to its old position, his eyes once more full of distrust.

"I ain't a-goin'," he announced shortly.

"Where?"

"Anywheres—with you."

"Of course not! I didn't expect you would. Besides, I came here to see you."

Again the boy wavered, and again the old distrust plainly counseled caution.

"Which be ye, anyhow," he demanded; "perlice, or Settlement folks?"

"Well, now, which do I look like?" asked Preston with interest, much as if he had propounded a conundrum.

"There's no tellin'. There is cops what don't wear blue clothes; an' there is Settlement folks what don't wear glasses."

"Which do I act like?"

A faint twinkle crept into the boy's eyes.

"There's no tellin' that, neither. There is freshies in all trades, ye know."

Preston choked back a cough, and raised his eyebrows. Then with a complete change of manner he turned, closed the door, and with easy nonchalance walked by the boy and the pitcher of water, and sat down in a chair near the window.

"Well, it so happens that I'm neither a policeman nor a Settlement worker," he laughed; "so, as long as I'm not, perhaps you'll tell me just what it is you've got against them."

It was a bold move. Preston himself, nonchalant as he appeared, was far from confident of its success.

The boy stared, hesitated, then walked to the table and put down his pitcher of water.

"Say, who be ye, anyhow, an' what did ye come for?" he demanded.

To be continued

Called Higher

Mrs. Ardelia A. Baker, of Moscow, Me., was called recently to her eternal home.

Mr. William Gibbs, of Stockton, Calif., was called to his heavenly home recently.

Martha E. McKibben passed away in Springfield, O., on the morning of May 10, 1909.

Mrs. Esther A. Willard died December 14, 1908, aged seventy years. She was highly esteemed.

William Bowman passed away some time ago in New York. He had long been a reader of this paper.

Mrs. W. F. Skaggs died some time ago, at her home in Whitewright, Texas. She was an active church worker.

Mrs. Harriet S. Vance, of Miles, Mont., died recently, at the age of eighty-seven. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

W. G. Graves, born May 21, 1839, died September 6, 1908, as he had lived, triumphantly in the Christian faith. A subscriber and lover of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for many years.

Sarah Frances Page passed away November 25, 1908, at Buddtown, N. J., aged eighty-one years. She was born near Charlottesville, Va., July 16, 1827. She was a Christian, active, hopeful and cheerful.

The Uniform Soda Cracker

There's never the slightest variation in the high quality of Uneeda Biscuit.

Wonderful care and precision on the part of expert bakers, combined with facilities to be found in no other bakery, ensure this uniformity of Uneeda Biscuit.

Damp days, cold days, wet days or hot days their goodness is kept intact by the moisture-proof package.

5¢

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

For Better Starching

A teaspoonful of melted paraffine in hot starch gives a much better finish to linens than starch alone.

Paraffine is wonderfully handy to have about the house—useful somewhere, somehow, from Monday to Saturday.

Pure Refined
PARAFFINE

is an admirable finish for uncarpeted floors. A little added to hot wash water loosens dirt from soiled clothes.

Nothing seals a fruit jar or jelly glass so sure as dipping the cap or cover, after closing, into hot Paraffine.

Ask for our anti-stick Paraffine Paper Pad for ironing day. It keeps the sad-irons smooth.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(Incorporated)

WHEEL CHAIRS A Wheel Chair is often an invalids's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalid's Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on 30 Days' Trial.

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free catalogue NOW.

GORDON MFG. CO.
432 Madison Ave., Toledo, O.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval, without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our latest art catalogs illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free postpaid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now.

TIRES, Coaster-Brakes, Built-up-Wheels and all sundries at half usual prices.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. A-71 CHICAGO

DEAF 25 YEARS

CAN NOW HEAR WHISPERS

G. P. WAY
Inventor

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

I was deaf for 25 years. I can now hear a whisper with my artificial EAR DRUMS in my ears. You cannot see them in my ears. I CANNOT FEEL THEM, for they are perfectly comfortable. Write and I will tell you a true story—How I Got Deaf—and How I Made Myself Hear. Address GEO. P. WAY, 2 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.
Get "Improved," no tacks required.
Wood Rollers Tin Rollers

CORNS

A-CORN SALVE is the only remedy that soothes while it removes the corn. Sure and speedy. Avoids all risk of blood-poisoning. 15 Cents at druggist's or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

COOL KITCHEN FREE FUEL

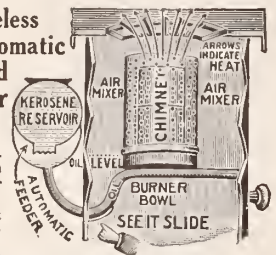
Most Wonderful Stove Ever Invented.

BURNS AIR

Fuel Drawn Principally From Atmosphere

Air now burned in this wonderful stove is free to rich and poor alike. No trust in control.

This Valveless Wickless Automatic Oil-Gas and Air-Burner Stove



SECTIONAL CUT OF GENERATOR

antomatically generates gas from kerosene oil, mixing it with air.

Scientific test proves it uses 395 barrels of air to one gallon common kerosene oil.

CHEAPEST FUEL—SUMMER COMFORT. Intense heat but concentrated under cooking vessels and absorbed by articles being cooked—not thrown out to overheat your kitchen.

To operate—turn knob—oil runs into burner—touch a match; it generates gas, which passes through air mixer, drawing in about a barrel of air to every large spoonful of oil consumed. That's all. It is self-regulating, no more attention. Same heat all day or all night. For more or less heat, simply turn knob. There it remains until you come again. To put fire out, turn knob, raising burner—oil runs back into can—fire's out. As near perfection as anything in this world. Ideal for Summer Use. Not dangerous like gasoline. No dirt, soot or ashes. No leaks—nothing to clog or close up. No wick—not even a valve—yet heat is under perfect control.

D. CARN, Ind., writes: "It costs me only 1½ cents a day for fuel." L. MORRIS, Vt., writes: The Harrison Oil-Gas Generators are wonderful savers of fuel—at least 50 to 75 per cent. over wood and coal." E. ARNOLD, Neb., writes: "Saved $4.25 a month for fuel by using the Harrison Oil-Gas Stove. My range co ts me $5.50 per month, the Harrison $1.25 per month." THOS. VINCENT, Wis., writes: My wife never had anything she enjoyed so much as her stove. It is very quick, no heated room or dirt. Surpasses anything we ever saw."

ALL SIZES

NOT LIKE THOSE SOLD IN STORES

Ideal for roasting, cooking, baking, ironing, canning fruit, picnics, cottages, camping. In Winter use Radiator for heating houses, stores, rooms, etc., No more carrying coal, kindling, ashes, soot and dirt. No hot fiery kitchens. Absolutely safe from explosion. Not dangerous like gasoline. Simple, durable—last for years. Saves expense, drudgery and fuel bills.

ALL SIZES, PRICES LOW—$3.25 AND UP. Sent to any address. Give this stove a trial. Send no money—only send your name and address. Write today for full description, thousands of testimonials. Our 1909 Proposition, Circulars FREE.

Exciting Business for Agents

SALESMEN—MANAGERS—MEN OR WOMEN at home or traveling, all or part time—showing—taking orders—appointing agents, etc. Messrs. Head & Frazer, Texas, write: "Enclose order for $81.00—RUSH. Sell like hot cakes. Sold 50 stoves in our town." B. L. Heusted, Mich., writes: "Been out one day and sold 11 stoves."

This patent new. Nothing like it. Demand enormous. Agents reaping great harvest. Where operated people stop, look, get interested, want to buy at once. Show dozen—sell ten. Write to-day for special agents' new plan. Send no money. World unsupplied. Get in early for territory.

THE WORLD MFG. CO.

431 World Building, Cincinnati, Ohio

14,000 CASES OF SPINAL CURVATURE

Helped and corrected by the Sheldon Spinal Appliance is the proof of the value of this marvelous invention. Comfortable to wear, can be taken off and put on like a coat, weighs only a few ounces; adapted for either sex and all ages from six months to eighty years and over. Permits of full respiration and muscular action. There is no case of spinal curvature or trouble this appliance and our treatment will not benefit.

30 days' Free Trial.

Write us a description of your trouble and we will tell you how to correct it. For catalog and full particulars address,

PHILO BURT MFG. CO. 207-7th St., Jamestown, N.Y.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Delight, Biscuit, Cake and Doughnut Cutter, Apple Corer, and Strainer, 5 articles in one. Sells on sight. Large Catalog free. RICHARDSON MFG CO., Dept. 6, BATH, N. Y

✳ Young People's Societies ✳

Heroes in China*

WE are often reminded by those who have deeply studied the characteristics and history of China that it was not alone their native hauteur or their overweening self-esteem which impelled them to close their doors for centuries to foreign commerce and foreign progress. The geography of China is peculiarly favorable to isolation. By oceans, mountains and deserts it is divided from the rest of the world, and until the last century was well advanced these barriers could be overcome only by great exertions.

Still, the temper of the Chinese, as a nation, cannot be called hospitable. They had been beaten and tortured in some of their encounters with foreign powers, and gradually they decided to take advantage of their natural defenses and bar out all intruders. This became so fixed a habit that it is no wonder the establishment of any missionary work among them seemed not so very long ago a hopeless enterprise. Such the London Society doubtless felt it to be when it sent Robert Morrison thither in the early years of the nineteenth century. The life of that noble saint reads like a work of sensational fiction, and the careers of his gifted and devoted helpers, Milne, Medhurst and Gutzlaff, are almost as wonderful.

It may be that Peter Parker, "the father of medical missions," who in 1836 opened a hospital in Canton for the gratuitous treatment of ophthalmic and surgical cases, did as much as any one man to allay Chinese fear and prejudice, and recommend the dreaded foreigner to China's good graces. The wife of Li Hung Chang was helped by two of Dr. Parker's medical missionaries, and so were other influential natives; and thus, through the door of sense, none other being open, our consecrated workers entered into the freedom of the long-sealed Flowery Kingdom.

Since Confucius taught that all change is vice and that conservatism is the crowning virtue, we should not be surprised that a nation which counts him as its cardinal saint, and his teachings as the acme of wisdom, should hesitate to accept any new teachings. It is against their religion to listen to anything new. In view of this, it is a wonder that our missions have made any progress at all in the land of Confucius.

An especial obstacle has been the status of woman there. "In the Chinese language," says Dr. Graves, "all that is weak, mean, little and debased is written with the radical for 'woman' in it. Thus their estimate of the sex has become a part of the very language itself."

The first woman medical missionary to China was Miss L. S. Combs, who arrived there in 1873. Honor to her!

The Irish Presbyterians have greatly distinguished themselves in Manchuria. John Ross, the Scotchman, has also worked there. Great harmony and vigor have marked the work of this mission.

It is impossible to name more than a small number of those who have lent lustre to the Cross in China. Read the lives of J. Hudson Taylor, Griffith John and W. A. P. Martin. Read the monumental works of Arthur Smith, and of the triumphs of Dr. Hartwell. It is impossible to study The Conquest of the Cross in China, by Jacob Speicher, without becoming fired with enthusiasm over the great work there. The labors of Miss Vaughan and the Royses in North China have been most profitable and greatly blessed. May they be still more abundantly prospered in the future!

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 25. TEXT: Matt. 5 : 13 16.

The Healing Touch*

IN a remarkable sermon upon this subject, Bishop Williams dwells upon the great change which Jesus brought to the old Jewish theology. That taught insistently the duty of personal holiness, and equally that of national holiness. But this holiness was to be maintained by isolation. The man, as in most of the Oriental religions, was to separate himself entirely from the world. The nation also was to keep itself apart. There was to be no intermarriage nor social intercourse of any sort with the heathen on its borders. Defilement was expected to result from any intercommunication with them.

But Jesus comes, and lo! all is different. He eats with publicans and sinners. He says to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel." He even touches the abhorred and dreaded leper, and makes him clean. No longer isolation. No longer the stagnant, obstructed current. Cut away the dam and let the waters flood the plain; let them refresh the tiniest plant, let them satisfy the thirst of the filthiest beggar. The salvation of Christ is for all—rich and poor, learned and ignorant, bond and free.

And still more. Men must not only help on this great movement with purse and voice. They must hold out their hands and come into contact with their brethren in this universal healing of the nations. The vast populations must march onward side by side, shoulder to shoulder—touching each other as Christ touched the leper.

There is a story of a rich man who had given away millions to churches, colleges, libraries and hospitals. He died, and presented himself at the gate of heaven. "Who are you?" demanded the keeper of the keys.

"I am So and So."

"What have you done?"

The rich man glibly recited his gifts and his charities.

"They don't count here. We can't let you in."

The applicant remonstrated, but he could not be admitted.

Then came along a ragged lad, who was smilingly greeted and passed through the open gate. He looked back wistfully at the rejected millionaire and begged that he also be let in. Pressed for a reason by the astonished man, who could not remember ever to have seen him before, the boy explained thus: "Once I was looking into a toy-shop window, and you came by and asked what I wanted. I said, 'That red top.' And you took me by the hand and led me in and bought it for me; and then you sat down with me by the curbstone and taught me how to spin it."

Upon that the porter said, "You didn't tell me about this matter. Come in—not because of your hospitals and libraries and churches—but because of the little red top."

It was but a little thing that Jesus did—he merely put forth his hand and touched the leper; but how great was the result! A poet has sung the sweetness and the reward of such service.

May I reach
That purest heaven, be to other souls
The cup of strength in some great agony,
Enkindle generous ardor, feed pure love,
Be the sweet presence of a good diffused,
And in diffusion ever more intense!
So shall I join the choir invisible
Whose music is the gladness of the world.

This is the Christ-touch, which heals and saves.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 25. TEXT: Mark 1 : 40-45.

The Natural Flavor

of the richest and purest cow's milk is retained in Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk (unsweetened). It is especially adapted for use either plain or diluted on breakfast fruits or cereals. In coffee and chocolate it is much better than fresh cream. It enriches all milk dishes.

WHY TAKE LESS THAN 5%

If your money earns but 4 per cent. instead of 5 per cent., the income from it is not enough by One-Quarter.

If your emergency withdrawals of principal cause you to lose earnings for weeks or months, the profit is reduced to perhaps 3½ or 3 per cent. With equal assurance of safety, the higher rate is worth considering.

The Industrial has not paid less than 5 Per Cent. per annum in all the 16 years of its existence. It is a stronger institution at the end of every year than it was the year before. Its present Assets are over $1,900,000, with Surplus and Profits of $138,000. It is supervised by the New York Banking Department, and its records are open to public and private inspection. If you would be convinced how conveniently you can transact your business with us by mail, we should like to refer you to our patrons in all parts of the country—some probably in your own locality—who permit us to use their names.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS and LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

We Pay 5%

on any sum from $25 to $3,000. Earnings are reckoned from day of receipt to day of withdrawal, and withdrawals are at your pleasure, subject only to 30 days' notice.

Personal correspondence is invited.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
2 Times Building, Broadway & 42d St., New York City

THE METROPOLITAN TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

Blackwell's Island, N. Y.

Offers a three-years' course of training. Applicants must be over 21 and under 35 years of age, and have had one year in High School or its equivalent. The School is registered and connected with a hospital of over 1,300 beds. An allowance is made for current expenses as follows: $10.00 per month the first year, $12.00 the second and $15.00 the third. Classes are formed every two months. The new Nurses' Home is located on one of the finest sites in New York City. The rooms are all single, with spacious entrance hall, library and sittingrooms.

AGNES S. WARD, R.N.
Superintendent.

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

A Positive Relief for PRICKLY HEAT, CHAFING, and SUNBURN, and all afflictions of the skin.

Removes all odor of perspiration. Delightful after Shaving. Sold everywhere, or mailed on receipt of 25c. Get Mennen's (the original). Sample Free.

GERHARD MENNEN COMPANY, Newark, N.J.

Deafness

"The Morley 'Phone"

A miniature Telephone for the Ear, invisible, easily adjusted, and entirely comfortable. Makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Over fifty thousand sold, giving instant relief from deafness and head noises. There are but few cases of deafness that cannot be benefited.

Write for booklet and testimonials. THE MORLEY CO., Dept. E, Perry Bldg., 16th and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia

MUSKOKA THE BEAUTIFUL

Do you know the place? If not, your pleasure has suffered. Take a free trip, a mental little journey through Muskoka by asking for that handsome Muskoka Folder issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System. It contains a large map, lots of views, and a fund of facts. Take the journey some evening after supper with your wife and children. Then slam the door on the doctor for 1909 by taking your family on a real journey through the Muskoka District this summer. Less than a day's journey from principal American cities. For all particulars and handsome illustrated publication free, apply to W. S. Cookson, 917 Merchants Loan & Trust Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Why not a big-profit store of your own?

A splendid living can be made on a comparatively small investment in a retail line which I'll be glad to tell you about. I also know good towns where such stores are needed. EDWARD B. MOON, 10 West Water Street, Chicago Illinois

GINSENG Seed and roots for planting now ready. My 28-page book, "Culture and Profits of Ginseng," with prices of seed and roots, free. Send for it. D. BRANDT, Box 332 BREMEN, OHIO.

ARE YOU DEAF?

We have 25 INSTRUMENTS TO ASSIST HEARING. On approval. Send for Catalogue.
WM. C. WILLIS & CO., 134 So. 11th St., Phila.

TIRED, ACHING FEET and limbs, lameness and rheumatic pains, quickly relieved; no drugs, medicines nor plasters. Send for my FREE booklet, it tells how. C. E. Bullard, 142 Summer St., Boston.

Paul's Ministry at Athens

By Mrs. M. Baxter

WHEN Paul came alone to Athens, it was the æsthetic city of the day. Poetry, art, music, literature flourished there. Human nature there reveled in its own beauty and development. Nowhere were the sons of man so fallen as in Athens, nowhere was the dignity of real truth, real unselfishness, real love, so ignored as here; nowhere was the false gloss of intellect, imagination, art and beauty so used to cover hideous sin. What soil for the pride-humbling Gospel of Jesus! It was ordered of God that Paul should come in here, in the first place, alone; he must take in the situation from God's side, and must know the odds he had against him, and the strength and subtlety of this fortress of the enemy which he was to take in the name of the Lord. While waiting for his companions, he waited on the Lord, and new light upon his second coming broke upon him, so that from here he wrote his two Epistles to the Thessalonians.

But, while thus communing and writing by the dictation of the Holy Ghost, his spirit "was stirred within him," at seeing the city was full of idols. Where was the boasted superiority of the Athenians, if in their conceptions of God they were spiritually on the level of savages? He disputed in the synagogue with the Jews and the devout persons, and in the market, where, perhaps, he went for the purpose of trade, and he made use of every opportunity with "them that met with him."

"Jesus and the Resurrection" was his theme; it caused a stir; the people who could not answer him carried his arguments to the philosophers, who, in their conceit that no one knew as much as themselves, said, "What will this babbler say?" "He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange demons." At last it went so far that he was cited to appear before the court of Areopagus. This was a critical moment for Paul; it would seem as though his testimony for Christ must stand or fall as the result of this encounter with the august senators at Athens. Perhaps Paul was never more still in all his life. He knew well that man could not suffice for a moment. But he knew also that the Master whom he served, and who himself did not speak his own words, but only what he heard of the Father, would not fail him at such a crisis. If he had attempted, by human wisdom, to overcome the human wisdom of those before whom he stood, the result would have been utter failure; but he knew how to trust his God, and he did not fail him, but brought to his mind just the point where these men, who boasted of their knowledge, convicted themselves of their ignorance.

"Ye men of Athens, I perceive that ye are somewhat superstitious; for, as I passed by and beheld your objects of worship, I found also an altar with this inscription, 'To the Unknown God.' What, therefore, ye worship in ignorance, that set I forth to you" (R. V.). It was intensely personal, intensely practical; any really thirsty souls would drink in his message, and, if the remainder mocked, it was only what the Jews had done before.

Paul, having once obtained a hearing, made assertions without attempting to prove them; he was a witness, not a disputer; "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all life and breath and all things." Without another word Paul had reversed all their ideas of religion. Their gods were creatures of their own, made or imagined by them, and bearing the stamp of human origin. A God whose mighty hand brought them into being, and who, as Master of the Universe, needed nothing at their hands, but was himself the Giver of every breath they drew, and every moment of life which was vouchsafed to them—this was something so entirely new that, if it were true, it must humble them to nothing and overthrow almost the whole of their worship, with which their art and literature and all they lived for was inseparably connected.

Four Bandsmen Converted

DURING the recent great State-wide evangelistic campaign in Kansas, conducted by the eminent evangelist W. E. Biederwolf, a four weeks' series of meetings was held in a great tabernacle erected for the purpose in Parsons, Kan. One night the young men's band of the place was playing in the meeting, and many persons were deciding for Christ. Dr. Biederwolf made a special appeal to the young men in the band to take a stand for Christ. One of them walked boldly to the front, and asked for prayers on his behalf. After much hesitation three others also decided for Christ. It was a difficult step for the young men to take, as a city band is often asked to play in questionable places. This band was engaged to play in a place of amusement of very questionable character. The four young men who had decided for Christ felt that they could not conscientiously go to a place of that kind, and they refused to do so, although it meant a loss to each of them of $3.50 a night. The union to which their band belonged informed them that they must either go and play in the place or hand in their cards as members of the union. All four of the young men decided to hand in their cards, and resign their positions, rather than do what they felt they could not conscientiously do as Christians.

This was certainly a noble example of Christian self-sacrifice. Jesus said, "And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life" (Matt. 19:29).

ORIGIN

Of a Famous Human Food

The story of great discoveries or inventions is always of interest.

An active brain worker who found himself hampered by lack of bodily strength and vigor and could not carry out the plans and enterprises he knew how to conduct, was led to study various foods and their effects upon the human system. In other words, before he could carry out his plans he had to find a food that would carry him along and renew his physical and mental strength.

He knew that a food which was a brain and nerve builder, (rather than a mere fat maker) was universally needed. He knew that meat with the average man does not accomplish the desired results. He knew that the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centres is made from Albumen and Phosphate of Potash obtained from food. Then he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts, the now famous food. It contains the brain and nerve building food elements in condition for easy digestion.

The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked sturdiness and activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry on the daily duties without fatigue or exhaustion.

Grape-Nuts food is in no sense a stimulant but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily waste of brain and nerves.

Its flavor is charming and being fully and thoroughly cooked at the factory, it is served instantly with cream.

The signature of the brain worker spoken of, C. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a Reason."

Read These

RARE LETTERS!

Revealing How Pompeian Face Cream Makes People Good-Looking

Women and men (and there are several million) who do use Pompeian Massage Cream are certainly enthusiastic about it. Read and see for yourself.

NOTE:—These unusual endorsements were sent to the "Good Housekeeping" Magazine, a publication, noted for its discriminating class of readers. From the many letters received we reproduce a few (exactly as written except the underscorings). Obviously, we are not at liberty to publish the names of the writers of these unusual endorsements. But upon request we will give names and addresses.

What Women Say:

Pompeian Massage Cream has marvelous cleaning qualities. I have seen a woman go to her room looking haggard, weary and worn, and issue therefrom a short time after looking as if she had discovered the bloom of youth, the skin was so rosy, and the tired lines so much less observable. Mrs. ——, Detroit, Mich.

Because I like to be clean "cell deep" I like Pompeian Massage Cream. The first time I used it I was as startled as at my first Turkish bath. Mrs. ——, Everett, Mass.

Pompeian Massage Cream certainly works wonders for one who uses it perseveringly. I have fairly scoured my skin with soap and water, then after using Pompeian Cream was able to rub off what looked like dirt. It gives one a sense of freshness and cleanliness unequalled by anything I have ever used. Mrs. ——, Bristol, R. I.

I have used Pompeian Massage Cream with gratifying results. I know it will remove all facial blemishes, smooth out all lines and wrinkles, and is an absolutely necessary article on the toilet table of any refined woman. Mrs. ——, Columbia, Tenn.

I went out with my sister one morning and saw one whole side of a front window of a drug store decorated with nothing but Pompeian Massage Cream. We purchased a supply. She writes to know if I am still growing young, which, of course, I am. It is one of the luxuries of my life. It goes so far as to make me feel at peace with all the world. Mrs. ——, Orwell, N. Y.

I have used Pompeian Massage Cream for three or four years and could write volumes on its excellent qualities—space, however, forbids. Miss ——, Detroit, Mich.

Pompeian Massage Cream leaves the skin soft, cool, and velvety. My husband uses it always after shaving. We began its use through advertisements in "Good Housekeeping." Mrs. ——, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Pompeian Massage Cream is excellent for the skin, giving it a soft, healthy look. Miss ——, Masonville, Can.

We have used and like Pompeian Massage Cream. It is an excellent article and does not need the use of powder after its use. Mrs. ——, Omaha, Neb.

What the Men Say:

We have used Pompeian Massage Cream in our family for some time, and all are equally pleased with its beneficial effects. My son, who is just beginning to shave, was greatly troubled with his face until some friend recommended him to try Pompeian Massage Cream after shaving, and the trouble disappeared entirely after its use and has not returned. My young daughter has been troubled with freckles for some time, but since using the cream they are hardly to be noticed. Mr. ——, Denver, Col.

The skin feels delightfully refreshed after the use of Pompeian Massage Cream, and looks clean and healthy. A 50c. jar lasts a long time. Mr. ——, Denver, Col.

I am approaching forty-eight years of age, and it is a difficult matter to convince any of my customers or friends who do not know my age that I am that old. The guess my age at not more than thirty-five. And I attribute my youthful appearance to the use of "Pompeian Massage," and one massage a week does the business, and the massage treatment enables me to shave once a day, whereas, before I began using the massage, three shaves a week was all my face would stand for. If this unsolicited testimonial of the merits of Pompeian Massage will avail you anything for publication I authorize you to use it. W. H. Hoffman, Cincinnati, O.

I find your cream to be very good after a shave. It makes the face feel better and does away with the stinging, itchy feeling. I have procured a couple of bottles. W. A. McNeil, Richmond, Va.

I state with pleasure that I have been using your massage cream a very long time, and heartily recommend it to all, as I think it is the best made and the best ever will be made. I think a gentleman's cabinet is not complete without it. It is very refreshing and healing, especially when a man shaves. It instantly relieves that sore and itchy feeling. I am more than pleased with it. Chas. J. Hronatka, 928 Perry St., Allegheny, Pa.

Note:—Last 3 endorsements taken from the hundreds of unsolicited ones on file in our office.

Pompeian Massage Cream

Don't ENVY a Good Complexion. Use Pompeian and HAVE one."

Pompeian Massage Cream is the largest-selling face cream in the world, 10,000 jars being made and sold daily. 50c 75c or $1 a jar, sent postpaid to any part of the world on receipt of price if dealer hasn't it. 50,000 dealers sell Pompeian. 40,000 barber shops use it.

GET A TRIAL JAR AND BOOK

Cut Off Coupon NOW Before Paper is Lost

This Special Trial Jar affords a generous supply, with which you can try out for yourself the wonderful pore-cleansing qualities of Pompeian Massage Cream. You can also discover its almost immediate effects in giving a natural, fresh, healthy glow to the skin. A wonderfully improved complexion will be yours through the steady use of Pompeian Cream. The illustrated book is an invaluable guide for the proper care of the skin. Send 6c. in coin or U. S. stamps. All dealers, 50c, 75c and $1. Cream sent to all parts of the world, postage paid, if dealer cannot supply you.

The POMPEIAN MFG. CO.
13 Prospect St., Cleveland, Ohio

Library Slips saved (one in every package) means Magazines and Books earned.

Cut out along this line, fill in and mail To-day.

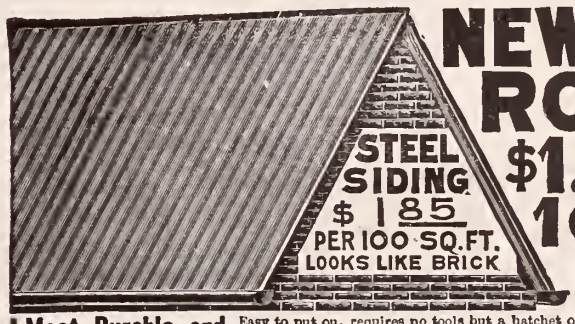
The Pompeian Mfg. Co., 13 Prospect St. Cleveland, Ohio.

Gentlemen:— Enclosed find 6 cents. Please send me one copy of your famous illustrated massage book and a special trial jar of Pompeian Massage Cream.

Name .....

Address .....

.....



NEW STEEL ROOFING $1.60 PER 100 SQ. FEET

Most Durable and Economical Known Easy to put on, requires no tools but a hatchet or a hammer. With ordinary care will outlast any other kind. Thousands of satisfied customers everywhere have proven its virtues. Suitable for covering any building. Also best for ceiling and siding. FIRE-PROOF AND LIGHTNING PROOF. Cheaper and more lasting than shingles. Will not taint rain water. Makes your building cooler in summer and warmer in winter. Absolutely perfect. Brand new. $1.60 is our price for our No. 10 grade of Flat Semi-Hardened Steel Roofing and Siding, each sheet 24 in. wide and 6 or 8 ft. long. Our price on the Corrugated, like illustration, sheets 22 in. wide and 6 or 8 ft. long, $1.85. Steel Pressed Brick Siding, PER SQUARE, $1.85. Fine Steel Beaded Ceiling, PER SQUARE, $1.85. Also furnish Standing Seam and "V" Crimped Roofing. At these prices WE PAY THE FREIGHT to all points east of Colorado except Okla., Tex., and Ind. Ter. Quotations to other points on application. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED. We ship this roofing to anyone answering this Ad., C. O. D., with privilege of examination if you send us 25 per cent of the amount of your order in cash; balance to be paid after material reaches your station. If not found as represented, we will cheerfully refund your deposit. ASK FOR CATALOG NO. C. M. 373 Lowest prices on Roofing, Eave Troughs, Wire, Pipe, Fencing, Plumbing, Doors, Household Goods and everything needed on the farm or in the home.

WE BUY OUR GOODS AT SHERIFFS' AND RECEIVERS' SALES
Chicago House Wrecking Co., 35th & Iron Sts., Chicago

GENUINE BARGAINS IN HIGH-GRADE UPRIGHT Pianos. Slightly used instruments: 12 Steinways from $350 up; 6 Webers from $250 up; 9 Krakauers from $250 up; 7 Knabes from $250 up; 3 Chickerings from $250 up; also ordinary second-hand Uprights $75 up; also 10 very fine Parlor Grand Pianos at about half. Write for full particulars. Cash or easy monthly payments. Lyon & Healy, 62 Adams St., Chicago. We ship everywhere on approval.

PULPITS, Platform Chairs, Sunday School Seats, Collection Plates, Church Pews, School Desks, Opera Chairs, Lodge and Bank Furniture, Office Desks. Ask for Catalog by number only

C112	Church F'rnit're	School Desks	S112
L112	Lodge Furniture	Opera Chairs	O112
B112	Bank Furniture	Office Desks	D112

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO., CHICAGO

YOU CAN AFFORD

to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL," for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Forbid a fool a thing and that he will do." Don't use SAPOLIO

"What's That I Hear—

Kellogg's

TOASTED CORN FLAKES?

—Well me for it and it for me!"

It's the delicious flavor that makes you long for it
Ask your grocer but make sure you get the genuine

LOOK FOR THIS SIGNATURE

W. K. Kellogg

TOASTED CORN FLAKE CO., Battle Creek, Mich.
Canadian Trade Supplied by the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., L'td. London, Ontario.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

$1.50 a Year—5c. A Copy
Published 52 Times a Year

New York, July 21, 1909

VOL. 32—NO. 29
Offices: Bible House, New York

Drawn by G. G. Mack for "The Christian Herald"

See poem on page 617

PAYING OFF THE MORTGAGE

Anonymous communications cannot receive attention in "Our Mail-Bag."

C. A. K., Buffalo, N. Y. Will you please explain I. Pet. 3:3?

Peter, in this chapter, was giving general advice to wives, and in the verse in question warned them against giving way to vanity in dress and adornment, including rings, jewelry and showy garments. He wished them to know that moral worth and discretion were better than gold and emeralds, and modesty better than paint. It was only the excessive and improper use of these things, however, that he condemned, as, for instance, where they were worn simply to indulge the passion for vanity and display.

J. E., Cassville, N. Y. 1. Why is the Pope called a prisoner? 2. When and how did Palestine become the possession of Turkey?

1. The Pope is a voluntary prisoner in the Vatican grounds. The Italian government allows him to go where he pleases, but the Pope claims to be the temporal sovereign of Rome and part of Italy, and as a protest refuses to set foot on the soil of which he claims he has been deprived by the unification of Italy into one nation under the House of Savoy. 2. In 1187 Judea was completely conquered by Saladin; after his day, it passed through a number of hands until 1517, when the Turks overran it, and added it to their empire.

A. H. N., Des Moines, Ia. 1. Why are so many words in our Englisb Bibles printed in italics? 2. Since the discovery of what is called the Northwest Passage has the discoverer, or any other explorer, been through that passage, and will it ever be of any practical value?

1. The Hebrew form of expression is much more compact than the English, and uses fewer words. To put the translation into good idiomatic English a word often has to be inserted, and this is put in italics. For example, in the eleventh Psalm it is printed, "Flee as a bird to your mountain"; the as is not required in the original, but is in English. 2. The Northwest Passage is so blocked with ice as to make it of no practical value. A small ship is reported to have gone through a few years ago.

Mrs. P. R. B., Moline, Ill. I am eighty-three years old, an invalid the last two years; yet I often read and see something that makes me feel like taking up the pen. Such is the article, in your issue of May 19, "The Gospel Invasion of Porto Rico." God bless the Y. M. C. A.! But my experience impels me to say that ex-Governor Davis is mistaken when he says "The Y. M. C. A., as it works among the 300,000 young men and boys of that island, offers all the advantages they need and desire, and it will result in developing them into all-around manhood." Now, such is human depravity that as long as the "American saloon" runs side by side with the Y. M. C. A. it will beat them in the race every time. As I sit and look at that picture, with the noble leader between the American saloon and the city, facing the latter, I cry shame on our government, that destroys, when it should protect and save. The additional work needed is to preach, pray and vote the saloon out of existence.

The Y. M. C. A., which has been so greatly helped by our government in Porto Rico, is the inveterate foe of the saloon. It is an important part of its work in Porto Rico, as elsewhere, to oppose saloon influence and to win the young men away from that influence.

E. M., Chatham, Ontario, Canada. Since Christ Jesus became our substitute and took our punishment, would he not have to be suffering to-day and forever, if sinners' punishment for sin at last was to be eternal or without end? Is not this sound logic?

Christ gave himself a living sacrifice for the sins of the world. It was an atonement once for all, and it dealt with the sinners of to-day as well as of his own time. He now acts as our intercessor, and those who believe in him, who accept his atonement and intercession and ask for pardon in his name, are assured of acceptance.

Mrs. A. L., Bayard, Ia. Was Cornelius in a state of communion with God before Peter preached Christ to him? Where did he get his religious ideas?

The question has been much discussed. Some contend that he was a Gentile who had renounced idolatry and begun to worship the true God (see Acts 10:2), frequenting the Jewish synagogues and offering sacrifices, etc., although he was not reckoned as among the Jews. Others hold that he was nowise religiously associated with the Jews, hut was simply a Gentile who had become imbued with reverence toward God. Candace's treasurer (see Acts 8:27) was of this same class. Cornelius was apparently divinely selected to become the first fruits of the Gentiles. Neither Jew nor Christian, he yet lived the life of a Christian, fearing God and obeying the restraints of religion.

M. F., Decatur, Ia. What disposition was made of ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid's domestic establishment? Were its inmates duly provided for?

A Constantinople newspaper recently stated that the women of the royal household were all sent back to their homes and people in the Caucasus and Anatolia, with the exception of a few, who are still living in villas near the Turkish capital. They are represented as being heartily glad of the change. There is no intimation that special provision has been made for their support.

H. G. T., Napoleon, O. 1. Was the apostle Paul ever married? 2. Was he a member of the Sanhedrin?

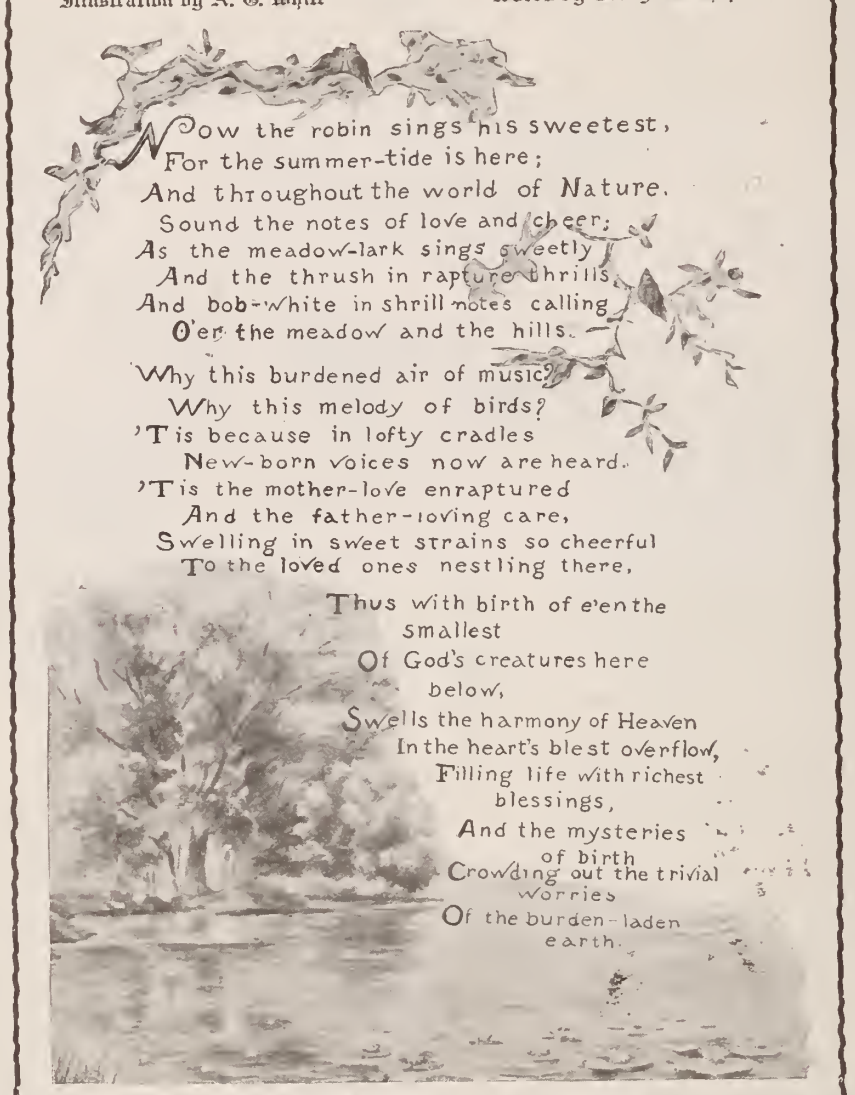
1. There is no absolute evidence that Paul ever married, although it is related by Epiphanius that he "became a Jew in order to obtain the high priest's daughter in marriage." We have his own declaration, however, that he was a true Jew, of the tribe of Benjamin. On the other hand, I. Cor. 7:7, 8 would indicate that he was never married. 2. A member of the Sanhedrin was required to be middle-aged, well formed, wealthy, learned, to know several languages, to have been a judge in his native town, and a member of the Small Sanhedrin before being advanced to the larger body. Paul could not have fulfilled all of these requirements.

J. McD., Bloomington, Ill. 1. What was the date of Calvin's birth? 2. Is it true that he labored for the conviction and execution of Servetus, and was the principal factor in procuring his death?

1. July 10, 1509. 2. Although he was opposed to Servetus, whose heresy he sharply antagonized, he was not favorable to his execution; on the contrary, as D'Aubigné clearly shows, Calvin made personal efforts to save him from execution and was the only one of his accusers who appealed to have his life spared.

"Summertide"

Illustration by A. G. White — Words by George W. Hopkins



Now the robin sings his sweetest,
For the summer-tide is here;
And throughout the world of Nature,
Sound the notes of love and cheer;
As the meadow-lark sings sweetly
And the thrush in rapture thrills,
And bob-white in shrill notes calling
O'er the meadow and the hills.
Why this burdened air of music?
Why this melody of birds?
'Tis because in lofty cradles
New-born voices now are heard.
'Tis the mother-love enraptured
And the father-loving care,
Swelling in sweet strains so cheerful
To the loved ones nestling there,
Thus with birth of e'en the smallest
Of God's creatures here below,
Swells the harmony of Heaven
In the heart's blest overflow,
Filling life with richest blessings,
And the mysteries of birth
Crowding out the trivial worries
Of the burden-laden earth.

Farel also relates this circumstance, and gives Calvin credit for more humanity than any of his associates.

G. K., East Liverpool, O. Where can I find the promise that the names of the redeemed are written in God's record?

See Luke 10:20; Rev. 14:1; Rev. 22:4; Phil. 4:3.

Father, Cincinnati, O. Do you regard the giving of "testimonies" at revival after-meetings as a desirable feature of spiritual work?

In its proper place and use, it is a most valuable feature and has been made the means of bringing many into the Gospel fold. Besides, it strengthens and confirms the faith of him who testifies when he confesses Christ before men and gives God the glory for his own moral reformation. But there is a class of "experiences" which should not be encouraged. We refer to those who parade their former wickedness before the world and apparently glory in relating their infamy in detail, which, being a thing of the past, were better buried and forgotten. Testimonies, when they involve confessions of such a character, are not helpful and should be discouraged.

D., Delaware, O. Please explain John 8:15, 26. "I judge no man." "I have many things . . . to judge of you."

The distinction is made between judgment after the flesh without spiritual apprehension (which is referred to in the first passage) and that judgment which is the prerogative of the Spirit (verse 26), which is for judgment as well as salvation.

J. E. L., Lilly, Pa. Can you tell me why James is called the brother of our Lord? We have it that James and his brother Jude were sons of Alphæus.

Whether James who in Gal. 1:19 is called the brother of our Lord is identical with James the son of Alphæus is a question which authorities find difficult to answer. Some hold that James was a first cousin of Jesus, and on that account was termed his brother, and that the other individuals who were called brothers of Jesus stood in the same relation. It is further contended that Jesus "would not have commended Mary to the care of his disciple John had there been sons of Joseph living." The question, however, is one that cannot be decided, and conjecture is useless.

Subscriber, Monteith, Ia. What is the law in the State of Iowa in regard to the disposition of a man's real estate and personal property after death, when leaving a widow without children? What share does she get, and who will fall heir to her share when both had been formerly married and have children?

Widow takes dower and personal property exempt from execution. Husband's children take the rest. As the law is intricate, better ask an Iowa lawyer.

E. S. J., Lone Pine, Ark. What is the law in the State of Arkansas regarding a man's real estate and personal property, on separation from wife, when he told her to leave him, and they have no children between them? Can she get alimony, and how must she proceed to secure it?

On the above statement the wife's rights remain as they were before separation; but evidently she must consult a lawyer to secure her rights.

A reader of tbis paper, Mr. W. S. Day, of Iowa, informs us, in connection with a recent article in this paper on "Curing Drunkenness by Restraint," that an inebriates' hospital has been for some time located at Knoxville, Ia., and is maintained by the State. The example could be well followed by other States.

Miscellaneous

A. N., Oasis, Neb. 1. You can procure the Handbook of the Bible from Thomas Whittaker, Bible House, New York. 2. We know nothing about the publications meutioned in your letter. 3. Concerning Mark 13:30 and Matt. 24:34, commentators hold that this was fulfilled in a single generation, by Titus Vespasian.

E. M. H., Clovis, Calif. If the secret organization in question is one whicn is liable to lead to dissipation, or to irreligion in any form, then it should be avoided. There may be, and doubtless are, many organizations against which such charges cannot be brought. Not knowing the facts, we cannot pass judgment in such a matter.

Ellen S., Poplar Ridge, N. Y., writes: "I quite agree with the definitions of suffragist and suffragette, as quoted in your editorial. I am a suffragist, though my desire for the ballot is not on my own account, but because I really believe the women's votes would help the temperance cause and other reforms. But I am not a suffragette, and I have felt ashamed and indignant when reading of the way they have behaved. If the franchise could be obtained in that way only, I should think it an ill-gotten victory."

Mrs. R. C. G., Arvada, Colo. "I beg to correct a statement made in the article, 'The Dry Wave Spreading,' in a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. In speaking of the large cities, you said, 'In no one of them has it been possible to enforce even a ward or district law forbidding the sale of liquor.' In Highlands, a portion of the city of Denver, there is no saloon, neither is liquor sold at the drug stores, except by an order from a physician. The portion of Kansas City on the Kansas side, a city of 81,000 population, was cleared of 'bootleggers' two years ago by Assistant Attorney-General Trickett, and the law has since been enforced, to the great satisfaction of its citizens." This information is gladly received by us, and we hope for more from other parts of the country, but be sure that it is accurate.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR THE HOME

One of the Chiefs

The Iroquois Indians Swarming Up the Walls of Ticonderoga

Hiawatha

CHAMPLAIN'S HISTORIC TERCENTENARY

FOR the first time in nearly a hundred years, the beautiful shores of Lake Champlain have echoed the roar of cannon, the blare of bugles and the cheers of marching men, while its blue waters have reflected the flaunting colors of France, England and the United States, which have in turn struggled for its mastery. All of these three nations were well represented in the notable historical pageant of the second week of July, which celebrated the tercentenary of the discovery of the lake by Samuel de Champlain and the great historic events which have occurred in its vicinity since he first saw its wide expanse from the bow of a Huron canoe.

The celebration was divided between New York State and Vermont, and important commemorative ceremonies were held in the territory of each. Their neighbors just over the line in Canada sent some of their best troops, with their Premier, Sir Wilfred Laurier, and other officials to show their friendliness. President Taft was there for several days, and made speeches on the cordial relations now existing between Great Britain, France and America, and Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain and Ambassador Jusserand of France voiced the good will of their homelands toward this country. Governor Hughes of New York and Governor Prouty of Vermont took the lead in the celebrations in their respective States. Visitors came to the tercentenary by the hundred thousands in boats and trains, from North and South; the hotels and boarding houses were all filled and many were glad to sleep in tents, which had been erected for their accommodation.

Champlain discovered the lake on July 4, 1609, and left us an account in his memoirs of his trip with a Huron war party down to the site of Fort Ticonderoga and of the battle with the Iroquois, in which, by three shots from his arquebus, he carried the day, the enemy fleeing from his thundering, mysterious, death-dealing instrument in astonishment and dismay. The recollection of this steel-clad stranger, who caused their bravest to bite the dust, made the Iroquois the inveterate enemies of the French, an enmity which probably later saved New York to the British crown. Champlain was the chief figure in the historic pageant; other events besides the discovery commemorated were the bloody battles in the French and Indian wars around the frowning ramparts of Forts Frederick and Amherst, at Crown Point, and Fort Ticonderoga, the taking of the latter by Ethan Allen and his "Green Mountain boys," "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress"; the two naval battles on the lake, one in the Revolution and one in 1812, and the battle of Plattsburg.

President Taft Delivering His Speech at Ticonderoga

Governor Hughes at Left, Ambassador Jusserand in Centre

On the opening day, July 5, Governor Hughes, Seth Low and others delivered addresses at Crown Point, after which one hundred and seventy-five Indians, Algonquins and Iroquois, took part in a presentation of "Hiawatha." This Indian drama was given on a floating island, several hundred feet long. On it was a miniature forest; along the front was a rude stockade, over which could be seen the peaks of the Indian huts and wigwams. This island was moved about the lake on subsequent days, so a large multitude were able to see the story of Hiawatha told by the red men themselves. Tuesday came the great day at old Ticonderoga. This famous old fortress is being completely restored through the patriotic generosity of Mrs. S. H. Pell, of New York, who owns the property. The west barracks have been finished, and the structure is to hold a museum of Colonial and Revolutionary relics. Among those exhibited was the sword Ethan Allen carried when he knocked with its pommel on the gates of the fortress and demanded its surrender.

A stirring feature of the celebration was a mimic attack on the fort by the Indians. They were driven back by the whites—the Tenth New York—who advanced fearlessly against a storm of Indian arrows. Then the assault by the English on the French of Montcalm was re-enacted. After the smoke of the conflict had drifted away, Governor Hughes spoke. Governor Prouty, of Allen's State, brought the greetings of Vermont, and Admiral Uriu spoke of the friendship of Japan. Later came the President and the Ambassadors, and the notable addresses cementing the friendship of former foes were listened to by a multitude that reached far up the battle-scarred hillside and cheered the heroes of the three countries as they were mentioned.

On Thursday, the last day of New York's celebration, the President and other distinguished visitors went north to Plattsburg, while the scarlet-coated grenadiers and kilted Highlanders came down from Montreal and over the border, to be greeted by hearty American cheers instead of musket shots. Hundreds of regulars and State troops of New York and Vermont were on hand and, forming as an escort to the President, swept through the streets of Plattsburg and out through the country to Plattsburg Barracks. Here occurred a notable event, for a President received for the first time at an American army post the combined forces of Great Britain and the United States.

The next two days were devoted to exercises on the Green Mountain side of the lake, as elaborate as those given on its western shore, and the Vermonters may well be proud of their programme.

THE
American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Bishop H. W. Warren*

GOD IS LOVE

TEXT— I. John 4:8

WE judge character by action, the tree by its fruit. Christ gave us that practical common-sense direction in regard to grapes and thorns, figs and thistles, and applied it to men. He also permitted us to apply this practical common-sense test to God.

Now we are not altogether sure of the accuracy of our faculties as proper tests of figs and thistles from first impressions. We often like sweet berries that are poisonous, and reject cocoanuts and chestnuts because their outer substance is hard and prickly. But we have no other faculties of test, so we will go on testing by the faculties we have; and we will use all our faculties, and for a long time. We will not stop and say "figs" at every sweet taste of deadly nightshade berries, or too long kept ice-cream, but we will use the faculties of our stomachs when they writhe and cramp with the poison, and we will use the faculties of our mental judgments on the stomachs and corpses of others and say "thistles." And we will not say "thistles" at every utter ruin of an exploded engine boiler, or deadly stroke of lightning from a broken live wire, but we will test the unexploded engine and the due conjunction of an unbroken live wire and so be able to say "figs."

The Divine Authority in Nature

This judgment, according to all our faculties, may take us a long time—several thousands of years—but it pays. It tells us that the universe is too deep—too full of power and possibilities—to be judged by the first bite of infant teeth, that have only been accustomed to milk. It takes thousands of years to be able to say "figs" over the scalding steam that issues from the solfataras of fierce volcanoes, and thousands of years to be able always to say "thistles" over the sweet juice of purple-globed grapes when as wine it penetrates every fibre of one's being with exhilarant and delicious joy. But it is worth while to put the thousands of years and millions of men into the determination of the real character of steam, lightning, pleasures of sense, etc., for the result means power, empireship, or decay and death.

But while divine authority declares that God is love, we would be glad to have it from other sources also, from all the mingled sounds of spring, from the storm of ocean and the song of the stars. But can we? Let us see.

It will not be presumed that in a field so large a human observer will be sure to make the right observation the first time. It is to be expected that men, seeing the earth, will think it to be flat; seeing the sun rise and set, the average mind will affirm that it goes round the world. But after above 5,500 years, some Copernicus will rise who will make a truer observation and affirm that the earth turns on its axis. We shall not be surprised if, for thousands of years, the average man will suppose that the sun goes south in the winter and comes north in the summer. But after a while, some thousands of years, some discoverer of wider observation and deeper thought will arise who will affirm that the earth goes round the sun with its axis inclined to the plane of the ecliptic.

God's Works Throughout the Ages

So, in the far wider field of judging God by all his works in all ages, we must expect that many, many erroneous observations will be made from insufficient data. A man who had never been anywhere but in the middle of the Pacific would affirm that the world was all water; on the top of the Matterhorn, that the world was all rock and snow, in frightful precipices. Both would be wrong. For there are fair islands and continents the spent swimmer has never seen, and grassy valleys and mirroring lakes the faint climber cannot know.

Some say Calvinism, Arminianism, Universalism. So some have said that God is unknowing, or careless of men; others have said that he is malignant. They have looked over the world and found it flat, with a ball of fire as big as their hat going round it and wobbling from north to south as it goes. This is quite to be expected. They are not small men, but the subject is large, too large for them. Hence we find men laying down among their three laws of development the one that they phrase as "the survival of the fittest."

There can be no possible question that this law is not only a real basis of development, but a necessity. If there be life, it must assert life. It must continue to live, and in order to living it must feed. It is perfectly easy and natural for big fish to eat up little ones. In order to any high life it must live on lower life. High life has no time to spend in getting its living out of grass. Let the slow-paced, long-resting ox do that. He has time enough and nothing else to do. Let him spend his ample time in condensing half a ton of hay into a good beefsteak. Then a man can eat that in five minutes, and feed his brain without carrying around a digestive apparatus large as a barrel. The man gets his digestion done for him by fish, fowl, wild game and tame mutton and beef, in order that he may do work of brain instead of stomach.

The Divine Law in Operation

If you rightly interpret the term "fittest," there is no objection to the statement of the law "survival of the fittest." But if you interpret it as the average scientist does, viz., the strongest, savagest, it is all wrong. That would give us a survival of monsters. This is not a world of megatheriums, ichthyosaurians, hippopotami, sharks and grizzly bears. It is full of bird songs, and lovers wandering along moonlit lanes of vernal verdure. There is an instinct in all men like the one Tennyson writes of:

> Who trusted God was love indeed,
> And love creation's final law,
> Though Nature, red in tooth and claw
> With ravin, shrieked against his creed.

Hence there has been all along an indignant protest against Huxley, Spencer, Donisthorpe, Carl Vogt and the rest. All men felt that the world had turned out differently from what their law demanded. There must be factors of the problem they had left out. They were only affirming that the world is flat and that the sun goes round it. They were alchemists, not chemists; astrologers, not astronomers. Good men and true fought what truth there was in the law, because it was not the whole truth. There is a force we call centrifugal. But suppose men should insist it was the great, sole law of the flying worlds. Every man would protest against it; declare that it could not be, that the orderly universe was a protest and a denial.

But put alongside of it the force we call centripetal and all men see that out of the action of the two comes the exultant singing of the morning stars.

The time has now come for a broader and truer generalization concerning life. It has been made, as it always is, by a Christian. And to Drummond has come the honor, like that which came to Kepler, to say truly, "O God, I think thy thoughts after thee."

This broader generalization affirms that, beside the law of care and struggle for the preservation of one's life, there is another law equally old, all-pervasive and necessary, viz., a care for the life of others. Altruism is as fundamental and vital as egoism. Care for others is as really a law of nature as care for self. The inspiration and essence of care for others is love. And it is now held that this whole universe is monumental evidence that the character of its Maker and Supporter is love.

Now, how may we judge what love is, and whether the universe was made as the outgo of love? Love means service. We have lately been discussing very widely the meaning of altruism. That is a Latin word for otherism, or caring for some one else. It is opposed to egoism. Now, is the keynote of this world and of all other worlds otherism, altruism, the outgo of love for another? That it is I steadfastly believe.

His Love Illustrated in Nature

But now let us study nature as it is, to see if the principle of otherism, or love, is really engrafted therein. The first word the Bible says about grass, herb, tree or any vegetable life is that its seed is in itself, and God saw that it was good. That was the provision that was made in each lowest and highest vegetable life for the production of others by the sacrifice of those going before. I do not mean that this year's crop of corn or wheat loves next year's crop and consciously sacrifices for its existence, but I do mean to say that this principle of providing for the reproduction and continuation of each species is in the meanest flower that blows.

How true we find this Bible statement! Every plant from the lowest alga and lichen to the Sequoia Gigantea has its own way of reproduction. They live in large part for those who follow them.

We are apt to think that this is done in a mechanical kind of a way. But it is not so. The highest effort of every sort of vegetable life is its production of flower and seed.

It even provides more than life for the infant that is to come afterward. In every seed there is laid up nutriment for the infant plant until it is large enough to feed upon the ground and air. The seed of wheat and corn need not be one hundredth part as large; yet it contains the germ of succeeding life. But along with the germ is plant food in abundance for the plant that is to be. Indeed, it is so abundant that men and animals largely live upon it themselves. Around the germ of rice, wheat, barley, oats, corn and other grains is the food of nearly all the human race. Birds feed on countless myriads of seeds and nourish their agile life on what was provided for the coming plant before it was strong enough to feed itself.

The Law of "Living for Others"

This otherism of nature seems to contemplate provision for more life than the mere succession of its kind. The apple, peach or plum tree might have grown its seed with no more pulp than the thorn tree. But all this luscious nectarine of delightful taste seems to contemplate some other life than the apple, peach and plum shoots. Nature provides for feeding man. And it is suggestive of a thoughtful and loving Providence that, where man is not, the rich pulp of these fruits is very much less or scarcely any at all.

It is thus evident that the providing for others is the great end of being in the vegetable world. To do this it must live itself, of course. But the great end of being is to provide for other and higher life. The first thrill of life that distinguished vegetable life from dead matter, and was prophetic of all the flowering and fruitage of the blossoming world, had in it the divine decree: It shall have seed in itself, and this seed shall be food, satisfaction, joy and jubilant growth for other plants, for darting fish, for flying birds, and for godlike men.

Nay, more: every plant in giving itself for others does it at a great cost to itself; it is a real self-sacrifice. The flowering is a supreme effort. And when the crop of seed is produced, every plant either dies, as the stubble of wheat, or takes a long rest, as the tree does in winter. Its greatest outcome is to provide for others.

And in doing this it finds the highest possibility. What is one great oak by itself compared with a forest that has sprung from its acorns? And what is a forest compared with builded ships, in which men sail to all continents, houses in which they dwell and a thousand firesides where happy families nourish the highest possible life? Even a tree that saves its life shall lose its best outcome.

Nothing Lives for Self Alone

The same law of living for others holds good in all animal life. It is treason to sound reason to say that any animal exists for itself alone. It is a proclamation of one's own perversity or imbecility to affirm by word or life that life is naturally selfish. The apostle has the keynote of all life, from highest to lowest: "No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself."

Every specimen of animal life has two functions: nutrition for the continuance of its own life and accumulation for the life of its successors. One is as much a necessity and a law of being as the other. Paul states the general principle that extends all the way from God to the smallest living atom thus: "For the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children." This is the normal law of the universe. Take the smallest possible specimen of lowest known life, the amœba; take any single cell of lowest discernible life, and give it a proper environment for living, and it proceeds at once to the exercise of both functions. It absorbs

Continued on next page

* Bishop Warren is one of the leading Bishops of the M. E. Church, and resides at University Park, Colorado.

A GREAT BIBLE CLASS OF MOTHEI

THE FAMOUS "MOTHERS' BIBLE CLASS" OF BOSTON, MASS.

THE so-called "New Movement" in the Sunday School has had the good effect of bringing into the work of the Sunday School, in recent years, rge numbers of men and women, and, where the thers and mothers go, there the boys and girls will low. It is not uncommon at the present day to d entire families in the Bible school of the church. e writer heard, not long ago, of a Sunday School vhich there were, in every department, from the dle Roll up to the adult Bible class, members of family—father, mother and eight children being ular attendants at the school.

)rganization is most helpful to the Sunday ıool, and the organized class is doing admirable rk for both the church and school. One of the largest of the organized classes for women may be found in connection with the Sunday School of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church, in Boston, a church well known for aggressive and progressive work. Its Bible Class for Women, nearly all of whom are mothers, numbers fully one hundred and fifty, and is steadily growing in size and influence. It is under the leadership of Miss Elsie Fairbanks, who devotes her entire time to the class and to work for women in the church. The class meets in the chapel of the church every Sunday afternoon, and the regular Sunday School lesson is studied.

The class meets two evenings of each month for a prayer service; one evening monthly is devoted to a missionary meeting, and another to a social gathering. Cottage prayer meetings are held in the homes of some of the members, and the class stands ready to lend a helping hand, when there is anything to be done for the good of the church and Sunday School.

Ruggles Street Church is in the tenement house district of Roxbury, and many members of the class have to work for their daily bread; but they are generous in their contributions and the spirit of class loyalty is high. Most of the members are also members of the Mothers' Society, which holds meetings two afternoons each month. These meetings are interesting and helpful, and it would be impossible to estimate the value of the influence for good the Mothers' Bible Class and the Mothers' Meetings exert.

J. L. H.

GOD IS LOVE — Sermon by Bishop H. W. Warren

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

ter for itself and gives out its life for others. re is no life that does not reproduce other life. ere death to all if it did not. And it not merely oduces life, but takes care of it by sacrifice of . Otherism, or service of others, is the fundaal law of being as much as egoism or care lf.

d you see at the Columbian Exposition, or anye else, the fish hatchery? Every freshlyed atom of life, not a quarter of an inch long, swimming about with a great bread-basket atd to its middle, from which it was to feed till ecessary and automatic process of breathing t it to feed in another way. So the chicken turned adrift as soon as alive, but is provided ı domed white house, in which there is plenty ovision for a three weeks' growth of everyfrom bone to feather. Why, two such egg , full of meat, will make a man's breakfast. very mother in the universe, be she woman or protozoan or elephant, bee or behemoth, prout of herself, out of her own flesh and blood, sustenance of others. She not only provides nce, but care that means the devotion of a art of her life to her offspring. Every enters on a life of love and care when she such. The law of love is stamped on every ıs deeply as the law of life. This general ated by Paul thus: "If any provide not for and specially for those of his own house, he ıied the law of being, and is worse than an aly does every parent provide for his own but God provides fer all. This world and her is packed with provision for nourishy and power. Every element in nature is ıost to bursting, of power for man. The lls its waves of might in tumultuous grander them blows the wind offering to take any ıan to any shore of the whole world. On the same power works. Niagara has 00,000 horse-power every minute since it he air is a storage battery full of im e force of electricity. You can gather, le shop you have a mind to build, electgh to drive all the cars and machines of y. Every cubic mile of air has, at the turation, 70,000,000 foot-tons of power y. And the luminiferous ether is finer orceful than either. We have not yet t it is, nor how to handle its forces.

Let it, then, become a part of our most certain mental conclusions that the life of this world is a life of love. No more forceful is the law of life than is the law of love. One is as necessary and as real as the other. Any leafy thicket where there is any nightingale song, or voice of any other bird, is a tower of love. The dove has a hundred love-notes a day and never a note of fear. I was once on the field of that terrific battle strife of Plevna. The larks filled all the moving air with rippling music, but each one sang only to its mate in the grass below. Every flower in the world is a mode of reproduction. All its gorgeous color, all its delicate perfume, its honey, its soft texture, its feast of every sense, are all parts of the great miracle of love, living for others. All nature teems with it. The God of love looks down on every flower of the sea and on every kind of growth upon the land; on every creeping thing in the wide ocean, every animal on the warm earth, every bird and mazy insect in the moving air, and seeing that they fulfil the law of love, of living for others, says: "It is very good; well done."

Of course, in the kingdom of grace this second law is eminent. Christ was ready to sacrifice every good of existence, all empireship, adoration, ecstasy, and even life itself, because his love is so strong. Evidently he regards this second law as the supreme necessity of his being and of the welfare of the universe.

There are, then, two great laws of being: the law of living for self and the law of living for others. It is impossible for nature to continue without both. Follow the first universally, and creation is doomed to death in a generation. Any one who follows the law of self exclusively does his best to doom God's creation to destruction. What is our relation to them?

The duty of caring for our own life is imperative. But that is not our only imperative duty. There lies on every man, nay, every living being, animal or vegetable, the duty of caring for others. We are enormously and fatally mistaken if we act as if life were a struggle, a battle for self. The world's progress has not been so much by the first law as by the second. Even unspiritual natures cannot live for self alone. It would be in defiance of their constitution. And spiritual beings can live for self alone only by abrogating the law of their nature and becoming sinners. Many do so, it is true, alas! but they become sinners so gross and gigantic that the only use that can be made of them is to put them in the state prison of the universe.

Some men assert that to live out the doctrines of the New Testament is impossible. It is impossible only to natures who live in the exercise of the first law and not of the second. This is the law of savagery. The hinge-point in this world's progress is when men turn from the first law of self to the second, that of living for others. Then every man holds his God-given talents, abilities and their outcome of wealth and power as a steward, not for himself, but for others. It is a hideous thing to see men filled all their lives with the accursed hunger for gold, heaping it up for self alone. God tries every way to show them their folly, tells them that their hands are to be stricken empty of that hoarded treasure ere long. He takes away the joy of getting, in the hope that they may find the new joy of giving. He shows them that prodigal sons and hated heirs will squander in a few days, on fast boats, fast horses and fast folks, what their toilful years have gathered. Still they insanely cling to their increasing pile of gold. They are building their towers in defiance of gravitation, their ships in disregard of the laws that make them float, their lives in defiance of the laws of the universe. They still cling to the law of savagery, every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost, instead of the law of love, each man for every man and God take them all.

Every man that means to be a Christlike man should often diminish his personal accumulations in the interest of others. This perpetual hunger for perpetual accumulation, and dread of diminishment, is the survival of the old principle of savagery, that gets by pillage, warfare and murder all it can from its neighbors. The ways of getting are softened into cunning, craft, squeezes, legal overreachings, but the principle is the same. Every firm that is expert in money getting, and every honorable firm ought to be, should take a partner at length who is expert at money giving. I have known several firms that kept a special partner whose sole business it was to help the firm fulfil the great law of the universe—the law of love or work for others. And to any one desiring such a partner I offer the Lord Jesus Christ, who offers such intimate partnership that he will say of you and himself, co-buried, co-risen, co-quickened, co-glorified. In short, throughout his wide empire, from lowliest service to highest glorification, even to sitting down on his throne, he offers to take you into the firm of Jesus Christ & Co.

DEDICATION DAY AT MONT-LAWN

Listening to the Patriotic Speeches on the Lawn — The Clock and Chimes Are in the Tower of Fort Plenty, in the Background

OUR Children's Paradise at beautiful Mont-Lawn was this year the scene of a celebration on July 4 and 5 which will long be remembered. Cool breezes swept over the valley and hillsides, and the perfect weather brought to the Home an unusually large number of visitors. Many came from New York and other nearby cities. Two came from Florida and two from distant California. There were many also from Nyack and neighboring villages. The week before the 4th, the new chime of bells had been installed in the tower of "Fort Plenty," and the new artesian well had been completed. Hence, the celebration of the Fourth this year was of a triple character and unusually attractive, for the programme was not only a patriotic one, but included also the dedication of the well and of the Westminster Chimes.

Early on Sunday, July 4, visitors began to arrive for the services. "Old Glory" flew from the great flagstaff, and all the Home buildings, including the Temple, "Fort Plenty" and the dormitories, were resplendent in flags and bunting. At the Temple services 327 children filled the auditorium, while the side passages, the rear of the hall and the spacious ambulatory were packed with visitors from far and near. In the gallery was a colored choir of singers from South Carolina. Many who could not find seats or even standing room within the building, crowded the doorways or stood near the windows to listen to the music and the addresses.

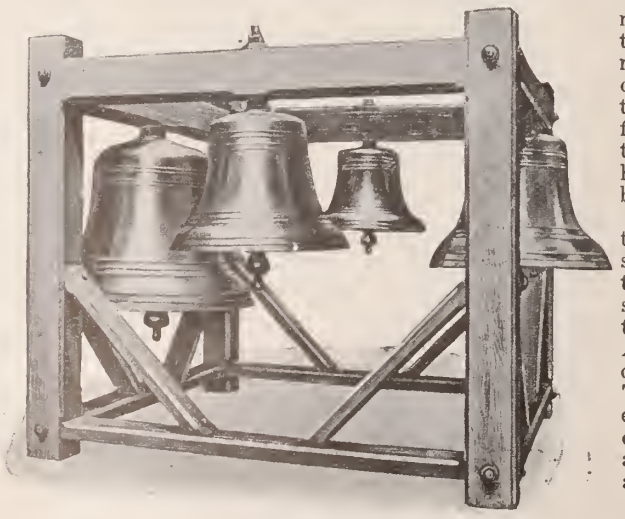
Dr. Klopsch, the founder of Mont-Lawn, presided and made the opening address, welcoming the children and the visitors. On the platform were nearly half a hundred guests and visitors. Among the speakers were Rev. Dr. William Carter, of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church, New York City, and Rev. Stephen Merritt, the veteran chaplain of the Home. The singing of the children was beautiful and was a delightful surprise to the visitors. It was a service at once inspiring and helpful to the grown-ups as well as to the little folks, and inculcated the true spirit of Christian patriotism.

It was on Monday, July 5, however, that the real celebration of the national festival began. Visitors came in crowds that eclipsed all former records. Long before noon, the roadway in front of the Home buildings was lined with carriages of every description, and the beautiful and spacious grounds were like some scene from a crowded midsummer carnival.

It was three o'clock when the children and visitors took their way to the Temple, where the dedication services were to be held. Every child carried a small American flag, and nearly all the visitors did the same. Dr. Klopsch presided, and the platform was again crowded with distinguished guests. After prayer by the chaplain, and a half-hour of patriotic songs and hymns, Dr. Klopsch briefly told the story of the efforts to secure an abundant water supply for Mont-Lawn, and how, after many discouragements, these efforts had at last been crowned with success. His dramatic description of the digging of the artesian well prepared the way for the Rev. Dr. William Potts George, D.D., of Pawling, N. Y., who was selected to conduct the double dedication service, which he had compiled specially for the occasion. The first portion of the service took the form of responsive readings from Scripture suited to the dedication of the well, and this was followed by a prayer, in which the entire audience joined with the leader in imploring God's blessing on the well. The children then sang the hymn, "Water, Water, Sparkling Bright," the visitors uniting heartily in the chorus.

Next followed the dedication of the bells. Mr. George H. Sandison, managing editor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, explained briefly the meaning of the quartette of bells, which are known as the Westminster Chimes. Rev. Dr. George then led in the second series of responsive readings, after which the audience united in a prayer of dedication and consecration. The children then sang the beautiful hymn, "The Bells of Mont-Lawn," and as their fresh young voices ended the first verse, Dr. Klopsch's finger was uplifted as the signal for a pause. Then all in the Temple heard the Westminster Chimes ring out, clear, sweet and penetrating. As the last note died away, the children burst out like a musical torrent in the beautiful chorus, prepared by Tullar & Meredith:

Mont-Lawn bells, ring—oh, ring!
Join the chorus with the birds that sing;
Let your song sweetly tell
Of the joy that fills each chiming bell.
Winter's gloom now is past—
Summer time has come with joy at last!
Mont-Lawn bells, ring your praise
On this happy day of days!



The "Westminster Chimes," Dedicated July 5

The double dedication closed with the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Franklin Babbitt, the age Episcopal pastor of Nyack, who for several year past has been a welcome visitor at our Children Home.

Games and frolics on the great lawn filled th next hour pleasantly. Children and visitors alik took delight in listening to the strains of the Pick ninny Band, of Charleston, S. C., which, under th direction of Rev. Mr. Jenkins, a Baptist pastor that city, has reached a surprising musical pr ficiency. During a three days' stay at Mont-Law the Pickaninnies have fairly divided the music honors and commanded a large share of attentic both for their singing and playing.

Now the hour arrived for patriotic speeches the lawn. The children were arranged in a gre semi-circle on the grass, in front of the Homeste the guests being seated to right and left on eith side of the speakers' platform. Mr. Sandison troduced the speakers, and called upon Re Admiral Charles Dwight Sigsbee, the comman of the Maine, to lead off in the oratorical firewor The admiral, who is a tremendous favorite w everybody at Mont-Lawn, alternately aroused enthusiasm of his auditors by his patriotic allusi and touched their sense of humor by his amus anecdotes.

"I think," said the jolly admiral, "that the rea why Dr. Klopsch asks me to Mont-Lawn year a year is because he thinks I bring good luck to ace. Since I began to come here, you have got w dormitories, a big dining pavilion, a new apel, and now you've got a set of beautiful chimes id a fine new artesian well. Maybe if I keep on ming, you'll find a lollypop mine or something ually good." At which there were fresh roars of erriment all over the grass.

The Greatest Gathering in its Histor

Rev. William Carter, of the Madison Avenue Re-ormed Church, New York, was the second speaker. e made a spirited address to the young people, ointing out the value of opportunity and the duty f every one to have an aim in life and to cherish a udable ambition. Rev. C. H. Mead, who is always ure of a hilarious welcome at our Children's Para-ise because of his inimitable gift of story-telling, ept the big and little folks in oars of laughter by his lively allies. Rev. John Hallimond, D.D., superintendent of the Bowery Mission, surprised and elighted everybody by a felic-tous recitation of "How the Water Comes Down at Lo-lore," which by a skilful and lever improvisation in the losing lines he applied to the new well at Mont-Lawn, thus:

And now—at Mont-Lawn, this sublime habitation.
The water has come from its deep excavation,
It has come with a rush of divine delectation,
And exceeds Dr. Klopsch's most fond expectation.
It has come for the children to drink of, to think of,
To bathe in, to wade in, to plan a blockade in,
To dash in, to splash in, to crash in, to wash in;
That's why the water comes up at Mont-Lawn.

Mr. James Brown, the long-time friend of Henry George, the famous author of Progress and Poverty, made a strong address to the boys and girls, the moral of which was that true happiness and real success are to be found, not in ambition, but in following the example of Jesus, by being kind, loving and helpful to others.

* * *

Dr. Klopsch, in closing the outdoor gathering, cordially thanked the speakers, the visitors, the children and the teachers for their respective efforts toward making the Home a success and the present celebration the best and most enjoyable in the history of Mont-Lawn. Above all of these, however, he thanked the good and kind Father above, who has so richly blessed the work from the beginning, and whom it was designed to honor and serve. The oratorical hour closed with "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," played by the Pickaninny Band and sung by the entire audience. The Rev. Ferdinand C. Iglehart pronounced the benediction.

With marches by the children, music and frolic, the rest of the afternoon was soon spent. After supper, some moving pictures were shown by calcium light. It was nearly nine o'clock when the "red fires" were lighted on the lawn, brilliantly illuminating the Home grounds and the wooded valley beyond. This was the indication that the eventful day had come to an end. By ten, the last of the visitors had gone, the last carriage had passed down the roadway and the little folks were all in bed, in their snug white cots in the dormitories, many of them doubtless dreaming of the wonderful and exciting joys of the "Glorious Fourth."

The "Pickaninny Orphan Band" Playing in Front of the Homestead

The Well and the Bells

IN connection with recent improvements at Mont-Lawn, M. L. & H. G. Emery, our architects, write us as follows:

This summer a considerable number of changes have been made at Mont-Lawn. Additional land has been acquired to the south and east of the Home property, which squares out the Home holdings and gives opportunity for improved arrangements in that part of the grounds. The eastern entrance is now marked by massive stone pillars, surmounted by heavy concrete balls, and is further identified by a sign formed in gilded letters upon a background of dark green lattice work. Vines and boxes with flowering plants lend additional attractiveness.

While no new buildings have been erected, the existing structures have been carefully gone over and repaired and freshened wherever necessary to put them in first-rate condition, and everything is thoroughly bright and clean. A small cottage, which stands on the newly purchased land, has been put in order and renewed with paint and paper and will serve as a helpers' dormitory during the season. At the Homestead the dining-room has been increased in size by the addition of a generous bay toward the east, with a fine picture window of plate-glass, through which a most charming view may be had over the spreading countryside and up and down the river.

As already mentioned in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, an artesian well has been sunk to a depth of 605 feet, or 200 feet below the bed of the Hudson River, which affords an unlimited and unfailing supply of water. This will insure plenty of water for all present requirements and will later form the basis of a very extensive and complete system of water supply and fire protection.

A fine clock and chimes have been set up in the tower of the dining pavilion. The clock movement is the work of the E. Howard Clock Company, and is of the highest excellence and very accurate. It operates two dials, each of which is four and one-half feet in diameter, one upon the south and one upon the east face of the tower. These dials have figures and hands finished in gold. They present a fine appearance, and are easily read at a great distance.

The bells are set in the belfry above. These are made by the McShane Foundry Company, of Baltimore, Md. They are four in number and weigh from 1,200 pounds for the largest to 300 pounds for the smallest. Upon them are rung what are called "the Westminster Chimes." At the first quarter, four notes are struck; at the second quarter, eight notes; at the third, twelve notes, and at the fourth, sixteen notes, followed by the striking of the hour upon the great bell. The Westminster Chime is an old English arrangement of four notes, struck in varying sequence, and forming in completion a quaint and simple tune, to which the following words are said to belong:

Lord, in this hour
Be Thou our guide;
That by Thy power
No feet may slide.

It is a custom, handed down from very ancient times, to cast upon one or more of a set of bells an appropriate inscription, to identify them with the place for which they have been made and to commemorate the date of their hanging. With due regard to this custom, the largest of the four bells is thus inscribed:

THE BELLS of MONT-LAWN
To Praise and to Pleasure,
To Joy beyond measure,
The children we call;
May God bless them all.
NYACK, JULY 4TH, 1909.

The clock and bells were in full operation on the Fourth of July.

The Three Hundred and Twenty-seven Children Came Trooping Across the Lawn, the Girls First, with Radiant, Smiling Faces

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

LOUIS KLOPSCH-Editor and Proprietor

GEO. H. SANDISON Managing Editor

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Entered at Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter

Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Three Nations at Ticonderoga

THREE nations were officially represented at the great series of celebrations held to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain by the intrepid gentleman of France whose name it bears. It thus became a striking international as well as a national event, for President Taft came to speak for the government, while Great Britain and France were represented by two men famous for their achievements in the fields of letters, diplomacy and statesmanship, Ambassador Bryce and Ambassador Jusserand. They gathered on ground which was full of soul-stirring memories for all, for about the beautiful lake the English and colonists fought against the French in wars lasting a century; later, after the cross of St. George replaced the lilies of France, the Americans here fought against the English in two bloody wars. Nearly a century of peace has passed since the last roar of battle died away, and the statesmen of the three nations, once foes, met and pledged the friendship of their people for the years to come. What was at first expected to be but the usual ceremonial at such times developed into something far more important than the usual exchange of international greetings.

Ambassador Bryce spoke of his belief that the three nations were now too sincere friends to have that friendship broken, and Ambassador Jusserand spoke feelingly of the consideration shown his countrymen who had remained under the British flag in Canada. President Taft figuratively held out the hand of amity to each in the closing words of his speech, after paying a glowing tribute to the imperishable valor displayed in former years by French, English and Americans. A day later, the President of the United States reviewed the combined forces of Canada and the United States, an event unusual but significant of the fact that the people to the north of us are indeed friends and neighbors.

This interchange of good will could not have taken place in a more appropriate setting, and its results will be felt long after the events of the tercentenary week have become dim in memory.

The Anti-Vivisection Congress

AN American woman, Mrs. Diana Belais, played a prominent part in the Anti-Vivisection Congress, which has just closed its sessions in London. It was the first great international gathering of the animals' friends, and the addresses were of a character to command respectful attention. Mrs. Belais outlined the movement in this country, and declared that vivisection was so deeply entrenched here that little progress had been made in the humane work of animal protection. She painted the horrors of vivisection and described its practice in some of our larger educational institutions and by health boards and private laboratories. American physicians, she declared, are muzzled and afraid to express their opinions, and the sympathetic feeling of the public has scarcely yet been touched.

Some of the European scientists present were outspoken in their condemnation of vivisection, which they regarded as "the opprobrium of medicine," and a hindrance to science, inflicting agonies that were totally unnecessary and useless because unproductive of any valuable results. Several united in the opinion that the most practical method of fighting the evil would be the introduction of a system of humane education in the schools, as recommended by the Earl of Shaftesbury.

Cruel instincts, if they are to be controlled, must be tempered and disciplined in childhood. Experience has shown that it is hopeless to attempt the conversion to humane principles of an adult people who have inherited the love of war, hunting and blood-letting through a long line of ancestors who believed in those things.

The "Dead Line" in Business

WE are constantly told that there is slight opportunity for a man to secure remunerative employment, if for him the golden time of youth has passed. The middle-aged or elderly man may be in robust health and have a fund of experience that should serve him as a recommendation; but the demand is for the young, and the man out of work at fifty often waits long and tastes the weariness of hope deferred before he finds a vacancy.

